DELANO, FRIDAY, July 20, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Delano horses now live on baled hay and imported oats.

—Clark Sturman put down a tubular well for Mr. Litfkin this week.

—John A. Mayer vs. John Longosh, in justice court was continued till next Monday.

—The case of cruelty to animals, overdriving a team, causing death of one horse, was dismissed.

—Early planted potatoes have ripened sufficiently to allow of their sprouting new shoots since the rains.

—The Clulow concert, at the City Hall last evening was one of the best of the season. Everybody enjoyed it.

—Crops about Delano are not poor enough to prevent several farmers in the vicinity purchasing new binders the week past.

—A term of District Court will be held in Delano, on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 11 a. m. at the Council Rooms. Get naturalized.

—The Nick Frank property, on River street was sold Wednesday, at auction. It was knocked down to O. L. Billings for $450.

—It seems as if our South Delano friends will have to get along another year without water privileges enjoyed by the balance of the village.

—Reports from South Franklin say that 12 or 14 bushels of wheat per acre is the prospect, and the kernel never looked better. That's not so bad after all.

—Don't forget to be at the annual school meeting at 7 o'clock P. M. Saturday, July 21, at the school house and help elect three members of the school board.

—Oats have taken the second growth and fields that were ripening with little straw or grain are becoming greener every day with the new crop coming on.

—A few of our citizens who have heretofore neglected being vaccinated have now, since small pox has become so widespread concluded to make use of the preventative.

—Rev. D. A. Thompson and Messrs Fay Parslow and Ed Freeman took a fishing excursion Tuesday to Lake Rebecca. They report a poor catch. The fish didn't like their bait.

—The number of swindlers of all kinds abroad in the land is something astonishing. The safest way for people to do is to trade with people they know. Don't go to signing orders and other papers for strangers, is a good plan to adopt now a days.

—The people on River street now enjoy a view of the river; the trees having been trimmed up. Notices have been posted to dump no more slops over the bank. That is correct. Barrels should be provided and all slops hauled out of town.

—A party of eleven young men, with two tents went to Lake Rebecca last Saturday evening and camped out until Sunday afternoon, It rained almost all the while they were there but they nevertheless report a most excellent time. On the way home one of the boys succeeded in getting near enough to a shidepoke, that was sitting half asleep near the road, to catch him by the legs, but for reasons queer and funny in an argument persuasive, he quickly let the shidepolk take its flight, and with wide and blinking eyes he did look up in surprise as the shidepoke slowly fluttered out of sight.

—A term of District Court will be held by Judge A. E. Giddings in the Council Rooms, at the City Hall, in Delano, on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 11 a. m. and during the day, for the purpose of naturalizing those entitled to be naturalized. Bring your papers, and witnesses, and become a full citizen so you can vote at the coming election. This may be your last opportunity in Delano to take out papers.

William Sturman, Jr., of Franklin, has been assessor several times, and is pretty well acquainted and well liked in his town, and though kind of bashful about saying so, would make as good a County Commissioner from the Third district as any yet mentioned.

County Cullings.

From the Monticello Times we gather that the people of Monticello had the pleasure of listening to a lecture by Bishop Joyce on Sunday, the 8th inst. Bishop Joyce was for two years a missionary in China and is acquainted there. He is reported as having said at Monticello in his lecture, that it was his belief that the foreigners have not and will not be massacred. The bishop thinks "The question is soon to be decided: Will a Christian or a heathen civilization rule?"

According to Bro. Satterlee's theory the people of the United States ought to recompense in blood the countries of Europe for the injustice and indignities heaped upon their citizens lately migrating to this country and landing at Ellis Island. Perhaps he would be willing to offer himself voluntarily, as a partial amelioration of affairs. Go down to the coast Bro. and allow some European to annihilate you, and prove your doctrine. "Actions speak louder than words."

If you favor a change of administration vote for it. Don't content yourself with voting simply for Bryan and Stevenson, but cast your ballot for congressmen who think their way, and will help them carry out their views. Vote for legislators who will help elect a senator to aid in the same direction, as well as to work for reform in our state affairs. Don't allow some petty politician with promises to wheedle you into voting against what you know your best interest all along the line.

From the tone of the Annandale Advocate Post one would judge that its editor might be highly pleased to receive a cage full of Chinese babies from John Goodnow, our consul to China, and that he would be delighted to hang them up by their pigtails from the ceiling and to prod them with a pitchfork once an hour, as a diversion to his benighted moral sensibilities, and to revenge himself upon them for the bravery of their distant relatives in defending their country from the commercial expansion of their neighbors. A man living at Annandale and writing that "It will not mend matters to say that the Chinese government is not responsible. The responsibility will rest with the Chinese people, who can be got, and will be." is surely no less a heathen than he who tries to keep intruders out of his country, China. Such heathenish ideas our outlandish in this country; or used to be.

Epworth League Convention.

The Epworth League convention at Buffalo last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, was a grand success. Bishop Joyce, the head of the order in the United States was present Friday evening and gave an able address.

On Saturday morning Rev. Fairbanks conducted a devotional meeting followed by papers by Miss Myra Snow, of Otsego, Miss Frances Tennison, of Monticello, and John J. Catlin, of Delano. The papers were discussed at length. Rev. Dr. Bridgeman, of Hamline University, made an address.

It was voted to have a county convention once a year and officers were elected as follows:

President, Miss Eva Ward, Buffalo. 1st Vice Pres. Miss Myra Snow, Otsego. 2nd Vice Pres. Miss Anna Ferrell, Montrose. 3rd Vice Pres. Miss Nellie Clark, Monticello. 4th Vice Pres., John J. Catlin, Delano. Secretary, Miss Viola B. Cunningham, Delano. Treasurer, D. Whitney, Clearwater. Junior President, Mrs. Rev. Fairbanks, Clearwater.

It was decided to call the organization The Wright County Epworth League and to hold the next meeting at Clearwater, beginning on Friday before the second Sunday in July and holding over Saturday and Sunday.

Vice Presidents to attend to programme.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16,

Maple Plain.

The rain of yesterday forenoon was a good one and will make corn and potatoes. Farmers are well along haying and most of them are counting on a second crop. Wheat and oat harvest will begin this week.

The rain on Sunday was bad on the grove meeting at George Pagenkofs.

Quite a good many raspberries are being shipped west from Maple Plain.

Notwithstanding the poor crops the dealers are asking just as much for twine. We supposed the Stillwater twine plant was in the interest of the faamer, but it seems not. If providence does not favor the farmer he is left out entirely, for he has no chance with the outside world.

It is reported a part of the Fargo farm has been sold. Most of it is fine farm land.

Bryan would not allow New York or any other man to cut out the 16 to 1 plank. If he had what would have been the result? The republicans would say he had been talking for four years what he did not believe. We hope he has convictions of his own.

Wheat does not seem to come up. A foreign war does not have the same effect on the price of our goods it did in days gone by. But there seems to be no difference in regard to government contractors in furnishing army supplies. Here is a sample. A bridle bit furnished to the government at $1.50 can be bought at private sale for twenty cents. How is this for the glory of war and high taxes? Ask who pays this and the fool can tell you. Everything else is on the same line.

The people who favor war, unless it is for a just and glorious cause, are favoring something which only brings blight and destruction upon their own heads. The people pay an indirect tax for carrying on this war, but if they had to pay a direct tax there would be war at home. It would create a regular bedlam.

FARMER.

ROCKFORD.

Annual school meeting at the school house on Saturday evening, July 21. A director to be elected for three years, and other business.

Mrs. May Warner Miller and daughter, of Clarissa, Todd county, are visiting old friends and relatives about Rockford, this week.

Mr. John Omera, of Greenwood, was visiting in the village on Monday.

Maggie and Addie, daughters of W. W. Parker, once a citizen of Rockford, now of Minneapolis, are visiting friends in Rockford this week.

Mrs. Ann Kesslar has moved to Michigan. Her brother, Mr. Younger came after her.

Mrs. Sullivan, of Dakota county, is visiting her daughter, Gertie Benner, in Rockford.

The G. A. R. are reshingling their hall this week.

Calvin Moores has a new $200 churn in the creamery.

The Advent church looks much better since it has been painted.

Davis and Fischer are at work painting the iron bridge.

Julius Thompson will move his steam mill to Tamarack, on the N. P. above Aitkin, on a three year contract at sawing for Ed Douglass.

The binders are going out now every day getting ready for work. The mowers have not had much to do this year.

And now we have another war on our hands with a fair prospect of a war with the Sultan to enforce the missionary claims for losses by the Kurds. 65,000 men and $200,000,000 of money to keep the Friars in possession of the Philippine Islands. 100,000 men and $500,000,000 in money to make the Chinese Christians. Commerce only asks for peace. It does not ask and cannot be improved by war. Then the prospective war with Turkey will take at least 50,000 men and $150,000,000, all religious slaughter and waste. Surely the Prince of Peace has become a God of War.

Dr. Habercom Comes Out Squarely for the Democrats.

(Special to Minneapolis Times.)

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Dr. W. L. Habercom today formally announced his withdrawal from the republican party. For a great many years he has been a prominent figure among the German republicans of the country. During the last presidential campaign he was manager of the German bureau of the republican national congressional committee, and as such he came in touch with the editors of leading German paper. To these papers he supplied the literature prepared by the committee. It was upon him the committee depended for its supply of literature for these papers.

Dr. Habercom says that he cannot support the administration in its policy of imperialism and militarism. In explaining his withdrawal from the republican party, he says:

"Expansion of the union on the American continent is proper. Expansion not of the union, but by the acquisition of possessions, which are to be governed as dependencies, subject only to the will and caprice of our executive and congress, unrestricted by the constitution and without the consent and against the wishes of the people to be governed, who thereby become our subjects, is, in my opinion, improper, unjust and unrepublican; the government of the United States is thereby transformed into an imperial government for our possessions.

"A government with imperial powers over possessions cannot long remain republican at home. As the government could not have lived half slave and half free, so it cannot live half imperial and half republican.

"The republican party now stands for imperialism, expansion, and is already busy cultivating the spirit of militarism. The democratic party has eareestly and forcibly pronounced against imperialism, with its resultant evils, and for the preservation of the republic and the constitution.

'The issue is thus made up, and I consider it my plain duty to help maintain the republic by such efforts as I can make, humble though they are.

"As to 16 to 1, that has no more terrors for me. We have the authority of republican leaders and the republican party that the senate will safeguard her present monetary system at least till March 3, 1905. With these assurances before me, not to mention others, I am astounded at the frantic efforts now being made by the management of the republican party, most of the republican press and, last but not least, by the republican president, in his speech of acceptance, to frighten the American people with an issue that is not now a live one, in hopes of obscuring the greatest of all issues put before the people since 1865.

"I shall say nothing of the issue of trusts, of which the president has not deigned to speak a single word in his speech of acceptance, so rich in the glowing pictures of the great happiness of the American people under present republican rule.

"The reasons for my support of the democratic ticket, in what I consider the most serious crisis shat has ever threatened the life of the republic, will, I trust, be understood and appreciated by my friends."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13, 1900.

The issue of imperialism thrust forward by the democratic national platform is already worrying the republicans. The making public of a circular note sent to the great powers by this government, defining its policy toward China, was intended by the administration to counteract the charge of imperialism. While nominally prepared to inform other governments of the policy of this government toward China, that circular note was really prepared to try to convince the people of this country that the McKinley administration has no imperial designs against China, and more of the same stuff may be looked for. Mr. McKinley knows that the Chinese question can wait, but that the presidential question has got to be settled in November.

The administration has been wobbling again. One day it officially announced that in deferance to the advice of Gen. MacArthur, no more troops would be sent from the Philippines to China, and the next it ordered a regiment of infantry and a battery of artillery to be sent from Manila.

Praise for the manner in which the democratic platform is written is very frequently heard, sometimes even from republicans. Ex-Senator Faulkner, of W. Va., said of it: "I have never read a better national platform than that adopted at Kansas City. It is written in plain language, says exactly what it means and without indirection."

Although he has been as harshly criticized as any officer in our army for various short comings, from the time that he was in charge of the construction of the big tunnel for the increase of the water supply of the city of Washington, which although constructed years ago is still being tinkered with and has never been put to any practical use, to his more recent service as military governor of the City of Havana, Brigadier General Ludlow has had pull enough to get promoted right along and to get the most desirable assignments. His latest is one that any officer in the army would like to have. He has been ordered to Europe for the purpose of visiting the great military schools to obtain information to be used in the establishment of a war college for our army officers. He was made president of the war college board as soon as he was relieved as military governor of Havana.

One of the signs that the republicans are not so cocksure of Ohio as they pretended to be is the announcement that Hanna's man Dick has been made chairman of the State republican executive committe. That means that Dick will retire from the secretaryship of the Republican National Committee, which he has held since the last campaign and which carries a salary of $5,000 a year, while the position he has accepted in Ohio has no salary. Who will succeed Dick as Secretary of the National Committee has not been announced, but, of course, it will be some man thoroughly trained in Hanna methods of securing political ends. It wouldn't cause any surprise in Washington if Perry Heath resigns as First Assistant Postmaster General and succeeds Dick.

Mr Henry Ault, of Boston, now in Washington, said of politics in his state: "If Massachusetts was not so overwhelmingly republican it would go democratic this year. The press and republican party leaders are inclined to sneer at the anti expansionists of the Bay State and to intimate that they are of no consequence politically, but when the election returns are in it will be seen that anti expansion has more adherents than it has been given credit for having. The question is not looked upon as one of purely government policy, as is the tariff or coinage of silver, but as one in which deep principles of right and justice are involved, and the people of Massachusetts are not to be laughed or sneered out of their profound convictions."

That the democratic expectation of electing a majority of the next House is not a case of rainbow chasing must become plain to any one who will carefully study the election returns of two years ago. With three vacancies, two in republican districts and one in a democratic district the republicans only have a majority of 16 in the present House and three of them were seated as the result of contests from districts which elected democrats and will do so again. There are twelve republicans in the present House who were elected by pluralities of less than 1,000: One from California with 113 plurality, one from Illinois with 242, and another from the same state with 503; one from Indiana with 252, one from Kentucky with 10, one from Maryland with 122 and another from the same state with 470; one from Minnesota with 403, one from New Jersey with 836, one from Ohio with 406, and two from West Virginia with respectively 624 and 873. If democrats are elected from all these districts and lose none of the seats they now hold they will control the next House.

Free To Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patents cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co. Washington, D. C.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord:
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored,
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword:
His truth is marching on.

I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps;
His days are marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel;
"As ye deal with My contemners, so with you My grace shall deal;
Let the Hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat;
O, be swift, my soul, to answer Him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

JULIA WARD HOWE.

IT is bad enough in a Republic like ours to have the President's friends claim for him the privileges of Napoleon to ride rough shod over everything and everybody on earth. But when they attribute the late rains and prospective crops to their idol they overstep the bounds of political sagacity.

JUST now when our mills are still; when no logs are coming down stream, and our farmers want lumber for granaries and other buildings is a good time to figure out, that if they could get a few thousand feet of boards from Canada by paying $2 per thousand, who pays the tariff.

THE National Democratic (gold bug) committee met in Indianapolis, July 25, and concluded not to put up a ticket. After their experience of four years ago it was deemed best to try no more. Several, among them Mr. Haldeman, proprietor of the Louisville Courier Journal, came out pronouncedly for William J. Bryan.

Don't Want an Honest President.

In last week's Aitkin Republican appears an interview, from the Pilot, with A. L. Cole, a prominent business man of Walker. After telling of his giving up free silver and gold for gold monometalism he winds up his article as follows:

"While Mr. Bryan is an unusually brilliant man, and in my opinion an honest one, unfortunately he does not enjoy the confidence of the business men of the nation. His triumph means shattered confidence, and want of confidence means hard times. Viewing this question as I do, I do not see how I can support Mr. Bryan this fall."

This conclusion of Mr. Cole seems to be that of many business men, They are afraid of "the confidence of the business men of the nation." While admitting that our candidate is "honest" and "unusually brilliant" he goes with the gang of "confidence" business men. Shame on you! But an honest confession is good for the soul and you may be led to see the error of your latter ways. "Honest" men are better than "confidence" men and more apt to give us honest money.

TEMPERANCE voters can't console their conciences by voting for McKinley.

SINCE the gold bug democrats have gone out of business what will the St. Paul Globe do? Where is she at anyway?

WHOSE flag will be pulled down in China, where the English, Russian, French and Japanese flags each float from a corner of the same city.

BRO. TEAS, of the Carver County News, don't seem to have any arguments against the Kansas City platform. At least he don't produce them. Possibly he is "agin arguin".

SOME of the goldbug democrats have announced their intention of voting for McKinley again. Others have concluded that democracy is good enough for them and will support W. J. Bryan.

THE shooting down of innocent inoffensive negeres, citizens of the United States, in New Orleans this week, by a mob of young men reads about as bad as the stories of Chinese depredations across the Pacific.

ADMIRAL KEMPF couldn't see any excuse for firing on the thousands of helpless Chinese along the Chinese coast. Yet many of the republican papers are crying out "annihilate the race". It must be race prejudice.

THE United States the home of the free and land of the brave, has always been considered a peaceable country. But now do the people want their son's dying in Cuba, going crazy in the Philippines, or shot down in China to expand our commerce?

REPORTS from Fort Scott, Kansas, say that hoodlums interfered with Jerry Simpson while he was addressing an audience there. Is that the new argument the g. o. p. intends using this fall? We had noticed before that they were short on argument. That they couldn't face the American people and try to cry down the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and all the line of teaching of a century. But we hadn't suspected that rpwdies would try to interfere with free speech. Why they certainly will lose the "confidence" of the people if they pursue such tactics.

Mills Shut Down.

Several of the local flour mills have been forced to close down on account of the lack of export demand. Five of the Consolidated company's mills have been closed. The Washburn Crosby company is running to full capacity as yet, but may be compelled to shut down unless there is an improvement in trade soon. Only one of the Pillsbury Washburn mills, the Lincoln, is down, though there has been some talk of closing the Pillsbury B.—Minneapolis Times.

Litchfield Independent: The Prohibitionists of this county will hold a mass convention next Saturday July 28th to nominate a county ticket. The cold water people are quite aggressive this year, spurred on do doubt by President McKinley's miserable fiasco on the anti-canteen law. It is claimed that through a system of personal pledges the Prohibition party strength this year will amount to 800 votes. The plan of the party leaders here is to nominate candidates or endorse those of other parties who will pledge themselves to the leading tenets of the prohibition movement.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,639 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

Off of the Continent.

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island,
July 10th, 1900

J. H. MCGARY, ESQ.

Dear Sir: Your very welcome letter came to hand some days ago; truly glad to hear from you. Also received the BUFFALO GAZETTE in which appeared my letter and the beautiful tribute paid to my brother's death for which please accept my heartfelt thanks.

I presume you will think strange at a letter from me written at this place, under the control of this state, California, and government, yet it is off the continent, this being the first time I ever was off the continent, I feel that I must write you something about the island and this beautiful little Eden which eclipses all other places on the Pacific side of the continent for a pleasant climate; seldom above 70 and the lowest average 55 The air is dry and balmy evenings, a very wonderful exception to California as the summer evenings are cool and more or less chilly like autumn evenings in Minnesota. It was discovered by Juan Rodrigues Cabrillo, September 1542, named by Sebastian Viscaino, in 1605 Average temperature of July at Avalon, 65; January 51; temperature of ocean, August, 70. Length of island 22 miles, greatest width 7 miles; circumference 65 miles, extent 55 000 acres; highest peak, Black Jack, 2,500 ft; ancient inhabitants, savages of the stone age. Points of interest; aquarium; collection of living marine animals peculiar to Southern California; sea lion rookery three miles from Avalon; the Spynx, 4 miles; San Clement Island 20 miles; Little Harbor 12 miles; mounts Orizaba, Banning, and Black Jack 7 miles; Verde antique quarries and ancient Olla manufactory 12 miles; ship rock 14 miles; Eagles Nest camp via stage road 12 miles; Johnson's Landing 15 miles; Catalina Harbor 13 miles; prehistoric caves, 13 miles. The great quarries furnishing stone for the San Pedro breakwater are on this island. Many different kinds of rock are found here, used for fine finish in building mantels and furniture tops Some valuable acreage for grain raising is profitably cultivated to feed the many animals belonging to the Banning company. 12 000 sheep roam over the island, and also many wild goats and a few wild cattle. The stage route is a fine piece of engineering along the steep sides sides of the many canyons around high peaks requiring two loops to be made in order to ascend the higher elevations. They drive six horses in their stage up a ten per cent grade, 3 miles to top of mountain, requiring one hour and 30 minutes to drive up and 9 miles down the other side which they drive in one hour. Having come to the island with Mrs. Christlieb to take a rest after my long cares over my feeble brother I concluded to take the trip 12 miles. While many may regard the trip thrilling, but I frankly confess that the terrors of the trip far outweighed the pleasures of it coming down six in hand, going at a ten mile gait around 140 turns around points sometimes so short as not to be able to see the leaders, all on a road not over 12 feet. I consider the driver a Jo dandy and having returned safely I have no desire to take another trip over the route.

A few words about Avalon. The whole island and part of Ayalon is owned by the Banning brothers. They are large property owners in Los Angeles, Wilmington and San Pedro They own quite a number of harbor tugs and sea going vessels of various sizes and no vessels are allowed to bring passengers to the island except the Banning boats. Last year they landed at Avalon 48 000 passengers, at $2 25 a head. The town has a good water system, plenty of water in every nook and corner, and part of the town is well sewered The town is thoroughly cleaned every day, all leaves, paper and garbage carted away and burned. Water is free without charge ground rent for tenting and wooden camps all free, but the Banning interests touch almost everything outside of that. They own several large hotels with about 300 tents capable of accomodating 1,200 people at $2 per day. All transportation on land or water, all freight pays tribute to the Bannings. Only 80 land holders outside the Bannings have any interest here. A brassband of 20 to 30 pieces plays every night and a large pavilion for dancing occupied every night till 12 o'clock, all free. I presume that more than five thousand tourists are here now for the season. The little valley that affords a beautiful residence place is about 40 rods wide and 50 long laid out in beautiful streets nicely paved with decomposed granite and well sprinkled with water from the ocean. Numerous little canyons lead out from the town and drives, walks, paths and stairways lead up to the many cottages and tents that are built, supported or hung on the sides of the cliffs If an earthquake would happen to shake here there would be a serious mix up of the people

The Bannings gave a barbecue here on the Fourth. They roasted about four tons of beef, mutton and fish and had several barrels of baked beans The meat and fish were nicely done and I never partook of a more sumptuous feast, and after the multitude had feasted they loaded up everyone with loaves and fishes, beef and mutton. It minded me very much of a certain occasion that we read about in the bible. Outside the town they have fine ball grounds, golf links, a tennis court and a fine club house so that all kinds of sports are enjoyed and all people are having a general good time. I expect to return to Los Angeles in a few days to be myself again Yours truly,

I. A. CHRISTLIEB.

Democracy.

Webster defines democracy:

1. Government by the people; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained and directly exercised by the people.

2. Government by popular representation; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained by the people, but is indirectly exercised through a system of representation and delegated authority periodically renewed; a constitutional representative government; a republic.

3. Collectively the people, regarded as the source of govern ment.

4. The principles and policy of the Democratic party, so called (U. S.).

AIDED THE BRITISH.

Incident of 41 Years Ago Recalled by Taking of Taku Forts.

American Captain Helps British Admiral Out of Perilous Position—Originated Phrase "Blood is Thicker Than Water."

The Taku forts, recently occupied by the international forces, just 41 years ago were the scene of an episode which gave to the world that famous phrase: "Blood is thicker than water."

A British fleet of 11 small gunboats, under Admiral Hope, was engaged in an assault on the mud batteries just inside the Pei-Ho river bar on June 25, 1859, when the tide went down and left them helpless in the mud under the fire of the Chinese smoothbores.

Capt. Tatnall, the flag officer commanding the United States China squadron, which was anchored off the bar, nominally guarding American interests, perceiving the plight of the British admiral, lowered his barge, and with his flag lieutenant and 20 men rowed up the river to show the Englishman how to point his guns. The flag lieutenant, Stephen Decatur Trenchard, was badly wounded, and one man in the barge was killed in passing through the fire from the forts. Once on board, however, the British guns were so well served by the Americans that the forts were silenced and Tatnall himself piloted the gunboats by a channel he had discovered until they found the protection of the fleet outside.

Tatnall's action was regarded by the authorities at Washington as tantamount to disobedience of orders, as he had been strongly cautioned by his government to preserve neutrality and limit his activity solely to the protection of Americans. He was detached from command and brought home, where he only avoided a court-martial through the great popularity his brave act gave him. The "blood is thicker than water" phrase was coined in English newspapers at that time, and was echoed so vigorously in the American press that the navy department finally approved Tatnall's action.

"BESET BY EARTH'S CARES."

Beset by earth's cares, by its turmoil and strife,
I prayed for some glimpse of the heavenly life;

Some vision I prayed for to strengthen my faith
And show me the force that can triumph o'er death.

I walked through the street and I walked through the square,
And the face of a stranger replied to my prayer:

The face of a woman where patience and ruth
Like angels smiled out from the spent fires of youth.

The brow's tranquil arch, and the eyes' tender gray,
And the happy shut mouth, without words seemed to say:

"Our strength may be scanty, our task may be small,
But each has his part in the service of all;

This also we know, when perplexed by life's pain:
The hand that created with surely sustain.

If griefs come upon us, in grief let us prove
The conquests of courage, the healing of love;

So, cheerful and calm, to our souls shall be given
A foretaste on earth of the kingdom of heaven."

O thanks, unknown sister! Thy battles, I know,
Right nobly were fought in the long, long ago;

And praise be to God, by whose goodness and grace
The light of His kingdom shines forth in man's face!

—Dora Read Goodale, in Country Gentleman.

Mr. Jobson Is Musical

WHEN Mr. Jobson got home from his office one afternoon about a month ago he carried under his arm a long, coffin-like leather case, which he deposited with great care on top of the piano.

"Why, it's a fiddle!" exclaimed Mrs. Jobson.

"Wrong as usual," said Mr. Jobson, amiably. "You've another guess coming. However, as it is not within the range of probability that you'd guess correctly if you had a million coming I'll just tell you what this is, Mrs. Jobson. It's a violin."

"Isn't that what I—"

"No, Mrs. Jobson, that isn't what you said. You said it was a fiddle."

"But what is the dif—"

"Just the difference between a plaster of paris half dollar and the real thing, or a painted ship on a painted ocean and a real ship on wet water, Mrs. Jobson, that's all. It'ud be just as well for you to grasp these little distinctions. A fiddle, Mrs. Jobson, is $2.50 worth of pine wood and varnish and catgut, and it's performed upon by grimy persons with low foreheads, no chins to speak of, and beady eyes set close together, who officiate at parlor socials, farm dances and the like. A violin is—er—well, this is a violin. You've read or heard of Stradivarius violins, haven't you? Well, I think this is one of 'em. Got it from a man who keeps a cigar store. He had it on exhibition in his window. I'm sorry for that poor cigar store man, for I think I did him right out of his eye teeth. Paid him only $55 for it, and it's got all the earmarks and warts and moles of a genuine Strad. Wouldn't be surprised if some expert 'ud come along and offer me $5,000 or $10,000 for that violin any time. This tobacconist who sold it to me may know a lot about stogies and chewing tobacco, but he's a good thing when it comes to violins," and Jobson took the battered, homely-looking instrument out of its case and exhibited it with manifest pride.

"What are you going to do with it?" inquired Mrs. Jobson.

"Well," replied Mr. Jobson, with great deliberation, "I'm not going to kill it for its hide and tallow, and I'm not going to us it for kindling to light the kitchen fire with. I beg to inquire, Mrs. Jobson, what people who buy violins generally do with 'em?"

"Try to play on them, I suppose," replied Mrs. Jobson, meekly.

"Try to play on 'em, eh?" said Mr. Jobson, with the accent on the "try."

"Just you hang on to your sarcasm until you need it. I've bought this violin to play on."

"But," said Mrs. Jobson, "I never knew that you played the—"

"I'm quite aware of that, Mrs. Jobson," said Mr. Jobson, fondling his purchase as affectionately as if it had been an heirloom, and taking it to the window the better to examine its "points." "I may remark, incidentally, that there are a whole heap of things that you don't know, Mrs. Jobson. I'm not in the habit of climbing out on the eaves and parading my accomplishments, like some people I've heard tell of, Mrs. Jobson. I may inform you, however, that when you were wearing dresses down to your shoetops and before you'd begun to tuck your back hair up under your hat, I was able to saw on a violin to make folks that heard me weep or laugh at will."

"Did you ever!" exclaimed Mrs. Jobson. "Then why have you never played since we were mar—"

"Because it's kept me too busy trying to keep a home over your head, Mrs. Jobson—that's why," said Mr. Jobson. "I'm going to take it up now, however, and in about a month from date there'll be some music around these parts that'll hurt the suburban resorts by keeping all of our neighbors for blocks around on their front stoops at night. You'll accompany me on the piano. I'm going to practice up by myself for a few weeks, and then the Jobson parlor concerts will begin. I don't claim to be any Ysaye or Joachim or Marteau or Sarasate, or anything like that, Mrs. Jobson, but if there was any old thing I used to be able to do better than another before my fingers got into machinery made to imperatively necessary for me to toil and moil and slave, day and night, in order to get and keep a home together, why, it was playing the violin; that's all."

After dinner that evening Mr. Jobson opened up the packages of bridges and strings and keys and tail-pieces and chin-rests for the violin that he had bought, for the purpose of fitting the instrument up anew, and went to work at it. None of the keys fitted, and he had to spend about two hours shaving them down with a bit of glass. The bridge he finally selected had to be shaved, too, and it was quite a time before Mr. Jobson recollected that the strings of a violin can't be passed through the keys when the keys are not attached to the violin. Two of the strings snapped from too much stretching. Along toward 11 o'clock at night Mr. Jobson had finished resining the new bow, and he drew the bow across the strings of his $55 cigar store Strad with horrifying effect. The music was like the mingled wailings of condemned souls. Mrs. Jobson made she excuse that she wanted to put the cat out to leave the room, and even when she was downstairs in the basement she put her fingers in her ears.

"My fingers are a bit stiff, and my bowing arm isn't what it used to be, from lack of practice, but you just wait till I get limbered up, after a few weeks, and you'll hear the sweet strains around this neck o' the Jobson woods, all right!" said Mr. Jobson, when he put the $55 Strad away that night.

The next evening Mr. Jobson brought home a violin and piano collection, in two sections. The collection was made up almost entirely of such choice classics as "Champagne Charley," "Not for Joe," "Up in a Balloon," "Maggie May," "Silvery Waves," "Down in a Coal Mine," "Elfin Waltz," "Ten Thousand Miles Away," and other concertos of the sort that were popular in the days of Mr. Jobson's youth.

"Just you practice up the piano accompaniments," said Mr. Jobson to Mrs. Jobson, handing her the piano part of the classic collection, "and I'll go into training in the spare room up in the attic for a few weeks, and when I get into form we'll play these things together and make the neighbors jealous."

For about three weeks Mr. Jobson repaired to the attic room immediately after dinner, closed the door tight, got out his $55 Cremona and performed thereon until nearly midnight. He put a mute on the strings to drown the effect of his practicing, but for all that the callous world will never know what Mrs. Jobson suffered. Mr. Jobson ignored the sharps and flats altogether in his practicing, and as for time, he was probably of the opinion that time was made for slaves. Mrs. Jobson dreaded the hour when Mr.

IN FRONT OF THE JOBSON MANSION.

Jobson should demand her to accompany him on the piano.

It came one evening last week, when Mr. Jobson brought his cigar store Cremona downstairs from the attic, opened up the colinpaible music stand and announced to Mrs. Jobson that the concert would begin by a rendition of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," by the famous and notorious Jobson family, who had played before crowned heads, bunco steerers, porch climbers, etc., etc.

Here the veil had better be drawn. They hadn't been playing Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" more than two and one-half minutes before the gang of small boys began to assemble in front of the Jobson homestead and to indulge in cat-calls. Mr. Jobson didn't hear the tumult before his door at first. He was too busy telling Mrs. Jobson that she didn't know any more about playing piano accompaniments than she did about glass blowing, that she was all out of time, etc., etc. When the crowd in front of the Jobson mansion had increased to about a hundred and odd, however, Mr. Jobson couldn't help but hear the delighted yells and shrieks and cat-calls that came in through the wide-open front windows. He stopped abruptly, laid down his violin, went to one of the windows and looked out, pulled down the curtains and then walked back and regarded Mrs. Jobson, who still sat on the piano stool looking miserable and depressed, with an expression of sorrowful calm.

"Madam," said he, trying to impale Mrs. Jobson with his gaze, "this is the parting of the ways. It had to come some time, but I have been endeavoring to stall it off as long as possible. There is a lot that I could say with regard to this job you have put up on me, but I content myself with one simple question, which I desire you to answer me truthfully: How much per head did you pay these howling hoodlums and ruffians in front of my door to come here and insult me and heap vituperation and scorn upon me?"—Washington Star.

The District of Columbia is first in the world with its census report, giving a total population of 278,718, an increase of 20.98 per cent. since 1900, a rate that would make the total population of the United States about 76,000,000.

At the present time the United States have more warship tonnage under construction than ever before in the history of the country in time of peace. The population of China is variously estimated at from 300,000,000 to 400,000,000. Perhaps it is felt that in that country a hundred million inhabitants, more or less, hardly count, though according to western standards that number would make several big nations. But whether the higher or lower figure be accepted, it is evident that China has a population large enough to continue to make trouble for a long time to come.

It was that regiment which charged down the slope at Waterloo with the cry of "Scotland forever," the charge that inspired the famous painting of that name.

The telephonograph is the latest invention along the lines of the telephone. Its object is to make a permanent record of the telephone message, which can be repeated to the receiver any length of time after it is sent. This telephonograph does not have the waxed cylinder. It passes a steel tape from one spool to another over a magnet, something after the manner of the inked tape of the typewriter. When the tape is passed over the magnet again it repeats the message.

Col. Emerson H. Liscum, the first American officer to be killed in the fighting in China, was a typical American soldier who had fought in four wars. That the latter statement can be made of a man who volunteered and first saw service in the war of the rebellion may prove rather startling to the thoughtless, but such is the fact. Col. Liscum was wounded at Gettysburg and at San Juan Hill, he fought in the Philippines and was killed in China, and yet it is said we are not actually at war with the Chinese government.

The conventional method of "christening" a new boat by breaking a bottle of champagne over the prow was superseded at the launching of the steamer Cornell in South Chicago by a more picturesque if not a newer custom. Instead of doing it in the old way Miss Etta Gunnell, of Buffalo, held in her hands a golden cage from which she liberated four doves as the steamer started down the ways. It is a custom borrowed from the Japanese, and has been followed in setting afloat all the boats of Carnegie's Pittsburgh Steamship company.

The statue of Liberty on Liberty island in New York harbor was struck twice by lightning and emerged unharmed. One bolt struck the upraised arm and another hit it squarely on the forehead. The statue is protected by the finest system of lightning rods ever made. They extend from a point above the torch down the figure and foundation and into the ground, a distance of 305 feet. Thence they go into the water of the bay and end in a system of piping filled with carbon. Workmen went over the statue and found that it was not damaged at all.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Through Minister Wu the state department at Washington received a cipher dispatch from Minister Conger at Peking, believed to be authentic, which indicated envoys were safe after date of alleged massacre. Date thought to be July 18. Message stated envoys were in British legation under continuous shot and shell from Chinese troops, and quick relief alone could prevent general massacre. The London press regards the Conger message as a Chinese trick. A commissary depot for American troops in China has been established at Taku.

In Paris thieves stole Mrs. Potter Palmer's $17,000 diamond necklace.

Consent has been given by Japan to have American troops land there on the way to China.

During the past week 200 Filipinos were killed and 130 surrendered or were captured. One hundred rifles were taken. Twelve Americans were killed and 11 wounded. A plot for an uprising in Manila was discovered in an isolated recruiting station in San Miguel.

In London the secretary of the Chinese legation declares that communication with Peking is practically reopened. The Chinese, disheartened by the fall of Tientsin, are said to be suing for peace. President McKinley may mediate in response to an appeal by Emperor Kwang Su. An imperial edict received at European capitals states that foreigners were in Peking July 18 under the protection of the imperial court. The United States, believing Conger is alive, is preparing to attempt his rescue without Europe's aid unless the allies make haste.

At the Paris exposition Illinois apples took the first prize.

CHINA WANTS HELP.

Appeals to President to Serve Her in Her Trouble.

McKinley Willing to Act as Mediator — Conditions of Compliance Laid on China by Secretary Hay.

Washington, July 23.—President McKinley has received what purports to be a direct appeal from the Chinese officers to extricate that government from the dangerous and difficult position in which it has been placed as a result of the Boxer uprising and the ensuing hostile attitude of the great powers. Although the exact text of the appeal made by the emperor of China to France has not been made known here, it is believed that the address to the president is similar in terms to that communication.

McKinley Willing to Mediate.

Washington, July 24.—The president has listened to the appeal of the Chinese government as transmitted through Minister Wu and has signified his willingness to mediate between the imperial government and the powers, but only upon conditions which first must be met by the Chinese government.

The Conditions.

It is known that Secretary Hay will demand these conditions upon which the president will accept the grave responsibility that would be imposed upon him by the emperor:

1. That the Peking government furnish absolutely incontrovertible proof that the foreign ministers and their suites are not only alive, but that they are at liberty to perform the functions of their several offices without interference.
2. That the imperial government is prepared to maintain law and order and protect foreigners and all Christians from massacre.
3. That the Boxers shall be suppressed and their leaders arrested and punished.
4. That the murderers of Christians, whether the victims were officials of foreign governments or only citizens or subjects, shall be apprehended and punished without delay.
5. That the several governments, including the United States, which have troops and ships in Chinese jurisdiction shall be accorded wide latitude either in the work of assisting the imperial government to restore order or in protecting their own countrymen from murder and outrage.
6. That disloyal and revolutionary officials who are responsible for the existing uprising shall be dealt with in such a manner as to insure future peace.

There will be other conditions, but they will be of a minor character, and relate to the details of carrying out President McKinley's policy.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Result of the Fighting During Last Week—Amnesty Resolutions Sent to Aguinaldo.

Manila, July 23.—It is officially stated that last week 200 insurgents were killed and 130 surrendered or were captured. One hundred rifles were taken. Twelve Americans were killed and 11 wounded. This includes the casualties of Col. William E. Birkhimer's engagement with a force of the Twenty-eighth volunteer infantry, who attacked 200 insurgent rifles intrenched two miles east of Taal, killing 38. A detachment of the signal corps, while repairing wires, was twice ambushed. Capt. Charles D. Roberts, of the Thirty-fifth infantry, who was captured by the Filipinos last May, has arrived here on parole. He will not return to captivity. Senor Buencamino last Thursday sent to Aguinaldo by means of Aguinaldo's mother the amnesty resolutions adopted by the meeting of representative Filipinos here on June 21, together with Gen. MacArthur's answer to them and other documents bearing upon the restoration of peace. It is understood that Aguinaldo will summon his advisers, and that a reply may be expected within a month. Filipinos here will give a banquet next Saturday in celebration of President McKinley's order of amnesty.

VENGEANCE OF A MOB.

Wreaked on a Brutal Negro at Huntsville, Ala.—Hanged and Filled with Bullets.

Huntsville, Ala., July 24.—Elijah Clark, a negro who on Sunday assaulted Susan Priest, a 13-year-old girl, was taken from the jail in this city Monday night and lynched near the spot where his crime was committed. His body was riddled with bullets. Sheriff Fulgham defended his prisoner to the last, but a dense smoke, from a combination of tar, feathers and oil, fired by the crazed mob, was too much for him and he was dragged from the jail and placed under a physician's care. William Vining, who attempted to rush through the crowd and up the jail steps, was shot and dangerously wounded.

Friendly Relations with Spain.

Madrid, July 24.—Premier Silvela, when questioned about the relations between the United States and Spain, said:

"Everything is satisfactory. The American government is doing its best to attend to the protection of the rights, property and trade of Spanish subjects in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines."

He speaks highly of Mr. Storer, United States minister to Madrid, saying that he does everything in his power to smooth difficulties between the two countries and to better their relations.

Breaks Cycle Records.

New York, July 24.—Mrs. Lindsay finished her phenomenal ride of 1,500 miles at 2:30 o'clock, having broken all records up to 1,000 miles, and created new ones past that point. She started last Monday morning at six o'clock and the 1,500 miles were covered in 164 hours and 35 minutes.

Gold in the Treasury.

Washington, July 24.—The government's holdings of gold on Monday reached the highest point in its history and amounted to $327,498,482, including the lawful reserve of $150,000,000. The next highest amount was $427,238,600, which was in the government's vaults on May 2, 1900.

Electrocuted.

New York, July 24.—Joseph Mullen was electrocuted in the state prison at Sing Sing. He murdered his wife in this city on June 4, 1898.

TIENTSIN EVACUATED.

Admiral Seymour Sends Telegram to That Effect—Chinese Army Retreating Towards Peking.

London, July 21.—The admiralty Saturday afternoon received the following telegram from Admiral Seymour:

"Tientsin entirely evacuated by Chinese."

New York, July 24.—A dispatch to the Journal and Advertiser from Chefoo, July 20, says the Chinese army is now retreating toward Peking from Tientsin.

A brilliant dash against a large force of Chinese at Tientsin was made Monday morning by a detachment of American troops, assisted by some English fusileers.

The object was to capture a battery of large caliber cannon which had been doing great damage.

The Anglo-American troops charged a large fort across an open space, and were exposed to a hot but poorly directed fire from the enemy.

They dashed into the fort and, after engaging the Chinese in a sharp hand-to-hand fight, put them to flight and remained masters of the fort.

Eight large modern guns were captured, together with carts and all the accessories. The battery was immediately turned upon the fleeing enemy, who under the well-directed fire suffered heavy losses.

The victory was won in an incredibly short time against an overwhelmingly superior force, and, despite the charge under fire and the fight in the fort, neither the Americans nor the British lost a single man.

New York, July 21.—A dispatch to the Journal and Advertiser from Shanghai says that the Boxer rebellion is spreading to the northwest of Shansi, Shensi and Kansu provinces and southwest to the province of Hanan.

In conjunction with Tung Fuh Siang's troops the Boxers have endeavored to recover their lost ground in Shantung province, where the Boxer movement originated and was fostered by Yuhsien, then governor, but since transferred to Shensi.

The Boxers suffered a severe reverse on July 8 from Yuan Shikai and Changoow.

On the southern border of Chihli, adjoining Shantung, the Boxers intended overrunning Shantung and crossing the Yellow river into Kiangsu.

All provinces south of the Yellow river are so far undisturbed. The provinces affected are Chihli, Shensi, Shansi, Hanan, Kansu and Shantung, the last two only slightly.

Viceroys Li Yun Yi and Chang Chitung are pro-foreign and maintain order from the Yangtse valley to the eastern portion of the Yellow river.

St. Petersburg, July 24.—Three hundred thousand soldiers from the various military districts are en route to China. While no information is given out as to the destination of this force, it is believed an early attack on Peking is contemplated.

London, July 23.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says: As soon as the Russian Gen. Linevitch (reported from Vladivostock to be marching to the scene of hostilities with an army corps and a complete artillery brigade), arrives at Tientsin, the advance on Peking will begin.

BARK IS CUT IN TWO.

Big Cunard Liner Campania Collides with a Vessel—Eleven of Crew Are Drowned.

Liverpool, July 23.—During a dense fog off Holyhead Saturday morning the Cunard liner Campania ran down the bark Embleton, of Liverpool. Seven of the crew of the Embleton were saved by the Campania's boats, but 11, including the captain, were drowned. Although the liner was going dead slow, on account of the fog, she went clean through the bark.

The great engines were stopped and reversed. Two lifeboats of the Campania, filled with brave men, were lowered into the fog and the apparently hopeless search began.

The passengers waited with impatience for a sign from the lifeboats. It seemed as though hours had passed before they heard a shout and soon saw one of the boats at the side. As the occupants were raised to the deck it was seen that seven of them were strangers. These men were members of the crew of the bark Embleton. There were 11 more of the crew to be accounted for, including the captain, but all search was unavailing.

Appeal to Workers.

Denver, Col., July 23.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, after six days of careful discussion and consideration of questions of vast importance to the interests of organized labor in the United States, adjourned Saturday afternoon. In so far as the council could dispose of them during several sessions, all matters were settled, and the groundwork was laid for future action. The next ten days will develop the result of some of the decisions reached by the council. The chief business of Saturday was the issuance of an address to the laboring men of the country urging organization of the unorganized and a union of all organizations, irrespective of sex, politics, color or religion.

Will Speak in New York.

New York, July 24.—The announcement is made at democratic state headquarters that Mr. Bryan will visit New York state after October 1, making six speeches in as many different cities. He will talk in New York city, Brooklyn, Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester and Utica. The details of the meetings in this city and Brooklyn will be made before he reaches the east, for which part of the country he will leave Lincoln October 1.

Beckham Nominated.

Lexington, Ky., July 21.—At 3:05 a. m. Beckham was nominated for governor by the state democratic convention. The platform declares for fair elections and recommends that the act known as the Goebel election law, be amended, and that until so amended as to be satisfactory to all the republicans shall have representatives on both the state and county election commissions.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

Enthusiastic Reunion Is Held at Atlanta, Ga.—Patriotic Sentiments Expressed.

Atlanta, Ga., July 20.—Five thousand members of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans lustily cheered the commanders of these two organizations—Gen. Albert E. Shaw and Gen. John B. Gordon—as they sat together upon the stage of the Grand Opera house at the kindling of the campfire of the Blue and Gray reunion here Thursday night. The occasion was the formal beginning of the reunion of the surviving veterans of the union and confederate armies, who fought in the battles around Atlanta, in July, 1864. President McKinley, unable to be present, sent his regrets in the following telegram:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., July 19.—Hon. W. A. Hemphill, Chairman Executive Committee, Atlanta: I deeply regret my inability to be with you during the reunion of the blue and the gray in Atlanta this week. Such reunions are gratifying evidence of good feeling and comradeship, and give assurance of the permanence of our government, resting on the patriotism of a reunited people. Please express to those who may be present my cordial congratulations and best wishes.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

The president's words brought the audience to its feet in a burst of applause.

Both Gens. Gordon and Shaw were enthusiastically cheered when they spoke.

Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, inspector general of the United States army and a distinguished union veteran, and Col. W. P. C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, an equally distinguished confederate veteran, were on the stage. The former was presented and concluded an eloquent tribute to the reunited country. His brother, Col. W. C. R. Breckinridge, spoke. Gen. O. O. Howard and Gov. J. A. Mount, of Indiana, made short speeches.

WENT OVER THE WAY.

Lieut. Ricketts Says He Knew Goebel Was to Be Killed and Crossed the Street.

Georgetown, Ky., July 23.—The testimony of a messenger boy in the Goebel murder trial created a great sensation in the court Saturday. He testified that he saw the assassination and that he saw the muzzle of a rifle protruding out of the window in the secretary of state's office, the sash being raised about 15 inches and the curtains being down.

Georgetown, Ky., July 24.—Many of the details of the plot which resulted in the assassination of Senator Goebel at Frankfort last winter were brought out in the course of the testimony given in the Powers case, the main witness in the morning session of court being Lieut. John Ricketts, an officer in the state militia.

From what Ricketts said while on the stand it was made apparent that more than one man at Frankfort at the time of the shooting knew something was about to happen, and so far as Ricketts was concerned he very bluntly said in the course of his testimony that not long before the shots that killed Goebel were fired he (Ricketts) left the executive building, because he did not care to be present in case anyone was hurt.

Rickett's testimony was very favorable to Powers. He not only testified that Powers did all he could to keep the members of the mountain army which he brought to Frankfort January 25 sober and orderly, but he also gave testimony, the inference from which was that Goebel was shot from the second story of the executive building, instead of from Powers' office, which was on the first floor.

CUT LORD ROBERTS' LINES.

Gen. De Wet Breaks Communication by Railway and Telegraph Near Honingspruit.

London, July 24.—Gen. De Wet has again succeeded in cutting Lord Roberts' communications, both by railway and telegraph, and captured 100 of the Highlanders. The story of the federal commander's bold raid comes in the form of a telegram from Gen. Forester-Walker, dated at Cape Town, Sunday, July 22, forwarding a dispatch from Gen. Knox, as follows:

"Kroonstad, July 22.—Following from Broadwood sent by dispatch rider to Honingspruit, wired thence to Kroonstad: 'Have followed commando since July 16. Hard, sharp fighting at Palmietfontein, July 19. Prevented from pursuing laager by darkness. Eight hundred Boers found. Our casualties five killed and 76 wounded. Reach Vaalkrantz today. Enemy doubled back through Paarde Hral in darkness. Shall march to-morrow to Roode Vaal station. Send supplies for 3,000 men and horses, also any news of the enemy's movements. I believe the commando consists of 2,000 men and four guns and is accompanied by President Steyn and both the De Wets.'

"The wire and main line of the railway north of Honingspruit have been cut and also the telegraph to Pretoria via Potchefstroom. According to my information De Wet has crossed the railway and going north."

Wolley Notified.

Chicago, July 21.—John G. Woolley, candidate for the prohibition party for the presidency, was notified of his nomination Friday evening. Central Music hall, where the ceremony took place, was well filled with an audience which included many women, and the meeting throughout was an enthusiastic one. The proposed plan of campaign of the prohibition party was indicated clearly in all the speeches. It is to invoke the aid of the churches and ask for the votes of the church members on the ground that the question at issue is a moral one and represents the teachings of the Christian religion.

Illinois Apples Best.

Princeton, Ill., April 23.—Much gratification is felt among the fruit men of Illinois over the signal victory won for their exhibit of apples at the Paris exposition in taking first prize. Information regarding the award was received by Secretary L. R. Bryant, of the Illinois State Horticultural society.

Appointment Confirmed.

Paris, July 21.—The fact of the appointment of Rev. John Joseph Keane, formerly rector of the Catholic university of America at Washington, D. C., as archbishop of Dubuque, Ia., is confirmed on the authority of Archbishops Ireland and Kain, who are now in this city.

NEWS FROM CONGER.

State Department Receives Word from Minister at Peking.

Says That Foreigners Were Under Continuous Fire from Chinese —Urges Quick Relief—Our Policy in China.

Washington, July 21.—The following message in cipher from Minister Conger at Peking was received by the state department by the Chinese minister:

"In British legation. Under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief only can prevent general massacre."

The message is not dated, but it is understood was sent from Peking on the 18th.

Statement of State Department.

The following statement has been given out at the state department:

"On the 11th of this month the state department communicated a brief message asking tidings of Minister Conger in the state department code. Minister Wu undertook to get this into Minister Conger's hands, if he were alive. He has succeeded in doing this. Friday morning the state department received a telegram from Consul General Goodnow at Shanghai, saying:

"'The governor of Shantung informs me that he has to-day received a cipher message from Conger of the 18th.'

"A few minutes later Minister Wu appeared at the state department with a telegram from Taotai Shang, dated July

EDWIN HURD CONGER.
(Minister of the United States at Peking, China.)

20, which had been received by Minister Wu at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning, reading as follows:

"'Your telegram was forwarded and as requested I send reply from the tsungli-yamen as follows: "Your telegram of the 15th day of this moon (11th July) received. The state department telegram has been handed to Minister Conger. Herewith is Minister Conger's reply to the state department:"

"'In British legation. Under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief only can prevent general massacre.'

"This reply was in the state department cipher and it is regarded by the state department as genuine inasmuch as forgeries seem under the circumstances impossible."

Policy of the United States.

Washington, July 21.—A correspondent here says he is able to state authoritatively that the policy of the United States in the Chinese situation was fully decided upon at the cabinet meetings held on Tuesday and Wednesday. This policy is as follows:

1. The United States will under no circumstances join in the partition of China among the powers.
2. The United States will use all its influence, to the utmost extent, short of war with European nations, to prevent the dismemberment of the Chinese empire.
3. The United States proposes to have a voice in the settlement of the Chinese trouble, and its voice will ever be raised against spoliation, and in favor of preservation of China's territorial and governmental entity, along the lines set forth in Secretary Hay's note to the powers dated July 3.
4. The United States will not declare war upon China on the present showing of facts, no matter what other powers may do.
5. The United States, acting independently and for itself, will cooperate with the other powers in restoring order in China, in punishing all officials, high or low, found guilty of crimes against human life, in setting up a stable government that may give guarantees of security of life and property and freedom of trade.

CASTELLANE IN A DUEL.

Anna Gould's Husband Crosses Swords with Count Orlowski and Wounds Him.

Paris, July 23.—Count Boni de Castellane (who married Miss Annie Gould, of New York) fought a duel with swords Saturday with Count Orlowski, in the outskirts of Paris. In the first assault Count Orlowski was wounded in the thorax, and the duel was stopped by the doctors.

The conditions of the duel were that the contest should continue until one of the combatants was absolutely unable to continue.

The cause of the duel was a newspaper article reciting a quarrel between the two, occurring in Count Boni de Castellane's house. Count Orlowski charged Castellane with responsibility for the article.

The seconds failed to reach a satisfactory arrangement, and decided that a meeting was necessary.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's Gems Stolen.

Paris, July 23.—Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, one of the members of the United States commission to the exposition, Saturday advertised an offer of a reward of $500 for information leading to the return of a necklace valued at $17,000, which is missing. The necklace is composed of emeralds set with diamonds and other jewels, among the emeralds being one of the finest specimens extant, and the size of a pigeon's egg. It is not known whether the necklace was lost or stolen, but it is believed it was stolen, as it was missed by Mrs. Palmer after entering the Palace Elysee Hotel from her carriage.

Killed His Wife.

Burlington, Ia., July 21.—S. P. Dahlman confesses that he killed his wife in St. Louis on the night of March 27, 1897, by smothering her with a pillow. She was ill, and he was watching by her bedside. She asked for a drink, and he gave it, then put the pillow over her face, holding it tight till she was dead. Remorse compelled him to confess to the authorities here.

Troops to Leave Cuba.

Havana, July 21.—Under instructions from Gov. Gen. Wood, the First United States infantry regiment, stationed at Pinar del Rio city and Guanajay, is preparing for departure within the next ten days. A troop of the Seventh cavalry will be stationed at Guanajay.

FROST OF FROSTS

IS THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CAMPAIGN OPENING

Under Republican League Auspices—A Record Breaker of Absolutely Barren Results — Other State and National Points—The Railway Corporation Press Show Their Hands—They Relieve the Courts of Arduous Labors by Their Wise and Unprejudiced Decisions—"On to Indianapolis" for the Democratic Campaign Opening—Governor Lind and the Indian Scare—Numerous Omens of State and National Success—The Week's Roundup.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, July 23, 1900.

Of all spiritless, uninteresting, tame and unprofitable affairs of national proportions, the State and National Republican League convention holds the record. The most striking comparison to it was the grand fizzle ratification meeting at the Minneapolis Exposition building, following the McKinley nomination in 1896, which was presided over by Pine Lumber Magnate T. B. Walker, and which, held in the heat of July, was so chilly that Mr. Walker has never presided over another such meeting, and in fact has been in California almost ever since.

The State League convention was an absolute fizzle, with the slimmest of audiences in attendance. This might have been laid to the weather, but not so the slim attendance of national delegates to Tuesday and Wednesday's convention, for that had been advertised throughout the country for the past year as the great refreshing time, when the good weather of the Northwest invited the outing. The delegates came not, and all the hotels, which for weeks had made ready for immense delegations, had their trouble and empty rooms for their plans. Indeed, the convention wound up Wednesday, outting off a whole day.

The sessions were tame and featureless, not even relieved by Senator Nelson's voluminous address, read in his schoolboy style (to use the expression of one of the Republican editors of the state who figetted through the senator's platitudes), and only momentarily relieved by the brief presence of the expected great star of the occasion, Governor Roosevelt. He spoke but a moment to the convention, in a gingerly, crabbed way, as if fearing to give away the points he had prepared for his main speech, the campaign "opener." The "Rough Rider's" impression upon the convention was plainly of little effect. Delegates openly expressed their disappointment.

The evening Auditorium meeting was a success, both in attendance and enthusiasm from the portion of the audience in full sympathy (for there was a large portion of it that did not "touch off" at each suggestion of the management composed of people there to listen and to judge for themselves). The meeting was as large as the building could hold, just about the equal of, and no greater than the recent pro-Boer reception. But there were no outside thousands, no impassable streets as on Bryan occasions, and the overflow meetings announced for each inviting corner, did not occur. In fact the coming of something like 1,000 from Minneapolis saved the meeting from the chill of unoccupied seats. A few were shut out by closing the doors, mostly swearing Republicans who had been excluded because not having secured tickets, apropos of which the fact that Leaguers were obliged to pay 50 cents before they could have the necessary pasteboards made much bad feeling. There is scandal about the ticket management, Republicans themselves making very unsavory charges.

Some Republicans explain the tameness of the event by the bad odor that has ever surrounded the league in this state, which goes back to the Goodnow regime, when scandals regarding the finances of the league were frequent from the time that Goodnow got control down to the time he got his reward from the McKinley administration for the dirty work done by him in the campaign in the name of the league. The talk that league officials sold tickets to the Roosevelt affair, and put the money in their pockets, is quite like the previous scandals of the league. Other talk is that the affair would have been of greater interest had different men locally handled it and had charge of the person of Roosevelt. That he was dined by that great warrior of The Pioneer Press, who served in New Brunswick during the Civil war, dampened the military spirit. Others kicked because Lumber Truster Tom Shevlin, as national committeeman, was high push to go and bring the star here.

The whole affair, judged from the standpoint of a national event, fully justifies the view presented by our cartoonist, that Roosevelt contended with a Minnesota blizzard in starting the McKinley campaign. Says The Globe: "In point of numbers the convention was a frost. Not more than 400 delegates from a distance were in attendance, when it was expected that the convention would bring several thousand people to the city."

The most doleful reports were circulated among leaguers about the prospect of having much of a campaign fund this year. That Hanna was falling down with the corporations that he milked four years ago was conceded, and that the gigantic trusts organized since '96 must be relied on was admitted. And that was given as one of the reasons why Hanna had McKinley omit all mention of the trusts in his letter speech of acceptance. "You will have to raise your own funds in Minnesota," was what an Eastern delegate told a prominent Minnesotan. The latter confessed that the outlook was poor for cash for the campaign. Another said that the bad thing about it was that whatever the Bixby machine could get together it would spend in the interest of the Bixbyites. Bixby as the candidate two years from now appears to be the slate, and everything would be managed to bring about that result.

For the Democratic campaign is now to come the formal notification of Bryan and Stevenson, which will occur at Indianapolis Aug. 8, and which will probably be the grandest demonstration ever known in this country. Also at the same place on Aug. 16 will be held the national meeting of the Anti-Imperialists, the indications being that they will endorse the Democratic platform and candidates for the liberty campaign which they will conduct. A national meeting of the anti-trust organizations may also be held about the same time, with like action more than probable.

Concerning remaining events, before the campaign can be said to be actually opened, there are first in interest the two state conventions to make up the fusion ticket on state officers, which will be held Sept. 6, the Democratic at St. Paul and the Populist at Minneapolis. They were not called both in the same place for lack of hall room for both on the same day. But the different locations should not make any difference in harmony of action. The state ticket made, the state campaign will have a formal opening with events big enough to suit all.

What do the people of the state think of the situation regarding the labors of their railroad commission to protect the people against railroad combinations for exorbitant rates, and, as to the Northern Pacific-St. Paul and Duluth consolidation case, when the corporation daily papers rush in and in advance decide the law and the facts to the prejudice of the commission's efforts? The Times follows The Globe in deciding absolutely the great questions which the commission is bringing before the courts, towit, that the roads have not violated the law, and the roads are not competing lines, and that no questions of public policy, or of the people's rights and interests are at stake. If we are not mistaken there will be a protest from the people of the state that will be unmistakeable. Meanwhile the people can rely on it that the commission and Governor Lind will not be disturbed nor swerved from their discharge of sworn duty to the people and the state.

Apropos, one of those papers quotes a railway official as saying, "Now is the time for the roads to fight the railway commission if they ever hope to win a victory over that body."

In this connection it may be stated that the commission will within a few days be ready to promulgate the new general schedule of rates which they have been considering for some time past. That it will be acceptable to everybody, except possibly the roads, goes without saying.

The week has seen wheat fall again to within a few cents of the low ruling price of the last year, standing at between 50 cents and 60 cents at interior Minnesota shipping points, the home market. This, with loss of crops, small yields, trust prices about as high as ever, will make the McKinley prosperity look like 30 cents to a great many farmers.

And of trade in general the situation is in many respects serious. Mills are closed, men out, trade small, jobbers selling little, strikes continue, and labor in the large cities is in great distress, notably at Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, etc., etc., where corporation oppression and war on labor organizations prevent settlements of the matters in dispute and where in instances the people have invited the aid of the courts in their futile efforts to compel corporate authority to cease its arbitrary and unreasonable attitudes toward labor. Gold also is commencing to go abroad again, for foreign war operations, and our $100,000,000 gold reserve is reduced to $69,000,000. Our own situation as to Asiatic affairs adds to the uneasiness.

United States Marshal Grimshaw, though a political opponent of Governor Lind, does the latter the justice to commend his prompt action in sending troops into the Indian country in the late scare. Still the goppite press quotes the marshal to the contrary.

Apropos, there is indignation, especially in the northern part of the state, where Governor Lind's course was warmly commended, at the misrepresentation that has been made, especially by the St. Paul Dispatch. On file in the adjutant general's office were official dispatches, showing the promptitude with which Governor Lind acted and reported to Washington, and furthermore that he at the same time informed the department that if it had need for the soldiers at Fort Snelling, to use them, as he would be abundantly able to care for the Indians with the state forces.

All Minnesota is honored by the presence, taking needed rests at Minnetonka, of Hon. James K. Jones, our beloved head of the Democratic national committee, and Hon. Adlai Stevenson, ex-governor of Illinois, and ex-vice president, and our loved and trusted candidate for vice president. Against the time when they are given the expected formal reception, all wish for them that rest and comfort, with the members of their families, that will fit them for the arduous labors before them.

Minnesota Democracy warmly commends the stirring address to Democratic clubs issued by National President W. R. Hearst. It has the true ring.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Minnesota Crop Bulletin.

There were scattered showers in the northern half of the state early in the week, and rains began in the southern half on the 14th. In the southern tier of counties the rains were heavy, ranging from 3.21 inches at Worthington to 5.14 inches at La Crosse, in about 48 hours. The spring wheat harvest will begin from the 20th to the 25th of July, and with favorable conditions continuing, there will be a much better yield on the area remaining to be harvested than was looked for on July 1st. Barley harvest is well advanced in all the southern half of the state, and some oats are being cut. Rye and winter wheat are generally in shock or stack. Much of the flax is improved. The hay crop now being secured in good condition is very light except in a few places in southern counties.

A Good Showing.

The summary of the building operations throughout the country for the first six months of this year, compiled by the Construction News as given below, are extremely gratifying to Minneapolitans. While the building situation as far as the prices of building materials and the scarcity of labor were concerned was just as bad in this city as in any part of the country, Minneapolis shows a substantial increase of 43 per cent over the building operations of 1899, while the entire country shows a decline of 37 per cent.

Escaped from Jail.

Three prisoners escaped from the Redwood county jail by sawing off a padlock that held the iron grating that led to the fire escape on the second floor. They are Albert Kightlinger and Fred Winholz, both held for burglary and larceny committed in Vesta early in June, and Sidney E. Dailey, held for picking pockets at Olivia a month ago. Kightlinger resided in Minneapolis, and his wife was suffocated in a fire there on Decoration Day night. Winholz is a mute, and is a plasterer by trade.

Steal Strong Box.

The general store of L. T. Breen was entered by sneak thieves who rifled the safe, forcing the small iron box and made way with it complete. There was little or no money in the safe, but many very valuable papers were taken, including life insurance policies, certificate of stock in Bank of Hoffman, some deeds and mortgages. They secured entrance through the front door by means of keys. No trace has been found of the stolen box or papers.

Held Up by Tramps.

William Peterson, of Minneapolis, while traveling in a box car on the Milwaukee road with two tramps was foolish enough to flash a roll of $25 before them, with the result that they immediately relieved him of its possession. This happened between Winona and La Cresse. There is small chance that he will recover it, as the tramps left the train immediately after committing the robbery.

News in Brief.

The Norwegian Turners of Minneapolis are confidently expected to retain the honor of the championship at the biennial turn festival of the Norwegian-American Gymnastic Union, which will be held in Chicago.

Moses Spooner, a Canadian farmer, who lives about seven miles north of Faribault, in the township of Forest, reports that a vein of coal has been discovered there.

The state may have to fight for an issue of Polk county bonds for drainage purposes. The issue is $40,500. County Auditor Gleason, who was in St. Paul ascertained that the state was willing to take the bonds and the county commissioners were advised to cancel a sale to the Minneapolis Loan and Trust Company. The latter refuses to accept the cancellation and will demand that the bonds be issued to the company.

A shabbily dressed stranger, who gave his name as Frank Erickson, bunkoed Miss Christine Kelson, clerk in the South St. Paul postoffice, out of a letter containing a check for $68.35, drawn by Fitch & Co. in favor of R. Erickson, Brewster, Minn. He was captured an hour later.

Anton Bonus, who was confined in the city jail at Owatonna, made his escape by digging a hole through a solid three layer brick wall with a stove poker. Bonus was not confined in a cell, and thus had ample opportunity to work. No clue found as yet.

A movement is on foot to get the coal dealers of Minneapolis and St. Paul into the Coal Dealers' Association of Iowa and Nebraska, thereby making the association to coal dealers what the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association is to lumbermen. Minneapolis yard concerns are being solicited to join. If the move promises success a canvasser will be put into the field.

C. W. Field was appointed postmaster at Bridgie, Itasca county.

During the month of September a number of north of Ireland farmers will leave Londonderry on the Allan Line mail steamer Parisian for the purpose of taking up farm lands and settling in Minnesota. John Norris and his family, as the advance guard, has arrived and gone to Wadena to look over farms, as it is the intention of all to locate in the same section.

Edward Dufresne, 70 years old, whose home is at 1521 Dayton avenue, St. Paul, was kicked and almost gored to death by a cow yesterday morning.

L. K. Holten of Minneapolis and James D. Woolnough, Spring Park, won in the competitive examination for a West Point cadetship, recently held in St. Paul. The alternates are L. J. McNair, Minneapolis, and Donald F. Stevens, St. Paul.

The stock barn, granary and several out buildings of Mrs. Pearl Kingston, in Marshan, were burned, with farming implements, 2,000 bushels of oats, 200 bushels of corn, 20 tons of hay, a horse and three calves.

John Barnum, whose mother, Mrs. Jane A. Barnum, lives at St. Anthony Park, was shot and almost instantly killed in Chicago by Frank Smith.

The state board of corrections and charities, for the first time in its history, has a demented Chinaman on its hands. His name is Yep Oom Kinn. He is not a citizen of this country. At present he is confined in the Rochester insane asylum, having been committed there from Wabasha.

While the family of Samuel Young was attending the Sells-Forepaugh circus at St. Cloud, thieves broke into their house and stole $1,800, which was secreted in various parts of the house.

Congressman Tawney received a letter from Adjutant General Corbin, confirming the report that Sergeant Clarence Miller was killed in the Philippine Islands on May 28.

Postoffice service has been ordered discontinued at Golden Gate, and special postal service from Blowers to Sebeha, Minn.

Articles of incorporation of a new railroad company, which is to construct a road from Bemidji, on the line of the Great Northern railway in Beltrami county, northeast to a point on the international boundary at Rainy lake, were filed with the secretary of state.

Donald Grant & Co., of Faribault, have secured the contract for grading forty-eight miles of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern roadbed between Faribault and Albert Lea. Work will begin in a few days, it is expected.

NOTHING IF NOT REALISTIC.

What the Present School of Writers Appear to Be Trying to Achieve.

The russet sparrow sat on the roof and blinked at the setting sun. Afar down the alley a lone ragman drove his chariot slowly along and chanted his plaintive lay. The wind moaned through the chimney pots, the red sun looked dimly down through the smoke and the russet sparrow sat on the roof and blinked at the setting sun, says London Answers.

The russet sparrow sat on the roof and blinked at the setting sun. Sadly the stray policeman in the gray distance swiped an orange from the barrow of a passing coster and peeled it with a grimy hand. He was thinking, thinking. And the dead leaves still choked the tin spout above the rainwater barrel in the back yard.

The russet sparrow sat on the roof and blinked at the setting sun. Adown the gutters in the lonely street ran murky puddles on their long, long journey toward the distant sea. Borne on the wings of the sluggish breeze came a far-off murmur of vagrant dogs in fierce contention and life was hollow mockery to the homeless cat.

And the russet sparrow sat on the roof and blinked at the setting sun.

IT'S ALL IN A NAME.

One Reason Why the Conservative Negro Whitewasher Lost His Occupation.

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare. Everything, may be answered, and no one has made the answer more plain to the ordinary mortal than Booker T. Washington, the noted colored orator, says the Chicago Times-Herald. While lecturing in Omaha last winter he paused in the midst of his remarks and asked:

"How many negro boys in Omaha are learning a mechanical trade?"

And from the vast audience came the reply:

"Not one."

Then Mr. Washington proceeded to tell the negro boys what they should do. The old colored man with his brush and pail of whitewash once made a good living. But he was a whitewasher." The first thing he knew a white man came along with an assortment of brushes and several colors of wash under fancy names. The white man called himself an "interior decorator," and the old colored man's job was gone forever.

"You negro boys," continued Mr. Washington, "must become interior decorators, for the whitewashing job is done."

TAKING THE CENSUS.

An Enumerator Meets with One Woman Who Didn't Withhold Any of the Details.

"Oh, yes, I know you are the census man. Warm day, take a seat. I've gotten all the facts for you. My husband, John Moore, is 40; I am 32; we have seven children; they are all well now."

"But—" put in the census man, relates the Pittsburgh Chronicle.

"Yes, yes; you needn't ask me any questions. I'm telling you fast as I can. Tommy, our oldest boy, had the measles when he was three. He first began to walk when he was eight months old and the day after he was ten months old he could walk clear around the room without holding on to anything. He fell down the stairs when he was four years three months and thirteen days old, but it didn't hurt him any, and he liked ice cream from the first time he ever tasted it. I can't get him to eat gravy, but he had his first piece of steak when he was 15 months old. Johnnie, the next to the oldest—"

"Madam, stop, stop," cried the enumerator, "answer my questions. I don't want to know any more about your children."

And then the woman got angry and the census taker also lost his temper and left.

Family Ties Exhausted.

At one of the great department stores the other day a young man was indulging in airy persiflage with the pretty shop girl behind the counter while waiting for his change. "What a wonderful place you have here!" he said. "What do you sell?" "Everything," was the reply. "Everything?" was the incredulous comment. "What do you mean by everything?" "Just what I say," responded the girl. "Anything you want we can supply you with here." "Oh, you can, eh?" commented the pretentious Alexander. "Well, let me look at some family ties." Without remark, but with demure countenance, the girl went away, but in a moment returned and said: "I am sorry, but the manager tells me that we are just out of family ties, owing to the great demand. Perhaps you'd like to look at some family jars?" The young man decided, however, that the latter was an undesirable commodity, and he would have none of it.—N. Y. Tribune.

He Got Posted.

It was an open car. A man of years and sedateness sat next to a young man who was consulting a pocket dictionary. By and by, and without any premonitory symptoms, the sedate man said:

"It's in here; I was looking over one of them books yesterday, and I picked out the very words."

"What do you refer to?" asked the young man.

"To what a woman up my way called me when I asked her to marry me."

"And what was it?"

"A concave cataleptic semi-annual old idiot. At first I didn't exactly know whether she meant to say yes or turn me down, but after looking in the dictionary I made up my mind that she was not for me. Mighty handy, those dictionaries are, when you get stuck on a hard word, eh?"—Washington Post.

She'd Do It.

Crash!

There came the sound of falling dishes from the kitchen. The cook appeared at the dining-room door.

"Plaze, mum," she said, "the whole av your besht dinner set is broken fwhoile Oi wuz washin' it!"

The housewife wept.

"B'gee!" said her husband, "if the powers could only get that girl, the job of breaking up China would soon be finished."—N. Y. World.

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars are spent every year upon the game of baseball, but as large as this sum is, it cannot begin to equal the amount spent by people in search of health. There is a sure method of obtaining strength, and it is not a costly one. We urge those who have spent much and lost hope to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy and natural, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

One on the Summer Girl.

One of these girls sat in a hammock on a Hollywood piazza when a summer boy in a gray suit came along. He looked unhappy.

The girl looked at him frivolously, and spied a button of a pastel shade in his lapel.

"A new kind?" she asked, inquiringly. "What is it? Have you sworn off or are you a son of something or other?"

"No," he answered, shortly. "I've joined a Don't Worry club."

"When did you join?" she asked.

"The day after I met you," he rejoined, cleverly.—Chicago Times-Herald.

University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Notre Dame University, one of the great educational institutions of the West, which appears in another column of this paper. Those of our readers who may have occasion to look up a college for their sons during the coming year would do well to correspond with the President, who will send them a catalogue free of charge, as well as all particulars regarding terms, courses of studies, etc.

There is a thorough preparatory school in connection with the University, in which students of all grades will have every opportunity of preparing themselves for higher studies. The Commercial Course intended for young men preparing for business, may be finished in one or two years, according to the ability of the student. Sir Edward's Hall, for boys under thirteen, is an unique department of the institution. The higher courses are thorough in every respect, and students will find every opportunity of perfecting themselves in any line of work they may choose to select. Thoroughness in class-work, exactness in the care of students, and devotion to the best interests of all, are the distinguishing characteristics of Notre Dame University.

Fifty-six years of active work in the cause of education have made this institution famous all over the country.

STORY OF MANDY HIGGINS' BABY.

"Have you heard how Mandy Higgins' baby is?"

"Oh, she is better, and just as clean and sweet as any baby ever was."

"Well, I'm mighty glad to hear it. It's about time the poor little critter had some rest. I tell you what it is, if Mandy had washed its head with CUTICURA SOAP first-off, and put on some CUTICURA Ointment when her baby's head began to get crusted, she'd have saved herself heaps of trouble, and the poor little kid would have been a different being. Think of the days and nights Mandy's walked the floor with that baby. I ain't got no kind of patience with people that has to be told about a thing a hundred times before they begin to believe in the virtue of it.

"Now, I told Mandy more'n three weeks ago about CUTICURA SOAP, and she knew just as well as you do, Liz, that we'd used it here going on five years or more, and that none of our family ever had a pimple, or any kind of irritation of the skin since we first begun using it. She was that contrary that I could n't get her to try it on her baby, even though I offered to give her a cake of the soap and some of the ointment from our box.

"But now she comes here about every day to thank me. Fact is, the youngster's head is as clean as a whistle, and her skin is just as pretty as you ever see on any baby."

MOTHERS: Mothers, to know that a warm bath with CUTICURA SOAP, and a single anointing with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients, will afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep to both parent and child, and point to a speedy cure, in the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, crusted and scaly humors, rashes, and irritations, with loss of hair, and not to use them is to fail in your duty. Think of the years of suffering entailed by such neglect. Cures made in childhood are speedy, permanent, and economical.

DELANO, FRIDAY, July 27, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--The Board of Education will meet and organize on Saturday evening, August 4.

—A term of District Court will be held in Delano, on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 11 a. m. at the Council Rooms. Get naturalized.

—Trains have been coming late nearly every evening for some time, on account of stopping at Long Lake to load berries.

—Call on C. M. Conzet and engage your apples from the old farm. They are nice and orders are caming in from Dakota at these times. 2t

--The new cement sidewalk on S. River street, near the Catholic Church begins to look rather city like. It is a big improvement over the old board sidewalk.

—The Base Ball Club will have a dance tonight, at the City Hall, to defray their expense. Everybody cordially invited to attend, a good time to be expected. Admission 50 cents.

--John and C. M. Conzet have manufactured a large tin horse which is to be a sign for Conzet & Darrow's harness shop in Rockford. Charley says nobody can tell but what Pete is running a peanut stand now.

--Jim Hill don't seem to be much of a respector of persons when it comes to leaving boxcars for hours and days on a crossing so that everybody that wants to cross can go around. Jim should look out for other people's rights some.

--The village council recently purchased a formaldehyde generator for disinfecting purposes. This is the new idea for purifying rooms that have been used for dyphtheria, smallpox, etc., and does away with the old sulphur plan.

--The bottoms of several oak posts that were placed in the ground in 1869 were dug up by O L. Billings in preparing to lay the foundation for his new building, and he split one to see how sound they were. They proved to be perfectly sound and not worm eaten either.

—The suit of Mayer vs Longosh was heard in Justice Walter's court, on Monday. Verdict for Mayer. It seems that when cows are taken up for damaging gardens that a Justice of the Peace shall be notified and an appraisment of damages made as provided by law, within twenty four hours.

—Owing to the carelessness of citizens in throwing slops and other offensive substances into alleys and onto lots where they become offensive, or even unhealthy, to neighbors, it is altogether likely that at the next meeting of the council an ordinance will be passed, requiring that all such offensive or injurious objects be removed from the village limits. This shouldhave been done long ago.

—It is astonishing that people will year after year risk the lives of their little ones by sending them to school in a six room school house with but one door to get out. Suppose a fire should break out in the lower hall, all who were big enough would have to crawl out the windows; the smaller ones unless helped would perish in the flames, victims of the foolishness or carelessness of somebody. Make a back door to the school house. It is needed.

—J. E. Borsch, of the committee on school grounds sent a sample of water from the school house well to the laboratory of the State Board of Health, at the University for examination last week. On Saturday morning he received an analysis of the same showing the water not up to purity grade. A note explained that "analysis evidences organic infiltration as shown by the ammonias and nitric salts."

This is nothing but what sensible people generally knew must be the case, when the well was put in between the old and the new privies. But it has been allowed to remain there for years. The probablities now are that the pipe will be pulled up and the old well filled up and a new one made on the front of the lots as far from contamination as possible.

—One of the largest votes ever polled at a school election was cast last Saturday evening. This is right. People should take an interest in school elections. They should turn out and express their choice for school offices. Then the members of the board instead of having been elected by about twenty votes, with only one majority, will have a majority of the voters of the district behind them. They will try to have the best possible school. Two tickets were in the field each bearing two names for three year terms and one name for 1 year vacancy. The result of the balloting was 208 votes cast as follows:

J. E. Borsch for 3 years	151
A. L. Mealey for 3 years	158
Adam Horsch for 1 year	135
L. M. Maxfield for 3 years	58
F. H. Lindsley for 3 years	63
John Cunningham for 1 year	37
Fred Knoll	17

Mr. Knoll was not a candidate.

The new members on the board are A. L. Mealey and Adam Horsch; J. E. Borsch succeeding himself.

—Farmers who have cut grain are surprised to find a much larger yield than they had expected —Ground was broke Thursday morning for a one story frame building 25 by 45 feet, on the corner of River street and Railroad Ave. O. L. Billings proprietor.

—Quarterly meeting is to be held in the M. E. church at Delano, commencing Saturday, Sept. 8. Presiding Elder Hingely is to be present. Everybody invited to be present.

—When voters take an interest in public affairs and turn out to discharge their duty as they did at the school meeting last Saturday evening, there will be less talk about imperialism and such.

—Fred Belden has been keeping his neighbors busy this week trying to solve the problem of "how much would a man make if he sold a horse for $90, bought him back for $80, and sold him again for $100."

—Evangelist C. F. Kennison and Rev. Geo. W Wright, of Rockford are holding grove meetings every evening at the old camping grounds on S. Third street. The Jadwin sisters lead the singing. Everybody invited.

—A man claiming to be a painter, from Minneapolis, was in town one day this week hunting for work. He said from 1,000 to 1,500 men who were anxious to work, were idling away their time in Minneapolis with nothing to do. The cities must have become crowded.

—Carver's court is making a record which will be hard for new comers to beat. If the applicants have to tell a bigger story than has yet been told to become members initiations are apt to be limited from now on. Wash Rader is ahead on corn stories, while Johnny Arup beats on potatoes.

—The Carver court under the maples, sometimes discusses weather, but they hardly had time to all speak on the cause of a shadow thrown across the street by the rapidly setting sun, the other night, before the newly imported Yang Hung Hi hat, on wheels, hove in sight and dispelled their fears of a shower.

—Last Sunday the Lyndales, of Minneapolis, played a game with our boys here. It took ten innings to decide the game. The score was as follows:

Batteries. Delano. Sandberg, Eppel and Johnson; Lyndales, DePoiriers and Peterson.

—A term of District Court will be held by Judge A. E. Giddings in the Council Rooms, at the City Hall, in Delano, on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 11 a. m. and during the day, for the purpose of naturalizing those entitled to be naturalized. Bring your papers, and witnesses, and become a full citizen so you can vote at the coming election. This may be your last opportunity in Delano to take out papers.

Maple Plain.

Last Tuesday evening at the St. Paul auditorium in the capitol city of the great state of Minnesota, Governor Roosevelt, of New York and candidate for Vice President of the United States of America on the republican ticket shot off the first republican campaign gun of the season throwing a bomb into the democratic camp without any effect, did not even explode.

I read with careful attention the whole of Gov. Roosevelt's speech, and am sorry to say it was more of a tirade against the Kansas City convention and the populistic democrat party as he calls them, than it was of a sound and logical interpretation of the ways and means by which our country and its people should be governed. Our country is full of isms and has been fraught with many financial reverses and these should be adjusted by wise and just legislation. The governor took for his text, first honesty, and the Kansas City convention, and must say he started out well, but he digressed a good deal before he got through. His whole speech was a washy attempt to prove what he failed to do. He first tells about being an honest and successful cow puncher on the plains in Montana (and this seems to have been his calling) was an expert in branding his monogram on the posterior of a broncho bull, and was an honest ranchman upon the gumbo plains of the west. If he intends to make such speeches throughout the campaign, hope he will make one every day in the week for he will make more votes for Bryan than he will for Mc Kinley. In starting out he talked so much about honest one would suppose he was going to give us for his speech a second sermon on the mount, but before he got through he made the Kansas City convention, the seat of Beelzebub, the place where demons congregate, and where for a stipend they would burn incense upon the altar of Baal and sacrifice the Goddess of Liberty for ascendancy to power.

He said many things in his St. Paul speech that was out of line in honest politics. I have filed his speech away and will keep it for future reference. I think it will come handy sometime.

He said in his speech, "The financial legislation brought about by the republican party has placed our currency on a foundation as strong as the rock of Gibraltar. The credit of our country is so good that we can dispose of our 2 per cent bonds on the market of the world. Yes, and why? Because the currency bill you immortalize, Mr. Roosevelt, makes these bonds redeemable in gold and are not subject to assessment and taxation, and the poor man of this country who by the sweat of his brow earns an honest living, pays the freight, and the millionaire of this country and bankers of Wall street by this iniquitous thing you call a currency bill as strong as the rock of Gibraltar filches millions of money out of the honest toiler of this country and puts it into the coffers of the millionairs. The curreney bill and the national banking system of this country are twin brothers that in time will sap the life of the nation and why will a man get up before an intelligent audience and tell them these things are for their good, when they are only meant to breed their misfortune.

Mr. Roosevelt, all of the people are not natural born fools, and I for one cannot swallow that campaign pill of yours. If that gold currency bill passed at the last session of congress making gold the only money of redemption, and our national banking system, be deeds of righteousness enacted for the benefit of a republic and a people that claim to be free from all oppression at home and abroad then hell itself is full of just such righteousness.

The national bonded debt of the country has been refunded for 30 years, for what purpose? To perpetuate the national banking system, which is sapping our life blood and they call this a glorious thing for the country and the people. If the green back had been kept where it belonged, silver had not been demonetized, and that national banking system had not been established this country could have paid every dollar she owed and all her citizens been in a prosperous condition.

I am a natural born citizen and I hold that no sect, creed, party, or organization is infallible. Give every man his just dues be he Jew or Gentile, bond or free, and all will go well.

The political humbug cry against 16 to 1 ought to soon run its race as it has lost its force as a scare crow. This plank in the Kansas City platform, as everybody ought to know, does not contemplate any change in the currency from what it has been for the past 85 years and very nearly the same since the adoption of the constitution except from 1863 to 1873. Ten years we had the full benefit of the gold standard, when collosal fortunes were made by the money sharks by moving and holding all of the gold in the country in their vaults and selling at 2.85 to 1. This is the change contemplated by the republicans, but all of their great daily papers are filled with such words as the fraud, cheat, repudiation bogus, depreciation of 16 to 1. According to their statements and cartoons the great rough rider in his big political gun fired at St. Paul last week only fired one shot and that was at the democratic platform hitting 16 to 1 in the center and nothing else.

The republican papers through out the whole country can laugh at their funny cartoons, but if some of them should act as boomerang it would not seem so very funnyto them in November. If 1,000,000 farmers should take umbrage at their attempts to ridicule Mr. Bryan as they have recently tried by their many cartoons representing him as a farmer, evidently in their estimation the very lowest position that any man could occupy; as all of their political cartoons are simply to ridicule Mr. Bryan, they take the farmer as the lowest. An intelligent republican farmer says, you wait until the Ides of November are passed and the thing wont look so very funny to Boss Hanna and his associates. They will find that the farmers are not quite all fools. You can fool a part of them all of the time and all of them some of the time, but not all of them all of the time.

L. M. MAXFIELD.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20, 1900.

Mr. McKinley is again performing his specialty, the wobbling act. He heard the criticism of the country of his absence from his post and rushed back to Washington, everybody supposed to do something. There has been Cabinet meetings and Cabinet dinners, but that is all. Nothing has been done that had not been decided upon before Mr. McKinley pulled himself away from the enticing rockers on that Canton porch. Although it is the general opinion in Washington that Congress should be called in extra session to handle this Chinese business, Mr. McKinley and his advisers decided that no extra session should be called until the urgency became more pressing. Because the allied forces in China have won a temporary success, at an awful cost of life, including many Americans, and the Chinese have sent a message saying that the foreign ministers in Pekin are alive, which, by the way, isn't believed by anybody outside of members of the administration, Mr. McKinley will wobble awhile longer.

The plain truth is that Mr. McKinley is afraid to do anything until he gets a plainer tip on what public sentiment wants this government to do. Men interested in syndicates which have big concessions in China are urging him to send a big army to China so that he can be in a position to prevent the breaking up of the Chinese empire, which would mean the end of their concessions, while republican politicians are cautioning him to feel his way carefully because a mistake will make his defeat for reelection more certain than it now apparently is. He can't get more men in the army without authority from Congress, and he is afraid to take any more men from Gen. MacArthur, who has already been made to send men from the Philippines against his vigorous protest. Consequently, unless there is an extra session of Congress the total American force in China will not exceed 12,000, and several thousand of them cannot be got there before the first of September, no matter how badly they may be needed. Meanwhile, Mr. McKinley has gone back to Canton to wobble at leisure until public opinion shows him what to do.

There are reasons to believe that a decidedly interesting talk took place in the dining room of Secretary Gage's suburban residence, where Mr. McKinley, all the members of the Cabinet who are in Washington, and Gen. Leonard Wood, Military Governor of Cuba, were guests. The subject was Cuba and its probable future relations towards the U. S. Gen. Wood is in Washington for the purpose of receiving instructions as to the method of electing delegates to the proposed Cuban constitutional convention, which it has been hinted in inside administration circles, may start the annexation ball to rolling by adopting an annexation resolution or declaring in favor of it. If such is the administration programme, the arrangements for the election of delegates to the convention will probably be such as to ensure a majority of annexationists. Gen. Wood will talk about everything else in Cuba, but as soon as you say annexation he is as mum as a clam.

The Chinese Minister in Washington is about as slick as the slickest of his race and he seems able to make Secretary Hay accept any old story that he chooses to tell him. His latest, which Mr. Hay thought important enough to repeat at a Cabinet meeting, is that the reason the foreign ministers in Pekin have not communicated with their governments is that they are hid in the houses of Chinese friends and are afraid that any attempt to send messages would cause the mob onto their hiding places. The Chinese Minister's success in stuffing Secretary Hay's ear, the members of the administration may encourage him to remain in this country and go in the gold brick business if his government gets knocked out at home.

The wires have been kept hot getting word to such republicans as Representative Hull, of Iowa, Chairman of the House Military Committee, who has been publicly advocating the calling of an extra session of Congress, to take the other tack and fall in behind Mr. McKinley, in opposition to an extra session.

Communications received by the Chinese Minister indicate considerable alarm among the Chinese residents of our large cities. They fear that Americans will try to avenge the murdered Americans in China by massacring them. It is, of course, a

THE call for the state democratic convention has been issued. The convention will be held in St. Paul on Thursday, Sep. 6, at 12 o'clock.

REPUBLICAN papers seem to be very much concerned about who the democrats will nominate for Congress in the 5th District. Frank Larabee would probably make it about as interesting for them as any man the Democrats could nominate.

WITHOUT arguments, to refute charges being openly made against imperialism and its allied ideas, it seems force of another kind is being used to suppress advocates of Bryan and his doctrines. At Lumberton, N. C., a Texas populist was refused a chance to speak. And this is a free country.

CHINESE have been noted for being able to cut off a man's head and put it on again. But until quite recently it was not known that they could murder people by the hundreds, cutting some of them into inch bits, and distributing them about; boiling others in big cauldrons, and then have them come to life every other day for a month.

AN effort is being made to start a loyal Democratic daily newspaper in Minneapolis. It seems as if the twin cities might have such a paper. Subscribers help to make a paper and every good democrat should take some good democratic paper. Where he can he should take a daily during the campaign. Surely he should be a subscriber to his home paper of his faith.

Desires no Fourth of July.

Nervous people, who believe with Mr. Bryan that the present administration is trying to do away with Fourth of July celebrations, will probably vote for McKinley in the hope of bringing about as much to be desired result. Mr. Bryan should be careful in his statements or he will lose votes. —Sherburne County Times.

Perhaps Editor Davee would prefer to spend his powder shooting the inhabitants of foreign lands, to perpetuating the ideas of liberty, as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, or to feeding the starving millions of lands claimed by so called civilized countries.

Warm Political History.

The Star News is in a position to write up some pretty warm political history, but inasmuch as it would be attributed to soreness on the editor's part, it will refrain and store the knowledge for further consideration. —Sherburne County Star-News.

"An open confession is good for the soul" Brother Dare. "Tell the truth and shame the Devil". It's not right to go around keeping political secrets in your breast, when you know the people are entitled to them and ought to know them. Just give us the whole story of how you started out to honestly appoint census enumerators; of how you were "sat down upon" and the enumerators names published in g. o. p. papers, for certain localities long before you were supposed to know them yourself. Of how Page needed all the help possible to get renominated. It would doubtless be interesting reading, and your readers are entitled to the facts.

How humilitating it is to American citizens to see the flashy head lines "England has heard from the Legations. They are safe". Just as if it is any more reliable through that chanel than from our own Minister Conger.

The Democratic Platform of 1800 and of 1900.

The first Democratic platform was adopted at Philadelphia in 1800. We republish it because it presents the fundamental principles of Democracy as plainly and suggestively as they can be stated, and for the further reasons that there are some men classed as democrats who, blinded by the splendors of empire, approve the imperialistic policy of the McKinley administration. It reads thus:

1. An inviolable preservation of the Federal Constitution, according to the true sense in which it was adopted by the states, that in which it was advocated by its friends, and not that which its enemies apprehended, who, therefore became its enemies.

2. Opposition to monarchizing its features by the forms of its administration, with a view to conciliate a transition; first, to a President and Senate for life, and, secondly, to an hereditary tenure of those offices, and thus to worm out the elective principle.

3. Preservation to the states of the powers not yielded by them to the Union, and to the Legislature of the Union its constitutional share in division of powers; and resistance, therefore, to existing movements for transferring all the powers of the states to the General Government, and all of those of that Government, to the Executive branch.

4. A vigoulously frugal administration of the Government and the application of all the possible savings of the public revenue to the liquidation of the public debt; and resistance, therefore, to all measures looking to a multiplication of offices and salaries, merely to create partisans and to augment the public debt, on the principle of its being a public blessing.

5. Reliance for internal defense solely upon the militia, till actual invasion, and for such a naval force only as may be sufficient to protect our coasts and harbors from depredations; and opposition, therefore, to the policy of a standing army in time of peace, which may overawe the public sentiment, and to a navy, which by its own expenses, and the wars into which it will implicate us, will grind us with public burdend and sink us under them.

6. Free commerce with all nations, political connection with none and little or no diplomatic establishment.

7. Opposition to linking ourselves by new treaties with the quarrels of Europe, entering their fields of slaughter to preserve their balance, or joining in the confederacy of Kings to war against the principles of liberty.

8. Freedom of religion, and opposition to all maneuvers to bring about a legal ascendancy of one sect over another.

9. Freedom of speech and of the press, and opposition, therefore, to all violations of the constitution, to silence, by citizens against the conduct of their public agents.

10. Liberal naturalization laws, under which the well disposed of all nations who may desire to embark their fortunes with us and share with us the public burdens, may have that opportunity, under moderate restrictions, for the development of honest intention, and severe ones to guard against the usurpation of our flag.

11. Encouragement of science and the arts in all their branches to the end that the American people may perfect their independence of foreign monopolies, institutions and influences. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Protest Against Imperialism.

To the Editor of the Herald:

As an American citizen, believing in the teachings and principles of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, allow me space in your very valuable paper to protest against this infamous policy of imperialism. A policy that is nothing short of piracy. We are told by the imperialists that it is "manifest destiny" to annex the Philippine islands. Islands that are over 10,000 miles from our coast-islands that are inhabited by a different race, speaking a different language and having different habits. Is it "manifest destiny" for this nation to cut its own throat? Is it manifest destiny to discard the very principles and teachings for which our fathers fought and bled, from the heights of Bunker Hill to the plains of Yorktown? Why throw up the sponge in the eleventh hour of the nineteenth century and proclaim to the world that the government founded by the "immortal Washington" and sustained by "Honest Abe Lincoln" is a failure, unless we adopt Mark Hanna's policy of imperialism?

Look at Europe with its eleven and one half millions of men in arms; its navies creating burdens under which the people groan; it's people made debt serfs and trampled into the earth. That is your bloody, blasphemous policy of imperialism! Ah, Mr. Editor, once more the American people must pick up the gauntlet which has been thrown down by the money changers whose only God is the almighty dollar and fight this monster until it lies bleeding and panting at their feet!

It is said that England has succeeded in her colonial expansion and that we as her co partner can also succeed. Her success is only assumed. Show me a civilized nation on earth that has plundered, pillaged and corrupted as she has! Look at downtrodden, bleeding Ireland! Look at India! Look at Egypt! And last, but not least, look at the unholy and barbarous war now being carried on in South Africa in the name of Christianity! It is unnecessary for me to allude at this time to this branch of the subject. Every man, woman and child knows the history of England's rule in those countries by heart. Is there an American with a drop of liberty in his veins who sully the record of his country with such black and bloody pages as England's rule has written there? Why strip off the garments of liberty and civilization for those of selfishness and greed?

The imperialism of Caesar overturned a government which the assaults of Hannibal failed to do. Shall the imperialism of Mark Hanna, William McKinley et al overturn a government which the assaults of Wall street have failed to do? God forbid it! JAY N. ROGERS.

Tax Title Invalid.

Judge Cray of Mankato has filed a decision declaring the forfeited tax law, passed by the last legislature, invalid and unconstitutional, for the reason that it attempts to divest the original owners of the right to a notice of expiration of redemption, provided for by the law in force when the original taxes were sold to the state. He further holds that while the purchaser is protected by a statutory lien upon the land bought for the amount of taxes, interest and penalty due the state, he cannot recover in excess of that sum, as this would compel the original owner, under certain conditions, to refund money to the state for his own land, which the state might have exacted without legal authority. The decision is of considerable general interest, as it affects every forfeit tax sale in the state in which the state has failed to give notice of expiration the same as required of individuals. An appeal will be taken to the supreme court and in all probability the decision will be sustained. The law in its present shape should never have been placed on the statute book, as it is clearly out of joint with fair play and in some instances practically amounts to confiscation. However, it can be easily amended so as to conform with the requirements pointed out by Judge Cray, and it is to be hoped that this will be done the first thing next winter, for without a law of that kind every municipal government would soon find itself seriously handicapped for want of funds.—St. Peter Free Press.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,650 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

THE OFF SIDE OF THE COW.

Old Wendell Hopkins' hired man is an absent-minded chap;
He'll start for a chair and like as not set down in some one's lap.
I happened along where he stopped to bait his hosses the other day—
He'd given the hosses his luncheon pail and was trying to eat their hay—
A kind of a foolish sort of a trick for even a hired man,
But he tackled a different kind of a snag when he fooled with Matilda Ann.
When he fooled with Matilda Ann, by jinks, he got it square in the neck,
And the doctors say, though live he may, he's a total human wreck.
He's wrapped in batting and thinking now Of the grief in insulting a brindle cow.

Matilda Ann gives down her milk and she doesn't switch her tail,
She gives ten quarts—week in, week out, and she never kicks the pail,
She doesn't hook and she doesn't jump, but even Matilda Ann
Ain't called to stand all sorts of grief from a silly hired man.
And when he stubbed to the milking shed in sort of a dream and tried
To make Matilda "So" and "Whoa" while he milked on the wrong off side—
She giv' him a look to wilt his soul and plugged him once with her hoof,
And I guess that at last his wits were jogged as he slammed through the lintel roof.
He's got a poultice on his brow Of the size of the foot of a brindle cow.

Now, study the ways of the world, my son; oh, study the ways of life!
It's the hustling chap who gets the cash or the girl he wants for a wife;
It's the feller that spots the place to grab when Chance goes swinging by
Who gets his dab in the juiciest place and the biggest plum in the pie.
There's always a chance to milk the world; there's a teat, a pail and a stool;
There's a place for the chap with sense and grit, but a dangerous holt for a fool,
For while the feller that's up to snuff drums a merry tune in his pail
The fool sneaks up on the left-hand side and lands in the grave or jail.
It's an awkward place, as you'll allow, The off-hand side of the world or a cow.

Why I Don't Marry

By Arnold Maurice Anderson.

From The Home Journal, New York. Reprinted by Special Permission.

LAST WEEK I attended a wedding. My old chum Max was married. He has a pretty little wife and they have purchased a neat little cottage over in Jersey somewhere. They have gone there to live; to settle down and forget the world at large; to live in each other; to be happy, contented with the humdrum of a Jersey village for the rest of their days. And Max wishes me to get married; to settle down; to move to Jersey and live near him; to be oblivious forever of the awful city noise and confusion. Max is still my friend. He didn't realize what he was advising. He meant no harm. Max is a business man. He has had any amount of business experience, but he isn't a philosopher. He looks on the bright side of things, even matrimony.

When I refused point-blank to consider myself even a possible victim in the matrimonial arena, Max became much annoyed and demanded my reasons. I hated to tell him anything that might tend to mar his happiness, but he was so insistent that I was compelled to give him a serious answer.

The windows of my room face to the rear, and so command a rear view of a large tenement house and a row of modest flats. I led Max to the window and bade him ponder upon the scene. There are the homes of some 30 or 40 families—all the result of matrimony. Max gazed wonderingly for a few moments, and then remarked that likely enough they were happy homes. This was exactly what I had wished him to say, and without further ado I took up my diary and required him to read portions of it at random. In regard to my diary, a word of explanation is necessary. It is my custom to write some pretty sentiment (usually on love) at the top of each page, and, moreover, the diary itself is more of a record of the actions of my neighbors than a chronicle of my own life. My reason for misusing the diary thus is purely selfish—I find it easier and more exciting. Max took the book and opening it, began to read aloud.

WEDNESDAY.

"Peace reigns where love abounds."

The Irish family on the top floor of the tenement has had a worse time than usual to-day. The head of the house came home in an ill-humor, and after a preliminary volley of oaths, proceeded to order his wife to quit the house and "lug along the brat with her" (referring to the baby). The poor woman left and has not yet returned (11:30 p. m.). All quiet with Italian family No. 3. Family No. 2 quarreled with the Irish woman on the floor below. The battle of words took place from the windows. No serious injuries sustained.

THURSDAY.

"Love is a bird of rare plumage."

The parrot continues to scream all day. All the miserable creature can say is, "Bare foot! Bare foot!" and this it shrieks at the top of its voice from one end of the day to the other. The Irish family is still at war. The wife returned this morning, but was immediately ordered out again by her husband, who did not go to work to-day. The two little Italian babies, the twins belonging to family No. 1, engaged in hostilities this morning out on the fire-escape. They were rescued in due time by the mother, who finished the fight in a manner of her own. Other families at peace to-day, so far as I know.

FRIDAY.

"A loving wife rejoices at the sound of her husband's footsteps."

The Irish woman came back to-day when her husband was out. When he finally came home there was an exchange of hostile words, but soon a truce was established, and the poor woman was allowed to prepare the evening meal.

SATURDAY.

"An infant's wail reaches the tenderest spot in the human breast."

There is a new baby at Italian family No. 3's. The youngster is a true bohemian—he makes the night hideous with his yells. I must confess that I have lost my prejudice against soothing sirups—they are a benefactor of the human race.

SUNDAY.

"Children are the flowers that make the garden of life beautiful."

A rather oldish couple dwell in one of the flats, together with two pretty daughters. I have been admiring the girls from a distance, but now the dream is changed. To-day the girls became vexed at the old folks and upbraided them in a most unfilial manner. The trouble seemed to be about bicycling on the Sabbath. The parents objected, but the young ladies had their way. I saw them, in their abbreviated costumes, take their wheels and leave the house. On the whole this is a very quiet Sunday, as most of the Italian and Irish families are away from home.

"Matrimony is the highest state of earthly bliss."

There is a middle-aged pair living in one of the flats, that has always impressed me as being exceedingly happy and contented. The husband usually sits by the window every evening reading his paper, while his wife, singing snatches of song, goes about clearing the table and washing the dishes. To-night my former good opinion was shattered. There has occurred a most bitter civil war in that once happy home. The husband took up his paper as was his custom, and commenced to peruse it, when suddenly without any warning, his wife began rating him unmercifully. She talked so fast and so excitedly that I could not catch the drift of her grievance, but now and again I would hear the word "absurdity" uttered with additional force. The husband strove to ignore his storming Xanthippe, but she would not submit to it. In her desperation she snatched the newspaper from his hands and cuffed him very unlovingly on the head. Next the broom figured in the fray, to the discomfiture of the husband, but still he did not resent. The one-sided battle raged fiercely for fully 15 minutes, and not once did the unfortunate victim return a blow or even a word, so far as I could make out. Once, however, he made a rush for the door, but was intercepted. In the course of an hour the usual calm was restored.

TUESDAY.

"Loving husbands have dutiful wives."

The good man who figured so nobly in yesterday's battle, is in the kitchen this evening washing the dishes. His wife is now reading the paper in his place by the window. I wonder if this is one of the terms in their treaty of peace. The children in the tenement had a free-for-all fight to-day. It seemed to be the Irish against the Italian.

WEDNESDAY.

"Love often speaks in song."

I have noticed, lately, a man with a most mournful expression on his face, who, every evening, sits looking out the window. He has a most unhappy face! I often wonder what makes him so sad. His wife appears to be very thoughtful. She plays and sings for him every night. Ah; perhaps that is the reason! Four families in the tenement quarreling to-night. I think I shall move soon or I certainly shall become a cynic in regard to matrimony.

THURSDAY.

"Love is present even in the brute world."

Irishman on the top floor of the tenement came home intoxicated, but his wife left the house before he could abuse her. The children have resumed hostilities. The parrot has discovered a more annoying way to shriek: "Bare foot!" The two pretty girls are abusing the old folks again, but worst of all, two cats are fighting it out in the back yard. Not even beasts can live happily together. I have decided to move into a front room.

Here Max ceased reading, and after some moments of deep meditation, he said: "Yes, I think you ought to move. It's unhealthy to see only the backdoor side of life."

Half-Deaf.

James Payn says, in "The Backwater of Life," that as soon as he became deaf, his friends tried to hearten him by collecting anecdotes of those who have made humorous mistakes through suffering a like infirmity. The efficacy of that method may be doubted, but such as it is, many have had to endure it.

One story is indeed to be tolerated, because it refers to a gentleman who, although deaf, was not so much so as he pretended to be. A friend came to him one day and shouted:

"Will you lend me half a sovereign?"

"What?"

"Will you lend me half a sovereign?" was the still louder petition.

"What was that?"

"Will you lend me a sovereign?"

"You said half a sovereign before!"—Youth's Companion.

American horses and mules have had war service in four foreign lands within the past two years.

Japan is not such a small country as you think. The last government report shows that it has 46,000,000 people.

This is certainly a hurry up nation. The special delivery stamp is a comparatively new comer. Yet Uncle Sam's post office department sold no less than 52,000,000 of them during the last fiscal year.

A German scientist has figured it out that the earth weighs 11,913,000 trillion pounds. This may not be exact to within a few pounds, but not even those who "want the earth" are likely to object on that account.

A German society has offered a prize for the designs for an electric railway upon which trains can travel with safety at a speed of 125 miles an hour. It will be easy enough to make the designs, but putting them into successful practive will be another thing.

Tientsin, the scene of activity in the Chinese trouble, is known as the Liverpool of North China. Being at the juncture of the Pei-Ho river and the Grand canal it is a great trading center, and some 600 or 700 vessels enter the harbor each year, the import trade amounting to something like $33,000,000 a year. It is the port of entry for Peking.

The English parliament makes liberal allowances to the women of the royal family. A queen dowager's annual income from that source is $500,000. That of a dowager princess of Wales is $200,000. Other widows of royal princes receive $30,000. The grand duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, granddaughter of George III., receives $15,000 yearly.

Of course the girl who walked 5,000 miles on a wager was "pretty." They always are. If she had traveled a mile by turning handsprings or had crossed the continent in a box car it would have been the same, with the possible addition that she would have been described as "refined and highly educated," also. That's one way to acquire beauty—"newspaper beauty."

Since 1880 the silk manufacture of the United States has increased 250 per cent. and now the report comes from Paris that the American silk exhibit is likely to be awarded a prize superior to the French exhibit. This country seems to be able to do almost anything it turns its hand to, and it is not surprising when you consider the variety of climate and brains within its four corners.

An actress who is summering in Colorado is said to have recently killed an enormous bear, after a thrilling battle and the expenditure of several cartridges. Irrespective of the question as to whether the young woman really did or did not kill the bear the general public will welcome the story as at least a divergence from the old stock tales of diamond robberies or of life-saving in the surf by the heroic actresses who crowd the modern stage.

One thing is to be said of recent wars. They have stimulated geographical knowledge amazingly. Two years ago how many of us had more than a vague and fragmentary idea about places in the Philippines, South Africa and China which now are familiar words to every newspaper reader, and who ever thought of looking up on the map and in gazetteers and encyclopedias the facts which all of us can now rattle off glibly as though they had always been on our tongues' end?

The new premier of British Columbia, Alexander Dunsmuir, is known as "the silent Scotchman" because of his distaste for public speaking. While in the legislature he never said a word. His father acquired extensive coal fields in British Columbia and amassed a fortune which has since grown to be probably the largest in Canada. His son was obliged to take to politics to defend his business interests, which were threatened by hostile legislation. He isn't saying a word now, but the Dunsmuir coal interests are safe, nevertheless.

It is reported from various points in the United States that no difference in the treatment of Chinese residents has been seen since news was received of the murders at Peking; that no indignities or violence has been offered to the Chinese population. The fact might be important if the situation were reversed and Americans in China were left unmolested, while Chinese in America were massacred. But the safety of the Chinese in the United States is to be taken for granted. That safety is implied in the very circumstance that this is America.

Recent experiments with torpedo boats off Portsmouth, England, have tended to confirm the general opinion in naval circles that vessels of this class would be of little practical use in a great naval engagement, whatever their value in scouting and skirmishing. It was found impossible to approach a fortified post nearer than two miles without discovery, even when speed was so reduced that no smoke escaped unconsumed from the funnels of the torpedo boats. At this range any unarmored craft would be speedily shot to pieces by an enemy.

A RULER LAID LOW.

King Humbert of Italy the Victim of Assassin's Bullet.

Tragedy Occurred Just as the Sovereign Was Departing from Fete at Monza—Italy's New King and Queen.

Monza, Italy, July 30.—King Humbert has been assassinated. He was shot here Sunday evening by a man named Angelo Bressi, and died in a few minutes.

The king had been attending a distribution of prizes in connection with a gymnastic competition. He had just entered his carriage with his aid-de-camp, amid the cheers of the crowd, when he was struck by three revolver shots fired in quick succession. One pierced the heart of his majesty, who fell back and expired in a few minutes.

The assassin was immediately arrested, and with some difficulty saved from the fury of the populace. He gave his name as Angelo Bressi, describing himself as of Prato, in Tuscany.

King Humbert was shot at 10:45 o'clock Sunday evening and died at 11:30. The murderer cynically avowed the crime.

Assassin an Anarchist.

London, July 30.—Angelo Bressi, the assassin of King Humbert, according to a special dispatch from Rome, is an anarchist.

HUMBERT'S REIGN.

A Brief Sketch of the Life of the Murdered Ruler.

King Humbert's full name was Uemberto Renier Charles Emmanuel Jean Marie Ferdinand Eugene. He was born at Turin on March 14, 1844. He was the son of Victor Emmanuel II., who died on January 9, 1878, and of Queen Adelaide, who was before her marriage archduchess of Austria. He succeeded to the throne upon the death of his father. He was married to Princess Helene of Montenegro in Rome on April 22, 1868.

Once before his majesty was attacked by an assassin. On November 17, 1878, shortly after he had been crowned, an attempt was made on his life while he was entering the city of Naples. Giovanna Passarate, a cook, waving a flag, approached the royal carriage and stabbed the king in the arm with a short dagger. His majesty drew his sword and wounded the man. Members of the royal suite came to his assistance, but not until one of them was severely wounded was the would-be murderer secured.

King Humbert's reign has been marked more for his ability to keep his people knit together than for any extraordinary activity he has shown in the affairs of the nations of Europe. Most of the historians of modern affairs contend that Italy's stability since 1861, when Victor Emmanuel was first saluted king, has been due to the sagacity of her ministers rather than to the greatness of either Humbert or his father. But it is memorable that even when Humbert ascended the throne the army and navy of his country were as nothing, his people were impoverished, roads were unbuilt and the nation had a poor standing among the people of the earth.

The triple alliance, with its accompaniments of ready armies and equipped navy, has flourished under his rule, and his people have remained loyal to him, in spite of the scandals which shook, in turn, every minister from place and power.

The most notable achievements of King Humbert's reign have been the consummation of the triple alliance between Germany, Austro-Hungary and Italy, and the securing of Turkish adhesion to the compact as a precautionary measure against the possible encroachments of Russia and other powers. Beyond this he seems to have been content to care mostly for the internal and material advancement of his people, as though they were at most and at least his neighbors, companions and friends. Of late years he has followed more closely in the humane and generous practices of his amiable wife—visiting hospitals, mingling with the poor and giving his personal care to charities that are not included in the written duties of the state departments.

Italy's New King and Queen.

Vittorio Emmanuelo Fernandino Maria Gennaro, who succeeds his father to the throne of Italy, was the only son of King Humbert. He was born November 11, 1869, and has the reputation of being a liberal, scholarly and soldierly man. He is a general in the Italian army, and a patron of art and literature. He is a chevalier of the Order of the Golden Fleece and a Knight of the Garter.

His wife, Italy's new queen, was Princess Helena, one of the seven daughters of Prince Nicolas, the ruler of the little principality of Montenegro. She was born in the royal palace in Cettinje in 1873. With her sisters, she inherited the superb dark beauty of her mother, the daughter of a Montenegrin nobleman. She has been most carefully reared by tutors and governesses and is not only admirable in all the arts and graces of European courts, but is well versed in the play of politics and in every way qualified to succeed even so lovely a queen as Margherita of Italy. The nuptials of Prince Vittorio and Princess Helena were celebrated in Rome October 24, 1896, with all the pomp and circumstance usual on such occasions.

Known at Paterson.

Paterson, N. J., July 31.—The rumor that Angelo Bressi, who was arrested Sunday at Monza, Italy, for the assassination of King Humbert, had lived here caused quite a sensation in the Italian quarter. Monday afternoon, after a diligent search among the Italians, it was learned that a broad silk weaver named Angelo Bressi, aged about 32 years, had worked in the silk mills owned by Hamil & Booth, in this city, up to May 7 last. He left for Italy about that date and nothing has been heard of him since. During his stay here, which was about six months, he lived at the Hotel Barftholdi, 325 Straight street. Those who knew him say that he was of a quiet temperament and inoffensive man.

Michigan Gets Her Money Back.

Washington, July 31.—The treasury department on Monday delivered to the private secretary of the governor of Michigan a warrant for $247,474, being the amount due the state for army stores and munitions of war furnished by the state during the Spanish war.

Corbett and McCoy to Fight.

New York, July 31.—James J. Corbett and Charles (Kid) McCoy have been matched to fight 25 rounds before the Twentieth Century club in Madison Square garden in the last week of August.

HELD AS HOSTAGES.

Imperial Edict Tells of Fate of Ministers in Peking—Were Safe July 22.

London, July 30.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, telegraphing Sunday, says:

A new imperial edict promulgated this evening urgently orders all viceroys and provincial governors to endeavor to negotiate peace with the powers, whose ministers are held as hostages pending the result of the overtures for the abandonment of hostilities against China. The viceroys are also commanded to guard their territories vigorously against attack and to prevent, by all means in their power, the advance of the foreign troops, especially along the Yangtse-Kiang. The decree says that the officials will answer with their lives for any failure to execute these orders. Commands are also given that not a single foreigner shall be allowed to escape from the interior, where there are still fully 2,000 Europeans connected with missionary work, in isolated situations.

"When the governor of Shan Tung communicated to the consuls the imperial decree of July 24, he omitted important passages addressed to Li Hung Chang:

"'It is admittedly inadvisable to kill all the ministers, but it is equally unwise to send them to Tientsin. It will be much wiser to keep the survivors at Peking as hostages. You are commanded to hasten to Peking. You are incurring imperial displeasure by delay. You have been appointed viceroy of Chi-Li because, with your military experience, you will successfully lead the imperial armies against the foreigners in Chi-Li, which Yu Lu, the present viceroy, is unable to do, owing to his ignorance in military affairs.'

"Li Hung Chang replied to this edict, asking to be allowed to retire on account of his age.

"Sheng now admits that he has had telegrams since July 19 announcing that every foreigner in Pao Ting Fu was murdered, includnig 40 British, French and American missionaries, and announcing also that two French Jesuits and a thousand converts have been massacred at Kwang P'ing Fu, on the borders of Shan Tung and Chi-Li. A majority of the consuls favor strong measures against Sheng's duplicity."

London, July 31.—The admiralty has made public the following dispatch from Rear Admiral Bruce at Tientsin:

"Following message from Peking: 'British legation, Peking, June 20 to July 16 repeatedly attacked by Chinese troops on all sides. Both rifle and artillery fire. Since July 16 an armistice, but a cordon is strictly drawn on both sides of the positions. Chinese barricades close to ours. All women and children in the British legation. Casualties to date 62 killed, including Capt. Strouts. A number of wounded in hospital, including Capt. Halliday. Rest of legation well except David Oliphant and Warren, killed July 21.

"'MACDONALD.'"

London, July 31.—The British consul at Tientsin telegraphs to the foreign office Monday that a letter from a Japanese colonel in Peking states that the legations were safe July 22. There had been no firing on the legations since July 17. The consul adds:

"A reliable messenger, who failed to enter Peking, but reached there, returns stating that there was no firing on the legations between July 15 and July 19."

In view of this evidence, the British government is convinced that the legations are safe.

Washington, July 31.—The secretary of state received at midnight a dispatch from Mr. Fowler, American consul at Chefoo, dated July 29, noon. Mr Fowler says:

"A letter from the German legation dated 21st inst. received at Tientsin. German loss is 10 dead and 12 wounded. Chinese ceased their attack on the 12th. Baron von Ketteler's body said to be safe. The Austrian, Dutch and Spanish legations destroyed and the French partially. A letter from the Japanese legation dated 22d arrived at Tientsin on 25th. Ten battalions of Chinese shelled the legations consecutively from the 20th of June and stopped on the 17th of July, but may renew. The enemy are decreasing. The German, Russian, American, British and half the Japanese and French legations still defended. Japanese say they have food for six days, but little ammunition. The emperor and empress are reported at Peking."

ASKED ALL TO HELP.

The Chinese Appeal for Mediation Was General—Was Received by All the Powers.

London, July 27.—All the powers appear to have received an identical Chinese appeal for mediation, but in the absence of definite news regarding the fate of the ministers and of any reliable indication of the original origin of the appeal, it seems that Lord Salisbury, the premier, considered it was not even necessary to publish the fact that the appeal had been received or to do anything beyond formally acknowledging it, with perhaps an intimation that nothing could be done until news from Peking had arrived.

If it could be ascertained beyond doubt that the reports of a massacre at Peking were unfounded—and there is a disposition here to believe that the ministers may, after all, be held as hostages — Lord Salisbury's policy would probably incline more toward the conciliation attributed to Washington than to the revenge attributed to Berlin. But while there is no cessation of the deluge of rumors, it is beginning to be believed in Shanghai, Canton and other points that the viceroys are as completely in the dark as to affairs in Peking as the Europeans themselves.

Washington, July 28.—Secretary Hay signalized his return to Washington from Canton Friday morning by the announcement that under no circumstances will the United States government accept the Chinese offer to turn over the foreign ministers to the internationals at Tientsin in consideration of a suspension of the campaign against Peking. A long cablegram was dispatched to Rear Admiral Remey at Taku and it is believed that this instruction was laid upon him.

Shanghai, July 28.—It is reported here that 15,000 Japanese troops landed at Shan-Hai-Kwan July 22 and gained a victory, the Chinese retreating after feeble resistance.

The Gold Democracy.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 27.—At the business meeting of the national committee of the gold democrats Thursday Charles Tracy, of New York, was elected chairman, to succeed George Foster Peabody, of New York, who resigned on account of ill-health. It was decided to establish headquarters in Indianapolis. The committee announces that it will carry on a vigorous campaign in the interest of "sound money."

The Deadly Cigarette.

Springfield, Ill., July 30.—Ten persons were injured, two fatally, by the premature discharge of the evening gun at the national guard encampment at Camp Lincoln about five o'clock Sunday evening. The explosion was caused by some one throwing a lighted cigarette into some powder which had fallen to the ground, owing to a bag of powder being broken.

SOLD LIFE DEARLY.

Act of Desperate Negro in New Orleans.

Riotous Proceedings Attend Attempt to Apprehend Robert Charles — Many Killed and Wounded.

New Orleans, July 28.—After a desperate battle lasting for several hours, in which he succeeded in killing Sergt. Gabriel Porteus, Andy Van Kurem, keeper of the police jail, and Alfred J. B. Bloomfield, a young boy, and fatally wounding Corp. John F. Lally, John Banville, ex-Policeman Frank H. Evans and A. S. Loclere, one of the leading confectioners of the city, and more or less seriously several other persons, the negro desperado, Robert Charles, who killed Capt. Day and Patrolman Lamb and badly wounded Officer Mora, was smoked out of his hiding place in the heart of the residence section of the city Friday afternoon and literally shot to pieces.

Great Excitement Ensued.

The tragedy was one of the most remarkable in the history of the city, and 20,000 people, soldiers, policemen and citizens, were gathered around the square in which Charles was finally put to death. Tremendous excitement reigned in New Orleans as the battle went on between the police and citizens and the negro with his Winchester. After the tragedy was over and Charles was dragged out from the mud and slush in which he had fallen, with the mob howling for the burning of his body, statements were made that the man killed was not really the desperado who had killed Day and Lamb, but papers found on his person and the fact that he fought so desperately for his life and shot so accurately seem to leave little doubt that the right man was killed.

The total number of victims since the trouble began is: Killed, 11; wounded, 22.

The Victims.

John T. Day, police captain; Peter J. Lamb, policeman; August Thomas, negro laborer; Batiste Filean (negro), aged 75 years, laborer in French market; Lewis Taylor, negro laborer; Gabriel Porteus (white), sergeant of police; Joseph Lally (white), corporal of police; A. Van Kurem (white), keeper of the city workhouse; Alfred J. Brumfield (white), employe of Southern News company; Robert Charles (negro), triple murderer and author of the trouble; Anna Mabry (negro woman), killed in her home by a mob searching for fugitive; unknown negro, companion of Charles.

Troops Were Called Out.

New Orleans, La., July 27.—In the rioting of Wednesday night and Thursday one negro was beaten to death, six were so badly wounded that their lives are despaired of, and about a score of people, white and black, male and female, have been more or less seriously wounded. Disorderly acts following the disturbances of Wednesday night were committed throughout the city Thursday, and resulted in the swearing in by the mayor of 500 special policemen and the ordering out of 1,500 of the state militia upon orders of Gov. Heard, who responded promptly to the appeal of Mayor Capdeville, for assistance in suppressing the existing lawlessness, and in preventing a recurrence of the violence of Wednesday night. Throughout the day attacks were made by irresponsible mobs of whites upon the black element, and the negroes before nightfall had been completely chased from the streets.

RATHBONE UNDER ARREST.

Late Director General of Posts in Cuba Charged with Misappropriation of Funds.

Havana, July 30.—Mr. Estes G. Rathbone, recently director general of posts in Cuba, was arrested Saturday at 11 o'clock on four charges. These allege the unlawful drawing of two orders for $500 each, paying his private coachman and gardener from the postal funds, and drawing per diem allowance when not entitled to do so. Mr. Rathbone was held in bonds of $25,000.

Havana, July 31.—Estes G. Rathbone, former director of posts, now under arrest on a charge of fraud, furnished bail Monday evening, Senor Lopez, a wealthy Spaniard, going on his bond. Several Spanish merchants came forward and offered to provide the necessary security.

SURRENDERS TO BRITISH.

Gen. Prinsloo and 5,000 Boers Submit Unconditionally to Lord Roberts' Forces.

Cape Town, July 31.—Gen. Prinsloo, with 5,000 men, has surrendered unconditionally to the British.

London, July 30.—A special dispatch from Cape Town says: "Gen. Christian Dewet has offered to surrender on condition that his followers be permitted to return to their homes unmolested. Lord Roberts has refused anything except unconditional surrender."

Trains Collide.

Detroit, Mich., July 30.—Section 3 of the Buffalo Bill wild west show train suffered a severe collision near Milwaukee Junction shortly before daylight Sunday, resulting in the smashing of a show employes' car containing some 40 sleeping inmates. Edward Sullivan is dead and nine others are in Detroit hospitals suffering from more or less serious injuries.

Lightning Kills Many.

Berlin, July 30.—Thunderstorms and heat this week did great damage in the eastern provinces, especially in Stettin, Dantzig, Elbing and Schneidemuehl, whence a number of deaths are reported. Lightning killed 15 persons and fired and consumed 23 large estates. A large number of soldiers were sunstruck and killed in Brunswick, Posen and Breslau.

Big Schooner Launched.

West Bay City, Mich., July 27.—The schooner Pretoria, the largest wooden boat ever built, was launched at Davidson's shipyard Thursday afternoon. The Pretoria will carry 5,000 gross tons of iron ore, or 175,000 bushels of wheat. She is 350 feet long, 45½ feet beam and 27 feet deep.

or inflammation of this delicate pink membrane.

The system is weakened in winter. The delicate lining is more susceptible to irritation or inflammation, and thus we have pneumonia, grip, colds, coughs, fevers, etc., all catarrhal conditions which may easily be checked by one catarrh cure—Pe-ru-na.

That's the only way out of it. You may dose forever—you will not be well until you try the true cure and that is Pe-ru-na. You may think your trouble is some other disease and not catarrh. Call it what you will, one thing is sure, your system is affected and must be treated, and Pe-ru-na is the only remedy which reaches the right place and does cure.

"WAR IS HELL"

SAID THE VETERAN GENERAL SHERMAN, A REAL HERO.

Give Us War and the "Strenuous Life" Says the G. O. P. Leader of 1900—Roosevelt Aftermath—The St. Paul Commercial Club a Victim of Misplaced Confidence—Echoes of the National and State Campaign—Continued Favorable Outlook—Reform Press Note and Comment of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, July 30, 1900.

Aftermath of the Roosevelt "opening" of the national campaign has but added to the dismal character of the event, from the standpoint of Republican benefit, proof of which is abundant in Republican authority. A surprising feature, however, is the discovery that, thanks to the Republican control of news sources and news circulation, such real character has been but slowly discovered throughout the country, and in many sections is doubtless not yet known. So much was this the fact that even the press bureau of the national committee did not have the information, having relied on the daily press, until the same was taken there by National Chairman Senator Jones, when he returned to Chicago from St. Paul. The press bureau chief, Mr. Abbot, then sought the facts, and they will be given the country as well as may be, through friendly and truthful papers. Mr. Abbot learned, after the close concealment of the facts was less cautious, that the St. Paul committee on transportation, which certified the tickets of those from Minnesota and neighboring states, so as to secure them the reduced rates for the grand occasion, that actually 256 persons so attended. Also that national league delegates who were expected to be the same in number, having the same basis of representation as national party conventions, actually had a convention of 410, including proxies. Mr. Abbot also learned that the St. Paul Commercial club raised something like $2,500 to make it a local success, and that the club figures that it could better have paid men $5 each outright, to attend the Roosevelt affair, for twice as many could have been secured for the same money.

In addition to features mentioned a week ago the bad effect of the Roosevelt speech, as to the sentiments promulgated, is more and more marked. The "strenuous life," "knock-down-and-drag-out" and "I-kin-lick-you" argument and talk, is daily more and more distasteful, to say nothing of its undignified and unstatesman-like character. Never before was a supposed idol so quickly smashed as Roosevelt has been in the North Star state. If you don't believe it wait till he is billed here again for another "opener."

The fact that the Roosevelt "strenuous opener" has been followed by the killing of an anti-imperialist in Minneapolis, in a discussion of the "Rough Rider" sort, will have a tendency to set a good many people to thinking.

The most prevalent criticism of Roosevelt is that war and the spirit of war surrounds most of his utterances. War, war! How many people there are who fail to appreciate what war really is. The generation that saw a real war does, but too many see only the glitter and show, are stirred by the noise and enthusiasm, but know nothing of the horrors and waste of the reality. General Sherman, after four years of our bloody Civil war, in which he was one of the most brilliant and conspicuous characters—after the hardship and agony that he knew were but memories, and when he was in full glamour of popular adulation—calmly and soberly summed up the whole wretched business in the one heartrending sentence, "War is hell."

Theodore Roosevelt knows nothing of war in its reality. He was present in one little brush with hostile forces; a contest which in the experience of Sherman would have been lost sight of as a mere skirmish. He knows nothing of the awful havoc of real war. In his shallow-pated way he rides his hobby and flourishes his tin sword with all the mock-tragic earnestness peculiar to the Darktown fire brigade. And this is the pseudo hero whom the people of this country are asked to put on a pedestal—to fall down before and worship as the ideal of its national life! Shades of Abraham Lincoln pity us!

Apropos, what they do say in whispers about the "Rough Rider" record at San Juan is that colored troops are entitled to the credit which the "Rough Riders" got. They say that there is a lieutenant in the service who commanded the colored troops, who, when not officially in danger of being overheard, states that upon his honor when he and his troops reached the top of San Juan hill there were just seven of the "Rough Riders" there, and Roosevelt was NOT one of the seven.

Speaking of the administration, it certainly does seem as if the wily "heathen Chinee" got our American emperor in a tight place when he got him to rush in and accept the same invitation to "mediate" that the Chinaman had extended to the other emperors. Well, if William cannot mediate he can meditate.

And after November he can have as much time for meditation as his great (?) prototype at St. Helena.

Speaking of the state campaign, Bixby is back from the East, and the political gossips do say that the "wad" he brings from Hanna is not as big as a hogshead. In fact the gossip is that Hanna has only lent him a few thousand "plunks" which have to be returned before Minnesota gets any more. In very truth Tams gives it out cold that the goppite state campaign has got to run itself.

And speaking also of the goppite campaign, they do say that every day is State Printer Whitney's busiest, as the artist depicts.

"Might makes right," in the Roosevelt, G. O. P. doctrine, whether it be in conquering unwilling peoples, as in the Philippines, by bloody war, by overturning a state government by hired murderers, as in Kentucky, or by striking a neighbor down to death, in political discussion, by a blow of the fist, as in the Minneapolis case. "Might makes Right."

Speaking of prosperity, all the great railway companies of the Twin Cities have made greater or less reductions in the forces of their shops—especially the transcontinental lines, which have laid off thousands of mechanics.

It is said that no class of business has suffered more in McKinley "prosperity" than insurance, the shrinkage in all lines being enormous, and especially in the fire companies, big fire losses being always an indication of poor general business. The Insurance Budget of the Twin Cities gives the totals of such losses for the first six months of the year as $103,298,900, as against $65,699,750 for 1899. This corresponds with the big losses from commercial failures, recently shown to have been the largest in number and amounts of any six months of which there is a record. There have been, including the great St. Paul fire of last week, close to 20 fires in the country in six months, where losses exceeded $500,000.

Closing the first full fiscal year of the reform administration of Governor Lind, the Minnesota cash box has a clean balance of $15,000,000! Will some one please call this to the attention of our good friend Colonel Tom Lowry, who predicted that "grass would grow in streets of Minnesota cities" as well as financial ruin follow the election of Lind!

Of course the gentlemen who have had so much to say about never pulling down the flag, will make it perfectly clear what they would do in the China case. Or, have our brave boys been fighting at T.en Tsin without any flag?

The State Republican league is behind the uniforming of G. O. P. clubs in the khaki or Roosevelt suits and hat. Let the goppites have the foreign uniforms; the military feature is entirely appropriate. Plain old Uncle Sam insignia and sentiments are good enough for the Democracy.

Signs that old soldiers of the Twin Cities will be found in the Liberty party this year are too plain to be mistaken. It is so all over the country. In the recent Peoples Party-Democratic convention of South Dakota, 180 old soldiers were delegates, and celebrated approval of Bryan and the state action by seizing flags and marching around for minutes, singing the old patriotic songs of the Constitution and the flag, and of their battles for liberty a generation ago. The incident, however, has been very carefully suppressed by the goppite press.

The Globe tells still a new story on William Hennery Eustis in the campaign of two years, that over in Wilmar, when Eustis was addressing a large audience of farmers, he laid it down strong that it was not the cheating of the farmers by the elevator rings, through the state grain department, that was their trouble, but the trouble was that farmers did not use good judgment in marketing the grain. In fact, he said, the matter with them was "up here," pointing to his forehead. Pretty soon this spread around and when a Kandiyohi farmer was asked if he was going to vote for Eustis he simply remarked that Eustis was all right, "except up here," pointing to his forehead. Eustis will soon be out making speeches for Van Sant, and the farmers, remembering his remarks two years ago, will not take any more stock in them now.

The red, white and blue will everywhere be the Democratic campaign insignia this year. The goppites are welcome to a foreign uniform (khaki) and somebody's old hat. The red, white and blue cap, and perhaps the red, white and blue umbrella, may be quite generally introduced as the marching emblem for Bryan and Stevenson. Pouring through the cities and towns in parades, or under streams of red fire, the solid phalanxes under the national colors will recall the days of the Lincoln Wideawakes, as well they may.

Is the fact that Hon. M. J. Dowling abruptly refused to act as a secretary of the late Republican league convention due to "light" he has seen on "imperialism?" One might think so to read the series of letters he is writing of what he saw in the Philippines and of the brave little people struggling there for liberty against American imperial soldiers.

McKinley's acceptance speech consisted of above 8,000 words, one-half of which was devoted to the money question. To imperialism he devoted 300 words, to protection but 126, while the great Chinese disaster and danger received but 82 words, and he devoted less than that number to each of the subjects, Hague conference, the late Spanish war, Cuba and "plain duty" Porto Rico. And how many words do you suppose he devoted to the trust subject? Not a single one.

Next May is the time now set when the administration will withdraw the troops from Cuba. The promise in this case is certain of fulfillment, for there will be a man in the White House then who will see that there is no further monkeying with the imperialistic band wagon.

G. S. C.

A Resourceful Phrase.

A kind-hearted clergyman was lately compelled to dismiss a clever gardener, who used to purloin his fruit and vegetables. For the sake of his wife and family he gave him a character and this is how he worded it: "I hereby certify that A. B. has been my gardener for over two years, and that during that time he got more out of my garden than any man I ever employed."—Collier's Weekly.

A Different Declaration.

"She is very proud of the fact that she has an ancestor who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence."

"That's nothing to be proud of. There's a divorce in our family, too."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Certainly a Prize Thought.

A teacher of music in one of the public schools of the south desired to impress the pupils with the meaning of the signs "f" and "ff" in a song they were about to sing. After explaining that "f" meant forte, he said: "Now, children, if 'f' means forte, what does 'ff' mean?"

Silence reigned for a moment, and then he was astonished to hear a bright little fellow shout:

"Eighty!"—New Lippincott.

The Man Better Reform.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Decides Law is Valid.

You can't get a man's property without giving him notice in some way. That is the burden of a decision handed down by Judge Cray, of Mankato, in the case of Hiram B. Cole against Leo S. Lamm, brought to determine adverse claims to a lot in that city. The decision is of statewide importance because it affects the forfeited tax law passed by the last legislature, in that the court finds that the plaintiff is the owner in fee simple of the property in controversy and that the defendant has a lien for the amount of the taxes, penalties and interest assessed against the land and paid by him. The court holds that the law is invalid in as far as it attempts to divest the original owner of the right to a notice of expiration of redemption provided for by the law which was in force when the original taxes were sold to the state. Therefore the court also holds that certain defects are not sufficient in themselves to defeat the title.

Pillsbury Monument.

The foundation for the monument of ex-Governor J. S. Pillsbury has been completed and occupies the most prominent position on the university campus. The base is of St. Cloud granite, 39x15 feet. The approach to the statue will be by three steps. There will be a stone bench around it. The statute itself, which is to be of bronze, is almost completed, and arrangements have been made for its unveiling Sept. 12.

The alumni association, which raised the money for the statue of the university's benefactor, is very proud of its success. The program for the unveiling has already been decided upon. It will consist of a presentation speech by some member of the alumni, an address of acceptance by President Northrop, and the address of the day by Senator C. K. Davis.

Relief Association.

The state auditor, Mr. Dunn, has received from the insurance commissioner a statement of the amounts due fire departments and firemen's relief associations under the provision of the law that devotes to such organizations one-half of the tax of 2 per cent on premiums received by fire insurance companies. The figures in this state are as follows: Minneapolis, $15,003.51; St. Paul, $6,292.35; Duluth, $3,771.03; Winona, $784.26; Stillwater, $581.08; Mankato, $398.38; St. Cloud, $262.74. The total is about $4,000 greater than last year. Half of the regular state tax aggregates $32,832.11; the retaliatory tax from Michigan and Ohio companies amounts to $461.41 and retaliatory Wisconsin tax is $1,834.44, making a total for distribution of $35,128.96.

Killed by a Blow.

A controversy over the administration's Philippine policy was the cause of the death of Joseph La Porte last evening. He became involved in an altercation with Morris Hayes, an ex-soldier, while eating supper at their boarding house, Minneapolis, and dared Hayes to fight.

The two angry men left the supper table and at once started fighting in the little hotel office. Hayes struck La Porte a severe blow on the left jaw, breaking the jaw and sending him to the floor. Spectators rushed to his assistance and found that La Porte was dead.

Hayes walked to the North Side police station and gave himself up.

Children's Pranks.

Four children broke into the residence of W. B. Wood, St. Paul, and practically wrecked the house. They tore up the carpet, smashed the furniture and left hardly an article intact. Later the children were found hiding in a tree near the house. They had on several suits of clothes taken from the house. Their names are Annie and Willie Kusehke, 11 and 7 years old; Harry and Margaret Moulton, 5 and 8 years. They were taken before the police court and all released with the exception of the oldest girl, who will probably be sent to the training school.

Lost His Sunday Clothes.

While at work in the harvest field near St. Cloud, James Feidler, an honest old farmer, was robbed of his "Sunday-go-to-meeting" clothes and shoes. The house was left alone and the thief had a good opportunity to help himself. The sheriff is investigating the case. It is believed that the robbery was the work of the young man who escaped from the reformatory earlier in the day, and who has not yet been recaptured, but this is by no means certain.

Battle With Tramps.

While Marshall J. O. Svennes was trying to arrest three tramps at Heron Lake who had been offering clothing for sale, the men pulled revolvers and warned him to leave them alone. He called for assistance, and the tramps started out of town closely pursued by the marshal and a posse. A mile out of town the tramps made a stand, and a number of shots were exchanged, after which the tramps surrendered and were lodged in jail.

News in Brief.

Eugene Moran fell from a Great Northern train near St. Cloud, and had a leg crushed by the car wheels. He is a lad who had ran away from his home in Minneapolis and has been working about Fargo and Moorhead.

In a fight in Moorhead one man bit off another's thumb.

Lightning struck the creamery at Alma City and burned it to the ground.

Redwood Falls will have an increased water supply for the city.

The new Minneapolis directory will contain 101,250 names, an increase of 7,763.

Only one of the nine flour mills at the head of the lake was operated last week, and it made 12,500 barrels. There were receipts of 126,500 barrels, shipments of 120,000 barrels, and there are now in store here 244,500 barrels.

Carl Nelson, a deaf mute living in Ottertail county, had the grit to chop himself out from under a fallen tree that had pinned him down, and with a broken leg to hamper him he improvised a crutch from a limb and one of his shoes, and walked home, a mile.

Some boys found a bittern's nest with half fledged birds in it down near Fergus Falls, and began feeding frogs to them. Allan Hollen, 14 years, had stopped over the nest when one of the birds darted out its beak and picked out the lad's eye.

Minneapolis saw mill owners are not as jubilant as they were a week or two ago, in that the water in the river is reported to be still falling and to be now lower than at any time for the past fifteen years.

The new city directory of St. Paul has been issued. It contains 94,226 names, showing an increase over last year of 4,027 names. The ratio of interest applied to the government census of 1890, will make the present population of St. Paul 160,139.

Several hundred immigrants from Russian Poland, driven out by the czar's edict, have arrived in Duluth the past few days. They will settle on farms near there or go into the mines.

A Minneapolis boy was arrested and placed in the lockup for stealing three crab apples.

Rural free delivery service is ordered established Aug. 1 at Madelia, Watonwan county, and Vernon Center, Blue Earth county. Ira E. Chase is appointed carrier at the former place and E. H. Chadsey and A. L. Wrighton at the latter.

Two churches in Minneapolis were sold at recent tax sale for unpaid sidewalk taxes.

A RESCUE AT SEA.

Perilous Situation Relieved by the Timely Utterances of a Spell-Binder.

"Help! Help!"

In a panic the passengers rushed to the side of the ship, and gazed helplessly at those struggling in the waves, says Harper's Bazar.

It was indeed a perilous situation.

What was to be done? There seemed to be no rope at hand, and there was trouble in lowering the lifeboat, and, as is usually the case, none of the sailors could swim.

A lawyer suggested a writ of habeas corpus, but that was found impracticable, as there was not a judge on board, and no one to serve such a writ, anyway.

At that instant a man of commanding presence pushed into the frenzied crowd and struck an attitude, close to the rail.

The drowning ones recognized him as a famous political orator, and their spirits rose:

"Fellow citizens," he began, "we face a crisis!"

The next moment a cry of joy went up.

For the people in the water were hanging on his words, in which position they continued till the boats were lowered.

O--I--C

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an ax to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he expects to derive an extra profit our of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honestly earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of the Cascaret substitutor! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long tailed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

Housewife and Burglar.

The burglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, but his shoes were not padded and they made some noise. He had just reached the door of the bedroom when he heard some one moving in the bed as if about to get up, and he paused. The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears. "If you don't take off your boots when you come into this house," it said, "there's going to be trouble, and a whole lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours, and you dare to tramp over my carpets with your muddy boots on. Go downstairs and take them off." He went downstairs without a word, but he didn't take off his boots. Instead he went out into the night again, and the "pal" who was waiting for him saw a tear glisten in his eye. "I can't rob that house," he said. "It reminds me of home."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

He Wouldn't Tell.

The argument by analogy or hypothetical case is often dangerous. A very stately and dignified clergyman used to tell a story illustrative of the risk of this method. One of his parishioners was much addicted to drink and one night the vicar met him coming home in such a condition that he remonstrated with him on the spot, and by way of clinching his argument, asked: "What would you say if you were to see me reeling down the street in a state of hopeless intoxication?" The offender appeared to be deeply impressed and answered, fervently: "I wouldn't tell a soul, sir."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The merits of the preparations of the J. & C. Maguire Medicine Company of St. Louis, Mo., are beyond all question. This firm has succeeded in furnishing the Army and Navy. They went into business in 1841, and have steadily grown in favor with the public, not having one failure to report in 59 years! Their Benne Plant, Cundurango, etc., have become a household word. They are sold by all druggists. Ask for booklet free, and if you ever get Diarrhea, Dysentery or Cholera-Morbus, give the Benne Plant a trial, and you will be convinced. Every article made by the Maguire Medicine Company is guaranteed to do what is claimed for it.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

World to End This Year.

This is the recent decision of one of the prominent societies of the world, but the exact day has not yet been fixed upon, and while there are very few people who believe this prediction, there are thousands of others who not only believe, but know that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best medicine to cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness or liver and kidney troubles. A fair trial will certainly convince you of its value.

Vegetable Compound cures the ills peculiar to women. It tones up their general health, eases down overwrought nerves, cures those awful backaches and regulates menstruation.

It does this because it acts directly on the female organism and makes it healthy, relieving and curing all inflammation and displacements.

Nothing else is just as good and many things that may be suggested are dangerous. This great medicine has a constant record of cure. Thousands of women testify to it. Read their letters constantly appearing in this paper.

SUNSTROKE

The summer's awful heat will kill those not fit to resist it—those whose bodies are full of poison because they have neglected their bowels.

The victims of sunstroke, or of any of the other terrible dangers of summer—diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus—are always those who have been careless about keeping clean inside, and as a result have their blood full of rotten filth breeding disease germs and their bodies ready with weakness to succumb to the hot spell. Dizziness, heat headaches, sick stomachs, sticky oozing ill-smelling sweats, restless nights, terrible pains, gripes and cramps in the bowels, sudden death on the street, all result from this neglect.

Keep yourself clean, pure and healthy inside, disinfected as it were, with CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC, the greatest antiseptic bowel tonic ever discovered and you will find that every form of summer disease will be effectively

DELANO, FRIDAY, Aug. 3, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Call on C. M. Conzet and engage your apples from the old farm. They are nice and orders are caming in from Dakota at these times. 2 t

—J. C. Canedy has sold his barber shop to J. H. Cyrus who takes possession at once. Mr. Canedy goes to Minneapolis to run a four chair shop.

—Mrs. Mathias Fautsch while leading a cow to pasture this morning, fell and broke her thigh bone near the hip. The injury is a severe one; especially so in so old a person. She will be laid up for awhile.

—Judge Giddings, Sheriff Nugent and Deputy Clerk of Court William Cochrane, held court in Delano on Wednesday and Thursday and succeeded in making citizens of 42 men. At Cokato on Thursday they made 55 voters.

—About fifty young folks from Delano and vicinity spent Sunday with Miss Catherine Frank at her home, five miles south east of town. A sumptuous dinner and supper was set for the party and a very pleasant day was spent. The picnicers returned home about 10:00 o'clock in the evening.

—The Delano creamery for the month of June took in 464,800 lbs of milk and gathered therefrom 18,631 lbs of butter fat, which made 20,481 lbs of butter and brought an income of $3,630.74. After the expences were defrayed the sum of $3,187.73 was found on hand to be distributed among the patrons.

—Rev. Kenneson who is assisting in holding grove meetings on S. Third Street, was hunting up the Mayor on Tuesday morning to see if a policeman could be furnished to help keep order during services. It ought not to be necessary in a civilized community to have policemen to keep order. There is a penality against inturrupting religious meetings, somebody may have a chance to learn what it is unless quietness prevails.

—The ball game at Litchfield between the Delano Elites and Litchfield nine last Saturday, the 28th, resulted in a defeat for the Delano aggregation. The game was a good one with the exception of the 2nd and 8th innings when the Delano boys slightly went to pieces allowing nine of the eleven runs. Treadway, who pitched for Litchfield had the boys at his mercy from start to finish. The score stands as follows:

Bases on balls; off Treadway 1, off Catlin 4. Two base hit, Speck. Double plays, Flynn to Anderson; Berneck to Eppel to Sandberg. Hit by pitcher Treadway 1, Catlin 3. Struck out by Treadway 15, by Catlin 5. Batteries, Treadway and Strobeck; Catlin and Johnson. Umpire, Treadway. Time 2 hours.

About twenty people from Delano including the ball nine went to Litchfield on the morning train Saturday, returning Sunday morning, and all agree that the trip was worth the time and money, and give the opinion that when the teams meet here Saturday, the 11th, that Litchfield will have a hard game on her hands. They were met at the depot by F. L. Scherrer, formerly Delano's cigar maker, who exchanged greetings with old acquaintances.

Litchfield is a small sized city and has a clean progressive appearance, with a good system of electric lights and waterworks and up to date business blocks, good streets, nice residences, and well kept lawns, in all making a beautiful and attractive place. The band gave a concert in central park which was much enjoyed by the Delanoites and about a thousand of the people of Litchfield. The town certainly deserves credit for its beautiful little park; and the pleasant evening spent there convinced Delanoites present that one of the things Delano badly needed was a park. Another thing very noticeable to strangers was that the city water was used for drinking purposes; a convenience that Delano neglected to consider when she put in her waterworks.

The two teams expect to meet here a week from tomorrow, Saturday the 11th. Tickets will be on sale and no one should miss the game.

World: If Mr. McKinley would withdraw from the Philippines, send his army instantly to rescue the foreigners and then bring all our own people home, to war in the orient no more, is there a single American citizen who in the bottom of his heart would not approve and rejoice?

Broad Axe: Mr. Jim Hill, of the Great Northern railway and the St. Paul Globe, has just invested in a $300,000 plaything in the shape of a yacht. Yet he is too hard up to embark in a legitimate commercial enterprise in the trans-Pacific trade unless congress will put its hands in the pockets of the people and hand him over a bonus. Like all other millionaires who want to be supplied with copital by the government, he and his Globe are "against Bryan", and favor a continuance of the Hanna-McKinley regime.

Exchange: Cigaret smokers can no longer obtain employment with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway companies, and in fact many of the leading corporations and firms throughout the country have adopted the same plan. This will have a tendency to check the vile habit more than all the preaching and warning against it ever did. When a young man finds that his only chances for success in the world are hendered or jeopardized by the practise, he is apt to think twice before he lets it get such a hold upon him that he cannot shake it off.

St. Peter Herald: Whatever may be said of W. J. Bryan, he must be given credit of the courage of his convictions. There is no question but had he sactioned it the 16 to 1 plank would have been omitted from the platform and had it been omitted thousands of so called gold democrats would have been loyal to him and to the ticket. Knowing the rest he was not a coward and said there must be no sacrifice of the principles of the party. As to the wisdom of the position, that is a matter of judgement but it proves his courage and their is no swivel in his back bone.

Norwood Times: It is said that Lind and Rosing are booming Watson, of Minneapolis, for congress. Minnesota Democrats might just as well have any republican in Washington as a gold Democrat imperialist, and it is difficult to understand just why the administration is catering to men for congress who are opposed to the issues upon which we expect to elect Bryan. It is like fostering and petting to the St. Paul Globe, only to be kicked when you need its help. A good, active, straightforward policy with candidates squarely on the Chicago platform and the Kansas City compromise on the part of our leaders would add much to the enthusiasm of the campaign. If we keep on running goldbugs on a silver platform we will be as uncertain about where we are at as McKinley is in his foreign policy now. It is also said that the leaders of the party are in favor of indorsing Staples for railroad and warehouse commissioner. Why not indorse Van Sant and the rest of the ticket? Are there no democrats in the state fit for railroad and warehouse commissioner? If not we ought to disband as a party and quit talking about carrying the state. It seems that out of the three great parties that have combined we ought to find a ticket that is out-and-out anti-Republican and square toed on our platform.

Watertown.

Threshing has commenced in this locality and the yield is not as good as we expected.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Thornquist and son of Montrose were the guests of Mrs. Rose Ray and O. J. Bleedorn and family.

Messrs Otto and Benno Schimansky and Jordon of St. Paul were the guests of F. A. Barth's over Sunday. The boys made the round trip on their wheels.

Several of our young people attended the dance last Thursday evening and all report a very pleasant time. Boys next time you intend to take the girls home take a two seated rig and don't stretch a one seated buggy wide enough for four.

Miss Kattie McDonald is spending this week with her parents in Woodland.

The wheels of Mrs. E. Heck and Miss Etta Mapes took them over to Mayer Sunday to have a good time.

Mrs. Frank Rader, Mrs. E. E. Shrader and little son Glen are spending a week at Waconia enjoying the cool breezes of the lake.

Misses Sophia Denzel, Bada Peterson, Katie Gavin and Carl Peterson, Charley Zeyer and Arthur Halgren took in the ball game at New Germany, Sunday afternoon returning home by the way of Mayer Sunday evening.

Boys get your cowbells ready, and girls prepare for a good time for prospects point out several weddings in the near future.

Miss Marie Grant who for the past month has been the guest of Miss Dolores Kohler, returned to her home in St. Paul Tuesday.

Frank Warta and Claude Teas played with the New Germany base ball nine Sunday.

Mr. Barth and family of Watertown and Mr. Schaffer and family of Delano drove to Lake Rebecca last Thursday and celebrated the 25 anniversity of Mr. and Mrs. Schaffer's wedding with a picnic.

The Star Ball Club will give a Harvest Dance at the City Hall Friday, Aug. 3, this means a good time to all who attend.

Foster Halgren wheeled up from the city Thursday to spend a few days with his cousin Arthur.

Mrs. M. Malsed who has been visiting in St Paul for a few days returned home Tuesday.

Mr. Walkefield, of Hutchinson, on his way to Long Lake, Wednesday.

Mrs. Luther Cunningham is very sick at the present writing. We hope she will recover soon.

After an extended visit here Maggie Padden has returned to the cities.

The Ladies of Watertown and vicinity gave a pound party Thursday evening for the benefit of Miss Amelia All.

Mr. Japs, of Minneapolis is visiting relatives and friends here.

Several of our young people drove over to the base ball dance Friday evening. All report a very pleasant time.

Mrs. Wm. Loney and Mrs. M. Burns, who have been sick for the past week are now able to be out again.

One of our popular young men was seen to leave town last Sunday on a hunting expedition and game must have been plenty for he was seen entering town with two DEAR.

ROCKFORD.

Fine weather for harvesting and stacking and farmers are busy. Wheat about half a crop; oats not much. The second growth after the rains came in badly afflicted by rust and will be cut with the mower: not much account for fodder. Corn and potatoes doing well. Smut in corn is general.

Died in this village after a very short illness on July 28, Mr. John P. Beach, aged 78 years years, the father of Mrs. D. R. Thompson and Charles R. Beach of this village, and Mrs. A. D. Hoar, of Camden Place. The funeral services were held at the residence of D. R. Thompson on Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Tompson of the Presbyterian church. The remains were sent to Waterville, his former home on the afternoon train, on the Soo, accompanied by friends and relatives.

In a short time the ratification meetings of both political parties will be held at Buffalo. With the republicans the ratification meetings are legitimate and consistant. That the ticket should be made out entire and the candidates should be all selected by the court house clique is all right; is just what has been done at the so called National Convention and the State Convention of that party. The Imperial Hanna had to be consulted and give his consent, so their papers say, to every name suggested and also to every plank and every nail and spike in the republican platform; then there was no manifest opposition after he had given his orders. The lion and the lamb lie down together but the lamb was inside the lion. And this is called a republic, now in principle an empire. But the democrats will meet at Buffalo at a supposed county convention only to ratify the very nicely adjusted democratic ticket, concocted and fixed and rigged out with victims, who would sell at a good price to the republican managers paid for with Boss Hanna's money and the great Begum Schume and his few selected associates says to the public, "Just look at my record in the last eight years; I have carried the democrats of Wright county on my back or in my pocket and have distributed more cigars than all of the other candidates put together"; and he might say have paid out more campaign funds to republicans to work for me on election day than any republican in the county.

Democratic State Convention.

A delegate Convention of the democratic electors of the State of Minnesota is hereby called to meet at the Auditorium Building in the City of St. Paul, Ramsey County, Minnesota, at 12 o'clock noon, on Thursday the 6th day of September, A. In each county in the state a Convention shall be held on Thursday, the 30th day of August, A. D. 1900, at such hour and in such place in each of said counties as the county committee thereof may designate.

All Democratic conservative reform citizens of the State of Minnesota, irrespective of past political associations and differences, who will unite with us in the effort for pure, economical and constitutional government, and who favor the Republic and oppose the Empire, are cordially invited to join us in sending delegates to these conventions.

Dated at Minneapolis, Minnesota, this 19th day of June, A. D. 1900.

By the direction of the Democratic State Central Committee.

L. A. ROSING,
Chairman Democratic State Central Committee.
T. R. KANE,
Secretary Democratic State Central Committee.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored.
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword:
His truth is marching on.

I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps:
His days are marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel:
"As ye deal with My contemners, so with you My grace shall deal:
Let the Hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat;
O, be swift, my soul, to answer Him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me:
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

Democracy.

Webster defines democracy:

1. Government by the people; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained and directly exercised by the people.

2. Government by popular representation; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained by the people, but is indirectly exercised through a system of representation and delegated authority periodically renewed; a constitutional representative government; a republic.

3. Collectively the people, regarded as the source of government.

4. The principles and policy of the Democratic party, so called (U. S.).

Are you a democrat? If not, why not?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27, 1900.

Chairman Richardson of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, returned to the Washington headquarters this week from a trip to New York, and is now engaged upon the speech he will make as chairman of the committee to notify Col. Bryan of his nomination, at Indianapolis, August 8. Mr. Richardson reports the Congressional campaign in New York to be entirely satisfactory to the democrats, but says he will not go so far at this time as to claim more than a fighting chance for the electoral votes of the State. Information sent to democratic headquarters from the middle west is decidedly cheering. Instead of claiming Illinois and Indiana to be doubtful states, there is now a disposition to put them in the certain democratic column, and many believe that the desertion of the republican party by German voters who cannot stand imperialism will also give Wisconsin to the democrats. Illinois has 24 electoral votes, Indiana 15, and Wisconsin 12, all of which Mr. McKinley received in '96. Democrats around headquarters are not really claiming as much as the news received would justify them in doing, because they do not wish to create the impression that they are chasing rainbows. Everyday the probabilities increase that the next House will be democratic and that Bryan and Stevenson will be elected, if the democrats throughout the country keep up their present aggressive attitude.

The statement previously made in this paper, that the Senate Committee ordered to investigate receipts and expenditures of money in Cuba would not begin work in time to make a report before the election, has been practically confirmed by Senator Platt, of Conn., chairman of the committee. Directly after Congress adjourned Mr. Platt said he would call the committee together as soon as a detailed statement of expenditures and receipts, which the War and Post Office Departments had been asked to prepare as a basis for the committee's work, was ready. Now, he says that the War and Post Office departments are conducting investigations and that he will not call the committee together until they have finished and furnish him copies of the result. This is all twaddle. Mr. Platt knows that the party bosses have ordered the Senatorial investigation held up until there will be no danger of its affecting the election and that everybody else knows it, too.

Although carefully edited by Postmaster General Smith before it was made public, the report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow on the stealings of Neely and Rathbone, and their gang, and other crookedness connected with the Cuban postal service shows that a disgraceful state of affairs existed in Cuba, in which rascally republican officials showed the Cubans that they could outdo the Spanish officials in stealing and extravagant expenditure of public money. Still, there are persons who express surprise because Cubans do not recognize Americans to be superior to them.

Representatives McCall, of Mass., and Littlefield, of Me., both of whom voted against their party on the Porto Rican tariff bill, are to be sent into the middle west to stump, their respective districts being overwhelmingly republican, in order to try to keep the large number of republicans in that section who thought as they did about the Porto Rico tariff in line for McKinley.

Senator Jones, Chairman of the Democratic National Committe, stopped in Washington on his way to New York to hold a conference with a number of prominent democrats on the conduct of the campaign, which is to be at once started and pushed aggressively until election day. He is full of enthusiasm over the outlook, which he says is far brighter than it was at this time four years ago.

A message from Minister Conger, dated July 4, has been received at the State Department, saying that Pekin was in a state of anarchy and that the foreigners who were all cooped up in the British legation and under constant fire, were bound to be killed if help was not at once had. This message seems to corroborate the opinion of those who think that the adminis- has allowed itself to be completely hoodwinked by the Chinese minister in Washington. Mr. McKinley has been negotiating with the government of China and promising to act as a mediator in its behalf, when according to Mr. Conger's dispatches, there is no government of China, the Capital being in a state of anarchy. Some go so far as to express the opinion that the Chinese Minister at Washington, who still insists that the foreign ministers at Pekin are safe, has never received a line from Pekin since the trouble began.

LeSueur Sentinel: By the way. Who will "pull down the flag" when we vacate China. There will be a job for those that have been calling upon American patriotism to sustain the flag in the Philippines on the ground that the flag had never been hauled down when once it floated. Perhaps this administration will see their "manifest destiny" in China, before we are done with it.

SOME people seem to forget that a member of the Legislature has any duties other than to vote for United States Senator. They persist in voting for men pledged to vote for their choice, or rather the wire pullers of their party's choice for United States Senator, regardless of the fact that they know, oftentimes, that the man they vote for is incompetent, unreliable and not to be desired as a man to help make the laws of great state like Minnesota. This is entirely wrong. Legislators should be chosen for their fitness to fill the places to which they are elected for their honesty, sobriety and ability. Such legislators would see to choosing a good man to represent our state in the U. S. Senate. But when a lot of figure heads put up by politicians for their use, are elected to the legislature we must expect, sometimes, to see men elected by them to the United States Senate of whose election we do not approve. Minnesota voters can easily recall when the man, the choice of a large majority of his party, was refused a seat in the U. S. Senate and which seat was given to a man far from their choice. If we would be sure of getting a good U. S. Senator, under existing arrangements the safest way would be to elect reliable men to the legislature and depend on their judgement to select the best possible man for that exalted position.

See Things Differently.

From the craddle to the coffin people see things differently. The tiny youngster apparently yells all night and a good share of the day must be carried around in his mothers arms to keep still for a few minuites; and all just to make it interesting for some one, any one. When a little larger he goes to school to whisper to his nearest friends and throw spitballs about the house to call attention. School days over he goes into business with a flare of trumpets as long as somebody else's pocket book pays the bills. In politics he bobs up and down as if minnows were nibbling the bait. He wants everything he sees from the time his eyes are open on his nurses bright ribbon to his playmate book and ball; his contemparies customers; the dollors of his associates; the islands of the sea.

It matters not to him to whom a thing belongs, or of what little use it would be to him, he covets it. It is his nature, to get all he can, no matter how nor how much it may injure others. He will as soon as large enough snatch his mother's breast pin and scratch her bosom in the act: he will push his playmate down in the mud, and rob him of his dinner as he goes to school. He will sit up nights to see his neighbors customers and divert their trade from them to him. He will trade off his best friends at a political convention for dollors or what will bring him dollars, or injure those of whom he is jealous. If he is given power he will contract the peoples money until it can be cornered by a few who own most. He will put tariff, in opposition to the constitution he has sworn to defend, upon imports and exports to land under his county's control. He will transport volunteers to foreign shores to fight for freedom against tyranny, and then keep them for months against their will, to shoot the people they sought to liberate. He will raise a large army and navy, and go about with a chip on his shoulder looking for trouble, trouble and a chance to make millions of voters to help him continue in control of his countries affairs, while people at home shoot his postmasters, and go without any. While States disfranchise the voters for the past years and shoot them down in the streets or their Lomes in populous cities on his own shores. He of course has, as an infant, had the looking glass and the hammer, as a school boy has had his way, as a trader has been successful on others means, a Napoleon of finance: and as one seeking continuance of power caters to the church and to the world, under guise of protecting missionaries of the gospel opens the doors of foreign landsto liquor and other trafic, while he claims to be powerless to keep the flowing bowl from killing more of his regular army than the bullets of all the foes he faces.

Our country has too many such characters; too many men who are selfish, greedy, want dollars; want anything that they can get that belongs to someone else. "Something for nothing" seems to be the motto of many. But the cost is often greater than the gain. They err in judgement, they lack in prudence, they get their foot in it and don't like to take it out. There are too many conquerers of the world for peace and happiness. He that keeps his own country in the best humor, keeps his constituents sweetest by good, wholesome administration of her laws is the safest. There are those who are willing to "live and let live" who believe that God's foot stool is big enough for all his creatures, that honesty is the best policy between individuals, between governors and the governed, and between the nations of the earth. May the right prevail

German's not Scared.

"It may dawn on the Bryan managers before long that in Minnesota, at least, the German voters are not to be scared at the imperialistic bugaboo."—Minneapolis Tribune.

A staunch old Republican German voter of the days of Abraham Lincoln, Jim Blain and others, handed us the above item, from a republican paper, and desired that we call attention to it, at the same time intimating very strongly that he, at least, would not be inveigled into voting for the present McKinleyism, or Hannaism, or Englishism again.

Not Buried Yet.

"So long as Bryanism is not finally buried beyond posibility of resurrection every wage earner in the land is threatened with a fifty percent reduction of his wages."—Rochester "Democrat and Chronicle".

We notice by the papers that the Great Northern Railroad already has a lot of Japanese laborers working for reduced wages. That does look as if our native laborers might be in danger of a reduction, soon, and this while McKinley is carrying on his "benovelent assimilation" project.

CAPT. VAN SANT is said to be using as an argument why he should be elected, that possibly the Governor might be called upon to appoint a United States Senator. What is the matter with Knute Nelson. Don't the Capt. think the legislature will choose him? And the g. o. p. politicians generally are instructing their voters, that they must be sure to support the party nominees for legislature, no matter how well you know they are not fit to make laws for our state. They must be elected so that they can choose Mr. Nelson for U. S. Senator. What a fix our country must be in to sacrifice everything for a U. S. Senator. Wouldn't it be better to elect U. S. Senators by ballots on their merits?

REPUBLICAN papers are claiming that there is no danger of the Germans not voting for McKinley and Rosevelt. They seem to think the personality of the Vice-Presidential candidate sufficent to overcome any scrupples the German voters may have against militaryism, and they rely on the loyality of the Germans to the party. But they are certainly mistaken about many Germans in this part of the country. Many are at sea, as to what to do; as to just how to vote. But of one thing they are thoroughly convinced, that is that they will not again vote for McKinley and his military ways. Later on no doubt they will become as sure that the way to prevent militaryism and imperialism is to vote for Bryan and others opposing that doctrine.

They Like Dead Things.

Why do some of our contemporaries persist in their attacks on Chas. A. Towne? There is no credit in pitching into a dead man.—Sherburne County Times.

That's the kind of argument you fellons seem to like; otherwise it is all you canfind.

If Charles A. Towne is wrong in any of his political views it is the duty of the opposition press to point out the discrepencies; and not to simply cry out "He's dead."

A good many of your contemporaries are useing up columns of their papers in telling the people how dead W. J. Bryan is. They don't appear to know what he died of, nor when he died; and to them it doesn't seem to make any difference. The United States Bank backers once undertook much the same tactics in a campaign against Andrew Jackson, they tried to have voters think that he was dead, or ought to be, and unless the bank was sustained the country would be ruined. Old Hickry and his friends were too many for the "financiers", Andrew Jackson was elected President, and is today pointed to, as the President who knew he was right and staid by his convictions.

Some of your contemporaries not long ago sought to make sport of democrats, by saying: "They are voting for Andrew Jackson yet!" Even if they were, it wouldn't be much more silly than for party political papers to be crying out every week, for nearly four years, "Bryan is dead!" "Towne is dead!" and as for voting for Andrew Jackson yet, democrats are proud to say today, they are on the financial question at least, voting for the rights of the people. For the very principles Jackson was elected on. Money for the people, every dollar as good as every other dollar, made so by Uncle Sam's stamp, not by any agreement with England or any other nation that we will or they will have it so. That they are also voting for a Republican form of government. A government of the people, for the people and by the people, that shall not perish from the earth. A live government.

Some of your contemporaries appear to think that the constitution of the United States is dead! That the Declaration of Independence is dead! That the Republican form of Government is about dead! And that we should listen to Syrene songs of those in this country and in other countries who would lull us quietly to sleep while they take possession of the money bags of the world.

It is our oppinion, that other arguments than "He is a dead man," will have to be used to keep the worthy successor of Andrew Jackson from being chosen by the voters of the United States to restore our Republic to its former place among the peaceful nations of the earth.

Trying to make out that Towne is a dead man, that Webster Davis is a dead man. That any follower of Bryan is a dead man only helps strengthen Bryan and and his cause. Kill 'em some more Bro. Davee. Kill 'em some more, contemporaries. They are a lively set of corpse.

Le Sueur Sentinel: By the way, Who will "pull down the flag" when we vacate China. There will be a job for those that have been calling upon American patriotism to sustain the flag in the Philippines on the ground that the flag had never been hauled down when once it floated. Perhaps this administration will see their "manifest destiny" in China, before we are done with it.

Field Thoughts.

"And it came to pass that in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be taxed."

It seems that ever since the blowing up of the battleship Maine, in the Cuban waters, it has been death and taxation to our people, and I for one can't see where we are promised any release from the burden of taxation and the affliction by death. People do wrong to encourage war without a just and righeous cause, "He that lives by the sword shall also parish by the sword."

The clash of arms, and military parade, accompanied by flying colors, and the sound of martial music is exciting to both young and old, also to women and children. The rattle of musketry and the smoke of battle may drive away care for a time, but sorrow cometh in the morning. Excitement without council and deliberation often has a bad effect.

It seems we are getting wonderfully mixed up with the Orient. The tramp of our armies is heard from the rising to the going down of the sun. For many years our people have been sending Christian missionaries to China, to civilize and christianize that forlorn race of people, who, by instinct or imitation had been lead to believe in idol worship, and yet our country a few years ago passed a law prohibiting the Chinese imigrating into this country.

I know we read in the Good Book, the gospel shall be preached unto all nations, and then shall the end come. According to the treaty stipulation China should not kill our missionaries. But they as a people have always been superstitious, believing in spooks and hobgoblins, and prejudiced against foreigners. The tramp of civilization by the introduction of missionaries and railroads has so worked up their superstition that it has broke out in bloodshed. And take it all around, it would seem we are having some uncalled for trouble as a nation.

It seems the Spanish-American treaty which was entered into at Paris, December 10th, 1898, by the envoys from the United States and Spain is somewhat defective, by their geographical boundries two small islands were left out, so it seems the United States must pay Spain $100,000 more for this oversight. If they had said in their treaty all the Philippino Archepilego then they would have covered the ground. That treaty also says: "The United States and Spain mutually relinquish all claims for indemnity, national and individual of every kind, of either government" etc. So according to these stipulations the can never be recovered any indemnity for the battleship Maine. The investigation of the battleship blowing up stopped too soon. By it we lost a valuable ship and hundreds of precious lives. We never have been able to understand why the investigation was not carried further.

People in politics are now speculating as to how will go the coming Presidential election. A good many are undecided as to how to vote. Some have made up their minds and others have no opinion in regard to the matter. The last named are the most to be feared. The multi-millioniaries and designing politicians have got the people just where they want them, divided up into different parties and fractions so they do not know where they stand, and an office will turn them either way.

It seems we are in a critical condition just at the present time. The subsidized press and the vender politician who peddles his opinion out in City Halls and on the street corners in regard to politics is largely to blame for some of our conditions.

It has always been supposed that the people were the government in this country. But it begins to look now as if money and corporations were the government. "When people cry peace and safety then sudden destruction comes." "I say unto all watch." FARMER.

Score Emperor William.

By Wire From Victoria, B. C. Aug. 6.

Japanese newspapers denounce the vindictive purpose of the speech of Kaiser William, calling upon his troops to revenge Baron Von Kettler. The Main Hi asks:

"Should the cry of vengeance be raised against China because her rebellious subjects perpetrate crimes?"

The speech is called undignified and not what one would expect from a Christian nation.—Minneapolis Tribune.

THE FISH WE USED TO CATCH.

Oh, brothers of mine in the gentle art,
Whose dearest prize is a well-filled creel,
Who know the thrill of the angler's heart
When the lithe rod whips to the whirring reel;
A song I sing and a rhyme I bring;
Not of the pools where the salmon hatch,
But a memory fond of the village pond,
And the common fish we used to catch.

The fish we caught in the golden haze
Of the boyhood summers long ago,
When our bare feet tripped through the grassy ways
To the nook where the lilies used to grow;
Where the sunbeams played through the willow's shade,
And danced as the soft breeze shook the tree,
And the sound we heard was the song of bird
Or the drowsy hum of the bumble bee.

The fish we caught with the homemade poles
Our jack-knives cut from the slender birch,
And, oh! the glory that filled our souls
With each new shiner or wee red perch;
And when our fun, like the day, was done,
And we heard the chorus the crickets sing,
We'd idly roam through the twilight home,
Where mother waited to praise our string.

Oh, brother anglers, we've fought it out,
By ocean's surges or mountain glen,
With lordly tarpon or gamy trout,
Full many a time and oft since then;
But the days of old were the days of gold,
And never again that sport we'll match;
The care-free joy of the happy boy,
And the common fish that we used to catch.

—Joe Lincoln, in Recreation.

SOME NEWSPAPER FAKES

"I'VE NEVER felt quite the same since the lamentable era of truthful newspaper reporting began," said one of the Chicago correspondents. "The work doesn't seem like the same old thing. It's a miserable feeling to know that you're tied down by facts. It has positively got so nowadays that a fellow's paper absolutely requires him to write nothing but facts; thus, all of the charm that comes from the ability to lie wierdly and enthusiastically is removed, and this makes one's days dismal and monotonous. I can remember the time in Chicago when the hottest fakir, the most diverting liar with the pencil and pad, was the sought-after man, and that wasn't more than a dozen years or so ago, at that. It didn't make any difference whether a local story was true or not, so long as it was dished up in good shape, with plenty of apparently correct names and addresses, lots of 'scenes and incidents,' as the city editors put it, and a general atmosphere of versimilitude, as it were. I am a modest man, but I would fain throw this small nosegay at myself: I won the Champion Fakirs' stakes for three years in succession in Chicago, and no less a man than Eugene Field once bestowed the laurels upon my blushing brow in the presence of the Whitechapel club for having repeatedly proved myself the most fantastic newspaper liar that ever blew into the city of wind. That was right after I'd sprung my famous airship fake. There was a chap exhibiting a funny-looking model of an airship down on the lake front, and, it being midsummer and consequently dull, I went after him, and wrote several columns, with pictures, describing his contraption, and relating how I'd flown with him 50 miles across Lake Michigan to Benton Harbor, Mich. The story went with a bang, despite the fact that the envious esteemed contemporaries of my paper had the effrontery to come out the next day and declare it a fake, and the airship man organized a company on the strength of it, achieved some $30,000 from small investors, and then went into such close seclusion that he's never been seen since. The night he decided to disappear with the wad he called at my office and took me out and bought me a schooner and a five-cent cigar, and that's all I ever got for putting him on the road to prosperity.

"But I started out to relate how I got dumped on a fake of my own devising. It was during another dull period, when local news was shy and uninteresting, and it looked to be about the right time to spring a large one. So I went down to the Leland hotel and put the name of 'E. H. Gettemout' on the hotel register and had a word or two with big 'Red' Kennedy, the chief clerk. Then I seized a large bunch of hotel paper, bought enough stogies to see me through and sat down in the hotel writing-room and wrote four and a half columns about E. H. Gettemout's wonderful experiments at the Leland with his life-saving fire-escape apparatus. I succeeded in making E. H. Gettemout a pretty remarkable genius by the time I got through describing his invention in great detail. It consisted—that is, in my story it consisted—of a collapsible elevator frame, that is, an elevator frame that could be shot up into the air from a truck by the operation of some simple machinery, and lowered into small space into the truck in the street when it wasn't in use. In case of fire in a tall building the elevator frame would be raised, and then the elevator, operated by hydraulic force, would begin its regular trips to the various floors of the burning building, hauling the people that preferred not to be incinerated to the ground as easily and comfortably as if there wasn't any fire within a radius of 17 miles. I made a lot of sketches as suggestions for cuts to be used in connection with the story.

"Then I described at great length the experiments that had been made at the Leland with the apparatus; told how several hundred guests of the house, having been apprised of the nature of the experiments about to be made, had cheerfully volunteered to descend in the collapsible truck elevator for the purpose of demonstrating the usefulness of the invention. Among the guests whom I named as making the descent in the thing were all the members of a grand opera company, men and women, who happened to be stopping at the house at the time. I also had a large and varied assortment of other distinguished persons of both sexes who were stopping at the Leland just then to figure in the smooth and orderly descent of the life-saving elevator. I described at some length the hardships and sufferings E. M. Gettemout, the inventor, had experienced before perfecting his machine and before he was able to secure enough capital to make a working model, and I dwelt very pathetically upon the fact that E. H. Gettemout had lost several near relatives in a hotel holocaust before deciding to devote his life to the invention of a contraption that would make it a cinch that no lives would ever again be lost by reason of the burning of a hotel.

"Oh, it was a good story, all right. I turned it in to the night city editor—the city editor had gone home for his day off—with a few appropriate remarks, together with my sketches to be used as suggestions for cuts. The night city editor gave me the grin from beneath the eye shade he was wearing when he'd looked the story over. It was such a skeptical grin that I had to say, seeing that he was a clubmate of mine and a good fellow:

"'I cannot, will not lie to you. The story's true.'

"He said that it wouldn't be possible to have any cuts made for the story, as two of the artists were having their day off, one was sick and the others were exceedingly busy. I was sorry about that, but, feeling that I had a clean scoop on the town anyhow, I went away from the office with a swelled chest and a feeling of great approval of myself.

"My paper was delivered at my flat as usual the next morning, and the joy I experienced when I spread it out and saw that my story occupied the first five columns, double-leaded throughout, of the first page, isn't to be described in languagings. I showed it to my wife with vast enthusiasm and self-indorsement, and was rewarded by having her tell me that she always knew I was the most stupendous liar that ever declined to get up and light the kitchen fire.

"I read the story over several times on my way down to the office in the car, and I had it all figured out how my city editor would pat me on the back and tell me to go down and hit the cashier for a couple of weeks' pay in advance and run away for a little vacation.

"I walked into the city editor's room with as modest a bearing as possible under the circumstances, and waited for him to see me and jump up and embrace me and tell me that I was the making of the paper. Well, the embrace didn't come. He just looked me over out of the slants of his eyes, and said he:

"'Got scooped, didn't you?'

"'Who? Me?' I managed to splutter. 'How—where—what—'

"'You got scooped right out of your boots on that life-saving elevator story,' said my city editor, in a hard, craggy tone. 'The Journichle's got a page and a half about it, with a lot more details than you give, and, most important thing of all, a cut of E. H. Gettemout, the inventor. Why the dickens couldn't you have got a picture of Gettemout, hey?'

"I grabbed his copy of the Journichle, and there was the story, jammed with double-column cuts, and, sure enough, a swell cut of Gettemout, who never existed, much less posed in front of a camera. Then I fell right over into the waste-paper basket and was out for some moments. When I came to I sat up and told my city editor that the whole thing was a fake of my own devising, and that the Journichle gang had got hold of it in some unaccountable manner—probably through the hotel clerk, to whom I had confided the nature of the story I was going to spring.

"'I don't care whether it's a fake or not,' said my city editor, frigidly. 'If it was your own fake you had no right to be lifted out of it by the opposition. A reporter's got no more right to be beaten out of his own fake than a short card player has to be bluffed out of a jack pot of his own opening. You're fired.'

"Nice way to get treated, wasn't it? I went and hunted up Charlie Dillingham—now the right-hand man of the Frohman theatrical people—and got him up against the alley eaves of the Auditorium, where I met him, with a grin on him from ear to ear, and I said a whole lot of real rude things to Charley, for a fact. He'd dub my fake out of the hotel clerk, inch by inch, pulled a photograph of one of his country uncles out of his trunk and turned it in as the picture of Gettemout, and, in general, chiseled me out of one of the neatest fakes I'd cooked up in fully four days."—Washington Star.

Chief Librarian Putnam, of the congressional library at Washington, is now in Vienna, where he has completed arrangements with the government of Austria to send the Washington library a copy of every official publication issued by that government, in exchange for all official publications of the United States. It is planned to make similar arrangements with every nation.

The last issue of the Cape Nome Gold Digger to reach this country contains the following statement: "Tacks have advanced to eight dollars per pound, and eggs are worth two dollars a dozen, though an effort is being made to put the price up to $2.50. Ham is long since out." The Gold Digger is not cheap itself, and sells for 25 cents a copy. It is printed in red ink!

The output of the Klondike gold mines for 1900 is estimated at $25,000,000. This is the largest yield for any single year, and the present outlook is that the region is far from being exhausted. Cape Nome has not done so well as was expected, though it, too, is said to promise a good deal of gold this year. In different parts of Alaska new gold fields of some importance are reported every few months.

Despite the fact that he has ruled Germany for 12 years, the emperor has never been crowned, and it is now stated that the 200th anniversary of the foundation of Prussia will be celebrated at Konigsberg by the coronation of the kaiser and the empress. All European sovereigns will be invited to attend the festivities, which will be very elaborate and will last a week. Emperor William seems to have a peculiar habit of doing things as other people do not do them.

A Kansas City packing house employe has invented a device which picks the feathers off dead chickens as neatly and rapidly as the famous Kansas cyclone does the trick. The machine has a receptacle in which the deceased chicken is placed. Into this box are directed several cross-blasts of air from electrical-driven fans which revolve at the rate of 5,000 turns a minute. The miniature cyclone strips the bird of its feathers, even cleaning off the down, in the twinkling of an eye.

Herr Liebermann, a Jewish officer with the German forces in China, has rediscovered the tribe of Jews native to China who were first found centuries ago. They constitute a small and dwindling community at Kaifengnu, the capital of the province of Honau, where the high priests calculate their people have been settled for 2,000 years. They have the Jewish features and retain the form of worship they brought with them from Israel through Persia and India, but in every other way are Chinese.

One of the most striking peculiarities of the attendance in the public schools of Manila is the great excess of boys over girls, this being true of the high schools as well as of those of lower grade. It is a manifestation of the local belief that, while education may be desirable for boys, it is of little use for the girls. All they need to know is their catechism. This disparity in the school attendance of the sexes may be lessened, however, before the next school term, as the authorities are planning for a system of compulsory attendance.

That gallant battleship, the Oregon, which was supposed to have been ruined by colliding with a rock, is now reported but little damaged, and only needing thorough repair to be as good as ever. The people of the nation will feel the keenest pleasure at the news. It was hardly meet that the ship which sailed 20,000 miles to reach a fight and then did battle like a tiger of the sea should come to its end upon an unknown bowlder on the China coast. The Oregon, it is to be hoped, will live out its days of active service in all its glory.

Few people in this country have an adequate idea of the density of the population of China. The province of Hupeh, with 70,450 square miles, has 33,365,005 inhabitants, while Indiana and Ohio, with 76,670 square miles, have only 5,864,720 population. New England has a surface of 64,000 square miles and 4,700,745 inhabitants, while the province of Shantung, with 65,105 square miles, has a population of 36,248,000. The United States has 20 inhabitants to the square miles, but the population of the Chinese empire is 500 to the square mile.

WOULD-BE ASSASSIN.

Attempt Made in Paris to Kill Ruler of Persia—Remains of Humbert Placed in a Casket.

Paris, Aug. 3.—An attempt on the life of the shah of Persia, Muzaffered-Din, was made Thursday morning, but luckily it resulted in no harm to his majesty. A man broke through the line of policemen as the shah was leaving his apartments and mounted the royal carriage steps. He held a revolver in his hand, but as soon as his intention was divined the police disarmed him before he was able to fire.

Only a short time before the attempt to assassinate him was made the shah received the following warning letter:

"I think fit to warn you that an attempt will be made against your life during your stay in Paris. I am a member of an anarchist association meeting at No. 5 Piazza di Naples, which has decided upon your death. If I warn you, it is because feelings of humanity get the better of my desire for vengeance on sovereigns and potentates. I confide this letter to one of my friends, who leaves for Paris, and who on his arrival will immediately post. I add, in conclusion, that he who is chosen to kill you is a friend of he who killed the king of Italy."

Monza, Aug. 4.—The remains of King Humbert were Friday placed in a casket of walnut, covered with lead and glass in such a manner as to leave the face exposed. The ceremony which took place in the presence of the royal family was very touching. Queen Margherita placed the Italian flag, with the arms of the house of Savoy, over the corpse.

New York, Aug. 4.—Gov. Voorhees admitted Friday at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., that steps had been taken to investigate the allegations that the plot to kill King Humbert and other monarchs had been hatched in New Jersey. If the evidence can be procured and there are still some of those concerned living in the state they will be prosecuted. The investigation is not complete, and probably will not be until information from Italy enables it to be conducted minutely.

Washington, Aug. 6.—The king of Italy has sent the following message to President McKinley:

"Monza, Aug. 3.—His Excellency, William McKinley: I heartily thank your excellency and the great American people, who, sharing my grief and that of my country, have strengthened the old bond of friendship existing between the two nations.

"VICTOR EMMANUEL."

Work of Train Robbers.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 6.—A Journal special from Salina, Kan., says: Union Pacific east-bound passenger train No. 4, which left Denver Saturday night, was held up by two men several miles west of Hugo, Col., 90 miles this side of Denver. The passengers in the Pullman sleepers were robbed of their money and valuables, obtaining about $100 in cash, gold watches and jewelry. An old man, named Fay, a resident of California, who had been visiting in Denver and was on his way to St. Louis, refused to surrender his valuables and fired a shot at one of the robbers, but missed. Thereupon the robbers fired, one shot entering Fay's mouth and coming out at the back of his head, killing him almost instantly. The robbers stopped the train, jumped off and escaped.

A Strange Tragedy.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—A duel between a young man and his wife Saturday night ended forever a tale of conjugal misery. Shots were heard on the premises of Arthur Sinclair at Duffryn Mawr. Then there was a scream, and listening passers-by heard no more. Several men who were neighbors went into the garden of the Sinclair premises. In the pathway lay the body of Sinclair, across that of his wife. Both were dead. In the hand of each was a pistol. The affair is a complete mystery.

Alabama Votes.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 7.—A general election for state and county officers and for members of the general assembly was held in Alabama Monday and a large majority was returned for the democratic ticket, headed by William J. Samford, of Lee county, who will be inaugurated governor December 1. The republicans, populists and prohibitionists, besides the democrats, had tickets in the field, but returns so far indicate victory for the democrats by an overwhelming majority.

Death of Ex-Gov. Cox, of Ohio.

Cleveland, Aug. 6.—Former Gov. Jacob D. Cox died Saturday afternoon at Magnolia, Mass. He was governor of Ohio during 1866-67 and was secretary of the interior under President Grant. Until within a few weeks he had made his home at Oberlin. He leaves a son in Cleveland, Jacob D. Cox, Jr.

IN BUSINESS LINES.

Dun Says Encouraging Symptoms May Be Expected in Spite of Declining Prices.

New York, Aug. 4.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "It is often hard to read encouraging symptoms of general business in declining prices of commodities, but just now it is reasonable to look for them. Some raw materials, and some manufactured products one stage removed from the raw, are selling at lower prices than at any time since last year's advance set in; but, there is confidence among buyers that the downward swing is nearly over, while sellers are adopting a cautious policy, which until recently characterized the attitude of buyers.

"Iron and steel markets were startled by reports of sales of steel bars at 90 cents per 100 pounds, but business at the same time was the largest in months at Chicago on a basis of about 1.25. Increasing demand for bar iron from makers of agricultural implements and car builders was a feature, contracts placed being estimated at 110,000 tons in bars and plates. The trade believes that orders will increase as the season advances, and that total needs of iron consumers will compare well with last year.

"Failures for the week were 228 in the United States, against 182 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 23 last year."

Bradstreet's says: "Trade conditions still favor the buyer; general fall demand, though fair in view of midsummer conditions, is still below expectations and below a year ago; bank clearings are at the lowest for two years past, and failures are slightly more numerous, though no marked tendencies are perceptible. On the other hand, gross railway earnings hold the percentage of gain previously shown, and where prices are made low enough to satisfy buyers a heavy business is uncovered and readily booked, pointing to demand being still present and awaiting disposal. The crop situation, as a whole, is better, the outlook as to corn is for a 2,100,000,000-bushel crop. Spring wheat is turning out better in quality and quantity than expected, and there has been an unquestionable improvement in cotton crop conditions. The yield of apples will be the largest for many years, and fruits generally are yielding liberally and commanding good prices. The iron and steel industry furnishes the most notable example of reduced prices, inducing a heavy business, and, while the outlook is still a confused one, the volume of trade in finised material, notably bars and plates, is very large.

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY.

North Carolina Gives Aycock for Governor Nearly 60,000 Votes More Than Opponents.

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 4.—The returns show that democratic majorities in Thursday's election aggregate 64,678 and the fusion majorities are 5,125, making the net democratic majority 59,553. The returns show that to the senate there are elected 38 democrats and nine fusionists, with three seats doubtful, and to the house 95 democrats and 13 fusionists, while 12 seats are in doubt. There was some talk Friday about national politics. This grew out of a rumor that Senator Butler had declared North Carolina's electoral vote would be cast for McKinley. Chairman Simmons said at democratic headquarters Friday night that the state's vote would be cast for Bryan beyond peradventure.

The election practically disfranchises the negro and, as a general thing, they remained away from the polls.

A BRUTAL MURDER.

A Kentucky Widow Is Killed by Her Nephew, Who Confesses the Crime.

Brandenburg, Ky., Aug. 7.—The horribly mutilated dead body of Mrs. Annie Brunton, a widow, 35 years old, was found on the Cedar Grove road Monday morning. Blood stains on the fingers of Mrs. Brunton's nephew, Jesse Durham, caused his arrest, and he later confessed the murder, and was hurried to Louisville by Sheriff Hagan, as a lynching seemed certain. Durham killed Mrs. Brunton with a hickory club while they were returning from a church wedding. He is 27 years old, and recently left an insane asylum. He said of the crime: "I did not mean to kill her; only to knock her down. She had been talking about me and got me into trouble several times."

BUBONIC PLAGUE AT LONDON.

United States Surgeon General Notified That Four Cases Have Occurred.

Washington, Aug. 4.—The marine hospital service has received the following telegram from Past Assistant Surgeon Thomas, announcing the outbreak of the bubonic plague in London:

"London, Aug. 3.—Surgeon General, Marine Hospital, Washington: There have been four cases of plague and two deaths from plague in London. Diagnosis confirmed by bacteriological examination. Do not think there will be further spread.

(Signed) "THOMAS."

Injures Crops.

Alma, Wis., Aug. 3.—The severest hailstorm ever witnessed in Buffalo county passed along its western border Thursday, covering a strip nearly two miles wide, about three miles back from the Mississippi river. The path of the storm extended over about 15 miles through the towns of Nelson, Alma and Belvidere, destroying all grain in its path. Most of the small grain had been cut, but corn and vegetables suffered severely. The damage done amounts to thousands of dollars. Plymouth, Plainfield and Viroqua also report severe storms, which damaged the corn, oats and tobacco crops.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

Ashland, Wis., Aug. 6.—A million dollars is the loss occasioned by Saturday afternoon's fire. The property destroyed includes about 2,000,000 feet of lumber on Barker & Stewart's docks and 3,000,000 on the Keystone docks. The east and west Keystone tramways were also destroyed, all of the Barker & Stewart's tramways except one, and the warehouse and about two-thirds of the Lime, Salt and Cement company's dock.

Town Burned.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 4.—A forest fire at Sopp's Arm, White Bay, has destroyed a large sawmill, several million feet of lumber and a settlement of 120 houses. The whole place was wiped out. A schooner that happened to be landing coal for the use of mail steamers took the residents to a place of safety.

Consul Dies of Cholera.

Caracas, Venezuela, Aug. 3.—Information has reached this place of the death of the United States consul at Barranquilla, Colombia, from cholera. The United States consular list gives the name of W. Irvin Shaw, of Pennsylvania, as consul at Barranquilla.

WHAT SHE WANTED.

And Her Words of Endearment Never Moved the Man Behind the Counter.

A fair young girl, perplexity written on her countenance, confronted the pale young man. He returned her gaze with the impassive stare of one who had never seen her before. Had he? Listen, says the Baltimore American.

In a low, well-modulated voice, without the slightest trace of emotion or excitement, she says:

"I want you, dear heart. I love you, my honey. Come back, my baby. Why did you throw me down? The latch string's always hanging out for you. I've shook that other man. You're the only fellow I love. I don't like no cheap man. I ain't seen no messenger boy. Oh, promise me, and I'll be true to you."

Was he moved? No. His face took on a bored expression, and in a careless tone he asked:

"Is that all?"

"Yes," she half whispered.

"Two dollars and ten cents, please. We are having a special sale on sheet music today, and they are reduced in price. Thank you."

Then they drifted apart, she to practice rag time and he to flit from Beethoven to Williams-and-Walker all for the same salary per week.

Four to One.

An English officer in Malta stopped, in riding, to ask a native the way. He was answered by a shrug of the shoulders and a "No speak English."

"You're a fool, then," said the officer.

But the man knew enough English to ask: "Do you understand Maltese?"

"No."

"Do you know Arabic?"

"No."

"Do you know Italian?"

"No."

"Do you know Greek?"

"No."

"Then you four fools. I only one!"—N. Y. Sun.

Mr. Gump (to teacher)—"No, I don't want you to teach my son any grammar. Not a bit of it." Teacher—"But—but—this is unusual, sir. May I inquire your reasons?" Mr. Gump—"I intend that he shall be a writer of popular songs."—Baltimore American.

NEW POLICE CATECHISM.

Requisites of a Competent Copper as Understood by One of the Finest.

Imagine a class of about 40 stalwart men, each dressed in a blue uniform and attentively listening to the words of wisdom that emanate from the teacher's lips, and you will have some idea of one of Clerk of the Police Board Harrison's school classes. Many ridiculous answers are given to questions and some of them cause roars of laughter to ascend to the ceiling. At a recent class meeting Officer Dan Tehan was asked to describe the requisite of a good policeman. The answer was honesty, sobriety, truthfulness, intelligence and several other virtues, all of which are noticeable in members of the police force, says the Cincinnati Enquirer.

After Tehan had been asked the question he chested out and answered in a sonorous voice.

"Hon-istee! Sobrietee! Troot'fulness! Gude mor-rals! Impar-rtialitee! intelligince! A plazin' addrhriss—an'—er—um—oh! a divil's own slew av t'ings besoides!"

A roar followed the answer, and Clerk Harrison, endeavoring to keep his face straight, asked: "Officer Blanchard, what is extortion?"

And the class broke up when Blanchard's answer smote the air.

It was:

"Extortion is an overloaded stomach."—

At the Restaurant.

First Man (excitedly)—Our restaurant is on fire.

Second Man (calmly)—Come, then, hurry up and perhaps at last we may be able to get something hot.—Pearson's Weekly.

Tears stood in my wife's great, gray eyes. "I am dying to go to the Paris exposition!" she exclaimed. "You are very foolish!" said I, striving to be calm. "If you die, you will go to Heaven!" Recuba bit her lip. It was impossible, of course, to gainsay my logic.—Detroit Journal.

Itching Burning Scaly Blotchy Humors

Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by

Cuticura

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctors after doctor, as I was travelling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change! I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies. H. JENKINS, Middleboro, Ky.

Complete Treatment $1.25,

Consists of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA Ointment (50c.), to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp, and blood humors, rashes, and irritations, with loss of hair, when physicians, hospitals, and all else fail. Sold throughout the world. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston. "How to Cure Itching Humors," free.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

RIPPED OPEN

WIDE, IS THE STATE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN,

And the "Rip" Extends From Some Place Up North, Down to the Eleventh Minneapolis Ward—J. Adam Bede and Steamboater Van Sant as Chief "Rippers"—The "Opening" Much Like Roosevelt's—A Hint of the Big Job Manager Bixby Has on His Hands—Other State and National Political Comment of the Week.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, Aug. 6, 1900.

The event of the week has been the "opening" of the Republican state campaign by the joint efforts of Candidate Van Sant and J. Adam Bede. The "rip" commenced at a place called Frazee City, in the northern part of the state, and extended in a more or less "gaping wound" down to the Eleventh ward in Minneapolis. The lynx-eyed press has failed to record only the briefest outlins of the speeches made by Mr. Van Sant, and not a word, as yet, of the Bede accompaniment.

Captain Van Sant's "opening" commenced with a false quotation of sentiments imputed to Mr. Bryan in the '96 campaign, assuming which to be true the captain said was reason for opposing him. They being false, the inference must be that the captain may be for him. Again falsely quoting Mr. Bryan as saying that we would have "no exports," and sell "no goods abroad" if McKinley was elected, the captain gave the figures of our constantly increasing trade—increasing year by year in the natural growth of the country—crediting McKinley with the total of such trade, some $2,224,000,000. By the same token Cleveland should be credited with our total foreign trade of his administration. Every one knows that the country's commerce increases year by year with increase of population and needs.

At this point the veteran steamboat man is said to have thrown down his written speech and gone into something of personal interest to himself, the chances of his defeat being the uppermost topic. His conclusion was that he would be elected if he got votes enough—if Republicans enough voted for him. The more he dwelt on this phase the more fixed seemed the impression that he would lose, whereupon he observed that if he was to be knifed, the rest of the ticket should be supported, for, he said, in his mind calling the administration of Governor Lind as proof, "We can keep house without a Republican governor." Still further contemplating this probability he urged that he should be elected, lest the appointment of a United States senator fall to the lot of the new governor. "Stranger things than this have happened," said the candidate. Then retrospectively, or as if reimpressed with the gloomy outlook, he repeated: "If I can have the united support of my party I shall win. If I am defeated it will be by Republican votes." And then he said in closing: "Let me say to my Republican friends, who for any reason might vote against me as the head of the ticket, that they should ponder well before doing so."

From all appearances the opening of the Republican state campaign has been as inauspicious as the national opening by Roosevelt has proven frosty and ineffectual.

Captain Van Sant says that when "they" proposed to dismember the Union he threw off his Lincoln campaign cap and put on the uniform of a soldier. "And there are others." And plenty of them voted with the G. O. P. as long as they could possibly do so without stultifying themselves. They belong to the Liberty party now.

And this is as good a place as any to remark that the quotations of Bryan in 1896, used by Republican speakers, among them Van Sant, that if McKinley was elected we would "export no goods, but would import from foreign lands all the goods we would use," are not only false but absolutely silly. In general the predictions made by Mr. Bryan of the results of continuation of the ruinous financial policy were fulfilled to the letter, as witness the greatest failures, and more business disasters for the first two years following McKinley's inauguration than marked the Cleveland panic times. And but for the adoption of the money policy Bryan advocates, of an adequate money supply, at least in part, by the providential increase of gold, and later by an immense inflation of bank paper, the wildest predictions of misery and woe, whether made by Mr. Bryan or others, would have been realized. And let us call a witness, as Candidate Van Sant says, and it will be Van Sant, where he says: "Our money, including paper currency, gold and silver, has become greatly increased since McKinley took the chair." And Van Sant quotes from McKinley's acceptance speech, where he refers to the fact that we now have "more money," than we have had before. "More money and fewer mortgages," McKinley said.

And this is a good place to emphasize that by the Kansas City platform the Democrats are not only pledged to the quantitative theory of free coinage, but to take from the banks the power of issuing their notes, which are not redeemable in anything, and which notes are printed for the banks by the government (thus the people furnishing the money that the banks turn around and loan them for interest) and to issue in place of such notes the money of the government redeemable in gold and silver. That's the point, Mr. Republican. We will give you actually "sound money," instead of this national bank corporation paper, that is not now redeemable in anything, and is not even a legal tender. This is the nub of the Democratic money plank, and one of the reasons for more than reaffirmation of the Chicago platform.

"And never pull down the flag," shouts Van Sant. Well, what would you do in China? Carry it to the heart of the Celestial empire, and create armies to keep it there, or simply let it flap, here and there, as over such roosters as John Goodnow?

Hanna denies that he jumped on Roosevelt about his speeches. Allee samee Rosey is laid off until September, until presumably he can revise and prune.

And speaking of Consul General Goodnow, someone asked the other day if there was really any danger of "General" Goodnow being killed, and a former Republican associate of John's cruelly replied, "Oh, no danger. You know the Chinese don't kill anybody but Christians." Now, wasn't that tough?

Speaking of the Roosevelt speech, we judge that the high jink of the Republican press bureau made a bad mess in sending it out to the state press. Leastwise we have reports from several of the Democratic papers that they received the supplements, which contained both the Roosevelt speech and the manuscript that Senator Nelson read to the listless leaguers. Our boys had no use for them unless for wrapping paper.

Washington Reader: No, when your papers speak of the Powers, they do not mean the Minnesotan in the Merriam census bureau, the dirty work man. They refer to the governments, including McKinley's, whom the heathen Chinee has been making asses of for several long and painful weeks. The Minnesota man is himself a sort of Chinaman, known for his "political ways that are dark, and tricks that are vain."

"D——n the Dutch," shouted an Illinois Republican in the state convention, when Boer resolutions were introduced. "Down with Catholic anti-imperialists and Protestant lovers of the Filipinos," says Paul Van Dervoort, one of the recent Hanna "converts." After all our own William Henry Eustis set the example for them all, when he spoke of Swedes and Norwegians as mere "voting cattle." The latter remembered our Minnesota G. O. P. "leader." What will the other do?

Speaking of Van Dervoort, who appears as a rival to Roosevelt for the place of "Burchard" in this campaign, he is the same Van Dervoort who once, when commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., was kicked out of the government service for cause. He then became a mid-Populist, and thoroughly discredited there, has at last joined Hanna. Good enough.

Speaking of Consul General Goodnow, that functionary is "pictured" by the Philadelphia Record, as a round, sleek, heavy-set man, with heavy, drooping moustache, who is known to be writing away for dear life, under gas light, doing that important "diplomatic intercourse" that the administration is giving him so much praise for. A call bell is at hand for summoning the menials, and there is a big ink stand, presumably loaded to the brim with black, very black ink. Selah!

Speaking of Roosevelt, the shiver he has caused may upset the plan of using rough rider emblems in the campaign. Still the speckled bandanna handkerchief is doing duty as hatband for the goppites, as an offset to which the Democrats will probably don the red, white and blue. Minnesota introduced such hatbands at Kansas City, and they were approved. Put on the colors.

Roosevelt on Democrats—all Democrats—"Dishonest at home and cowards abroad."

The race for the Burchardship in this campaign is a close one between Roosevelt and one Paul Van Dervoort of Nebraska. To date both are neck and neck in violent abuse of Democrats. Van Dervoort having recently professed to have been a Democrat, but Roosevelt is the more respectable virago. Van Dervoort is thoroughly despised by those who know him best, and especially by veterans of the Civil war who knew him as commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

A noticeable feature of the "changes" that the Republicans have professed to find in the McKinley favor, have been of the same unsavory character as the Van Dervoort case, fitting companions for the Neelys, the Rathbones and Carters, and the canned beefers and the horde of department robbers that infest the administration.

Already there is a demand that Van Sant say less of national and more of state issues. And there is no lack. There is Inspector Clausen, and there is Commissioner Mills, and there is railroad taxation. Up and at 'em, Van.

Sept. 6 is the date set for making the winning reform ticket for 1900 by the fusion forces. Remember both the date and prediction.

Let's see. Governor Lind was first elected in 1896, and counted out by the Bixby machine. He was again elected in 1898, and is closing his term as the best governor the state has ever had. In November he will receive his third election and round out a record of state service of which all may well be proud.

The Democratic state organization was perfected at the stated meeting called for Aug. 2, and under auspices most promising for success. The new plan of county representation proved all that has been expected. It was the largest state committee ever organized in the state by any party, and in ability and especially in enthusiasm, will challenge any like gathering. G. S. C.

Histrionic Improbability.

It was during the performance of "Quo Vadis" at Eureka, and Vinicius was begging Petronius to forget his reproaches, saying, tearfully:

"Ah, how can you ever forgive me?"

"Vinicius," replied Petronius, with great earnestness, "thou art my only sister's dead child."

Whereupon the audience, which was not dead, but only bored, burst into huge laughter.—Kansas City Journal.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Hoppers.

At the request of Governor Lind, Otto Lugger, the state entomologist, prepared a circular warning Minnesota farmers against the invasion of grasshoppers and this with an attractive poster giving information as to the only effective remedy. It is feared that an invasion may occur next season. In the vicinity of the Turtle mountains in Manitoba, the hoppers are very numerous this season and as it has been impossible to exterminate them, these may migrate to this state in the early spring. In the western part of the state, where large farms are owned by non-residents, they are breeding in large numbers and may come eastward.

The dangerous species of hoppers invariably choose stubble fields in which to lay their eggs, and for that reason the circular issued by the entomologist urges that farmers plow their stubble fields this fall. The state officers are working on some method by which it will be possible to prevent a migration from outside the state.

May Increase Rates.

The present fee for inspecting grain in carload lots may be increased by the state railroad commission. The fee was 15 cents per car last year. The legislature provided for two state boards of appeal, which materially increased the cost of conducting the grain inspection department, and the fee was increased to 25 cents per car, in order to meet the additional expenditure.

There was a small surplus to the credit of the commission at the time, but the year's grain crop was not so large that the surplus was added to, or even kept up. This year there will be a greater shortage than for some time, and consequently the commission may not derive adequate revenue from inspection. It is strongly intimated that a 25-cent fee will prove insufficient to meet the expenses of the inspection department.

Minnesota Crop Bulletin.

On the whole, the week has been very favorable for work in the harvest fields in all parts of the state. Much of the spring wheat is in shock in southern counties, and harvest is begun in the extreme north. Barley is ripe, and its cutting in central and southern portions is further advanced than is the wheat harvest; much of the barley is in stack. The oat crop is generally poor; large areas of oats have been cut for hay, and a good deal has been harvested, but as the stools seem to be heading well many farmers are waiting for them to ripen before cutting the crop. Early flax is ripening, and a little has been cut. The straw of all grains is very short, and thin on the ground north of the Minnesota valley, and many headers are used to cut the wheat instead of binders, which cannot gather the short straw without considerable loss, and some barley has been mown and stacked loose. The wheat heads have filled well with an excellent quality of grain.

State Cash.

The state's fiscal year ended at the close of business yesterday, with cash deposits in banks amounting to $2,169,337.52.

State Treasurer Keorner's balance sheets show large increases over last year in the permanent university fund and in the permanent school fund, and in other respects the financial condition of the state is satisfactory.

The permanent university fund this year is credited with cash and securities amounting to $925,300. At the close of business a year ago its credit was $839,300. The increase for the past year amounts to $86,000. The permanent school fund amounts to $6,776,767.75, as against $6,074,022.49 last year, an increase of $702,745.26.

Escaped Taxation.

The board of equalization at Duluth, made the discovery that a valuable railroad bridge over which the Northern Pacific road runs to West Superior, has been left off the tax rolls. It had been supposed that it was railroad property and therefore exempt, but it was found that it is in the hands of a bridge company that collects rent for its use from the railroad, and that has been escaping taxation for years. The Duluth half of the bridge, which goes to Superior, will be placed on the rolls.

Walked in His Sleep.

Thomas Miller, a member of the state militia, of Morris, Minn., walked out of a rear window on the third floor of the Mankato hotel, in Minneapolis, early in the morning, and was picked up unconscious on the pavement. His jaw was fractured, several teeth were knocked out and he was otherwise injured. He was taken to the city hospital. It is supposed the accident was due to his walking in his sleep.

MOVING ON PEKING.

Allies Leave Tientsin for the Relief of the Ministers—Belated Message from Conger.

London, Aug. 6.—The American and British forces begun the advance on Peking last Thursday, according to a dispatch, dated August 2, from Tientsin to the Daily Express.

"The main body of allies," continues the correspondent, "marched July 30. Gen. Chaffee was delayed by difficulties of disembarkation. Gen. Dorward (the British commander) had no such obstacles, and his delay is inexplicable.

"The other foreign troops are now half way to Lofa. The force includes 20,000 Japanese, under Gen. Yamachuchi, and 10,000 Russians. The British force totals 9,000, and the other foreign troops are 7,000. We are weak in artillery.

"On August 1 a strong force of Chinese from the native city attacked Tientsin. By a series of brilliant charges our troops drove the enemy from their positions. The native city is still defiant, and the allies are unwilling to march troops through its streets, as this would mean an immense slaughter. When the Chinese saw so large a body of troops marching westward they apparently believed they would have an easy victory over those who were left."

A dispatch to the Morning Post from Chefoo, dated July 30, says:

"The Russians at Tientsin refuse to allow the Americans to put up telephone wires on the railroad poles, and they claim the railroad, which English engineers are ready to work. The situation is critical. The river is full of railroad sleepers. Hundreds of dead bodies of Chinese, some decapitated, are floating in the stream."

Washington, Aug. 6.—A belated message from Minister Conger was received Sunday at the state department. It came through Consul General Goodnow, at Shanghai, who transmitted messages received by Mr. Ragsdale, United States consul at Tientsin, from Mr. Conger and Mr. Squiers, secretary of the United States legation at Peking. In effect the advices are the same as those received a day or two ago by the state department from Consul Fowler, at Chefoo. Mr. Goodnow's message was transmitted to President McKinley at Canton, and Mr. Adee, acting secretary of state, later in the day, issued the following statement concerning it:

"Consul General Goodnow, in a cablegram dated Shanghai, August 5, which was received at the department of state at four o'clock this (Sunday) morning, reports the receipt by Consul Ragsdale, at Tientsin, of messages from Minister Conger and the secretary of the legation, Mr. Squiers, dated July 21, to the following effect:

"'All well. No fighting since the sixteenth by agreement. Enough provisions. Hope for speedy relief.'

"Mr. Goodnow adds that the director of posts, Sheng, had, on the 5th, communicated to him an imperial edict, dated July 30, ordering Jung Lu, to provide an escort for the ministers to Tientsin, when the ministers fix the date. The edict says the ministers can receive messages not in cipher; but notwithstanding this, plain messages were returned to some consuls on August 4."

London, Aug. 7.—A Shanghai special, dated August 6, says: "Li Hung Chang has officially informed the officials that the ministers left Peking for Tientsin last Friday, August 3, with Gen. Yung Lu in command of the escort. The consuls are by no means disposed to credit Earl Li's statement."

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "Active negotiations are proceeding between Russia and the United States, the probable outcome of which will be a resolution to uphold the integrity of China unconditionally."

Washington, Aug. 7.—Interest in the Chinese situation was intensified Monday morning by receipt of two dispatches from naval officers at Chefoo, repeating unofficial but apparently reliable reports of active and extensive hostilities between the allied forces and the Chinese on the line between Tientsin and Peking. The dispatches indicate unmistakably that the relief column has started in earnest and that it is meeting with determined opposition. Although neither of the naval dispatches mentions the presence of American troops in the reported engagement it is generally assumed at the war department that at least a part of Gen. Chaffee's small army was on hand and took an active and aggressive part in the affair.

The dispatches are as follows:

"Chefoo, Aug. 6.—Bureau Navigation, Washington: British Fame reports unofficial engagement at Peitsang, Sunday morning, three to 10:30. Allied loss killed and wounded 1,200, chiefly Russians and Japanese. Chinese retreating.

"TAUSSIG."

"Chefoo, Aug. 6.—Bureau Navigation, Washington: Official report believed reliable, about 16,000 allies heavily engaged Chinese at Peitsang daylight of the 5th.

"REMEY."

From the fact that the engagement lasted 7½ hours, it is argued in the department that either the Chinese must have been heavily intrenched or that there was an immense horde of them to so stubbornly contest the advance of the 16,000 international troops. It is figured by military experts that a loss of 1,200 killed and wounded on the part of the allies probably means a loss of from three to six times as many by the Chinese.

Hanged Herself.

Fort Scott, Kan., Aug. 7.—Miss Katherine M. West, a young woman educator, widely known in the east, committed suicide in an asylum at Ossawatomie, Kan., Monday by hanging herself. As a teacher in New York city, Orange, N. J., and Brideport, Conn., Miss West became prominent in educational circles. She was a graduate of Dupauw university and received the A. B. degree at Ann Arbor.

Troops Called Out.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 6.—Lawless followers of a circus have caused a reign of terror for nearly a week in Cass Lake, Grand Rapids and other towns in northern Minnesota. Their depredations became so serious that residents of these places called upon Gov. Lind Sunday to afford them military protection, and three local companies of the state guard have been ordered out.

Gen. Botha Weakening.

London, Aug. 3.—The Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing Wednesday, says: Commandant Gen. Botha is weakening. He has sent a messenger to Lord Roberts asking for confirmation of the report of the surrender of Gen. Prinsloo and requesting permission to communicate with Gen. Christian De Wet.

Work Resumed.

Lorain, O., Aug. 7.—The Lorain mills, of the Federal Steel company resumed work in all departments Monday, except the blast furnace, with a full force of men. The orders on hand indicate steady work at the mills the remainder of the year.

THERE EVEN DEATH IS SLOW.

Where Insurance Agents Are Willing to Take All Kinds of Risks.

Everybody in the oilcloth and linoleum trade knows "the Potter boys," of Philadelphia and New York. Col. Tom Potter, of the former city, who got his title through a staff appointment by a former governor of Pennsylvania, is a thorough Philadelphian, a firm believer in that town—in all her institutions, big and little, and in her magnificent future, but he always helps to circulate a good story on Philadelphia, just the same, says the New York Commercial.

A hustling "free lance" in the life insurance business was over there the other day trying to write a $20,000 policy in a New York company for a rising young man who holds an important position with the Potter company. This was his third or fourth call, and he had his intended victim almost worked up to the point of signing the application.

"I'll take the policy," he said, "but I don't want it just yet. Wait a few weeks."

"No time like the present time," exclaimed the agent. "Delays are particularly dangerout in life insurance matters. I'll tell you what I'll do in your case—if you'll make the application now I'll carry the policy myself for you for 30 days."

"Oh, I wouldn't have you do that," the young man protested. "I might die within 30 days, and then where would you and your profits be?"

"Oh, that's all right, my boy! I'll take the risk. You won't die that quick. Nobody in Philadelphia ever died in 30 days!"

The American Working Man.

Much comparison has been made between the endurance of the Chinese and the American working man. Those with authority to speak say that the average working man of America is as superior to the Chinese as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is to any other dyspepsia cure. The Bitters does not claim to cure everything, but it does cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles, and prevents malaria, fever and ague.

An Eye for Realism.

The new reporter in his story of the wedding wrote: "The floral display stretched from the chancel rail to the door of the church."

The city editor, in a mild manner, as is the custom of city editors with new reporters, suggested:

"Couldn't you have used a better word than 'stretched?' Say the floral display 'nodded,' or 'twined,' or something like that—some word more suggestive of flowers."

"'Stretched' is all right," replied the new reporter, with the stubborn courage of a realist. "The decorations consisted of six rubber plants, and they had to stretch to go the distance."—Baltimore American.

O--I--C

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an ax to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he expects to derive an extra profit our of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honestly earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of the Cascaret substitutor! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long failed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,

Notre Dame, Indiana.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of St. Mary's Academy which appears in another column of this paper. The 46th year opens September 4th, 1900. We do not need to expatiate upon the scholastic advantages of St. Mary's for the catalogue of the school shows the scope of work included in its curriculum, which is of the same high standard as that of Vassar and Bryn Mawr, and is carried out faithfully in the class rooms. We simply emphasize the spirit of earnest devotion which makes every teacher at St. Mary's loyally strive to develop each young girl attendant there into the truest, noblest, and most intelligent womanhood. Every advantage of equipment in the class rooms, laboratories and study rooms, every care in the matter of food and clothing, and exceptional excellence of climatic conditions—all of these features are found at St. Mary's, in the perfection of development only to be obtained by the consecration of devoted lives to educational Christian work, in a spot favored by the Lord.—The Fine Arts Journal.

"MY OWN SELF AGAIN."

Mrs. Gates Writes to Mrs. Pinkham, Follows Her Advice and is Made Well.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For nearly two and one-half years I have been in feeble health. After my little child came it seemed I could not get my strength again. I have chills and the severest pains in my limbs and top of head and am almost insensible at times. I also have a pain just to the right of breast bone. It is so severe at times that I cannot lie on my right side. Please write me what you think of my case."—MRS. CLARA GATES, Johns P. O., Miss., April 25, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as advised and now send you a letter for publication. For several years I was in such wretched health that life was almost a burden. I could hardly walk across the floor, was so feeble. Several of our best physicians attended me, but failed to help. I concluded to write to you for advice. In a few days I received such a kind, motherly letter. I followed your instructions and am my 'old self' again. Was greatly benefited before I had used one bottle. May God bless you for what you are doing for suffering women."—MRS. CLARA GATES, Johns P. O., Miss., Oct. 6, 1899.

POOR LITTLE JOHNNY!
AND HIS "TUMMY"!

Small boys, and many times large ones, and occasionally girls, too, big and little, suffer terribly from convulsive pains or "cramps" in the bowels and stomach—pain so violent that it "doubles up" the ones attacked, and makes it impossible for them to stand up.

Some people call it colic, but most honest, plain-spoken people call it "belly-ache" and very properly, for the seat of the trouble is in the bowels, and caused by the violent efforts of the bowels to rid themselves of something which doesn't belong there. The small boy usually gets it from over-eating or from eating forbidden fruit, and suffers mostly in the summer time.

It's spring now, and "in times of peace, prepare for war." Let the boys and girls and the big folks, too, for that matter, clean out the clogged channels filled with winter bile and putrid undigested food, strengthen the 30-feet of bowel canal, liven up the liver, and "summer bellyaches" will have no terrors, because they won't happen. The way to make the body ache-proof is to use CASCARETS, gentle, sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, the perfect system cleaners and bowel strengtheners. For fear that anybody in the family should ever be attacked by belly-ache, keep a box of CASCARETS in the house always, and remember that all pains and troubles in your insides are

DELANO, FRIDAY, Aug. 10, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Joseph Niestroy reshingled his dwelling this week.

--Bartlett Bros. are building a new flouring mill in connection with their feed mill.

--The South River street concrete sidewalk has been extended past John R. Sturman's home.

—A few more Sundays like last Sunday and the populace will be ready to vote no more saloons in Delano.

--Lightning killed a mare and colt for Sam Couplin, on his farm in the Rader neighborhood, Monday evening.

—The Christian Endeavor will serve icecream and cake on the lawn in front of the residence of Mr. Parslow Friday evening.

—At a special meeting of the Village council, on Saturday evening, license to sell intoxicating liquors for one year was granted J. L. Stein.

--Messrs Lowe and F. Wegan and son, of Buffalo, moved the old Roehl building for O. L. Billings lately, onto the old Valentine Eppel corner.

—The rains this week ensure late pasturage, second crop hay, and good corn. Farmers are correspondingly happy and we don't hear so much about selling off the cows.

—Waterworks in South Delano are apt to wait another year if bonds have to be voted to put them in. Delano voters have all the bonds to pay they care to have, just at present.

--News from the Sturman telephone line says Clark is married; been married for months, and has now brought his wife and daughter home. "Better late than never."

—The Delano Cemetery Association held its regular meeting on Monday evening. Several lots have been paid for recently and the Association is financially better fixed than ror a long time.

--The lots on S. Third street formerly owned by the late J. W. Powers, were sold by order of Judge of Probate yesterday, for $600, to Earl Hoisington, of Independence. Mr. H. is expecting to build one of the finest modern residences in town and have a fine home.

--Joseph Brenner yesterday brought to town a bunch of millet hard to beat. From one seed grew 66 stalks with heads, the whole making a fine handful of feed. When such fodder can be grown, in a dry year like this there ought to be no fear of stock starving.

—The Board of Education met Saturday evening at the City Hall. All present but I. Gutzwiller absent on account of sickness. The board reorganized by electing President, A. L. Mealey; Secretary, Adam Horsch; Treasurer, John E. Borsch. The time of holding monthly meetings was changed to the first Monday evening of each month.

—People are getting too lax about obseving some of the ordinances and laws. There is an ordinance against riding bicycles on the sidewalk. A five dollar fine or two would serve to call attention to the fact that there is an ordinance. Then shooting in town is breaking an ordinance. Yet several men and boys have been seen shooting on the streets or in the middle of town.

—On Monday evening at about 8 o'clock, during the storm, the fire companies learned that the barn of Mrs. Frances Cebula, on the west side had been struck by lightning and was burning. The hook and ladder company responded to the call and saved the house. The barn, six head of cows, four hogs and a lot of chickens, with hay and feed were burned. Some insurance was carried.

—Delano, not to be behind other villages has a case of mysterious disappearance. On Sunday, July 29, a man put up at the Gilmer Hotel, writing on the register, J. B. Meyers, aida, minn. He claimed to be a detective, and to be looking for the parties that robbed an old lady near Minneapolis. In the morning he sauntered forth early to look up and down the railroad for the robbers. "And he never came back".

—On Sunday morning while a couple of loads of young people were returning home from John Sleights in Rockford, on the hill near the Presbyterian church, a very lucky accident occured. Lucky in that no one was killed. The wagon driven by Earl Jones, containing 10 passengers, turned entirely over, leaving the former occupants on the ground. Misses Molly Maxfield and Lyda Bergren are the only ones much hurt. They are recovering.

—The Dassel Anchor in writing up a fire at that place last Sunday night, which burned Linquist Bros. hardware store, incidently remarked that: "The Dassel fire appratus is a peach! The pressure developed Sunday night threw a stream nearly three feet from the end of the nozzel! The Dassel fire department couldn't put out a blaze in a street lamp". Surely this must be a little exaggerated. Anyway the Delano fire company can beat that all to pieces. Fire appratus like other things needs overhauling and keeping in order.

—Lightning killed three calves for Joseph Matter, Jr., on the Martin Conzet farm in Greenwood a few days ago.

—Longosh vs Mayer, suit for damages by cattle, in Justice Walter's court was tettled today. Suit withdrawn; plaintiff paying costs.

—Reider Bros., butchers at Rockford, took home from Delano a couple of fine beaves one day this week. R. Muckenhirn sold them.

—School begins early next month. Pupils should be ready to take up work the first day of the term and be on hand punctually and regularly during the term.

—There seems to be a superabundance of freight cars on the G. N. just at present. Eighty cars makes a long train, and then the sidings are kept pretty well filled.

—Carver's camp soon got rid of the mosquitoes last night. A good smudge did the business. Wash Rader still holds the belt for the biggest corn tale; he's got down to the cob.

—Several farmers have threshed. Providence has kindly kept them from having a surplus of grain, requiring an outlay of ready cash, for lumber, with prices built on $2 per thousand tariff. Providence can beat even trust.

—The Saint Cecilia Club will give a midsummer recital in the City Hall, Tuesday evening, Aug. 14. These recitals are open to the public and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the cause for which the club exists.

—In a letter to a Delano friend Dr Jennner P. Chance, Assistant Physician to the Penitentiary, at Stillwater, says: "I will be up and vote for Bryan, Nov. 6." He got his eyes opened on his Philippine trip. It took considerable to open them, but they are wide enough now.

—News comes from Burdock Park, James D. Young's pet name for his fine farm adjoining Delano that notwithstanding the dry season he threshed eight and a half bushels of wheat to the acre. And he claims the finest corn in the county for this or any other season. Mrs. Y. too has chickens and "garden sass" to beat the "Dutch".

--John Catlin, Glen Wilder and Oscar Erwig, of Delano, arrived in St. Peter on Thursday last and remained until Monday, and were the guests of Miss Edna Coffin. They came on their wheels from Delano, a distance of 65 miles, and left here for a trip into Iowa before returning home. A picnic was given at Lake Emily on Friday afternoon in honor of the young men, and on Saturday evening Miss Coffin gave a bicycle party for her guests, which was enjoyed by a large party, and after which a social time and fine refreshments were served at the home of Miss Coffin.--St. Peter Tribune.

County Cullings.

Honest, reliable, trustworthy men are more in demand for candidates for office than are "sharpers". Sharpers are apt to look out for their individual aggrandizement.

County Commissioner Flannigan, of Waverly, and Adam Wood, of Otsego, were Delano visitors Wednesday. We suspect they were piling up a few chips under the political cauldron.

While Ennis Brandon, of Annandale, was in town recently, several voters were heard to remark that he would make a good Sheriff. He is a big, husky fellow and would doubtless fill the bill as well as any one.

Lightning struck the $10,000 Stevenson building at Cokato, Tuesday morning. The cupola was injured most, only small damage resulting, probably $175. The building was struck twice before, one killing Mr. Stevenson's eldest son, several years ago.

People are beginning to learn the importance of the office of county commissioner, and the necessity of having sober, honest, reliable men on the board. They have a great deal to do with the expending of the money gathered by taxes, and with other county affairs. Only men you can trust in every respect should be elected.

Wright county is entitled to two representatives in the Legislature of the state. Our state is large, and many interests are to be looked after. Our county is large and should be represented ably. Men who will carefully watch that no such laws be passed, as that allowing people to be deprived of their property for taxes, and which has been declared unconstitutional; men who will conscientiously work for the best interests of the state and the people, who will help look after railroads, grain buyers, and others, and see that they have their rights as well as give rights to those with whom they deal. Men who will help see that appropriations of state money be made as judiciously and economically as it can be, and that taxation is nat exhorbitant, should be elected.

Personal.

John Steffes visited the cities this week.

Jim Richmond has been on the sick list this week.

Ennis Brandon, of Annandale, was a Delano visitor Saturday.

Miss May Staples, of Howard Lake, visited Delano roistives this week.

George Ruppelius, of Frankfort, was a Delano visitor this morning.

Mrs. W. W. Palm and children came up from Minneapolis this morning.

Lydia Bergren, who was injured in the Rockford accident is about again.

N. K. Coffin and Frank Yantos went to Great Falls last week to work.

Dr. J. S. Shrader and family came on last nights train from Appleton, Wis.

Charles M. Conzet made an important business visit to Minneapolis Wednesday.

Mrs. Alice Burnes and children went to Minneapolis Tuesday for a short visit.

A. W. Rader and wife, of Sauk Center, visited Delano and Rockford friends this week.

Dr. H. E. Shrader, of Watertown, came up from Minneapolis on his way home yesterday.

Delmont Gould will ship his threshing outfit to DeGraffs soon and help out the prairie farmers.

C. D., George, and Ves Fredericks, of Rockford, transacted business in Delano one day last week.

John McGary and Henry Fogleman and family, of Independence, were Delano visitors Wednesday.

Warren Merriman has been confined to the house this week by sickness. He is convalescing.

Miss Josie Coffin, of Ida Grove, Iowa, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Edna Coffin.--St. Peter Tribune.

Landlord John C Arup, of the Meister Hotel smiled on the traveling public several days this week.

Wash Rader has rented his fine Third street residence to Stanley Day, and expects to live in Minneapolis this winter.

Sam Pappe and wife, of Hancock, on their way east for a vacation, stopped over Tuesday night with Geo. W. Bolton.

S. H. Dyer and his youngest son, of Excelsior, visited Delano friends and looked after the Terwall farm a little this week.

Fred C. Kospohl is now acting landlord at the Meister Hotel. Fred will look after customers promptly and obligingly.

Mrs. Joseph Matter was in town today for the first time in several weeks. She is better looking since the poison ivy swelling subsided.

Mrs. Lillie Smith and Miss Julia Cunningham drove to Watertown Wednesday morning to see their aunt Elizabeth Cunningham, who is quite sick.

John Cunningham left Monday morning for Maine on a visit. It is over forty years since he left there. His daughter Julia accompanied him to Minneapolis returning home in the evening.

Oscar Erwig, Glen Wilder and John Catlin returned home, Wednesday evening from a week's bicycle trip to St. Peter, Mankato, Owatonna, Faribault, Northfield, Stillwater and other points of interest. They say they had a fine time.

No Relative School Teachers.

Osakis Review: The attorney general has recently rendered a decision to the effect that no relative of a member of the school board can be legally elected to the position of teacher by the board of which her relative is a member. Among relatives are included those related by marriage as well as by blood.--Long Prairie Leader.

Democracy.

Webster defines democracy:

1. Government by the people; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained and directly exercised by the people.

2. Government by popular representation; a form of government in which the supreme power is retained by the people, but is indirectly exercised through a system of representation and delegated authority periodically renewed; a constitutional representative government; a republic.

3. Collectively the people, regarded as the source of govern ment.

4. The principles and policy of the Democratic party, so called (U. S.).

Are you a democrat? If not, why not?

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

In each county in the state a Convention shall be held on Thursday, the 30th day of August, A. D. 1900, at such hour and in such place in each of said counties as the county committee thereof may designate.

All Democratic conservative reform citizens of the State of Minnesota, irrespective of past political associations and differences, who will unite with us in the effort for pure, economical and constitutional government, and who favor the Republic and oppose the Empire, are cordially invited to join us in sending delegates to these conventions.

Dated at Minneapolis, Minnesota, this 19th day of June, A. D. 1900.

By the direction of the Democratic State Central Committee.

L. A. ROSING,
Chairman Democratic State Central Committee.
T. R. KANE,
Secretary Democratic State Central Committee.

ROCKFORD.

The village school will commence on Monday, Sept. 10. Prof. L. H. Pryor, as principal retires, and is succeeded by Mr. A. D. Griffin, of Mankato. Mr. Griffin comes highly recommended but all real friends of good schools are sorry to part with Mr. Pryor. But he is anxious to take more lessons in teaching and will attend the State University during the next year. In the two years that he has been principal of our school he has been a success in every particular and he leaves it a model school. Very much of a change in two years. Miss Mary E. O'Connor has been engaged for another year (the second) for the intermediate department, and Miss Rebecca Schmith, for the primary department, the third year. We expect a very successful school year.

Mr. Delmont Gould has been running his threshing machine during the past week. The reports are from all that have threshed from 9 to 11 bushels to the acre. The average is about 10 bushels, all wheat, no oats.

J. W. Thompson is moving his saw mill to Tamarack on the Northern Pacific R. R. He has sent eight loads of machinery to Big Lake, and has two loads to send today, and a car load at Minneapolis.

At the next general election a county commissioner for the third district and a county surveyor. These are both important offices to be filled. Politics should have nothing to do with either of the offices. We want good capable men who understand the wants and the welfare of the public. It is supposed that the next legislature will make some radical changes in our road laws. The present system of road making is doomed, and in the near future the public highways will be under the supervision of the county surveyor and county commissioner, with perhaps a deputy surveyor, and a road commissioner in each town in the county. It is important then that the best men for these offices should be selected, nominated at the convention and elected. For the third district commissioner, Mr. Charles Bugbee, of this town would fill the bill in every respect. He is well acquainted with the wants and needs of all parts of the county. He knows every bridge culvert and creek, and every piece of bad road, swamp and mud hole in the county. There are other good men in the district but with most of them it would take two or three years to learn what Mr. Bugbee knows about the county and be ready to act at once for the good of all. There has been an attempt to find fault with him in the past for overcharges for commissioners fees but the charges were made by those who wanted the office and never had any foundation. We know that Mr. Bugbee worked for the benefit of the people of Wright county many days and traveled many miles without making any charges. About the county surveyor, next week will do, as we have quite a little to say on the subject.

The hottest campaign of all is hastening on. Subscribe for a Democratic newspaper, the Buffalo Gazette, $1.00 per year.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug 3 1900.

Mr. McKinley has come to Washington again; not to do anything in connection with the desperate situation of Americans in China—our minister was alive at last accounts, but he and other Americans were in the greatest danger, and a number of Americans were known to have been butchered—but rather to see that nothing is done that might bring the situation to a climax before the election. While making all sorts of professions about what it is doing and what it is going to do, the real policy of this administration is to keep the whole Chinese business hanging until the campaign is over. That is why Secretary Hay and other members of the Cabinent have been on the most chummy terms with the Chinese minister at Washington, while the Chinese ministers to every European nation have been treated by those governments as in disgrace and as representing a government which is responsible for the buchery of foreigners in China. If Mr. McKinley and his advisers can think up something to do that will serve as republican campaign thunder it will be done; otherwise not.

Chairman Jones of the Democratic National Committee, stopped in Washington on his way from New York to Chicago to hold a conference with Chairman Richardson, of the Democratic Congressional campaign committee. He is very confident and believes that the tendency of public opinion is strongly turned toward democracy. Among other reasons for his belief he gave these: "I believe that the imperial policy of the present administration is more heartily condemned by the great mass of the people than any other important position assumed by any party for many years past, and the evident intention of the administration to organize a great standing army is also popularly disapproved of".

The Anti Imperial League, of Washington, sent a rather warm open letter to Senator Hoar, from which the following is taken: "In your public utterances you have most solemnly declared that this policy of the President, if pursued 'will be the abandonment of principles upon which our government is founded; that it will change our republic into an empire; that our methods of legislation, of diplomacy, of administration must hereafter be those which belong to empires and not those which belong to republics.' Nevertheless, with a full knowledge of these consequences, you have faced about and declare your intention to support the man who gives us notice that if elected he will continue his attrocious policy. Today, in your apostasy, you announce yourself upon the side of those who would betray our country from within".

Representative McCulloch, of Ark. gives the following substantial reasons for his belief that Bryan and Stevenson will be elected: "Bryan will carry all the states he carried in 1896, and at least half a dozen that were carried by McKinley. The democrats have a good fighting chance of carrying New York, but Bryan can be elected without the electoral votes of the Empire state. The total number of votes in the electoral college is 447. Four years ago Mr. McKinley had 271 and Bryan 176, a majority for McKinley of 95. It will be seen that a change of 48 electoral votes is all that is necessary to elect Bryan. I figure that the 13 votes of Kentucky, 12 of which in 1896 were for McKinley, will this year be for Bryan. Of the other States carried by McKinley four years ago, Bryan will this year carry Maryland with its 8 votes, West Virginia with 6, Indiana with 15, Michigan with 14, and Minnesota with 9. This will give a total of 64 votes, which will change from the McKinley to the Bryan column, or 16 more than Bryan needs to assure his election. He can fail to carry any one of the six states I have named and yet be elected." Mr. McCulloch is also confident that the democrats will control the next House.

Hon. Woodson, National Committeeman from Kentucky, was one of the breezy visitors to democratic headquarters this week. He said the Ky. democrats would carry the State to a certainty this year and that they would do it without any outside financial help. He also said that during several days spent in New York City and nearby summer resorts he had been surprised at the extent of republican opposition to McKinley from solid business men who had enthusiastically supported him four years ago.

The Democratic Congressional Committee has filed a formal protest with the Post Office Department against the seemingly concerted action of republican postal officials to "lose" sacks of literature sent out by the committees to state and county committees. Officials of the committee say that during the past month at least one hundred sacks, each containing from a thousand to fifteen hundred documents, have been mysteriously "lost" after being mailed in Washington. An investigation has been promised by the Post Office Department and one if being conducted by the committee which may result in striped suites for those who violate the law by tampering with the mails.

JOHN J. INGALLS, late Senator from Kansas, and a famous orator died Aug. 16 at East Los Vegas, N. M., where he went for his health.

THE sixth district Congressional Convention will be held at Aitkin, Sept. 5. The state convention at St. Paul, Sept 6. Then the campaign will be on in earnest.

WHY are protectionists so awfully particular as to whether our home market is protected by tariff, or by silver dollars, good at home, but which they claim, are not good abroad?

NEW acquisitions to the Bryan column are Burt Cockran, W. A. Croffut, eminent New Yorkers, ex-Governor Boutwell, of Massachusetts, President Grant's old Secretary of the Treasury, and many others.

REPUBLICAN papers are citing Henry Keller, of St. Cloud, and Judge Flandrau, of St. Paul, as converts to McKinley. Both were against Bryan before. Flandrau was for McKinley then. Where is the gain?

REPUBLICAN newspapers are kicking awfully at having John S. Vandiver dish up their stereotyped editorials on political matters. But the state central committee have him employed, and they must learn to submit. It's imperialism pure and simple boys, and that's what you advocate. Take your medicine or vote for Bryan.

THE important question for voters to decide at the coming election seems to have narrowed down to, shall the United States continue as a Republic, or shall it become a monarchy? Can any intelligent, loyal voter refrain from using his influence and his vote in favor of continuing the government of the people, for the people, and by the people?

IF a man believes that 50 per cent tariff on imports is the best thing for the country, and for him, because it keeps foreign goods out, and creates a market for our own at home, he has an American's right to vote for the party that represents that principle.

If he believes that if our dollars are made of gold, and of silver, and according to the laws of our land, one dollar will pay a debt as well as any other dollar will pay it, that a gold dollar and a silver dollar are equal in the eyes of the law, he has an American's right to vote for the party that advocates that doctrine.

THE Roosevelt rough rider clubs being organized all over the country are sure to do the opposite of what they are intended to do. They are of course intended to attract voters. A few young men may be attracted by the military display, but many, very many old soldiers from foreign lands will recall the big armies and the big expense of keeping them, where they came from; and many boys who enlisted to free Cuba, and were held for months to help conquer the Philippines or to open the door of China will think of what is meant by militaryism and having strong predelictions for peace they will say nothing but quietly determine to vote against such things.

"ETERNAL vigilance is the price of liberty". If we love liberty; if we appreciate the blessings handed down to us by noble men who fought, who sacrificed their all, their lives, that our country might be free from tyranny, free from foreign rule, we should carefully watch for the smallest threatening cloud on the horizon, and should as promptly as the minute men of the Revolution shouldered their guns, and as zealously as they marched out to meet the enemy, find our way to the polls and deposit our carefully marked ballot in favor of a free country and free institution. After the game has fled from us is a poor time to shoot. After the country is no longer a republic would be a poor time for us to cry out against the wrongs. Let us study well the situation. Let us know individually where we stand. Let us not be deceived. Let us watch and work for a continuance of the blessings of liberty. Let us remember that we have not done our whole duty when we have decided rightly, until we have voted as we know we should vote. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

What's the Difference?

If a protective tariff keeps foreign goods out of the country and is a good thing, why would not silver dollars, that are good in this country (but which gold bugs claim would not be taken in other countries) be as good a protection as could be devised?

Of Two Evils Choose the Less

If you think free coinage of gold and silver at the present ratio of 16 to 1 is threatening the commercial interests of our country, and that military and imperialistic tendencies are threatening to change the form of government from a republic, governed by ourselves, by our votes, into a monarchial form of government, where we may not have a vote, or where our children may be made soldiers to fight wars of conquest we must choose which we prefer.

Is it not fair to presume that so long as we have a republic we have an opportunity to correct any blunders or mistakes that we may make as to financial or commercial affairs? But should we make our country over to militaryism and imperialism once, how could we hope to ever change anything again? Would not commercial, financial, military and all other affairs be looked after without us having to trouble our brains to think what is best, or our bodies to go to the polls and cast a ballot for what we love, institutions of a free and independent government.

Republican Inconsistency.

Republicans insist that not one iota of the "protective system" shall be surrendered; but that a tariff shall be kept on imports from other countries sufficient to "protect" our laborers in good wages in this country. In order that our manufacturers may compete with foreigners in their business, we must keep up the protective system; that we may have "home markets", and "keep our money at home".

In the next breath they inform us that we must have money, "money that is good the world over"; that England will accept. We must have a gold standard. Of course, they say silver would do at home, but in order to keep up "our commercial relations" with foreign countries we must have gold money; "money any country will accept."

If we build a tariff wall to keep our money at home, why should we make gold dollars to do business with other nations?

If we are sincere in our desire to aid the laboring man; in our wish that, he may have high wages, and a market for his goods, ought we not to allow any one who has what he wants, or needs and must have, to come and do business with him, without having over 50 per cent added to the cost of the goods they bring to exchange with him, and of course which he must pay himself, when he trades? Does it help the laborer to pay the 50 per cent tariff? Does it increase the purchasing power of his daily wages, or does it decrease it, while it allows the wealthy whose incomes are more than they can use in a year, to escape paying for government protection for their wealth?

Is it aiding the laborer to shut him out of the rocky mountain silver mines and cause him to seek employment elsewhere, or go hungry, while our monopolies "do business" on a "gold basis" with "dollars good in any country", but awfully scarce at home? Would it not be better for our laborers to dig our own silver mines over, and make good wages, and procure money of our own; good money wherever the United States government is amind to say it is good, than to be obliged to do business on paper, paying for the books on which they write their checks, and for collection; for stamps to carry on a "bushwhacking" campaign in foreign lands, costing on small checks from one to four per cent to get gold after they have the checks in hand? Why have expensive money; money dear to the small handler for the sake of building up those who have wealth, and to spare? Why have a costly national banking system where money can be issued by individuals when they please? Why have it in the power of the United States Treasurer to sell bonds whenever he chooses, the interest on which the poor people of the country must pay in gold coin?

When Gen. Grant expressed his pride in our silver mines, because he thought they would help us pay off our war debt, didn't he express the honest sentiments of the American people of today, as well as of his day?

Wouldn't it be consistent for those who want protective tariff to build up a home market, to also want money that other nations won't accept for their goods? Are those who favor a protective tariff and say that other countries wouldn't accept our silver dollars honest, or are they inconsistent?

When Republicans Get Out.

"It's pretty tough on John Lind to reflect that this is a presidential year and that Van Sant might run 40 000 votes behind McKinley and still have a nice snug majority. It's no fun running on a fusion ticket in Minnesota when the whole Republican vote gets out."—Duluth News Tribune.

Hasn't the News Tribune and other G. O. P. papers been for two years accusing the republicans of electing John Lind governor. Suppose all the republicans do turn out this year, isn't there danger of their electing him again, and the whole ticket, even to Bryan electors? What's to hinder?

Minneapolis Tribune: Sir Vernon Harcourt told some plain and unpalatable truths the other day during a debate in the house of commons. He said that the British are the best hated people in the world, and that for the last 20 years Great Britain has been living hands with almost fanatic eagerness on every desirable tract of territory adjacent to its own. He declared that this greed excites envy and stands in the way of domestic reform.

Germans for Bryan.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 29.—"There can be no doubt of the attitude of the German press regarding the McKinley policy of imperialism. The Wisconsin German Press association has just closed its session at Madison. Out of twenty five of the editors who were interviewed there was but one or two who had any defense to make or any apology for the administration mistakes in the Philippines or other new possessions. Almost invariably the editors said the Germans in their localities were strongly opposed to imperialism in any form, and that they would vote and work for the election of Bryan and the whole democratic ticket.

Among those interviewed were the following:

Emil Wittzrak, editor of the Fountain City Republican, said:

"If the people of the United States see what is to their own advantage, they will overlook 16 to 1 and elect the democratic national ticket on the issue of imperialism."

C. Roemer, editor of the Appleton Wecker, said: "I am a democrat and believe in all the principles set forth in the platform."

F. Markus, editor of the Medford Waldbote, said: "My paper will support the democratic ticket. The prevailing sentiment among the Germans in our part of the state is against imperialism."

Gerhard A. Kuehn, of the LaCrosse Nordstern: "Our paper is republican in a general way but is against imperialism."

Henry Bent, of the Racine Correspondent, said: "I am not in politics. My paper is independent, but we are against imperialism. The sentiment among the German Americans in Racine is bitter against it.

Carl Fehlandt of the Port Washington Zeitung: "We are all Democrats in my part of the county. The German sentiment is all against imperialism."

J. H. Gerlek of the Duluth and Superior Volksfreund said: "My paper is independent, but is against McKinley and imperialism. I believe the German papers are all against imperialism at heart."

F. C. Bliedt of the Wisconsin Botschafter of Madison said: We are opposed to imperialism in each and every one of its phases. We shall support Bryan to the last ditch, as we did in 1896."

J. J. Auer of the Eau Claire Herald said: "I am against imperialism first, last and all the time. My paper will support Bryan. German sentiment in my district is all against McKinley.

F. W. Sollett, of the Lincoln County Anzeiger, Merrill, Wis., said: "Almost every German who came here from the old country did so to escape militarism. They have known imperialism in its worst form. They love the free institutions of the republic and feel that imperialism can have no place in a republican form of government."—St. Cloud Times.

THE MIGHTY MEN OF MARS.

Perhaps the men of Mars are blessed with telescopic eyes
And clearly see us without lens through distance or disguise—
A thousand years ahead of us in science, skill and art,
Familiar with great mysteries in each minutest part;
Anticipating our inventions of the present day,
And seeing clearly through us with perfected Roentgen ray.

With them our schemes electric may be stories stale and old;
Perhaps they cheaply manufacture diamonds, gems and gold.
Have patent things electric which would make us earthworms stare,
May navigate with ease the ocean depths and upper air;
Have patent baby-tenders bringing up their babies bright,
Housekeepers run by magnets and machines which banish night.

Electric politicians which save all the wear and tear
That here make bosses coruscate, fret, worry, fume and swear;
Strange telepathic pathways which transmit a silent thought,
And dynamic propellers which make folks do as they ought;
Electric aggravators to make criminals reform,
Electric weather-breeders which produce the calm or storm.

It must be quite amusing for such knowledgeous sharp folks
To note what earthly sparklers call good sermons or good jokes,
For they, of course, have microphones which magnify all sound
And coax a whisper from the earth through star-spaces profound;
Electric gizzards probably discount dyspepsia's bites,
Electric livers may be theirs, likewise electric lights.

We earth folks boast of wisdom and advancement in all things,
And still we have not yet produced a trusty pair of wings!
We may be dull and backward beside folks on other stars,
Mere kindergarten gropers as compared with men of Mars.
It's rather vain to hug ourselves in pride of brain and birth,
To think all wisdom stuck to this small-sized but uppish earth.

Men Sevenspot Has Met

A Soldier in the Philippines Talks of Statesmen.

UP at Isabela the other day Private Sevenspot, of the 'Steenth infantry, and I were loafing on the shady side of the schoolhouse trying to keep cool. This is the hottest month in the year over there, but there is usually a ghost of a breeze on the shady side of things, says a Philippine correspondent of the New York Sun. I was pumping one of my native schoolboys about the reverse curves of the Visayan lingo. That was before I was deposed as schoolmaster at Isabela to become company clerk at Binalbagan. Sevenspot was reading a newspaper from the states. After awhile he threw aside the paper, shook himself to get rid of ants that were exploring his anatomy and said:

"Jack, me bye, th' 'ta-wo' that wrote 'Lorna Doone' do be dead and gone. Did ye happen to read it? Ye did. Shure, an' it were a foine fightin' book. Me bye, av ye could write th' loikes av thot ye could stop chewin' government rations th' morrow. I niver read it mesilf until I were 30. I'd not have read it thin, but for a daft ould 'ta-wo' I met up with in Philadelphy. I took me lasht 90-day furlough in thot man's town. For pwhy? Shure, I'd gone up th' pole, which manes thot I'd quit drinkin', an' I wanted to go to a restful place, pwhere I'd not run into timptation.

"Wan day I were ridin' downtown from Dootchtown upon a bobtail strate car. It were so cold thot there were icycles upon th' coal wagons, and th' natives were goin' surf bathin' in th' snowdrifts. Th' car were crowded an' ivery sate occupied, whin th' ould gintleman I'm tellin' av boarded th' car. He were th' queerest ould 'ta-wo' I iver lift-dressed with. He wore a long white beard that raiched to th' waist av him. An' he'd tied it benaith his chin with a wee bit av blue ribbon an' tucked it insoide av his frilled shirt bosom. Th' hair av him were washed white in th' laundry av ould Father Toime, an' he lucked loike an advertoisin' picture av Santa Claus with th' overcoat an' fur-topped boots lift out. It were thot coold thot th' passengers kept batin' toime with their toes, loike th' push at a beer hall whin th' lady with hemp hair plays th' pianny; but th' ould gintilmin wore low-cut shoes an' a vest with but two buttons to it. I mistook him for a major giniral in his civilians at th' laste. An' I stood up an' saluted an' gave him me sate. A couple av blocks beyant a man besoide him got out an' I tuck his sate. Thin th' ould gintilmin opined foire at close range. Said he:

"'This will be remoindin' you av th' could winter described in "Lorna Doone."'

"An' said I: 'Th' deuce it will!'

"'Yis,' said he, 'supposin', av course, thot ye've read th' book.'

"With thot I tould him he could fade th' lasht two buttons forninst his vest that I hadn't. An' thot it took all me idle momints to rade army orders an' riglinshuns.

"'Shure,' said he, 'I were bethinkin' me thot you were a soldier. An' thot's the rejson I spoke of "Lorna Doone." 'Tis a foine, wild tale with some good, healthy foightin' in it.'

"Thin he tuck to relatin' bits av the story an' tellin' me about London an' the counthry lanes av Devonshire with its barks av primroses, till I almost wisht thot I were an Englishman meself. An' thin he wint on to say that he were th' ownly American thot iver danced with Quane Victoria. With thot, av coorse, I raymized thot th' ould gintilmin had friction-primers in his head. But he were th' most intertaining loo-natic thot I iver stacked guns with. An' thot do be sayin' a hape whin a man's been in th' army for twinty-odd years. At lasht th' ould gintilman came partly out av his drame an' said he must get off at th' nixt sthrate crossing. So with thot, jist to say whether he would say George Washington or Benedict Arnold, I asked him his name.

"'Frind, soldier,' said he, 'I'm th' ownly mimber av congress thot iver had his hat counted to make a quorum in th' house av riprisintatives.'

"With thot he pulled off his hat an' showed it to me, an' said he:

"'Thot do be the identical hat. It were Tom Reed, thot mayhap ye've heard av, thot did th' countin'. An' shure, soldier, he were not far wrong. For thot hat impty contains as much as th' hat av th' average mimber av congriss with his head in it. Ye asked for me name. 'Tis Richard Vaux, and cinturies ago me ansisthors in ould Normandy were foightin' min loike yoursilf.'

"I could say thot th' ould gintilmin were gettin' violent, so I rang th' bell an' helped him off th' car. Shure, he were a most divertin' loo-natic an' I could have listened to th' ravin's av him for hours. An' th' pcipe he'd tould about 'Lorna Doone' made sich an impression upon me thot I wint to a bookshop an' asked for th' book. There were a shure-enough book be thot name, an' I bought an' read it. Jack, me bye, thot loonatic's head may have been out av alignment on some things, for he had quare drames about Quane Victoria an' his blanked old sombrero, but he could get th' range av a good book at wan thousand yards. Th' noight I finished readin' it I wint out an' thumped th' pervarsity out av two bar-kaypers an' wan polaceman before they landed me in th' station house."

Sevenspot spread his newspaper for a blanket and curled up on it.

"There do be quare loo-natics," he continued, "in civil life. There do be civilians running loose phwat would be in the guardhouse the first day, av they enlisted. Wan toime whin I were on furlough I wint to a big swimmin' hole called Cape May. Pwhile I were there I met twilve differerent loo-natics an' aich of thim thought he were a congressman. Th' first mornin' I wint at daybreak for me swim. There were a little runt of a man there before me. He had a brown beard and spindle legs. Whin the wather got a grip on him he started for Europe, with no hopes av iver sayin' his native land again. With that I wint in and brought him out. Whin he'd coughed up th' salt wather thot were in him, said he:

"'Me frind, I'm under dape obligashuns to you. Me name do be Cannon, Joseph Cannon, an' for 30 years I've been chairman av the committee av appropriashuns in congriss. Av there do be anny little thing I can do for you, jist spake up.'

"With thot I told him thot 'twould be kindly av him to put through a bill

"I WENT IN AND BROUGHT HIM OUT."

makin' th' pay av a soldier ayqual to thot av a polaceman—wan hundred dollars th' month. An' anither appropriatin' money to buy butther for th' soldiers to put on their pie. An' he said thot he would attind to it to wanst. An' he niver avin smoiled. Av coorse, I rayulized thot he were daft or he'd niver agree to a bill givin' soldiers butther on their pie.

"An' thin he inthroduced me to anither wee runt av a man, phwat wore spectacles an' looked loike th' picture av Mr. Pickwick in th' novel book. This second loo-natic said his name were Geary and he loikewise imagined he were a congrissman. He tould me that a counthryman of mine named Dinnis Kearney were a great bunkie av his. An' I were inthroduced to a lot more av thim, phwat all thought they were congrissmin, but I forgit me th' names av thim. 'Twas thin thot th' loo-natic who thought his name were Geary says to me:

"'Me man, ye've done a noble act be savin' our frind Cannon from a wathery grave.'

"'Mayhap,' said I, 'mayhap. But av I raylly belaived he were th' haythin Mormon thot he thinks he is, I'd pitch him in again an' lave him swim out as best he could.'

"An' with thot the whole parcel of loonatics fell to yellin' with laughter an' rowlin' in th' sand an' playin' at lape-freg. Sure, crazier min I niver saw, an' ivery divil av thim raylly believed thot he were a mimber of congriss."

Sevenspot stretched out on the newspaper, lifted his hat over his eyes and proceeded to dream of the halcyon days when a soldier will get butter on his pie.

A young lady writes to know if there is any luck in picking up a mule's shoe. Yes, if it is not on the mule.

So much fuss is made nowadays about the bringing up of children that the old Topsy way, by comparison, does not seem half so bad as it once did.

"E vietato da sputare" is the lettering on a sign which the mayor of Rome has caused to be posted in all parts of the city. The mayor has merely begun a crusade against indiscriminate expectoration.

In the opinion of the Railway Age it is safer to ride on railway trains than to stay at home. It supports its position by stating that 562 persons were killed by lightning last year, while but 239 passengers were killed in railroad accidents.

In the trial of a murder case before Judge Portlock, of Norfolk, Va., Attorney Marshall pointed a revolver at the judge to show how the murderer had killed his victim. "Is that loaded?" yelled the judge. "No!" replied Marshall, and to prove it pulled the trigger. A second later a bullet crashed into the wall within an inch of the judge's head.

Falcon island, in the Pacific ocean, which originally emerged from the sea after the eruption of a submarine volcano near Truga, and remained above the surface for precisely 13 years before vanishing two years ago, is reported by the British cruiser Porpoise to be reappearing and to be a serious menace to navigation. It was nine feet out of water at the end of May and may be a mountain now, for all anybody knows.

The action of the Chicago evangelist who thrached a youth who persisted in throwing stones at him is to be deprecated, but if he could have got hold of the father of the boy—the man who is primarily responsible for the disposition developed—he certainly would have been justified in "doing a few things" to him. Something is wrong with the home surroundings and influences of the lad who persistently acts in that way.

Three presidents of republics as well as two monarchs of great nations have been removed by assassins in the past third of a century, as Premier Salisbury says. The presidents are Lincoln, Garfield and Carnot, and the monarchs are Alexander II. and Humbert. Attempts, too, have been made on the lives of other heads of great states. Not only did assassins aim at the life of William I. of Germany, but they tried to murder Queen Victoria and President Loubet.

Another aeronaut has fallen from a balloon and been killed, which is another way of saying that he sacrificed his life to the popular fancy for the horrible—a fancy which is as real today as it was when men fought wild beasts in the Roman coliseum. Nobody would walk two blocks to see an empty balloon go up. The inference is not agreeable, but it is inevitable. It is the chance that the balloonist will be killed which draws people to balloon ascensions.

The growing prominence of the bicycle in military operations suggests that the strategists are guilty of a grave oversight in neglecting to utilize the automobile. The bicycle has killed its thousands, but the "auto" properly maneuvered would slay its tens of thousands. It is the legitimate successor of the war elephant which trampled the squirming foe into a condition of innocuous desuetude. Military experts cannot afford to disregard the deadly possibilities of the automobile, demonstration of which may be had in any city.

Snow is said to be eight feet deep in New South Wales. That Australian colony is enterprising and progressive, and in many respects it must be a good place in which to reside. But undoubtedly it has its drawbacks. In the summer the heat is almost always frightful, and in the winter the temperature goes to just the opposite extreme. It's a pity that some inventive genius does not run a pipe line from one side of the world to the other, so as to bring about an equalization of temperature that would be undoubtedly highly pleasing to the inhabitants of each side.

There died the other day the only man who knew the name of a mysterious benefactor of the United States in time of peril. It was Lucius E. Chittenden, registrar of the treasury under Lincoln. During the rebellion Minister Adams, in London, heard of the Lairds fitting out two ironclads for the confederates. He tried to have their putting to sea stopped, but the British government wouldn't do this unless Adams put up $5,000,000 in gold to offset damages. Adams couldn't raise the money, but a man whose name was never divulged furnished it.

Mrs. Stanford's recent gift of $10,000,000, added to its previous endowment of $3,500,000, makes Leland Stanford, Jr., the wealthiest educational institution in the country with one exception. The exception is Girard college in Philadelphia, which is worth $15,000,000. Next on the list comes Harvard, with productive funds amounting to $10,000,000, followed by Columbia with $9,500,000, Cornell with $8,000,000, University of Chicago with $6,500,000, and Yale with $4,500,000. These figures show only the wealth from which incomes are derived.

YANGTSUN CAPTURED.

Chinese Stronghold Falls Before Allies' Troops—Li Hung Chang to Negotiate Place.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The capture of Yangtsun, the first objective point of the international forces, was the supreme news of importance received Thursday on the Chinese situation. The first word of this capture, effected last Monday, came in a brief dispatch to the signal office at the war department, from Col. Scriven, the signal officer at Chefoo, saying:

"Chefoo, Aug. 9.—Signals, Washington: August 6, Yangtsun captured to-day. Wire up. Need own transportation. All well.

"SCRIVEN."

Half an hour after this message, a cablegram came from Gen. Chaffee, giving additional details of the capture, and showing that it had been at the cost of about 60 casualties among the American troops. Gen. Chaffee's dispatch is as follows:

"Yangtsun, Aug. 6.—Yangtsun occupied to-day. Wounded, Second Lieut. Frank R. Long, Ninth infantry, moderate. Casualties about 60 men, Ninth United States Infantry, Fourteenth United States infantry and battery F, Fifth United States artillery. Nearly all from Fourteenth infantry. Names later. Many men prostrated heat and fatigue.

"CHAFFEE."

London, Aug. 10.—In the capture of Yangtsun the losses of the allies, according to a dispatch to the Daily Express from Chefoo, dated August 8, purporting to give an account of that engagement, were 200, the majority of these being killed. "The allies marched on Yangtsun," says this report, "at dawn Monday. The position held by 1,500 Chinese was well intrenched to the east of the river. After four hours' heavy fighting the Chinese were driven from their defense works."

Brussels, Aug. 11.—The foreign office has received the following message, signed "De Cartier" (E. De Cartier de Marchienne, first secretary of the Belgian legation at Peking) and dated Shanghai, August 10: "An imperial decree names Li Hung Chang as minister plenipotentiary to negotiate peace."

Washington, Aug. 14.—The American commander in China, in a dispatch of just three words, received at the war department late Monday afternoon, sent a thrill of exhultation and expectancy throughout official quarters by announcing his arrival at Ho-Si-Wu, only 33 miles from Peking, last Thursday. The last heard from him before this was at Yangtsun, which had been captured after a hard fight, and word of his movements since then had been eagerly awaited.

New York, Aug. 14.—A special cable dispatch to the Evening World, dated Chefoo, August 9, via Shanghai, says: A terrible mistake occurred at the taking of Yangtsun.

Russian artillery opened fire on the American troops. Before the mistake was discovered many American soldiers had been killed or wounded by the Russian shells.

The Fourteenth took part in the attack on the Chinese trenches. As the Chinese fled the regiment entered and occupied one of the Chinese positions.

A Russian battery some distance off did not notice the movement. It opened fire on the position and planted shells among the American troops.

The Russians were quickly notified and ceased their fire.

London, Aug. 14.—The British consul at Canton, says the Daily Telegraph's correspondent there, has received the following message, dated August 6, from Sir Claude MacDonald, British minister in Peking:

"Our situation here is desperate. In ten days our food supply will be at an end. Unless we are relieved, a general massacre is probable. The Chinese offer to escort us to Tientsin, but, remembering Cawnpore, we refuse the offer. There are over 200 European women and children in this legation."

WAR VESSELS COLLIDE.

French Torpedo Boat Sunk by Battleship—Feared That at Least 50 of Her Crew Perished.

Paris, Aug. 13.—During the maneuvers of the French fleet off Cape St. Vincent Saturday night a collision occurred between the first-class battleship Brennus, flying the flag of Vice Admiral Fournier, commander of the fleet, and the torpedo boat destroyer Framee. The Framee sank immediately. The accident was due to the fact that the Framee turned to the right, when ordered to the left. Details thus far received are very meager; but a small portion of the crew, consisting of four officers and 58 men were saved. It is believed that no fewer than 50 were lost, and great anxiety is felt here. The Framee, which was of 313 tons displacement, was a recent addition to the French navy.

Noted Cyclist Dead.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 14.—Frank B. Van Valkenburgh, a well-known bicyclist, died suddenly Monday, supposedly from hemorrhage of the brain. Mr. Van Valkenburgh served one term as chief counsel of the Wisconsin division, League of American Wheelmen, and was assistant United States district attorney for the eastern district of Wisconsin under the Cleveland administration. He was 45 years old.

Strike Is Off.

St. Louis, Aug. 13.—The strike on the East St. Louis (Ill.) electric railway, which was inaugurated on May 10, shortly after the strike was begun in this city on the lines of the St. Louis Transit company, was declared off Sunday by unanimous vote of the employes. The boycott against the company, which has existed since the strike began, was also raised.

PLACED IN THE PANTHEON.

Funeral of the Assassinated King of Italy Occurs in Rome—Ceremonies Are Imposing.

Rome, Aug. 10.—The train bearing the remains of the late king of Italy, which left Monza at 4:28 p. m., Wednesday, accompanied by the duke of Aosta, the count of Turin and the duke of Oporto, arrived here at 6:30 a. m. Thursday. Immediately after that hour ten noncommissioned officers of cuirassiers carried the casket containing the body of King Humbert from the funeral train to the large hall of the railroad station, which had been transformed into a chapel, hung with sable draperies with gold ornamentation. The first chaplain of the court, assisted by a number of priests, pronounced the absolution, and the cortege started for the Pantheon, where rest the remains of Humbert's father, King Victor Emmanuel II.

During the march of the procession several crushes occurred. Among those present in the crowd on the Via Dei Serpenti 20 persons received slight wounds and 30 others were bruised.

When the casket reached the Pantheon ten noncommissioned officers of cuirassiers lifted it from the gun-carriage and carried it into the church where it was received by Mgr. Count of Reggio, archbishop of Genoa, who was in his pontifical robes and surrounded by the cathedral functionaries. The casket was then raised to the top of a catafalque surmounted by a wreath of iron, and on it was placed the helmet and sword of King Humbert.

GRADE CROSSING DISASTER.

Fifteen Persons Killed and Ten Others Injured Near Slatington, Pennsylvania.

Slatington, Pa., Aug. 13.—Fifteen persons were instantly killed and ten others, several of whom will die, were seriously injured Sunday night in a grade crossing accident three miles east of this city by a passenger train on the Lehigh & New England railroad crashing into an omnibus containing 25 persons. All the dead and injured were in the omnibus, and but three escaped uninjured.

The train was a special and consisted of an engine and one car. At the point at which the collision occurred there is a sharp curve in the road, and the omnibus came along at a good rate of speed, the occupants unconscious of any impending danger. As the bus swung around the curve the engine and car came in sight. It was too late to stop either the omnibus or the train, and as the driver of the former whipped up the four horses to cross the track ahead of the train, the latter crashed into its middle. The occupants were thrown in all directions, bruised and bleeding. The 11 dead were killed outright. Physicians and a special train were sent for, and the injured were taken to South Bethlehem. No watchman is employed to warn teams or pedestrians of any approaching train, and those living in the vicinity state that it is impossible to hear an approaching train.

MURDERER AND THIEF.

Charles Ferrell Confesses to Killing Messenger Lane and Robbing Express Safe.

Columbus, O., Aug. 13.—Charles R. H. Ferrell, a former employe of the Adams Express company, was arrested Sunday afternoon in this city, and has confessed to the killing of Messenger Charles Lane and the robbery of the way safe of the Adams Express company on the Pennsylvania east-bound train which arrived in this city at midnight Friday. One thousand dollars of the money which he had stolen was recovered.

Ferrell was to have been married Thursday next to Miss Lillian Costlow, the beautiful young daughter of Patrick Costlow, an engineer on the Pennsylvania lines. He had been discharged from the employ of the Adams Express company about three weeks ago, and had not since been able to secure employment. He confessed that the motive of the robbery was to secure money, of which he felt in great need on account of his approaching marriage. The money recovered he had given to Miss Costlow to keep for him, saying that it was money he had saved from his earnings. He was at the home of his affianced and in her company when placed under arrest. When taken into custody he assumed a nonchalant demeanor, but when he found that he could no longer deceive the officers, he made a full confession.

Terrific Explosion.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 14. — Another frightful explosion of nitroglycerin, used in shooting gas and oil wells, occurred shortly after noon Monday three miles east of Montpelier. The Gaithwait nitroglycerin factory was demolished and two men and a team were injured. The acid was overheated and caught fire, igniting other ingredients which it was impossible for the two men at work to extinguish. There were 1,500 quarts of the stuff in the explosion and the country was shaken for miles around, plate glass windows being broken in Montpelier.

Disaster in Italy.

Rome, Aug. 15.—A train bearing many notable persons who had been attending the recent ceremonies here collided with another a few miles outside the city. Six persons were killed outright and several others fatally injured. The king and queen went immediately to the scene of the accident. The names of the victims have not yet been ascertained, but it is understood that Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Pierre of Russia are safe.

Well-Known Journalist Dead.

Keokuk, Ia., Aug. 13.—Samuel M. Clark, editor of the Gate City for 30 years, died here Saturday. He was a member of the Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth congresses from the First Iowa district, United States commissioner of education to the Paris exposition of 1889. He was a native Iowan, born in 1842.

Bryan Will Attend.

New York, Aug. 14.—The National Association of Democratic Clubs received a personal assurance from William J. Bryan that he will attend the quadrennial convention of that association in Indianapolis on October 3 and 4.

MAKING PROGRESS.

Business Appears to Be Steadily Occupying a More Stable Position.

New York, Aug. 11.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Progress has been made toward a more stable position of business, with a few more heavy contracts to hold the ground already gained; but for a proper interpretation of the week's results one must look beyond Wall street operations where, more than any other quarter, the vacation season is leaving its impress of inactivity. Speculation is cautious, but investment holdings are being increased rather than diminished, and operators cannot see that their hesitation on the ground of politics is echoed any more in general business circles than two months ago. Small change appears in railroad stocks, ten industrials are $1 higher, and traction issues a shade lower. Working forces are smaller and will soon be further reduced, probably for three weeks, by the closing down of cotton mills in New England, which has been delayed longer than expected; but our strength is evidenced to the world by the over-subscription here of the new British loan of £10,000,000 on about a 3¾ per cent. basis, of which over half is allotted to American applicants.

Bradstreet's says: "Trade conditions still exhibit many of the irregularities incident to the transition period between midsummer and early fall trade. Despite the hot wave, with its effect on the growing distributive demand, and also because of the reports of damage to the corn crop which it has incited, a more cheerful feeling is perceptible in general trade, and the booking of fall orders for dry goods, clothing and hardware at leading western centers and heavy engagements in iron and steel products, though at low prices, are of encouraging proportions. Prices are not showing the precipitate declines noted some time ago, and among the really encouraging features are the advance in wheat, mainly based on improved export inquiry.

"An immense business in steel products is reported booked at Pittsburgh and Chicago, and steel bars are really firmer, with an advance of $4 per ton announced by western manufacturers, who have sold their output up to the close of the year. Pig iron is still rather neglected, but inquiry for this material is really better at the south, largely on export account, and furnace shutdowns are so numerous as to indicate an adequate realization of the fact that the root of the evil is in the output of crude material. Current production is claimed to be the lightest for more than a year past, and further announcements of shutdowns are scheduled as far ahead as September 1."

BARON RUSSELL DEAD.

Lord Chief Justice Fails to Survive an Operation—His Long Public Life.

London, Aug. 11.—Baron Russell of Killowen, lord chief justice of England, died Friday morning.

Baron Russell had been ill for some time. Thursday an operation was performed, which the patient is reported to have passed through in good condition.

This operation, however, resulted in his death. It was performed by Dr. Treves. Various reports have been circulated as to the disease from which the lord chief justice suffered. According to some his malady was a gastric disorder, while other reports were that he had a tumor in the stomach.

Lord Russell entered public life in 1880, when he was sent to parliament by the liberals as member for Dundalk, representing them until 1885, when he accepted the South Hackney election. The following year he was made attorney general by the Gladstone administration, and was also knighted. In 1893 he was given the G. C. M. G. in consideration of his services as English counsel in connection with the United States fisheries arbitration at Paris, and in 1894, on the death of Lord Bower, was appointed a lord of appeal in ordinary. His elevation to the office of lord chief justice of England followed shortly afterward, the vacancy being occasioned by the death of Lord Coleridge, and was received with satisfaction throughout the empire.

He was married in 1858 to Ellen, daughter of Joseph Mulholland, M. P., of Belfast, and the widow and two children survive him. The youngest son is Hon. Bertrand Joseph, at present serving as a lieutenant of the royal artillery in South Africa. Hon. Charles Russell, another son of the deceased, is now in Canada.

Sir Charles visited the United States several times, and had many friends in this country.

ROBBERS ARE SLAIN.

Fate of Two Men Who Looted a Union Pacific Train Near Hugo, Colorado.

Goodland, N. M., Aug. 11.—The two men who held up a Union Pacific train near Hugo Col., last Sunday morning, killing W. J. Fay, a passenger, and plundering the passengers, were killed Friday by a sheriff's posse at the Bartholomew ranch, three miles east of this place. The robbers were located in a house on a ranch Friday morning and the posse lined up and cut off escape. After a fusillade between the robbers and the posse, in which J. Briggs and George Collins, deputies, were shot, one of the robbers jumped from a window and sought to escape, but was shot to death. The posse then lay siege to the house in which the remaining robber stood guard with a Winchester, and finally succeeded in setting fire to the building, which was destroyed with its occupant. The robbers have not been identified.

RUHLIN LOSES.

Knocked Out in the Sixth Round of His Fight with Bob Fitzsimmons.

New York, Aug. 11.—Bob Fitzsimmons, of Australia, but now an American citizen, met Gus Ruhlin, the Akron giant, Friday night before the Twentieth Century club at Madison Square garden and won by knocking the Ohioan down and out in the sixth round. It was a fierce and bloody battle while it lasted, and at times it looked as if Ruhlin would get the better of the older man, but Fitzsimmons at the proper time would cut loose with his fearful body blow, which finally snuffed out the Ohio boxer's light.

Drought Broken.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 13.—Heavy showers in central Illinois have saved the corn crop, which was threatened with destruction by the hot, dry weather. The drought in this vicinity was broken early Sunday morning by the fall of .56-inch of rain, and this has been followed by a number of good showers and a drop of about 15 degrees in the temperature. The farmers are rejoicing, at the central Illinois assembly at Mechaniesburg, a special praise meeting being held.

Death of a Millionaire.

Glen Cove, L. I., Aug. 13.—Edward E. Duryea, the millionaire starch manufacturer, died suddenly Saturday. He had been sick three months with internal complaints, but his death was not expected. His wealth was estimated at $3,000,000. Mr. Duryea was a widower. He is survived by a son and three daughters.

The tripping feet—the sparkling eye—the graceful movement—belong not alone to the budding maiden.

These graces are the right—aye duty of every woman until the hair whitens—and regal dignity replaces them.

The mother who guards her strength has so much more to devote to the care and education of her dear ones. She should be a comfort—a cheer—always.

Yet how many feel that they have the strength to properly balance the home? The world is listless, weary and morbid. Its blood moves sluggishly and is full of impurities. It needs a kindling, invigorating tonic to set it afire—it needs Pe-ru-na,

THE ONE MEDICINE

in the world which women may rely upon positively. Pe-ru-na is good for everyone, but particularly for women. The various weaknesses which afflict their delicate organism spring from inflammation or catarrh of the mucous lining, and Pe-ru-na is a specific for catarrh in any organ of the body. Any congestion of a mucous membrane simply means catarrh of the organ affected. This is why Pe-ru-na cures all sorts of troubles where other remedies fail. If there is a catarrhal affection the matter with you anywhere Pe-ru-na will cure you.

SECOND BATTLE

BRYAN FIRES THE FIRST GUN IN HIS SECOND BATTLE.

His Great Speech at Indianapolis — Republican Imperial Expansion and Asinine Contraction.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, Aug. 13, 1900.

The most important political event of the past week was the great speech delivered in Indianapolis by W. J. Bryan on the occasion when he was formally notified of his nomination for the presidency. It was a strong card for the reform parties. Like all of Bryan's speeches it was replete with the lofty sentiments of the highest patriotism. It illustrates as well as any of the many other great speeches by him the clear head and the big heart of the man. He never blunders. During these four years since he became the recognized leader he never has said anything for which he or his friends have had to apologize, or which they might have wished to have left unsaid. Some of the imperialist organs are finding fault with his Indianapolis speech, of course, but it is for what he did not say rather than for what he did say. They pretend to belittle it, but it is causing them much worry just the same. The leading Republican organ of Minnesota has been thrown into a fit by it, and devotes several columns to an effort to show that the speech is of no importance anyhow. The Sioux Falls Daily Press hit the nail squarely on the head when it predicted some days in advance exactly how the speech would be received by the G. O. P. press. This is what the paper says:

"The speech of acceptance of Mr. Bryan is due in a day or two. Then will the distressed Republican editors have something to write about. Alas; it will not be fresh and new, for it is morally certain they will go over the same old story again, finding the same faults and making the same specious criticisms.

"If Mr. Bryan says anything at all about finances these Republican editors will denounce him for "trying to debase the currency" of the banks, etc. They will rave and storm and fame about "impending national disaster" and the like stuff.

"If Mr. Bryan hits the trusts some pretty hard blows these trust defenders will wriggle and squirm and say Bryan is insincere and that he didn't have sense enough to know two years before the trust era began that the trusts would now be in control of the government. They will say the trusts are a good thing, and that anyway the Republican party is the original trust-smashing party.

"If Mr. Bryan bears down heavily on the principles of free government and reminds the people that ours is a nation in which the people are sovereigns, and that it is contrary to the spirit of our institutions for our government to be doing the very things that brought on the revolt which ended in American independence—if Mr. Bryan hits imperialism a few body blows, the imperialist editors will shout in chorus that he has "abandoned" free silver and is fighting a phantom.

"We have no sort of expectation that Bryan will please any of the Hanna editors in his speech of acceptance. Neither will Mr. Stevenson."

On the one hand we have expansion by means of a war of criminal aggression and conquest, and on the other hand we have humiliating contraction for the benefit of Great Britain. The modus vivendi to which Mr. McKinley has consented in the Alaskan boundary dispute makes a magnificent land gift to England. The remarkable explanation offered for the administration by Senator Scott of West Virginia is this:

"Instead of having ceded to Great Britain territory as large as the state of Rhode Island, not one inch has been surrendered to that country. On the other hand, England surrendered to us nineteen-twentieths of the land whose possession had been in dispute."

In plain language this means that the administration has done well by giving England only a part of the territory which she demanded, but to which she had no sort of valid pretension. Instead of complaining we should be grateful to the president for not allowing England to take more than she did.

Governor John Lind is nothing if not prompt to act when occasion demands. There was no unnecessary delay in dealing with the Indian scare some time ago, and neither was there any now in taking measures to protect the people in the northern part of the state who were being terrorized by a gang of lawless circus men. The governor is awake all the time. The people have come to understand thoroughly that he is to be trusted to do his duty without fear or favor, and in the fall they will be glad of the chance to record their wish that he shall serve for two years more.

It was stated in this bulletin last week that Van Sant was a falsifier when in his Minneapolis speech he quoted Mr. Bryan as saying that this country would manufacture no goods for export in the event of McKinley's election. Every person of sense knows without being told that Bryan never could have made such a silly remark. To make assurance doubly sure, however, a St. Paul friend of Mr. Bryan sent him the excerpt in question from Van Sant's speech and received an answer in which Mr. Bryan declares that he has been misquoted by the Republican candidate for governor of this state.

By the way, is Theodore Roosevelt in a position to pose as a shining light in the matter of honesty? He condemns some seven or eight million American voters as guilty of dishonesty because they do not believe in the 200-cent dollar which has been saddled on the people for the benefit of the bondholders. But how about the noisy candidate's own record? The people will remember how he not long ago was caught in an attempt to avoid payment of his taxes. When the assessor came around and wanted him to pay taxes on his personal property in New York, Roosevelt made oath that he was a resident of the District of Columbia, where he was holding down a job as assistant secretary of war. Later he was nominated for governor of New York and some mischievous person made the point that the candidate was not eligible as he was not a resident of the state. Then Roosevelt discovered that he had been mistaken in claiming to have his home in Washington. He rushed around and paid his taxes in order that he might run for the governorship. It will hardly do for him to set himself up as the one great representative of the honest people.

"The expansion of Canadian traffic in the last four years is the greatest in any equal period in the history of the Dominion," is the way the papers announce it. Too bad that the Canadians are shut out from the privilege of endorsing the author of all this prosperity by voting for McKinley.

Prosperity has broken out in a fresh spot in Iowa. Britt will entertain the convention of the "National Association of Tramps." Here is an opportunity for your Uncle "Mark" to tap a barrel in exchange for an official endorsement of the "administration."

The Pioneer Press says, editorially, that the anarchist who assassinated King Humbert was only a student in the same school in which William J. Bryan is a professor. This is entirely in harmony with its other position that the assassin of Goebel is a patriot. Some simple minded people may not be able to subscribe to either of these doctrines. However, there is no question but that both are of the genuine Republican brand.

Our Republican neighbors across the Wisconsin line have a dose of Hannaism on their hands, quite the equal of the forcing of Sherman out of public life in Ohio, to make room for the great boss. Their well loved Senator Spooner is the victim in this case, and Hanna and McKinley have issued the ukase, that Spooner must go to his political graveyard. It is in order to make room for Henry C. Payne. The whole chapter is a black one, and will be fully aired as the time goes on. This imperialism which makes and unmakes senators as well as carries on wars of conquest, is of the real old-fashioned kind —Caesar's kind.

The schoolmasters this year are for Bryan, scores of able educationalists have declared for him, who bitterly opposed us in 1896. In Indiana there is said to be a regular stampede of faculty professors to the Bryan standard. Carry the news to Prexy Northrup. He should catch on.

Wheat has been rising gradually in the face of the disaster from drouth, and so has silver, without drouth, to the highest point of years. But when normal conditions return the raisers of wheat will continue to be in deadly competition with the wheat raisers of the silver countries. The fact all the time remains that free coinage would relieve our producers from such ruinous competition—from the "50-cent wheat" that is always with us under the Republican-English policy.

There was joy among the Republicans some time ago when their papers were able to report the wonderful news that a "Democratic McKinley club" had been organized in the city of Argentine, Kan. It was nothing but a hoax, of course, but some of the Republicans really took the matter seriously and were exceedingly glad. Here is the story as told by the Argentine Republic:

"It was in the little town of Argentine, Kan., that some politicians got together in a sidewalk conference not long ago and did something which no one else in all the United States had thought of doing—organized a "Democratic" McKinley club.

"With an ex-constable that had been out of office for a year, an old negro ex-slave, who had once voted for a Democratic justice of the peace, and four rank Republicans that were never identified with the party of Mr. Bryan, the "Democratic" club was launched with a great deal of noise and bluster by the Republican papers and amid a great deal of mirth and laughter from the people of the little city where the joke was perpetrated.

"While the club was new the Republicans of the town rented a hall one night and gave it a christening, where free beer and cigars were dispensed and the members were made to feel that prosperity had really come to Kansas, but this did not last long. The beer ran out, no more cigars were to be had and the joke became stale.

"An effort to get up a second smoker has failed and the club has busted. Another keg of beer might revive it, but so far no one in Argentine cares enough for the influence of its members to put up the necessary amount for the refreshments, and the old negro, the ex-constable and the McKinley "Democrats" are in a deplorable state of disorganization.

"There is in each ward of Argentine a Free Silver Republican club that has a growing and respectable membership, composed of men who never before voted anything but the Republican ticket and who could not be influenced by any other motive than the knowledge that their convictions are right."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The State Fair.

The sale of privileges for the coming state fair was conducted recently at the administration building. The dining privileges were all placed in the hands of Minneapolis and St. Paul churches. All of the outside refreshment privileges were sold, and the sale, as a whole, was the most successful in the history of the fair. A limited number of privileges still remain, and they will be disposed of between now and the opening day of the fair.

The show privileges for the fair have all been secured, and the management avers that none of the features are objectionable. Show privileges were not sold to others than such as the management felt assured were proper. One of the interesting features of this department will be an ostrich farm.

A catalogue of the Hereford cattle to be sold at public auction at the state fair Tuesday and Wednesday of state fair week has been issued. The catalogue gives full information in regard to every animal, and a copy may be had upon applying to the secretary at Hamline.

Can Appropriate.

When the legislature meets in 1901, it will be able once more to appropriate moneys for necessary public improvements in roads and bridges out of the state's internal improvement fund. The close of the state's fiscal year finds the treasurer with cash on hand to the credit of the fund sufficient to pay off all outstanding appropriations, and still leave a balance of $1,536.55 on hand. This has not happened since 1897.

A Close Call.

An unknown laborer fell three stories at the new Virginia apartment house, Lyndale and Hennepin avenues, Minneapolis, with a wheelbarrow full of brick, and escaped injury. Just how the accident occurred is not known. The man was at first stunned by the fall and the police were summoned. Before they arrived, however, he had recovered consciousness and taken a car for his home.

Cost of Election.

The cost to the state for the coming election will be about $8,000. Fifty different blank forms are to be issued; 12,000 copies of the election laws in pamphlet form; over 100,000 copies of instruction to voters in different languages; 15,000 registers and poll lists; 20,000 copies of the constitutional amendment; 650,000 ballots; 28,000 tally sheets will be issued.

News in Brief.

The elevator belonging to the Atlas Elevator Company, of Minneapolis, at Redwood Falls, was destroyed by fire. It was only partially filled with wheat.

Carl Erickson, an 8-year-old Crookston lad, fell from a roof 20 feet from the ground, struck against a fence post and broke a rib.

Joe Schlanser, who bit off Carroll's thumb in a fight in Moorhead, from which Carroll died, was held to the district court for manslaughter.

The state fair grounds was the scene of a $2,500 fire last night. "Society barn," which is one of the largest on the grounds, was burned to the earth.

W. H. Merritt was awarded the contract for building the new city jail at Moorhead for $3,582. It will be a model city lockup and will be completed about November 1.

The flour mill of John Wait, on Long Prairie river, one mile west of the town of Long Prairie, was struck by lightning and burned with contents to the ground. Loss about $5,000 with no insurance.

On application of the committee appointed to carry out the contract for the proposed new dam in the Redwood river the United States fish commission will, in about three weeks, ship a lot of young bass to plant in the lake.

Willie Gleason, an inmate of the asylum, has recently disappeared and no trace of him has yet been found.

Sheriff Schilplin has been asked by Sheriff Brown, Sherburne county, to keep a lookout for Emil Gergen, 14 years old, the boy who accidentally shot his mother and then took to the woods. The people reside at Becker and it was another case of not knowing the gun was loaded.

M. N. Anderson's farm residence in Featherstone was totally destroyed by fire, the origin of which is unknown. The loss is about $1,500.

Crookston is to have a new hospital, to be opened by the Benedictine Sisters of Duluth.

Ole Rofstad was drowned while bathing in the Red river near Halstad. A companion, Willie Mactine, narrowly escaped a like fate.

The large coal docks of the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern Railway, at Iron Junction, were partially destroyed by fire.

St. Paul is given nearly 20,000 more people by the special city census than were recorded in the government census. The appropriation for taking the city's census proved insufficient and the council committe is devising means to raise the necessary $600.

Bertanno Louij, an Italian in the employ of Sylvan Nadeau as a farm laborer, in Little Canada, fell from a load of hay while in the field and died at the St. Paul city hospital.

Peter Jurlizel, of St. Paul, was found running through the street with his bowels protruding from a gash in his abdomen. He claimed he was cutting a watermelon and the knife slipped.

The city council of Rochester has decided to install a firm alarm system, and a two-circuit system, with 10 experimental boxes, will be put in operation at once.

The crop outlook has grown to be better than was expected, and with the progress of harvesting good reports are coming in from many sections of this and neighboring states. In most places it is just between harvest and threshing, and the final estimate of the crop cannot be made until the threshing reports come in.

A horse thief visited Faribault and stole a handsome new buggy belonging to Miss Emma Hedges, and a horse and harness belonging to Apsley Smith. The police are on the track.

SOME QUEER COLLATERAL.

Glass Eyes, Store Teeth and Artificial Digits as Pledges for a Bar Bill.

"Everything carries its compensation with it, even a glass eye," said J. J. Jaxon, the stage manager of a St. Louis summer garden, who has an artificial optic, and, being a jolly fellow, doesn't care who knows it, says the Republic.

"I'll never forget one night when Lon Raymond and I and George Denham and Jack Cheviot and Phil Branson were at Uhrig's cave (this was a long, long time ago), and we were dry—dry as a local option town after midnight. We were all out of funds and we were too lazy to go to the manager and ask for an advance of salary; we thought it would be funnier to stand off the waiter. Lou called the man over and said: 'Am I good for a round of drinks?'

"'You'll have to see the boss,' said the waiter.

"'Ain't all of us, collectively, good for a drink?' said George Denham.

"'You'll have to see the boss,' said the waiter.

"'We'll give you security,' said Lou, and with that he pulled out his eye and laid it on the table. The waiter jumped and before he could recover from his surprise I removed my eye and placed it alongside of Raymond's. Then George Denham took a full set of upper teeth from his mouth and contributed them to the pile of collateral.

"'I'm in on this,' said Jack Cheviot, and he unscrewed his wooden hand and placed it on the table with the eyes and teeth.

"'You can't leave me out,' said Phil Branson, and after fumbling with his mouth a while he produced one false tooth.

"The waiter weakened and we had a credit as long as we cared to ask for it."

OVERSTEPPING THE BOUNDS.

He Wanted to Pay the Parson More, But the Rules and Regulations Were Against Him.

"The first charge I ever held was in a small town in the western part of the state," said a well-known minister, who was in a reminiscent mood. "The town was not very large, and my congregation was very poor and unable to contribute much toward the support of a minister, so they made up what they lacked in cash by holding donation parties now and then during the year to eke out the small salary that they paid," says the Detroit Free Press.

"The first infliction of this kind that I had was called a pound donation party, at which everyone was expected to bring a pound of something or other. Among the congregation was a member who had more worldly goods than all the rest put together, but he had the reputation of being 'near,' and I confess that I looked forward with some interest to see what he would bring.

"Imagine my consternation when I undid his package and found nothing but a few small potatoes.

"I met him the next day and had hard work to remember that I was a minister of the Gospel and treat him pleasantly. He said that he wanted to speak to me privately for a moment and drew me aside.

"'Parson,' he said, earnestly, 'I'm downright sorry that the rules and regulations prohibited me from bringing more'n a pound of them potatoes, but,' he added, dropping his voice to a whisper, 'I gave you down weight!'"

O--I--C

When a preparation has an advertised reputation that is world-wide, it means that preparation is meritorious. If you go into a store to buy an article that has achieved universal popularity like Cascarets Candy Cathartic for example, you feel it has the endorsement of the world. The judgment of the people is infallible because it is impersonal. The retailer who wants to sell you "something else" in place of the article you ask for, has an ax to grind. Don't it stand to reason? He's trying to sell something that is not what he represents it to be. Why? Because he expects to derive an extra profit our of your credulity. Don't you see through his little game? The man who will try to sell you a substitute for Cascarets is a fraud. Beware of him! He is trying to steal the honestly earned benefits of a reputation which another business man has paid for, and if his conscience will allow him to go so far, he will go farther. If he cheats his customer in one way, he will in another and it is not safe to do business with him. Beware of the Cascaret substitutor! Remember Cascarets are never sold in bulk but in metal boxes with the long tailed "C" on every box and each tablet stamped C. C. C.

Snored in the Wrong Key.

A weary congressman who could "snore upon the flint" occupied a room adjoining a German musician's.

"You will have to give me another room, I guess," said the congressman to the hotel clerk.

"What's the matter? Aren't you comfortable where you are?"

"Well, not exactly. That German musician in the next room and I don't get along well. Last night he tooted away on his clarinet so that I thought I never would go to sleep. After I had caught a few winks I was awakened by a pounding at my door. 'What's the matter?' I asked. 'Of you please,' said the German, 'dot you vould schnore of der same key. You vas go from B flat to G, and it spoils der moosic.'"—Buffalo Enquirer.

Sam Jones' Strong Points.

Rev. Dr. Frank Bristol, pastor of the Metropolitan church, in Washington, which is attended by President McKinley, tells a story which he heard one evening while dining at the white house with the president and Bishop Chandler, of the Methodist church south. The party was talking about revivalists and revivals, and the case of the well-known exhorter, Sam Jones, was brought up. "The best characterization of Sam Jones' preaching I ever heard," said the bishop, "was that of a good colored brother in Virginia. He had just heard Jones preach, and was describing it to some of his fellows. 'Jist as long as Bre'r Jones sticks to de Scripters,' said the colored man, 'he ain't no better preacher than eny uv de rist of us. But when he cuts loose from the Scripters and jist lets 'er sail, den he's de doggondest preacher dat ever pounded a pulpit.'"—Pittsburgh Post.

Chinaman and Christian.

A Chinaman of great dignity and some splendor of dress was getting off an elevated train at Twenty-third street the other day when a white rowdy called after him:

"Say," said the tough, "are you a 'boxer'?"

The other tough added some abuse and roared with laughter, after the Chinaman, who got off the car, then turned. He waited till the gates were closed, then he answered in pretty clear English:

"Say, you Clistian?"

Then the gateman and some passengers laughed, and the toughs slunk into the car. —N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Passing of the Horse.

So soon as nature sees an improvement there is a change. The candle gave way to electricity. The spinning wheel to machinery, the horse to the automobile. The fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been sold for over half a century, proves its value. There is nothing to equal it for stomach or liver trouble. It is Nature's own remedy, and the only one to cure dyspepsia or weak stomach.

A Wife Equal to a Gold Mine.

My husband was in debt and I, being anxious to help him, thought I would sell American Self-Heating Flat Irons, and am doing splendidly. A cent's worth of fuel will heat the iron for one day, so you have a perfectly even heat. You can iron in half the time and no danger of scorching the clothes, as with the old iron, and you can get the most beautiful gloss. I sell at nearly every house, as the iron is so convenient and economical everybody wants one. I have not made less than five dollars any day I worked. My brother is doing well, and I think any one can make lots of money anywhere selling these irons. Retail price $3.75 each. The Roberts A. & O. Iron Co., St. Paul, Minnesota, are the sole manufacturers and will start any one in the business, as they did me, if you will address them.

The duodenum is continuous with the small intestines. The small intestine empties into the large intestine or colon at the cæcum. The arrows indicate the direction which the contents of the bowels must take in passing through the alimentary canal.

are packed away in your insides and must be kept clean, in order and doing business.

It's a long way, with many turns and pitfalls to catch the refuse and clog the channel if not most carefully cleaned out every day.

When this long canal is blockaded, look out for trouble—furred tongue, bad breath, belching of gases, yellow spots, pimples and boils, headaches, spitting up of food after eating—an all-around disgusting nuisance.

Violent pill poisons or griping salts are dangerous to use for cleaning out the bowels. They force out the obstruction by causing violent spasms of the bowels, but they leave the intestines weak and even less able to keep up regular movements than before, and make a larger dose necessary next time.

Then you have the pill habit, which kills more people than the morphine and whiskey habits combined.

The only safe, gentle but certain bowel cleansers are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, because they don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action. Buy and try them! (Look out for imitations and substitutes or you can't get results. Cascarets are never sold in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the long-tailed "C" on the box.) You will find that in an entirely natural way your bowels will be promptly and permanently

The Extract of Benne Plant Is Nature's Own Remedy

First used by the Mississippi river steamboat men in the "early forties," who drank their "Benne Tedd" from the hands of the colored "aunties." They steeped the leaves in hot water, and the verdict of these steamboat men was that it "did the business."

In 1841, James and Constance Maguire secured some of these miraculous leaves, and, upon investigation, discovered that they are identical with the Sesam. Ind. (Benne-Leaves), and, as the same indicates, native of India, containing a mucilaginous substance of soothing and healing properties. Nature here furnished a remedy for diseases such as Colic, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhoea, Dysentery and kindred ailments. After experimenting, the Messrs. Maguire succeeded in chemically combining the use of the Benne-leaves with other vegetable substances, and so furnished a remedy that has saved thousands of lives.

DELANO, FRIDAY, Aug. 17, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1 00.

--Several politicians were in town fairday looking after their fences.

--Freddy Peters mourns the loss of a valuable dog. Poison took him away.

--The M. E. Sunday School have postponed their picnic until next Wednesday.

--Feed mills, now a days seem to be doing the most rushing business of anything in town.

—Rain keeps farmers back with haying and harvesting, and makes a scarcity in the village of wood and hay.

—Dr. Walman visits Delano Aug 16, 17 and 18. Office at the drugstore. The doctor is an expert in fitting glasses to the eyes. 1 w.

—The sidewalk in front of the old Roehl lot on R. R. Ave. has been replaced and things begin to assume normal appearances again.

--Delano continues to be the boss hog market. On Wednesday loads of as fine porkers as ever went to market passed through town, bound for the stock yard.

—Mesdames Chance and Mulford have made the trains from the East for the past week about as regularly as the hotel or livery men have. They have been expecting their brother, Norman Webb and wife, from Birmingham, Miss. Their mail has been coming and of course they are to follow.

—Dr. Catlin was in luck this week and now owns a hive of bees. On Monday a noise like rushing winds, or a steam engine was heard and soon a swarm of bees settled on a boxelder tree directly over the Doctor's porch. Phil Martin the veteran bee man happened along in the nick of time and assisted the boys to hive the honey makers.

—The St. Cecilia Club gave a mid summer recital at the City Hall, Tuesevening, which was enjoyed by a fair sized audience of music lovers. The club consists mostly of young ladies, some of them quite young, many of whom showed considerable musical talent and careful training. Young ladies without ability to play or sing seem to be the exception in Delano now.

—Rev. Charles Thayer, D. D., pastor at large in the Presbytery of Minneapolis will conduct communion services at the Presbyterian church in Delano next Sunday morning, and at Rockford in the evening. Dr. Thayer recently celebrated his eightieth birthday by walking fifteen miles and preaching three times. He was for seven years pastor of the churches at Long Lake, Maple Plain, Delano, and Rockford.

—Almost a sad accident occurred in front of the Wright County Bank, on Tuesday, as a train was pulling out from the depot. George Schwerin had left his wife and two children in a top buggy, his wife holding the lines. The horse got frightened and made a short turn, the buggy being partially on the side walk threw Mrs. S. and the smallest child onto the sidewalk. The larger girl was rescued by some one who rushed up for that purpose, while others caught the horse. Fortunately only a few bruises and a very bad scare were the results.

—From the Hankinson News, which H. C. Parslow kindly loaned us, we learn that on the night of August 8, during the storm, at the Adams farm north of Great Bend, Dak., the big barn containing 140 horses was struck by lightning and burned before the eyes of the farm hands who could not get the horses out. The paper says: "The screaming of the terrified horses, heard above the fury of the storm, caused a scene of horrors such as is seldom witnessed". The loss, aside from the value of the horses, was hard to bear in harvest time, when their work was needed.

—Quite an excitement was occasioned on the arrival of the evening train Monday. A boy supposed to be dying, was put off the train at the depot and left for medical attendance. He was taken to the Meister hotel, and after a good night's rest was able to tell his story, and see the town. He had letters in abundance proving his identity. He gave his name as Dunlap MacAdams, and said that two years and nine months ago, his father and him left home to engage in a seafaring life. He had a memorandum book with him of trips to Australia, Algiers and other places. He said he was cabin boy and his father was third engineer on the Maine, one of the ships burned at the Hoboken fire; that his father was burned on the boat; that he jumped overboard and when he came up from the water his head struck a log; that he has been subject to fits of an epileptic nature ever since. He had in his pocket a ticket furnished him by the board of charities at St. Paul, from that city to Fargo, and a letter asking that authorities there further him on his way to Wallawalla, Wash. He remained here over Tuesday, taking the evening train west apparently in high glee to be getting on towards home. He is sixteen years old, and has a good knowledge of the world.

--The McGinley's, Bob and Eva, entertained fair sized audiences at the City Hall Wednesday and Thursday evening. They are actors, and give as good an entertainment as half a dozen average people in the business do.

—A few of the big weeds about the village have been mowed. If they are kept down a few years it will improve the appearance of the village much. Those who have been negligent can be readily pointed out now, and their patches make them look ashamed whenever they pass by them.

—William Stanley says he has threshed his grain. He and his tenant raised 22 bushels of oats, just the amount of seed sown. He receives for his share 11 bushels. As he furnished seed and land for half the crop he is out 11 bushels of oats. The wheat crop was about one third of an average crop. He thinks second crop hay will be good and corn is fine; so he thinks he and his cows are sure of wintering well after all.

—On Wednesday while posting show bills on the bulletin board at the post office, in some way the board came down, and a bunch of several letters were found, that had been stuck in behind the board, instead of in the letter box. They proved to have been written by Rev. Says more than a year ago. Evidently some of the smaller school children had been asked to mail them and didn't know where to put them and so placed them behind the bulletin board.

Watertown.

Miss Callie Schimansky who has been visiting friends here for the past six weeks returned to her home in St. Paul, Friday. Her friends will miss her very much.

Miss Sadie Van Eman, who has made her home here for the last eight years, left Thursday evening for the Cities. She has many friends who regret her going.

Francis Wolan and Edward Rice spent a week with Rev. Father Rehill.

Miss Anna Kruzen, our future milliner, took possession Thursday. We wish her success in her future work.

Wednesday being a holiday the Cadets held their annual picnic in McClellan's grove about eight miles west of town. All who attended report a very jolly time.

Miss Maggie Campbell returned home Sunday after a weeks visit with her parents in West Hollywood.

Mrs Geo. Miller is visiting the Miller family this week.

Guy E. Halgren made a business trip to the cities Wednesday.

A number of our young people attended the Kuka dance last Wednesday evening. Everybody enjoys moonlight rides.

Mrs. Geo. Cunningham returned home one day last week after an extended visit in the twin cities.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Farmer, Mrs. W. Yike, of Minneapolis, attended the funeral of Mrs. Luther Cunningham.

Mr. William Loney, who has been doctoring in the City returned Tuesday much improved.

Work has commenced on our new bank building. This will be a decided improvement for the town.

ROCKFORD.

Quite a large number of our young men and some of the older ones usually attend the monthly fairs at Delano. Some of them came home last Saturday evening, and from their actions seemed to feel quite happy, but very soon there was a reaction, and over a proposed dog fight on Bridge street; the merriment changed into a quarrel and the prospect of a fight. The village constable stepped in to stop it as he says and got a crack on the jaw that knocked him out, then the curtain dropped and will stay down, we understand until the bridges are painted and the parties interested have more money to spend.

Rieder Bros. the butchers had their harness badly cut up last Friday night: Will Jacobs had his horses tail cut off and various other small crimes were indulged in by somebody last week but when a public officer, a peace officer will allow himself to be knocked down and dragged out and not make any complaint, the public must submit to be ruled by hoodlums.

W. C. Hank has been visiting at Excelsior. He was formerly a resident of that village, a territorial pioneer of 1854. He says that Excelsior and Minnetonka have changed quite a little bit in forty six years.

A large number of our citizens went to the City last Sunday. They took advantage of the very cheap fare on the Soo R. R. 55 cents for the round trip to see the wild west show and other amusements.

O. C. Roberts went to Buffalo on Monday for legal advice. He probably got it.

D. R. Thompson is tearing down old and building up new. A small building on the North East side of his establishment is being taken down today and preparations made for the new one to be put up immediately. The new building will be 70 feet long, a part of it 36 feet wide and a part 20 feet, two stories. It has become necessary for him to have more room on account of the increase of trade.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the other process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16,

Personal.

William Kohler was visiting in town this week.

Roscoe Sturman finished his cooking contract on the G. N. and has returned home again.

Frank Carb, of Waverly, made Delano a business visit, Wednesday.

Miss Erma Wilder returned home from Grand Forks, Dak., this a. m.

Mrs. George W. Bolton returned home from Minneapolis Monday evening.

W. J. Walsh and daughter, of waverly, visited Delano one day this week.

Rev. A. F. Thompson and family drove to cedar Mills on a visit this week.

Ex-county commissioner, Charles Bugbee, of Rockford, was in town Saturday.

Mrs. F. H. Hewitt, of Minneapolis, came up Wednesday to visit Delano friends.

Rev. J. R. Davies and family, of Excelsior, visited at William Stanley's this week.

Leon Frazee, of Monticello, shook hands with old friends here one day this week.

Miss Agnes Stein accompanied her Uncle Otto home to St. Paul, last evening for a visit.

Alva G. Catlin left Tuesday for a few week's rustication with the threshers near Benson.

John Sleight and Mel Powers, of Rockford, and their wives, were Delano visitors Sunday.

A. E. Goodwin, a dentist from Denver, Col., visited with his friend O. A. Burnes, Monday

I. Gutzwiller is still confined to the house. He has had quite a long spell of sickness this time.

Miss Puss Sherrer, of Litchfield, came down Saturday for a week's visit with old Delano friends.

Miss May Mowatt has announced her intention of attending Normal school at Winona, this winter.

Miss Nellie Cunningham, of Watertown, visited Delano friends today, leaving for Minneapolis, tonight.

Mrs. Schurman and children, of Denver, Col. is visiting her sisters Mrs. Belle Sturman and Miss Nellie Miller.

Wash Rader and wife left Tuesday for Minneapolis to look up a home for the winter. They intend moving soon.

H. G. Murphy, of the National Life Insurance company, Montpelier, Vt., transacted business in Delano, Monday.

Clarence and William Kittell, of Minneapolis, spent several days here this week visiting with Wm. Mowatt and family.

Misses Tillare and Shelby Martin, of Minneapolis, were guests of Miss Iza Kerr this week and participated in the St. Cecilia Club recital.

Prof. Freeman spent a part of his vacation in LeSueur county gathering Moss. The Minnesota Valley variety seems to suit his taste best.

Rev. M. Says last week visited the iron ranges above Duluth where he used to be acquainted several years ago. He reports some changes.

Mesdames Carle Rheda and son, of Royalton and Maud White, of Princeton, formerly the Misses Galley, of Delano, visited friends here Wednesday.

A. D. Smith, of Omaha, came Wednesday morning to visit his family and Delano friends. Miss Ellen Arnold accompanied him from Omaha.

C. G. Halgren and family, F. A. Barth and family, C. O. Teas, Charley All, Gus Meyers and others from Watertown, attended the funeral of Mrs. Cunningham here, Sunday.

Charley Carlson and Paul Bergman returned from Sweden last Sunday evening where they went last March. Charley says the trip was all right to see the country but he would rather live in America.

County Cullings.

Editor French, of the Wright County Times, has got home from a visit to Boston, and the Times which has been quivering in the air comes out against imperialism. If Bro. French don't keep away from down east he will soon become a sure enough democrat.

Appendicitis seems to have become epidemic along the line of the Great Northern. An operation was performed at Waverly and one at Howard Lake this week. Nothing like being in fashion and up to the times, even in epidemics.

Maple Plain.

During the last ten days or two weeks the weather has been unusually hot, and heavy showers have been frequent, accompanied by heavy thunder and sharp lightning. We now have plenty of soft water for domestic purposes. The Texan flies and mosquitoes during the last two or three weeks have been worse than a Chinese army. Corn is growing fine and the prospect is we farmers, who get so much good of the high protective tariff will get a good crop of corn. This will make whiskey for the Filipinos and pork for the Boers in South Africa.

The heavy rains have been rather bad on shock threshing and have been trying on the wheat stacks. Most all the threshing outfits around here have or will pull for the prairie.

School will begin in Dist. 102 first Monday of September, James Personett, teacher.

William Fogleman is laid up with a frog fellon on the hand.

Some of our town people have been laid up with summer complaint.

Died, at the home of his parents in Maple Plain, of typhoid pneumonia, 9th present month, Walter Bauro, age 21 years. Funeral was at the Presbyterian church last Saturday, at 2 p. m., preached by Rev. Davis, of Minneapolis. Funeral text Job 14:14. "If a man die shall he live again?"

Watermellons and politics are getting ripe. The republican papers have it they are going to elect everything from the North Pole to the Rioграnde. If the Republicans are put in again they will have to make some more offices for there is more demand for them now than ever before.

We have been hearing for a long time that Aguinaldo and silver were dead. Aguinaldo may be dead for all we know but silver is a live issue.

It is thought by many we need a reformation in politics, and if we could only convert Mark Hanna first there might be some hope of getting up a revival in politics.

We see by the papers William Henry Eustis is going out campaigning for the Republican party. It seems the Republican committee must have very poor taste to send out William Henry to make speeches for the party. Two years ago he run for governor of this state and hardly got a complimentary vote. William Henry belongs to our county but he is a back number.

We see by the papers only a few days ago that 13 car loads of mules had been sent to the Philippine islands. This does not look like the Philippine war is over.

We have a primary election in our county (Hennepin) the 18th of September. This is a kind of forerunner of what's to follow on Nov. 6.

It is expected times will be good right along now unless the Democrats are elected, then the United States will be only a kind of a trading post for all other nations, with Mark Hanna as Indian agent.

There are more men wanting office in Hennepin county than in any other county in the state and there are not offices enough to go half way around. Too many men are looking for an easy job these days. They like to get a living without much work.

The farmer is not counted very high up in G. He grew up between two rows of corn and is only calculated as servant for the millionair, the chief politician, and those who occupy the uppermost seats in the synagogue, and is also allowed to vote on election day if he votes right.

It is claimed this Philippine war has cost this country already $186,678,000 and 2,394 lives. What a prodigal waste of life and money. Does this country ever expect to get returns for the above?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug 10 1900.

Official absenteeism had up to the present week merely been a cause of regret that Mr. McKinley and members of his administration should so far forget the obligations of the oath they took upon assuming office as to go away from their official posts, for their own personal pleasure, while the Chinese situation was at such a critical stage; but this week it has been a cause of shame and deep humiliation to every patriotic American. When Minister Conger's message, saying that the Imperial Chinese troops were daily firing upon the British legation in Pekin, in which he and all the other foreign ministers are cooped up as prisoners, arrived in Washington, neither the President nor the Secretary of State were on hand to deal with it, and nobody can say now what this Government intends to do about it. That public opinion will compel it to do more than hobnob with the Chinese Minister to the U. S and endorse all the fairy tales he can invent is extremely probable. Much as Mr. McKinley dislikes to call an extra session of Congress to decide what this government shall do, which he should have done weeks ago, it looks now as though he would not be able to avoid it and drift along, hoping for some opportunity to do something or to make a bluff at doing something that would be beneficial to his warring political fortunes. The time for drifting has passed. Mr. McKinley's so called "ultimatum" to the Chinese government, sent through Consul General Fowler, at Shanghai, informing China that the situation reported by Minister Conger was intolerable, will hardly scare the Chinese. They are not fools. They know that in this country Congress alone has authority to declare war. For that reason, if for no other, Congress ought to be called in extra session. It would convince the Chinese that we mean business.

Senator Lindsay, whose term will expire next March, having stated in an interview published by a Washington paper his belief that Mr. McKinley would be re-elected, democrats are wondering what sort of a Federal appointment he is after.

Democrats are delighted with Col. Bryan's speech of acceptance, especially that portion of it which so clearly points out the difference between legitimate expansion—acquiring territory to become future states—and the imperialism which acquires islands to become colonial possessions. The speech is probably the most complete argument against imperialism ever presented in a single publication, and should be carefully studied by every democrat who wishes to fit himself to demolish every argument the republicans have yet advanced in favor of the imperialistic foreign policy of the McKinley administration. In fact, the speech might be called the democratic primer of the present campaign.

The periodical statement that this government had sent an ultimatum to the Sultan of Turkey demanding immediate payment of those American missionary claims, which came out this week, has grown both tiresome and farcial. It was from the first laughed at by the diplomatic corps, the European members of which know something of how the Sultan treats demands upon him for money. A gentleman who is in a position to make a good guess said: "It would not surprise me if in the last weeks of the campaign Mr. McKinley sent a strong naval force to compel the Sultan to pay these claims and incidentally to inject a little jingoism into the political campaign at home."

It is not customary for candidates for president to take any hand in the management of their own campaign, but Mr McKinley is doing it. He recently became so thoroughly alarmed that he told Hanna that he intended to reserve the veto right over every important move contemplated by the National Committee and that nothing on side of the regular routine programme must be done by the Committee until it had been submitted to and approved by him. Mr. Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, is one of Mr. McKinley's personal friends who acts as a go between in transmitting messages to and from the National Committee, when Hanna is not available.

WHEN Senator Hoar became so patriotic concerning the Filipinos, his fellow republicans cried out: "He is growing old!" "He is in his dotage!" Now that he has recanted, it is the democrats turn to cry out, "He is still older now!"

IF you wish to aid in spreading democratic doctrines send a few dollars to the GAZETTE with a list of names for subscribers, for three months each, at 25 cts a piece. This will help some wavering men to make up their minds, and want cost you much.

We met his brother Will at Kansas City where he lives, and he informed us that he was also a good Bryan man. Let them come. There is room enough in this world for all, and the democratic party welcomes all lovers of liberty, regardless of previous condition of servitude.

SENATOR HOAR don't seem to have the stability of character to govern himself much better than some say the Filipinos have. They say the senator wants another term. That ought only to stiffen a man in his beliefs; but it seems to only limber him up, until he don't know where he is at.

THE allied powers, Japan, Germany, Russia and England might as well understand first as last, that the United States flag is floating over Chinese territory, and that it is the policy of this administration to never haul it dow. At least that's what they have been telling us for several months. But it may look different in Cathay.

LATE reports are that 40,000 United States soldiers on their way to China will now be diverted from their course and go to the Philippines. How will the boys, who would not enlist for that war of "benevolent asssimilation" but who patriotically enlisted to go to China to help deliver Americans said to be in danger of death at the hands of Chinese boxers, like the diversion business?

THE camel has got its nose into China. There is no telling when it will be content to go. Presumably it will prefer to camp there; To take possession of that country. It has been plain from the beginning that the object of the powers was to take China; to so humiliate it that it would be willing to submit to the dictation of other powers. Seek to cover up and deceive people as they would everything pointed one way, to control of China. Not only commercially, but to control the country, as a colony, or dependency. The powers have tolerably unitedly worked together, but there has been lack of harmony enough to indicate that when China surrenders the big question will be to solve; to whom does it belong? Greed, National greed, will not be satisfied. The division will have to be made. Would it not be better for all powers to go home and attend to the affairs of their own countries, and keep their armies out of China?

REPUBLICAN papers delight in pointing out to their readers who the associates of W. J. Bryan are. They neglect though to say that McKinley & Co. means Marcus Hanna.

CANDIDATE Roosevelt's St. Paul seeech must have been a very profound effort. It has kept him and a lot of other fellows pretty busy ever since it was made explaining what he meant by it.

ARE not our Republican friends inconsistent when they insist on subsidizing American ships to do our carrying trade; and on having gold money, good in any country; while they maintain a protective tariff to keep foreign goods out?

AT Akron Ohio, only a couple of dozen miles from Canton, President McKinley's home, a mob took possession of the town, killing two people and wounding many. The cause was a fruitless attempt to get possession of a colored man, who admitted criminally assaulting a little girl. With a similar occurrence in New York City a short time ago this gives the North no chance to crow over the South in such matters. Lynch law is to be condemned. But the many escapes from justice, and long delayed trials and convictions make people desperate. Laws should be promptly enforced and carefully administered.

Right Kind of Expansion.

From the Minneapolis Times of Saturday, Aug. 18, we clip the following:

"Twenty five hundred persons stood in the open air on a vacant lot opposite St. Charles' church, Thirteenth avenue S and Fourth street, last night to listen to an address by Father Cleary, who is about to go to Europe on a vacation. The audience comprised the parishoners and friends of Father Cleary, and fully one half of it was composed of women.

Father Cleary took for his theme "American Expansion," and in expounding it, announced that he was an expansionist, but a true one, and one who was opposed to forcing a government on an unwilling people. He spoke in part as follows:

"While I belong to no political creed and am not biased by any party prejudices, I do not hesitate to say that I am an expansionist. I believe in American expansion, because I believe in America. I believe that every true American should do all in his power to spread the blessings enjoyed under our wise government to the other and less fortunate nations of the earth. It is a blessing, and securing it to others is an act worthy of a true lover of humanity.

"While I believe in this form of expansion, I most certainly am not in favor of forcing our government upon an unwilling people. It is the greatest government since the dawn of civilization, because it recognizes man's inherent right to manhood, and that is one reason why it should not be thrust on people who resist it, to the point of the sword.

"I would be glad to see it go broad cast over the earth. I would want every human being on the face of the earth to enjoy its blessings, but let it go willingly. I believe that every honest American who does not believe that the Declaration of Independence is an obsolete document, will be an expansionist, but their warfare will be to teach all children of men that they can find the highest form of happiness beneath our flag, where man is the sovereign, and no one rules by divine right.

NOT AN IMPERIALIST.

"God has given men the right to govern themselves, and therefore while I am an expansionist I am not an imperialist, who would force our system of government upon a people without their consent. I have no party and I state my feeling as an American citizen. There is a crisis in the history of our country. Every American should become familiar with our system of government, and then teach it those who do not know it, not because it is our government, but because it is right. And might does not make right. We are the strongest nation on the globe, but that is no reason why we should conquer the weaker nations on the other side of the earth. It is not necessary to make unwilling subjects of people across the distant seas in order that our commerce be extended and our trade flourish there. That will come without the conquest of the people. Rather let us always keep in mind that a true government is for the people, by the people and of the people, and that such a government is one that must arrive by consent and not by conquest."

W. J. BRYAN, notwithstanding the report that he would make no speeches about the country, is electrifying his old neighbors in his old Congressional district in Neb., and his speeches get into some of the papers, and wake up a good many people even in Minnesota. Those reports of his silence must have eminated from where lots of other reports do now-a-days, from his opponents.

"Eternal Vigilence is the Price of Liberty."

In a country like ours, where the tendency is for the money holders to use all means to increase their wealth, even to the making of laws favorable to themselves, taxing the poor man, by tariffs, war taxes, and other means, while their own big incomes go untaxed, it stands every voter in hand to be vigilant! To be on guard! To see that his liberties are preserved! To see that all men are equal in the eyes of the law! Thanks to a kind Providence and the noble efforts of those who founded our government, and those who have preserved it to the present day, we have a vote. Let us be vigilant! Let us cast our vote for the maintainance of our republic!

Commercial Expansion Fifty Years Ago.

The opening of Japan by an American fleet nearly half a century ago is a fact that makes rubbish of one of the leading contentions of those who attack the Asiatic policy of the McKinley administration —Duluth News Tribune.

The Tribune says Commodore Perry succeeded in negotiating a treaty of commerce. That's all right. It seems Japan has been making rapid strides toward our style of civilization ever since. But how does the News Tribune account for the fact when our flag was not nailed to Japan's tallest rattans, by Commodore Perry, but the inhabitants were left to work out their own destiny? Why couldn't other oriental people profit by their example? And why couldn't President McKinley follow the precedent established by his illustrious predecessor of half a century ago, President Polk.

Roosevelt on Democrats.

The republican candidate for vice president says that "Democrats are dishonest at home, and cowards abroad." Is that so? Then some of the rest of us are in good company. There is Admiral Dewey for instance. Is he dishonest at home and a coward abroad? Then there is Admiral Schley. Is he a coward abroad and dishonest at home? Then there is general Nelson A. Miles. Do these epithets apply to him? Young man, whose father was a democrat, was your father dishonest at home and a coward abroad? Mere physical courage is a matter of organism. Some of the best men on earth have been physical cowards but they were honest. Because a man believes in democratic principals, is he dishonest at home and a coward abroad? One half or a little more of the people of the United States are democrats. Does this rough rider mean to say that one half of the people of this country are dishonest at home and cowards abroad? Mr. Roosevelt is not a physical coward but when a man swears to what he did when assistant secretary of the navy, to get rid of paying his honest taxes, how is he to keep the people from thinking that he belongs in a part at least to the class he describes. Which is the most sterling virtue anyway, physical courage or honesty? Mr. Roosevelt has simply spoken through his hat. A man's politics can never make him brave or honest. When he was a candidate for governor of New York he promised if elected to bring the canal theives to justice. Has he lost his courage or honesty or both? Not one of those connected with that gigantic steal has been prosecuted. No man or set of men can abrogate to themselves all of the courage or honesty on earth. When they attempt to do so the glass is likely to be turned upon themselves. Democrats would like to believe that Roosevelt is honest and brave even if he be the republican candidate for a high office. But when he makes such speeches as the one at St. Paul, humanity in general must loose faith in him in both these regards.—LeSueur Sentinel.

Democratic County Convention and Primaries.

A Democratic delegate convention for the county of Wright, State of Minnesota, will be held on Thursday, August 30th, 1900, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the Court House in the Village of Buffalo in said county, for the purpose of selecting 23 delegates to the Democratic State Convention to be held in the city of St. Paul on Thursday, Sept. 6th, A. D. 1900, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the several states offices to be balloted for at the general election in said State of Minnesota on Nov. 6, A. D. 1900.

Also for the purpose of electing 15 delegates to attend the 6th district democratic Congressional convention to be held in the city of Aitkin, on the 5th day of September, A. D. 1900, at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for the office of congressman for said district, to be voted for at the general election in November, 1900, and to transact such other business as may be properly brought before such convention.

The basis of representation shall be one delegate for every 20 votes or major fraction thereof, cast for Jouh Lind for governor, and for Chas. A. Towne for Representative in November, 1898.

Still They Come.

Our cousin at Montivedeo, a long time very zealous republican, but for a few years back getting light, writes us:

"I am always glad to get your paper. It is one of the best I read" * *

Well I think all my old prejudices against the democratic party have bleached out. I shall go to the Kansas City platform straight this fall. I want to put my vote where it will count most to down McKinley and Imperialism. How was brother Will? I presume he was sound on the Democratic platform. It is certainly the most patriotic platform I ever read. The Republicans can't flaunt the bloody shirt any more"

T. W. KEITHLEY.

Maple Plain.

Mr. Editor, while wating for the weather to cool I am constrained to write up a few lines for your paper.

Why do not ye editors take a vacation during hot weather same as the city clergy. It would inspire you with new and increased courage.

Last week we had a number of politicians in our town looking after their interest officially.

Our primary election will be held 18th of September and that will tell who is nominated in Hennepin county for office.

There will be prohibition lecture at school hall Maple Plain, on the evening of 28th present month. Everybody is invited to come out and get converted into the prohibition faith.

A good many of the farmers are threshing now, wheat turning out five to twenty bushels per acre, and all kinds of grades.

E. A. Conoyer has been on the sick list for some time.

The county road work being done on the hill at Pioneer creek between Shaw's crossing and Armstrong is nearly completed.

Many of the farmers are plowing now, turning under the heavy coat of vegetation, which is about as good as a coat of manure.

Last Saturday E. W. Hall arrived here from California. He was once a resident of our town, and for awhile lived at Hutchinson, this state, but during the last 10 or 12 years has lived in California, and has also been to Alaska. He will visit relatives and friends for a short time and will then go to Canada to visit his father, who he has not seen for about 30 years. His father is now 80 years old.

The depot at Maple Plain is being improved by putting a bay window on it next to the track.

Our hot weather has been good for corn and weeds.

Mr. Editor, we have been following the slimy trail of the crooked serpent for 6,000 years and have not been able to overtake him yet. During the first centuries after creation, man lived much longer than now, some of them living many hundred years. They could hold office as good long time; could filch the treasury and then have a good long time to repent before the flood.

OVER WISE.

Avaunt, oh, man of wisdom! Though your purpose may be kind,
You jar our inclinations and you irritate the mind.
You bid each mortal be as dull and silent as a clam,
Since laughter's just a nervous twitching of the diaphragm;
And tears, so much respected as an evidence of woe,
Appear because the ducts are in a state of overflow;
And the dainty, roguish dimple which we ardently adore
Is merely a depression in a muscle—nothing more.

Her charming blushes—even these the scientist disdains;
They are simply a distention of the capillary veins.
He sees no more than pigment in the color of her hair;
Each sentiment he strangles in his cynical despair.
Oh, better be a toiler with a heart attuned to joy,
Or a stroller in whose bosom earthly blisses do not cloy,
Or a savage on an island where enthusiasms start,
Than be the man who yawns and says he knows it all by heart.
—Washington Star.

THE TRUE STORY OF HENNESSY'S LAWSUIT

IT was after lunch at the club. Over in a corner of the library where the smoke was thickest an old man, evidently a visitor, was sitting upright on the edge of a big leather armchair. Gregory, who had introduced the old gentleman as "Maj. Barnes, an old friend of my father's—in town for the day," was trying to be entertaining while he smoked, but the weather was hot and nobody helped.

"Major," Gregory remarked with a yawn, just after a poor joke of Buffum's had fallen flat, "tell us that story about that old lawsuit."

The major's eyes began to twinkle. He responded promptly.

"That was the case of Buggy vs. Hennessy. Buggy had procured a summons for Hennessy, which had been issued and served, and on the return day two double sledloads of people from the lower end of our county came driving up and filled the little courtroom full. I was justice of the peace then—am yet, in fact, and have been this 40 years. Well, case was called. 'James K. Buggy, plaintiff,' a smooth sort of lawyer there in our town, answered for Buggy. Gillette was his name. Your father knew him well, Gregory. 'Timothy Hennessy, defendant,' and an old Yankee of the name of Hadley was on his feet for Hennessy.

"First thing in order, of course, was reading the bill of particulars. 'Timothy Hennessy to James K. Buggy, Dr., for digging a well 24 feet deep, at one dollar a foot, $24; credit by cash, $14; balance, $10.'

"I had hardly finished reading it before Hennessy's lawyer said: 'That bill's all right. We admit it.'

"'You do,' says Gillette. 'You admit this bill?'

"'Yes, certainly.'

"'Well, then, your honor,' says Gillette, 'we've nothing more to say. We rest.'

"'Well, Mr. Hadley' I said, 'what have you to say to this?'

"'Simply this, your honor,' drawled old Hadley. 'We want to offset our damages. We intend to prove that Mr. Hennessy's well went dry, and that, in consequence, he was compelled to haul water from the creek, a long distance off, and was at great trouble and expense for men and teams.'

"'All right, Hadley,' I said. 'Call your witnesses.'

"'Flannigan, come up here,' says Hadley. Flannigan came striding—a big, tousle-bearded six-footer, in a brown knit shirt, decorated with suspenders.

"'Stand there and be sworn,' says Hadley. Flannigan's left hand went up and his big left foot went out, planting itself a half-yard in front of the other—so. 'Right hand,' snapped Hadley, and Flannigan shifted to the right hand and foot like a dancing elephant.

"Now, Mr. Flannigan,' Hadley began, when the oath had been administered, 'do you know these parties?'

"Flannigan pretended to look bewildered, and pretended mighty well, too. 'Pairties, is it? An' is it a pairty, then? Shure, a' I thocht it was a lawsuit.'

"Hadley cleared his throat. 'Mr. Flannigan,' he repeated, sternly, 'do you know Mr. Hennessy, here?'

"'Av coorse I do know him! Ye know it yerself that I know him. An' is it a question like that ye'll be wantin' to ax me?'

"'Very well—you know him. Do you know anything about his having a well dug?'

"'Av coorse I know that Buggy dug him a well. An' is it livin' in the wurrld I am an' seein' nothin' with me eyes, do ye think?'

"Hadley began to get on an awful dignity. 'Tell me what you know about that well's going dry?'

"'Divil a bit at all I know why wells go dry. I'm no well-digger. Ax Buggy why it went dry.'

"Look here, Flannigan; you measured that well, didn't you?'

"'Av coorse I did measure it.'

"'And how deep was it?'

"'An' why should I be after tellin' ye that? Shure, an' it's a free chance an' ye can go measure it yerself if ye want to know.'

"'I don't want to know, man—'

"'Then what did ye ax me for?'

"'The court has to know—'

"'Och! Divil a bit the court cares about how dape wells are down in our quarter.'

"'Will you state the depth of that well?'

"'Divil a bit. Go measure it yerself.'

"About that time I took pity on Hadley and beckoned Flannigan up close to me. 'See here, Flannigan,' I said, "'tween you and me, how deep was that well? I've got a kind of curiosity to know.'

"'Will, thin, yer honor, I'll tell ye,' he says, in a hoarse whisper. 'I tuk a piece of clothesline, ye know, an' I tied a stone on the end of it. An' I just paid it out, han' over han'—so—until it struck bottom—see? An' then, yer honor, bein' as Hennessy's a rich man' an' Buggy's a poor divil, I just gave a couple foot more for Buggy's benefit. An', yer honor, barrin' the couple foot I gave Buggy because Hennessy's rich, the well was 24 feet dape, yer honor.'

"By that time Hadley had got his breath again. 'Mr. Flannigan,' says he, 'we're trying to prove damages here, you know. Now, how much damage should you say it was to Mr. Hennessy having to haul water for his stock all winter?'

"'Divil a bit of dommidge! He had dom good luck to get the wather. It was an advantage to 'im that he could get wather for his stock. Shure, an' if he thought it was a dommidge, why didn't he quit hauling it?'

"Hadley gave a groan. 'I give him up,' he says. 'Stand aside, Flannigan! You don't know anything. Brady, you come up here and be sworn.'

"Brady was a short, chunky Irishman, with a twinkle in his blue eyes that gave the lie to his fat, vacant-looking face. 'O'im of the same opinion as Mr. Flannigan,' says Brady, with a simple grin. 'Oi think it was a great advontage to Mr. Hennessy to get wather from the crick. If he hadn't got it, his stock would a' died. I can't see how it has any dommidge at all.'

"'Well, you stand aside,' says Hadley. 'Mellon, you come up here.'

"Mellon was a little crazy-acting fellow with his hair hanging in his eyes—all wild. He didn't talk. He just babbled on high C.

"'Why—why—why—why!' he began. 'Hadn't been for the crick, Hennessy's horses would all died! Why—why—why—why—'twas good luck to 'im he could get wather from the crick. Why, hadn't it been for the crick, he'd had to go all the way to the O'Plaine to get wather! Why—why—why, he'd lost all his stock, hadn't been for the crick.'

"Well, poor old Hadley got rid of him at last and called up a green Yankee boy about 18 years old. His arms and legs were twice too long for his clothes and he had the grin of a Cheshire cat and held his shoulders up to his ears—so.

"'Now, John,' says Hadley, 'you just tell how much you think Mr. Buggy ought to pay Mr. Hennessy on account of his having to haul water all winter, when he'd a well dug on purpose to water his stock.'

"John snuffled. 'Nobody didn't say nothin' 'bout Mr. Buggy's hirin' Mr. Hennessy to haul no water,' he drawled out. 'Mr. Buggy don't need no water, anyhow. Hain't got no horses nor no stock at all. I don't believe he asked Mr. Hennessy to haul no water for him, an' so I don't see no reason why he should pay Mr. Hennessy for haulin' water, when—'

"'There! There! That'll do,' says Hadley. 'I give it up, squire. I can't prove anything.'

"'Oh, well,' I said, 'it's short work then. I shall have to enter judgment against you, Mr. Hennessy, for ten dollars and costs. Witness and constable fees and justice's costs, $4,50. Total, $14.50.'

"Grizzly old Hennessy walked up as cheerfully as a cricket and threw $15 on the table. 'Shove the odd half in yer trousers, squire,' he says. 'Ye'll nade it some day, an' I'm satisfied anyhow! Ye see, yer honor, I used to fight with the b'ys in my young days, but I'm getting too ould now. So all I can do is to take a little jerk at 'em in the la' once in awhile. Now, squire, just gather up yer little trops an' come over to the grocery an' we'll have a drink together an' go home an' be happy until next time!'"

Much laughter greeted the end of the story as the old major dropped back into the leather chair, and Gregory, with a satisfied grin, proceeded to follow old Hennessy's example by calling a waiter and directing him to "take the gentlemen's orders."—Chicago Daily Record.

A Bachelor's Comment.

"A rich woman who was saved by a Chicago man from drowning many years ago has just died a natural death, leaving him $1,200."

"Well, let's be charitable. The amount isn't very large, it is true, but most women who are saved that way get married to their rescuers."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Good Trial.

A good way to pick out a wife, according to a Scotch saying, is to choose the woman you would like to keep you company through a month's rainy weather on an island.

A pet robin awoke a farmer in New Jersey in time for him to frighten away burglars. The price of pet robin-burglar alarms will now go up.

A reaction has set in against women removing their hats in church, and Rev. W. D. Holly, of Christ Episcopal church, at Hackensack, N. J., forbids the women of his flock to take off their headgear. He quoted from the Bible thus in support of his stand: "But every woman that prayeth with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head."

The American steamship Paris, which ran onto the Manacle rocks about a year ago, and was then taken to Cardiff for repairs, is being equipped with an entire new bottom, will have new engines and boilers capable of developing 20,000 horse-power—2,000 horse-power more than the old engines—and will be launched in about seven months as the Philadelphia.

The Maine newspaper writers have evidently started a contest for the purpose of finding the state's champion liar. One of them has a dispatch from Canaan, telling of a bolt of lightning that struck a house in that city, and, after ripping out one of the sides of the building, it lighted a lamp in the parlor, and cured the owner of the house of rheumatism.

Many Americans leave home to go to Europe every year to see sights which are discounted by those at home. They express great wonder at the cog railway up the Rigi Kulm which runs a distance of 4½ miles, while by going to Pike's peak they may ride on one 8¾ miles long. The ascent of the former is 4,072 feet, that of the latter is 8,100 feet, an average of 846 feet per mile, the maximum grade being 1,320 feet.

A member of the Chinese commission to the Paris exposition now in Paris is credited with making the following statement to a Frenchman: "We are ready to fight all Europe; we have an army that you cannot overcome. All the countries in the world may try in vain, and you will see that we shall astonish the world. We know your map of Europe better than yourselves. We also have our plans for the future."

During the fiscal year which ended on June 30 last 341,711 foreigners entered this country through the port of New York. Probably the total immigration for the year will not fall short of 530,000. The noteworthy and not altogether agreeable difference between the immigation of 1900 and that of 30 years ago is that now most of the newcomers are from southern and eastern Europe, while they used to be from western and northern Europe.

Everett Prior, of Jersey City, N. J., rebelled against his father's orders to wash dishes, cook meals and perform other duties about the house and ran away from home on June 23. He was arraigned before Magistrate Zeller in the Harlem police court. When questioned by the magistrate the boy said he had left home because his father abused him and wanted to make a "girl" of him. Magistrate Zeller told the boy he had done right. He then gave the boy into the custody of his cousin.

There is at least one newspaper which is edited by a king. In far-away New Zealand there is an interesting little eight-page paper, with three columns to a page, printed in both the English and the native tongue; and called the Pleiades, or Seven Stars. Its editor is no less a person than his Royal Highness Towhiao. It is true that this potentate is not an independent sovereign, but when he descends from the royal throne to the editorial chair, then, indeed, he is monarch of all he surveys.

The shah of Persia was greatly pleased with the mounted bicycle police squad which followed him as a guard while he was in Paris, and he has purchased 60 wheels with which to form such a force when he arrives home. His ship will be loaded with many curios in the shape of inventions which have never been seen in his country. He takes with him nine automobiles, 100 telephones, ten sewing machines, three phonographs. The majority of the things the shah purchased bore the mark "Made in U. S. A."

A letter from Prof. Bernard Moses to President Wheeler, of the state univesity of California, conveys the information that the United States Philippine commission thinks it advisable to send over to this country a large number of bright young natives and give them an education, so that they may go back and become instructors of their people. Prof. Moses says in part: "From observations already made, I am inclined to think that we shall find among the young people of the islands a large number of eager and competent students."

Purvis & Co., of Williamsport, Pa., a prominent firm of bankers in the state, have advertised that they will pay in full all claims against the banking house of Purvis & Co., of Baltimore, the firm that failed in 1868, over 30 years ago. The advertisement reads: "These are debts of honor, and will be paid regardless of the statute of limitations, bankrupt laws or anything else." The present head of the Purvis firm was a boy when his father and grandfather failed, and it has been his great ambition to wipe out all debts against the family name.

Noiseless car wheels are the latest thing in the way of street railway improvements. The secret of the absence of noise is in a layer of paper placed between the tire and the wheel proper—very simple but exceedingly effective. Moreover, when the tires get worn out it is not necessary to press them off, but they are unbolted from the paper connection or ring on the outer rim of the wheel. The wheels are made of chilled steel, and the feature of the device is that a new wheel is made by the replacing of the tire and five pounds of new paper.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

A 19-year-old boy arrested in Leipsic was commissioned to kill King Albert of Saxony.

The United States, next to France, leads the world in the number of honors won at the Paris exposition. The American visitors have been awarded 2,500 grand prizes.

The demand made by the Anglo-American society in London is to "overthrow the sultan and stop the massacres in Armenia."

Dispatches received in London say that Gen. Dewet has eluded his English pursuers and joined forces with Gen. Delarey. It is also reported that President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, died from wounds.

In Vienna Emperor Francis Joseph's seventy-sixth birthday was celebrated.

American, British, Japanese and Russian troops acting together captured Peking, the capital of China, after a hard fight. The ministers and all under their care at the legations are now under a strong guard of allies. Emperor Kwang-Hsu accompanied the empress dowager in her flight to Hsian-Fu. American troops will not be withdrawn from China until the lives of foreigners are no longer threatened.

To succeed Lord Wolseley Lord Roberts has been appointed as commander-in-chief of the British army.

The death of Ignacio Andrade, ex-president of Venezuela, occurred in Caracas.

The official dispatches confirm the news of Peking's fall. The losses of the allies and Chinese are estimated at 1,500 each. The Forbidden City in Peking was being bombarded by the allied forces. The empress dowager of China was reported by Admiral Remey to be a prisoner at Peking.

The Cuban exhibits at the Paris exposition received 140 prizes.

It was reported that Gen. Dewet captured 4,000 British and seven guns, crippling the forces of Kitchener and Buller. He joined Delarey, then turned on his pursuers and completely out-maneuvered them.

MINISTERS ARE SAFE

Allies' Forces Capture and Enter Chinese Capital.

They Meet with Desperate Resistance But Are Finally Successful—Empress and Emperor Leave Peking.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The allied armies have captured and entered Peking in the face of obstinate resistance, and the members of the foreign legations are safe. Official confirmation of the fall of the Chinese capital came to the United States government Friday night in the shape of two cablegrams, one from Admiral Remey and the other from Consul Fowler at Chefoo.

Remey's Dispatch.

Admiral Remey's dispatch is as follows:

"Taku, Aug. 17.—Just received telegram from Tientsin, dated 16th, ten p. m.: 'Peking was captured on August 15. Foreign legations are safe. Details follow shortly.'

"REMEY."

Met with Resistance.

That from Consul Fowler, giving important details of the occurrences at the time of the capture of the city, is as follows:

"Chefoo, Aug. 17.—Secretary of State, Washington: Japanese admiral reports allies attacked Peking, East, 15th. Obstinate resistance. Evening, Japanese entered capital with other forces. Immediately surrounded legations. Inmates safe. Japanese loss over 100. Chinese 300.

(Signed) "FOWLER."

Strongly Resisted.

Contrary to the press reports of Friday, Consul Fowler's dispatch shows that the attack on the city met with strong resistance. The Japanese force engaged with the advance, according to the understanding of the officials here, numbered 10,000 men, so that the loss suffered by them was over one per cent. Allowance is made for losses in the forces of the other armies, but it is presumed that it was in proportion to that suffered by the Japanese.

Empress Leaves Peking.

London, Aug. 18.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says:

"The allies entered Peking August 15. It is believed that Yuan-Shi-Kai's troops have gone thence to Shen-Si to protect the empress, who, according to reports received by local officials here, with Tuan, the imperial household and the bulk of the army and Boxers, left Peking August 7, for Hsian-Fu."

Bombard Inner City.

London, Aug. 20.—Rear Admiral Bruce cables the admiralty from Chefoo, August 19, as follows:

"Am informed on the authority of the Japanese that street fighting still continues in Peking, part of which is on fire. Yang-lu prevented the empress from leaving, and a last tsand is now being made in the inner city, which is surrounded by the allies and is being bombarded."

Another Confirmation.

Washington, Aug. 20.—From Gen. Chaffee Sunday the war department received official confirmation of the fall of Peking and the rescue of the beleaguered legationers.

"Chefoo, Aug 19.—Adjutant General, Washington. Peking, Aug. 15: We entered legations' grounds at five o'clock last night with Fourteenth and Light battery. Eight wounded during day's fighting; otherwise all well. CHAFFEE."

Appeals for Peace.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The Chinese government, through Li Hung Chang, has made application to the United States for the appointment of Minister Conger or some other American official with authority to open negotiations for the establishment of peace and for fixing definite terms for the settlement of the present trouble.

Li Hung Chang's application for the appointment of a peace commissioner expresses willingness to conduct the negotiations at a point desired by the powers and it is expected that this will be Peking or Tientsin. A similar application has been made by Earl Li to all of the other powers interested.

It is likely that the matter will be one of the main subjects of consideration at the cabinet meeting to-day. But there is reason to believe that the overtures will in effect be rejected, on the ground that the conditions laid down in the American note of August 12 have not been complied with, and until complied with the government's course must proceed without reference to China's appeal for a halt in the proceedings.

Legations Ready to Succumb.

Peking, Friday, Aug. 17, via Shanghai, Aug. 21.—"If the relieving column had not arrived when it did we should probably have succumbed." Thus says Minister Conger.

"They tried to annihilate us the day before you got in. Prince Ching, president of the tsung-li-yamen, sent word that his officers had received orders to cease firing on us under pain of death. At seven o'clock in the evening of the same day the Chinese opened fire and this continued all day. The Americans lost seven marines killed and 15 wounded, and one child killed.

Chinese Government Responsible.

"The whole movement is purely a governmental one. The Boxers are only a pretense, having no guns.

"The confidential adviser of the empress was the leader of the imperial troops here.

"In 11 days over 2,000 shells fell among us."

British Minister's Statement.

In an interview Sir Claude MacDonald, the British minister, states:

"The Chinese broke every engagement with the foreign ministers. There is no truth in the story that the imperial palace supplied the legations with food. They sent vegetables, which were refused. The total casualties during the siege of the legations were 67 killed and 120 wounded."

Made a Heroic Resistance.

Manila, Aug. 21.—A Filipino force of 600 men attacked 30 men of the Forty-third United States infantry in garrison in a convent at Catubig, island of Samar, and killed 19 and wounded five. The little band made heroic resistance and killed 200 of the enemy. A flying column of the Forty-third infantry has been formed to drive Gen. Majica from the island of Leyte.

Kills Father in Self-Defense.

Wymore, Neb., Aug. 19.—James M. Burnham, editor of the Wymorian, of this city, shot and killed his father, Collins A. Burnham, at the family home this morning. The father was intoxicated and made a savage attack on his son. The coroner's verdict found the shooting justifiable on the ground of self-defense.

Corner Stone Laid.

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 21.—The corner stone of the monument to Sergt. Charles Floyd, of the Lewis and Clark expedition, was laid Monday with imposing ceremonies. Ex-Congressman Perkins made the principal address. Congress and the legislature have both made appropriations for the monument.

POWERS FOUND GUILTY.

Jury in the Famous Case at Georgetown, Ky., Returns Verdict of Life Imprisonment.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 20.—"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty and fix his punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for the rest of his natural life." This was the wording of the verdict in the case of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers, charged with being an accessory before the fact to the murder of William Goebel. The jury retired at 1:32 p. m. Saturday and returned its verdict at 2:25 o'clock, having been out only 53 minutes. Juror Craig stated afterward that the verdict could have been returned even sooner, but considerable time was taken up in reading the instructions. The vote in favor of a life sentence was unanimous.

The assassination of William Goebel was the climax of the contest growing out of the state election in Kentucky last fall. The crime was committed while the contest committee of the legislature was considering the evidence presented by Goebel, who claimed the office of governor, then held by Taylor, republican. According to the evidence the murder was the result of a plot among the friends of the incumbent.

Senator Goebel was walking through the capital grounds to the statehouse on January 30 when a rifle bullet fired from a window of the building penetrated his side. When the serious nature of the wound was discovered the contest committee resolved to take no more evidence, but render a decision at once. The ruling was in favor of Goebel, every democrat voting for him, the two republican members standing by Taylor. On his deathbed Goebel was sworn in as governor and J. C. W. Beckham as lieutenant governor.

With the death of Gov. Goebel the attempt to hunt down his assassin became the one object of his friends and followers. It was claimed the plot to put him out of the way had been arranged by or with the approval of several of the state officials whose positions were threatened by the contests. A large reward was offered for the arrest of the slayer, and every effort possible was made to unravel the details of the alleged conspiracy. Men said to have uttered threats against the democratic contestant were arrested, a peculiar feature of the case being the fact that several had on their persons official pardons signed by Gov. Taylor, prepared seemingly for just such a contingency. Evidence involving several of those in the statehouse at the time of the assassination accumulated until finally three of the accused men, Wharton Golden, W. H. Culton and H. E. Youtsey, made confessions which connected officials with the crime.

According to the statement of these witnesses the conspirators' original plan was to fill the town with armed mountaineers, friends of Tayor, start a riot in the state assembly, and during the excitement to kill Goebel and other leading democrats. When that failed of execution, the witnesses said, a man was hired to shoot Goebel from a room in the statehouse.

Powers, with six others who were involved by the testimony, was indicted by the grand jury and placed in jail at Frankfort. A bill holding Gov. Taylor implicated as an accessory after the fact also was returned, but in the meantime the republican executive, ousted from office by the state court of appeals and the United States supreme court, had left the state, and extradition was refused by Gov. Mount, of Indiana.

The trials of the alleged conspirators were transferred from Frankfort to Georgetown, the prisoners claiming they could not get a fair hearing in the state capital. It was decided to try each case separately, some of the accused men hoping to prove innocence if given a chance for a defense without the others.

DAMAGED BY WINDSTORM.

City of Sheboygan, Wis., Suffers from a Tornado—Loss Estimated at $300,000.

Milwaukee, Aug. 21.—A special from Sheboygan, Wis., says: A terrific windstorm struck the city Monday afternoon. The storm came very suddenly from the north. Eight large buildings were completely wrecked, and 200 small houses were blown down. The loss will be upwards of $300,000. At noon it was as dark as night and intensely hot. A few moments before one o'clock the storm broke, increasing in force until a cyclone was blowing. People were thrown down, and fences and signs hurled hundreds of feet. The storm raged for some minutes and passed off to the south. The storm started in the western part of the city, near the cemetery, and swept down onto the South side and off into the lake. It was two miles wide, and wrecked everything in its path. All was over in ten minutes, although it seemed hours to the panic stricken people. The roof of the large warehouse of the Crocker company was blown off and thrown against the large factory. The building was wrecked, and the large stock of chairs was left without protection from the rain which fell in torrents.

Memorial Services Held.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Amid scenes of impressive solemnity and in the presence of the president of the United States, members of the cabinet, officers of the army and navy, the ambassadors and ministers of foreign countries and a great concourse of people from civil life, the memorial services for the late King Humbert I. of Italy were held at St. Matthew's Catholic church at 11 o'clock Sunday. The announcement of the services was made by the Italian ambassador, Baron Fava, and with the cooperation of the state department the event was given a distinctly official character.

Mrs. Lucy Parsons Fined.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—As a warning to anarchists Justice Sabath, in the Maxwell street police court Monday, imposed a fine of $50 on Lucy Parsons, arrested Sunday, August 5, near the West Twelfth Street Turner hall. Her four codefendants—Abraham Edelstadt, Clemens Pfeutzner, Herman Goodman and Paul Vandree—placed under arrest at the same time, were discharged after a severe scoring by the court.

Shoots Husband and Wife.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—Earl Burnham, 28 years of age, a post office employe, shot and killed Mrs. Anna Tyson and wounded her husband at their residence at No. 190 Vine street Monday night. Burnham and the Tyson family lived in the same house and have had some trouble in regard to the payment of rent, but there was no immediate cause for trouble Monday night.

A Costly Fire.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 20.—A Sentinel special from Alexandria, Ind., says: The entire plant of the Kelly Ax Manufacturing company, valued at $800,000, was destroyed by fire Sunday evening. This was one of the largest factories in this city and the largest ax factory in the world, employing some 800 or 1,000 men when running in full force.

FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair with Shampoos of Cuticura SOAP

And light dressings of CUTICURA, purest of emollient skin cures. This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of Women

Use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing, red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

All that has been said of CUTICURA SOAP may be said with even greater emphasis of CUTICURA Ointment, the most delicate, and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with CUTICURA SOAP (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humor, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. The Set, $1.25 A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. FORGOT TO VOTE

THE RECORD OF THE GENIAL CAPTAIN AS A LEGISLATOR.

Troubled With Absence of Mind or Absence of Body. The Matter With the Commercial Travelers—Republicans Relying on a Whoop and a Snort—Shameful Treatment of the Captain by His Own Organs—Other Points of a Political Nature.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, Aug. 20, 1900.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

The fruits of a public man are his public acts. The public acts of a legislator are recorded in the journal of the house of which he has been a member.

Not many years ago (not so many that the ink has faded) the present Republican candidate for governor of Minnesota was a member of the house of representatives. To avoid all possibility of mistake, let it be said that his name is Samuel R. Van Sant, otherwise known as the "Captain." Like all other members of that worthy assembly, he left behind him a record, to bless or to damn, as the case may be.

Let us take a look at it. The Captain, being such a "jolly" good fellow, will not mind it, and, being a candidate for governor, he is, of course, anxious that his zeal and devotion to duty in the minor position should count in his favor, now that he aspires to serve the people in a more important office. What more natural than to expect promotion for duty well done?

So here goes: It was in the year 1893 that the Captain carved out for himself the record which now will be examined.

The first measure of importance to be met with in the journal of the house is H. F. No. 26. This was a very meritorious bill. It aimed to protect the rights of citizenship by making it a misdemeanor on the part of employers to require, as a condition of employment, the surrender by any person of his rights as a citizen. This measure was conceived with the idea of protecting those who were not in a position to protect themselves. The worthy Captain would be the very man to bear down hard on a bill of this kind and to sit up nights thinking how to secure its passage. Let us see how he voted. Thunder and lightning! What can have been the matter with the Captain? HE FORGOT TO VOTE. There must have been some misunderstanding somewhere. Perhaps the Captain had not got onto the ropes yet.

The next bill of a somewhat similar character was H. F. No. 95, a bill for the protection of employes. What does the record say?

Forgot to vote again? Well, well, sure enough. Captain, you will have to do better than this if you want the votes of the laboring men.

Next comes H. F. 324, a bill prohibiting pawnbrokers from charging more than 10 per cent interest. Surely the Captain's heart bleeds for these poor people who find it necessary to patronize the pawnbroker? Let us see the record. Did he forget to vote this time also? Well yes, he did, of course. He is the prosperity candidate, and will have nothing to do with such low-down trash as the people who patronize the pawnbrokers. In the language of the classics, to —ll with 'em.

Now let us try a senate file for a change. Here is one, S. F. 266, a bill for an act to compel street railway companies to protect certain of their employes (motormen) from the inclemencies of the weather. Now, if there ever was a measure that had merit in it, this is the one. The motormen used to have to stand out on the open platform, no matter how cold and stormy it might be. It was such an inhumane and unnecessary hardship that public opinion demanded a stop put to it; but, hanged if the Captain did not again forget to vote.

For fear that this thing may become tiresome, perhaps it would be best to postpone moralizing and go at the facts as revealed by the record without further comment.

H. H. 502 provides for the erection of grain elevators on the right of way of railroads and is designed to prevent monopoly in the local grain markets. The Captain forgot to vote.

H. F. 674 declares express companies to be common carriers and as such subject to regulation. T. C. f. t. v. (To save space these letters will be understood as meaning that the Captain, as usual, forgot to vote.)

H. F. 734 prohibits pools and trusts in Minnesota. T. C. f. t. v.

S. F. 114 authorizes the levy and collection of taxes on inheritances, etc. T. C. f. t. v.

S. F. 127 requires railroad companies to give notice of the time when belated passenger trains are expected to arrive. T. C. f. t. v.

S. F. 577 provides for the appointment of a committee to investigate certain frauds upon the state in connection with the sale of public lands. T. C. f. t. v.

H. F. 56 provides for the building of sidetracks to elevators and mills situated on lands adjacent to the right of way of railroads. T. C. f. t. v.

H. F. 340 provides for the interchange of cars at junction points. T. C. f. t. v.

H. F. 274 provides for the stopping of trains at county seats. The Captain here cleared his throat, spat on his hands, manned his soul with firmness, donned his rough rider hat, and voted against the bill.

P. S. If he had been permitted to have his way he would now be campaigning with a parachute attachment to help him get off the trains at some of the county seats.

The Captain's record for 1895 is reserved for some future occasion.

It is now generally known that the great army of commercial travelers are supporting the Democratic and Peoples party ticket this year. They have good reason. They understand the situation and know that the Republican policy has bred the trusts which have robbed thousands of traveling men of their employment. According to a list prepared by James W. Jump, chairman of the national Democratic committee of commercial travelers, 100 of the big combinations have absorbed 2,314 independent concerns, and thereby relieved at least 40,000 men of their jobs. Furthermore, the office force in almost every independent concern was cut ownd proportionately in a greater degree. "The salaries of a number of independent superintendents and managers were cut off and lumped in one, to be handed out in gross to some favored individual who happened to be on the right spot when the business was fenced in with barbed wire."

Mr. Monett, the former Republican attorney general of Ohio, keeps his eyes and ears open, and as a result he sizes up the Republican plan of campaign in this wise: "One glance at Teddie's hat and a whoop and a snort from a rural postmaster, and our leaders think they will accomplish more than all logical arguments and anti-trust speeches."

Apropos of the talk about the New York ice trust, the Sioux Falls Daily Press gets back at our friend the enemy thusly: About all the Republicans can say of the alleged Democrats who got mixed up with Platt's men in the New York ice trust is that they look and act very much as if they were not Democrats. And this is not so uncomplimentary to the Democratic party, either.

"It is emblematic of Americanism. It typifies the best thoughts and highest aspirations of Americans. There is no reason why it should not be worn by every man who believes that no mission or destiny can be too broad or high or noble for the American republic." So says one of the stalwart Republican dailies of Chicago. And what may this wonderful thing be over which the paper raves? This proudest emblem of the Republican party; a thing over which to grow maudlin? This highest emblem of Americanism is not the Stars and Stripes. No, it is—Roosevelt's slouch hat.

Will somebody please explain. The Republican campaign managers and their organs in Minnesota are asserting that Governor Lind's administration has weakened the reform forces and his own chances of re-election. At the same time these same managers and organs figure out a majority of 60,000 for their national ticket and not less than 10,000 for Van Sant in this state. How does it happen, anyhow, that Van Sant is going to run some 50,000 votes behind his ticket, in spite of the fact that he is so strong and Lind is so weak among the voters?

The imperialists are in desperate straits trying to show that Thomas Jefferson and some others whose memories are revered by all good Democrats occupied the ground now held by the Republican party in favor of acquiring new territory by fair means or foul. One of the organs now introduces Stephen A. Douglas as a Democrat whose patriotism caused him to declare in favor of the Republican policy of expansion. An extract is published from a speech delivered by Douglas in his famous debate with Lincoln, in which "The Little Giant" said:

"Whenever it becomes necessary in our growth and progress to acquire more territory I am in favor of it without reference to the question of slavery, and when we have acquired it I will leave the people free to do as they please, either to make it slave or free territory, as they may prefer."

This is quoted by the Republican organ to show that Douglas, though a Democrat, was of one mind with the latter day imperialists.

The genial Captain Van Sant is receiving shameful treatment at the hands of the leading organs of his own party. He addressed two meetings in Minneapolis the other day, and he certainly had the right to expect that the Republican dailies would report a part at least of what was said by their candidate for the governorship. But in point of fact they pay less attention to his remarks than to those of the ordinary ward heeler. The Journal, for instance, says of the first meeting, at which the Captain made the chief address, that he "made a rattling talk along the line of national issues." At the other meeting everybody crowded up around him and insisted upon a handshake, "after which he cut loose in his usual effective fashion."

This is all. No part of any of his speeches is reported. The Captain might with good reason protest against such shabby treatment. If there were any ladies present at any of the meetings the Captain said, of course, that he was glad to see them and that if the ladies could vote he would be elected without a doubt. He never fails to make this witty remark when occasion offers. This much, at least, the papers might have reported, even though they did not care to quote anything else of what their candidate said when he "cut loose in his usual effective fashion."

P. S.

Must Respect Tradition.

Constance, the beautiful maiden, struggles desperately in the water.

"Save me!" she shrieks.

Harold, the brave youth, standing upon the shore, throws aside his coat.

"Are you sinking for the third time?" he asks.

"Oh, dear! I forgot to count! How stupid of me!" Constance cries, in much confusion.

Harold is as brave as a lion, truly, but he will scarcely risk violating what is perhaps the most cherished convention of romance.—Stray Stories.

A Very Bad Spell.

The new reporter opened his account of the fever epidemic by writing: "The health board reports 50 new cases of tiefoyd fever."

The city editor, in a mild manner, as is the wont of city editors, observed to the new reporter that his spelling was very bad.

Whereat the new reporter explained: "I had a bad spell of typhoid when young and it never got out of my system."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State vs. Express Companies.

The state will at once proceed against the express companies doing business in Minnesota on account of the refusal of the latter to comply with the gross earnings tax law. Exception is taken by the companies to the bill, increasing the rate from 3 to 5 per cent. The legislature raised the rate from 3 to 4½, but after the bill was signed the figure was seen to be 5 per cent.

The last statement of the express companies regarding their gross earnings, as shown by the legislative manual, is as follows: Great Northern, taxable receipts, $67,842.78, resulting in a tax at 3 per cent. of $2,035.28; United States, receipts, $57,919.80, and tax of $1,737.59; American, receipts, $37,702.66, and tax of $1,131.08; Northern Pacific, $26,500.94, and tax of $795.02; Adams, receipts, $9,406, and tax of $282.18; Wells, Fargo, receipts, $2,497.14, and tax of $74.91. The total tax from all companies was $6,056.06.

Convict Labor.

The state labor commissioner, upon an investigation of conditions in the state prison and reformatory, finds that during 1899 but forty-five convicts in the reformatory were employed in quarrying and cutting stone, while the number engaged in this trade outside was 970, making the total number employed 1,015. In the state prison, however, the convicts employed in the shoe department number 237, out of a total of 1,855 employed in factories throughout the state, a percentage of 12.77 for the convicts. The percentage of reformatory labor to the whole is but 2.31.

Startling Death.

Warner Anderson, a laborer at Lakewood cemetery, Minneapolis, met a sudden and unusual death while riding a bicycle.

He was on the street outside the cemetery, riding fast, and turned to avoid a heavy wagon. In so doing he ran into a buggy, and a shaft struck him square in the throat, breaking the cartilage rings. He died in four hours.

The name of the woman who was driving in the buggy could not be learned, but it is not thought that she could have avoided the accident.

New Commandant.

Captain Thomas McMillan, who has been commandant of the Minnesota Soldiers' Home ever since its establishment about thirteen years ago, will be superseded on September 1 by Captain James Compton, of Fergus Falls. Such is the result of the action of the board of trustees of the Soldiers' Home, which held its annual meeting at the home.

The board also elected George N. Lamphere, of St. Paul, formerly of Moorhead, secretary to succeed Secretary I. H. B. Beebe, of St. Paul.

Extensive Depredations.

It was discovered that a party of twenty-two men from Lacrosse, who make log stealing a profession, had attacked the raft of J. W. Van Sant, which was tied at Dresbech, Minn., and removed several hundred logs from it, which are valued at $1,000 or more. The men went up in ten skiffs and overpowered the watchman. After taking the logs they came to Lacrosse and sold them to a local lumberman.

Heat Causes Death.

While the intense heat of the past two weeks has not occasioned many deaths among grown people, it has been particularly severe on children and infants in Minneapolis.

According to the records of the health department, 14 deaths have occurred in this respect and there are a number more which the torrid weather contributed to.

News in Brief.

The arrest of two men has been made on suspicion of being connected with the postoffice robbery at Edgemon. The names of the men are Edward Atwood and C. H. Macey. They have been bound over under $500 bonds.

Twenty-seven rural schools in Redwood county will receive state aid under the existing law. Only one other county in the state makes the same showing, namely, Blue Earth. Hennepin county, with twenty-six, Olmstead with twenty-five, Otter Tail and Steel with twenty-four each, are the only counties that have over twenty schools receiving state aid.

Yu Lung, a Chinaman en route to Hongkong, died in the waiting room of the St. Paul depot.

Charles Doig, the 8-year-old son of Alex Doig, superintendent of bridges for the Northwestern railroad, was drowned while bathing at Winona.

NOTED KANSAN DEAD.

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls Passes Away After a Long Illness at Las Vegas, N. M.

Atchison, Kan., Aug. 17.—Ex-United States Senator John J. Ingalls died at East Las Vegas, N. M., at 2:25 o'clock in the morning, surrounded by his wife and two sons, Ellsworth and Sheffield. The news came to the Ingalls home here in a telegram at ten o'clock Thursday. The funeral will be at Atchison.

Mr. Ingalls' illness dates from March, 1899, when at Washington his throat began troubling him. He occupied apartments at a hotel with his family and worked steadily, writing political articles for newspapers throughout the country. He was treated by several specialists, but received no relief, and on their advice returned with his family to Atchison. At home he grew no better, though under the constant attention of a specialist. Ten months ago he again took the advice of physicians and sought another change in climate, traveling through New Mexico and Arizona. On August 14 Mrs. Ingalls telegraphed her sons Ellsworth and Sheffield that their father was sinking and they took the next train for Las Vegas.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLANS.

To Attend G. A. R. Encampment—Will Then Return to Canton Until Marriage of His Niece.

Washington, Aug. 21.—President and Mrs. McKinley will leave Washington Friday afternoon for Chicago to attend the annual encampment of the grand army. They will go in a special car attached to a regular train on the Pennsylvania railroad, and will arrive in Chicago on Saturday afternoon about three o'clock. They will remain in Chicago until late Wednesday afternoon of the next week, and will be quartered during their stay at the Palmer house. On Sunday the president will attend two union services in Chicago—one of the Sunday schools in the morning and the other of churches in the afternoon. On Monday and Tuesday he will review parades, and on Wednesday he will go to Fort Sheridan. He will be present at a number of banquets during his stay. Late Wednesday the party will return to Canton, where the President and Mrs. McKinley will remain until September 11, when they will go to Somerset, Pa., to attend the marriage of their niece, Miss Mabel McKinley, and Dr. Hermans Baer. The marriage will be solemnized on September 12 at the house of Abner McKinley.

CAPTURES 4,000 BRITISH.

A Brilliant Military Maneuver Is Executed by Gen. De Wet, the Boer Commander.

Delagoa Bay, Aug. 20.—Den. De Wet has defeated the British and captured 4,000 men according to reports here from Boer sources. Gen. De Wet, who is the Morgan of the war in the Transvaal, gave Lord Roberts the slip, escaping from the general's innumerable traps and succeeding in effecting a junction with Gen. Delarey. Then he turned suddenly upon the British and defeated them, capturing seven guns and 4,000 prisoners. This successful maneuver on the part of the Boer general stamps him as the greatest military leader in South Africa. Every general in the British service had De Wet in a trap at one time or another. Kitchener and Buller had reduced their commands to a shadow, chasing him hundreds of miles over veldt and kopje, and now he has not only escaped, but turned and gave them a terrible blow.

Farmer Slays Family.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.—An Arlington (Minn.) special to the Dispatch says: Sunday night between ten and 11 o'clock Theodore Wallart, a farmer living three miles from town, killed his wife, a boy of 19, a girl of 16 and a baby. He then set fire to his barns, destroying the stable with nine horses, a corn crib and a full hay barn. Three years ago Wallart married the widow Starnbors and for some little time they have been having trouble. The wife has recently been trying to secure a divorce and had taken means to prevent the man from coming to the farm. Sunday morning he returned, killed them all, and fled.

Fire on Mackinac Island.

Mackinac Island, Mich., Aug. 18.—Fire started at one a. m. Friday in the Pine Cottage, one of the largest boarding houses of the island. The flames were fanned by the wind into a large blaze before discovered. The residence of John W. Davis, adjoining, also caught, and both houses were burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at $25,000 to $30,000; no insurance. William Tailon, a member of the fire department, was seriously injured.

Killed by the Cars.

Delaware, O., Aug. 20.—Judson Fleming, a wealthy farmer, and his son, Lawrence, aged 20, were killed at noon Sunday by a Big Four train at Ashley. They were in a buggy and the son, hearing the train whistle, attempted to drive over the track ahead of it. The horses were knocked 200 feet and killed and the harness was found hanging over the telegraph wires beside the track.

Fight with Cowboys.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—Citizens of Prairie du Chien and cowboys connected with a wild west show playing in that city met in serious combat Monday, and for a time a pitched battle seemed imminent. As it was, the chief of police and three of his men were wounded, while several citizens and members of the show suffered injuries.

SON HAD THE ADVANTAGE.

His Reputation as an Athlete Made Him Better Known Than His Studious Father Was.

William Scott, of Pittsburgh, who has been brought so prominently before the public recently through being Mr. Carnegie's lawyer in the famous "multi-million-dollar-controversy" between Frick and Carnegie, asked one question too many the other day.

Everyone interested in legal affairs knows how the two millionaires have always consulted the same law firm because their interests were identical, and that when the split came this firm, of which Judge Reed, president of the Lake Erie railroad, is the head, refused to take sides with either client and that new attorneys had to be chosen. Mr. Carnegie chose Mr. Scott, a brilliant and well-known Princeton alumnus of the class of '69, says the Philadelphia Post.

On June 9, at the opening of Nassau's commencement, when Princeton took the baseball championship from Yale and young King Scott, Mr. Scott's son, had the honor of being substitute pitcher for Hildebrand, Mr. Scott was among the favored guests.

Mr. Scott is fond of getting evidence from people, and when a freshman who idolized King Scott came up to shake hands with the father after the game Mr. Scott asked him what he thought was the best thing in college life.

"Athletics, sir," was the freshman's eager answer. "It's the greatest thing of all. It does a fellow no end of good."

"And why athletics?" insisted Mr. Scott.

"Well, sir," was the answer, "it's just this way: I guess you were a good student here, Mr. Scott, and read a heap of books—but nobody has ever heard of you, and the whole world knows about King."

Stealing His Thunder.

The indignant-looking passenger was about to speak, but the conductor headed him off by exclaiming, in a loud tone of irritation: "This is the slowest train I was ever on. What's the use of having a schedule if we don't pay any attention to it? The drinking water tastes as if it hadn't been off the kitchen range ten minutes. The car doesn't look as if it had been swept for a month, and it is full of idiots who insist on opening the windows when we go through tunnels, so that the cinders can blow in." The passenger caught his breath and then exclaimed: "I was just about to say that this whole affair is an outrage." "I know it. But you're lucky. You can travel a few miles and then get off and be happy. But I've got to stay on this train for hours every day of my life."—Washington Star.

Intelligent Stage Drivers.

A New York visitor returned recently from Newport full of admiration for the intelligence of the stage drivers who undertake to show strangers the sights of the town. He was driving about in one of the vehicles devoted to the entertainment of those who undertake to see the sights of the town inexpensively. The driver stopped before one of the show places of Newport. "This is Mr. Smith-Jones' villa," said the driver, as he turned to the passengers, "and the lady in the red hat by the corner of the piazza is the younger Miss Smith-Jones, whose engagement to Mr. Brown was announced yesterday." The New York visitor had never before met stage drivers so anxious to have their patrons enjoy themselves.—N. Y. Sun.

A cent's worth of fuel will heat the iron for one day, so you have a perfectly even heat. You can iron in half the time and no danger of scorching the clothes, as with the old iron, and you can get the most beautiful gloss. I sell at nearly every house, as the iron is so convenient and economical everybody wants one. I have not made less than five dollars any day I worked. My brother is doing well, and I think any one can make lots of money anywhere selling these irons. Retail price $3.75 each. The Roberts A. & O. Iron Co., St. Paul, Minnesota, are the sole manufacturers and will start any one in the business, as they did me, if you will address them.

MRS. J. C. HARRIS.

Something for All Seasons.

In an uptown political club they are telling a story at the expense of the wife of one of the members—a man who had suddenly arisen from poverty to comparative affluence through a garbage contract. A new house had been purchased in a good neighborhood, and the wife spent many busy days in furnishing it. When she reached the item of mattresses she went to a big department store on Market street and made known her wants to a polite salesman. "I presume, madam," he said, "that you want the best spring mattresses." "Not at all," was the quick retort. "You needn't think because I'm rich I'm easy. A spring mattress, indeed! Sure, I want mattresses you can use in spring, summer, autumn and winter. I'm not buying a mattress for every season in the year."—Philadelphia Call.

Ten Years Pain

"I am a school teacher, have suffered agony monthly for ten years.

"My nervous system was a wreck. I suffered with pain in my side and had almost every ill known. I had taken treatment from a number of physicians who gave me no relief.

"One specialist said no medicine could help me, I must submit to an operation.

"I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, stating my case, and received a prompt reply. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and followed the advice given me and now I suffer no more. If any one cares to know more about my case, I will cheerfully answer all letters."—MISS EDNA ELLIS, Higginsport, Ohio.

The Question of Dessert

Is easily and simply solved with a package of Burnham's Hasty Jellycon. It is only necessary, to dissolve a package of it in boiling water and set away to cool. The result is a delightfully pure jelly, and an ideal dessert. The flavors are orange, lemon, strawberry, raspberry, peach, wild cherry and the unflavored "calfsfoot" for making wine and coffee jellies. All grocers sell it.

MAM-M-MA!!
DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?
Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.
The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.
Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.
If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.
The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it! Send for a 10c box of CASCARETS to-day and you will find that, as we guarantee, all irregularities of the little and big childrens insides are

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Aug. 24, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1 00.

—Thanks to John McGary for a couple of fine apples raised on his Independence farm.

—The Epworth League will hold a rainbow social in the City Hall, Sat. evening, Aug. 25.

—Apples are uncommonly plenty and of excellent quality this year. Trees have to be propped up.

—Fine strings of fish come to town almost daily. The lakes seem to furnish better fishing this season than for many years.

—Most of the threshing outfits in this part of the county have gone west to thresh. Bock brothers are in Independence and Greenwood this week. Crops are light.

—Our people have enjoyed one of the longest heated periods ever witnessed in this part of the country. Mosquitoes have added to uncomfortableness, and have appeared uncommonly avaricious.

—Fred Belden has our thanks for samples of Wealthy, Whitney and spice apples, raised on his father-in law, Geo. B. Wright's farm, near Montrose. Minnesota is getting quite a reputation as a fruit state this season.

—Somebody threw a rock through a front window at the depot a few nights ago. Boards now occupy the place of glass. Had the operator not been a little out of his regular place, he would likely have been hit in the head with the rock.

—The bottom falls out of the street occasionally yet. On Monday morning sprinkler Shaw got the wheels of his sprinkling wagon fast, in front of Weises. He let the water out and drove on. Caving places should be pounded down and filled up.

—For a few nights the street lights have been on before the evening train time, much to the satisfaction of many who visit the train when it arrives. Early lighting also gives the town a much better appearance to passengers on the train, than they would get in the dark.

—The regular meeting of the village council was held at the council rooms on Monday evening. John Brandser occupied the chair vacated by A. E. Johnson on his removal to Buffalo. H. Bock was absent. The routine business was transacted; a short meeting was held.

—Mission services will be held at the Shrader Lutheran church, on the Montrose road, by Revs. C. J. Albrecht of New Ulm, and C. Bender, of Redwing, Julius Engle and others, on Sunday, Sept 9. Morning and afternoon service. A tent will be provided for the occasion.

—The M. E. Sunday School picnic was held at Lake Rebecca, Wednesday. A grand good time was had and an excellent dinner. But rain came up in the afternoon and most of the crowd started home, and got a little wet on the way. Those who remained longer were thoroughly soaked.

—Notices have been posted for an election on Monday, Sept. 3, to vote on whether or not the present water system shall be extended to South Third street, and whether or not bonds for $2,000 shall be issued for that purpose. Most of our citizens are willing to extend the water works, but are of opinion that we had better pay off bonds before we vote on more, also that $2.000 would be a big price to pay for the proposed extension.

—Notices have been posted for a democratic primary election, to be held at the City Hall, on Tuesday, Aug. 28, between the hours of 7 and 9 p. m. for the purpose of electing three delegates to represent Delano at the county convention at Buffalo, which convention chooses delegates to the state nominating convention, and delegates to the sixth district congressional convention. If you are interested in who shall be your candidates for state officers and for Congress, be at the primary and vote for delegates to represent your choice.

—Brandser Bros. Information Bureau is one of the latest additions to our village. They are in direct communication with Land Officer Culkin, of Duluth, and offer gratis to all comers such information as they possess concerning taking up land in Itasca county. Brandser boys, Nels Sandberg, Olaf and Peter Peterson, I. H. Baltuff, and others have already located, or contemplate locating in the near future. A regular Delano colony seems to be going North to grow up with the country.

—J. L. Blodgett and wife, of Minneapolis, on their way to Graceville, on a hunting expedition, stopped Tuesday night at the Meister Hotel. They came from Minneapolis in something less than two hours, in an automobile, or new horseless carriage. This is the first buggy of the kind that most of our citizens have had an opportunity to see run, and it brought the natives to doors and windows as it made a circuit around town. It would run from one street around a couple of blocks and back as quick as to be a huge surprise to many.

—Miss O'Hair, of Deleno, is to teach in our schools, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Mann.—Litchfield News Ledger.

—John E. Dalgren has leased the old Terwell farm on the Minneapolis road for five years. He expects to move his family onto the place Sept. 1.

—The Eagle appears to have it in for our new Secretary of the Board of Education, judging from the pro fanny before Clerk, in the "Sealed Bids" add.

—Quite a number of lovers of sport, on Monday evening, repaired to the ball grounds and enjoyed seeing the leans make 23 scores while the fats could only get 15.

—Rev. A. F. Thompson and wife of Delano, accompanied by their niece Maud Price, arrived Saturday for a visit with friends here.--Cedar Mills items. Litchfield Independent.

—Prof. R M. Bohn, who has been rusticating for some time with his brother Pete, up in the pine woods, writes a Delano friend that notwithstanding he has some 15 lbs or so more flesh to carry around, he has discarded crutches. He is looking for a venison to bring home when he gets ready to come.

—Prof. Dewey has at last decided between the positions of head of the Litchfield schools and a commission in the army, and has resigned as superintendent of the school. He will at once report for duty in the U. S. marine service, and the school board are on the lookout for a succeasor. Several applications are already under consideration, but no decision has yet been reached as to the vacancy.—Litchfield Independent.

—Some person or persons may not be aware of a law against defacing or tearing down posters. A notice of a Democratic primary election, posted at the City Hall, on the bulletin board was torn down Wednesday night; the one at the post office was defaced, by cutting out letters. This is wrong. It sows an evil, anarchistic spirit, and if the parties are caught at it they will doubtless feel the full extent of the law. Every free American citizen would be in favor of punishing such an offender against the law, and good breeding.

—Norman Webb who visited his sisters here this week is quite an old R. R. man. He went south with the army 37 years ago; was at the siege of Vicksburg. He was made Supt. of the N. C. military railroads. Then Gen'l Supt. of Selma, Rome and Dalton R. R.; also East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R; then President of New Orleans and Selma R. R., also Supt. of Birmingham, Selma, and New Orleans Ry. Co. Mr. and Mrs. Webb, his sisters Mesdamee Chance and Mulford and Mrs. Young dined at the Sims Hotel Monday.

County Cullings.

From Buffalo we have received the following:

G. C. Persson, of Duluth, arrived last Friday evening and will visit his old friends and school mates till September first.

News comes from Annandale that while watering a team in Clearwater Lake, Carl Allison, of Smith Lake, and the horses were drowned. Robert Marvin, of Clearwater, escaped by jumping from the buggy.

Watertown.

Mrs. Murphy, who has been the guest of her sister Mrs C. G. Halgren, for the past week, left last Friday.

Miss Effie McClellan, of Grand Forks, was the guest of Mrs. Chas. Zeyer several days last week.

Mrs. F. A. Barth who has been sick for the past week is rapidly recovering.

A jolly crowd of our young people attended the dance at James McClellan's, of Woodland. This was one of the jolliest events of the season.

Miss Nellie Cunningham left last Thursday for the cities where she intends to remain for several weeks.

Mrs. Geo. Schaffer, of Delano, is spending several days with F. A. Barth's family.

Mrs. E. E. Shrader was visiting Delano friends one day this week.

Mrs. Katie McDonald and Cora Haverty visited at the home of the latter last Sunday.

Misses Sophie Denzel and Katy Gavin and Frank Warta and Arthur Halgren drove over to Delano last Sunday to witness the ball game.

Oscar Denzel, of the Montrose milling company is visiting friends and relatives here this week.

J. F. Campbell is in the cities transacting business this week.

C. O. Teas and son Claude called on New Germany and Mayer friends last Sunday.

Pump leathers of all sizes for sale a John Conzet's.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16,

Personal.

C. W. Kerrick went west on yesterday morning's train.

Dr. J. A. L. Wulman, opthalmic specialist, was in town Tuesday.

Dr. and Mrs. Shrader, of Watertown, visited Delano friends Tuesday.

O. A. Burnes returned home from Minneapolis Tuesday evening.

Nels Sandberg expects to leave Monday for Bena, Minn., to become a freeholder.

Joe Cassidy was in town yesterday. He is locating at the Tremont House, Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Schaffer visited Mrs. Barth who is sick at Watertown, this week.

Mrs. O'Hair and daughters Grace and Marjorie have returned from Iowa, where they were visiting.

Carl Shrader drove to Corcoran town Wednesday to collect the insurance for Mrs. Cebula's recent loss by fire.

I. Gutzwiller took a carriage ride about town yesterday evening, the first for several weeks, on account of sickness.

Emil and Lena Johnson, of Bena, Itasca county, arrived Tuesday night for a visit with their parents and Delano friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Webb, of Birmingham, Ala. arrived Saturday morning for their periodical visit to Mr. Webb's sisters, Mesdames Chance and Mulford.

Misses Smith and Arnold accompanied Dr. Halgren home to Watertown last evening. Mr. Smith and wife drove over after them later and brought them back.

Senator Dr. H. Y. Chilton, of Howard Lake, passed through Delano, Monday, on his way to the county seat. He don't seem to be worrying much over politics this year.

Sealed Bids.

Sealed bids will be received by the Delano High School Board, 8:00 p. m., August 27, for making a tubular well. Specifications at clerks office. The Board reserves the right to reject anyand all bids.

ADAM HORSCH,
Delano, Aug 23, 1900. Clerk.

ROCKFORD.

Last Saturday, the 18th your correspondent, with others of the household, received a special invitation to take a hayrack ride up the North road in the evening. Well, we accepted and went with many others. The start was made quite early so we had a good look at the many fine farms on that road and the farmer's work. Much of the grain is not stacked, yet many of the shocks look almost black and some are badly sprouted. The almost continual rains and the very hot weather for the past two weeks is the cause of this state of things. But the corn fields are splendid. Fortunately there was a large acreage planted and it is in splendid condition, and will in a few days be out of the way of frosts. The farmers in this section are progressive and are all doing well. The farms are well managed and all seem to be prosperous and happy. At Mr. John Sleights the hayrack party found a large number of carriages, buggies and people waiting for some of the managers, and as per agreement all met there at 8 o'clock. The hayrack took the lead from that on and it was quite a long cavalcade. The objective point was the residence of George Frederick; the occasion a surprise party for Mr. and Mrs. Frederick on the 20th anniversary of their marriage. The affair was so well managed by Mrs. Crandall, Sleight, and Dixon that it was a complete surprise, George did not whoop at all but when called out, stormed out, "Wo, Wo. What does all this mean?" and Abbie was speechless with wonder. About 25 teams and some 70 visitors unexpected, made some little turmoil in the family but it was a very pleasant and agreeable party and everybody felt at home in a few minutes and enjoyed themselves immensely. The custom of a marriage ceremony was indulged in, the ceremony taking place in the beautiful grove in front of the residence, lighted with many lanterns, the old settler officiating. After the marriage the worthy couple were presented with a fine dining set of 100 pieces of beautiful dishes with a few remarks in place of a presentation speech by the old settler, then came the collation or refreshments, ice cream, lemonade, and cake seemed to be inexhaustible and everybody seemed fully satisfied.

Miss May Warren played the wedding march, Miss Crawford gave us a little music on the organ and Miss Carrie Florida gave a select reading and everything passed pleasantly and happily and everybody said what a fine visit.

Many were there from the village and from the North and West. Soon after 12 o'clock the party broke up and homeward bound was the order, and the best surprise party of the season ended.

Minneapolis Times: In Cincinnati they think that Roberts, like Napoleon, will change the map of the world, or a part of it, in a few months. The school board is waiting to get new geographies and maps of Africa until the Transvaal war is ended and Kruger is settled somewhere. But there are others than Kruger.

St. Peter Free Press: The office of sheriff is very important and should be filled by a man not only capable for his duties but honest to a fault, and whenever the slightest attempt is made to prostitute the position, be it for political prestige or any other reason, it is time that the people call a halt.

Duluth Herald: Bishop Fowler, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who has lived in China, declares that the "robber nations" cannot conquer the Chinese. The bishop has evidently not caught on to the "civilization" idea, which everywhere justifies criminal aggression.

Democratic State Convention.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug 17 1900.

The Administration's keep it dark policy has been turned on the Chinese news this week. Everbody in Washington knows that important news received from Minister Conger—so important that Mr. McKinley returned a day ahead of the time he had appointed, but what it was is merely guesswork, and Assistant Secretary Adee actually had the nerve to say that he thought the newspaper men should refrain from guessing at the nature of the news, lest it might be guessed right and harm done. According to latest advices from the allied army, it should be at Pekin by this time and able to prove whether the Chinese government means war or peace—whether the foreigners in Pekin are to be allowed to go to there friends or are to be kept as hostages by the Chinese government. When the facts have been given by the press dispatches the administration will probably give out the official news, unless it is calculated to reflect on Mr. McKinley or his wobbling policy.

Mr. H. R. Shade, who is in charge of the German bureau at democratic headquarters, said the bureau was receiving many letters from Germans, commending Col. Bryan's Indianapolis speech and announcing their intention to vote for him because of his sturdy stand against imperialism. Speaking of a recent publication, Mr. Shade said: "I notice that the republicans think they have a trump card in a number of German band uniforms, brought to Chicago from the Fatherland by special permission of the German government. I think they will be mistaken in the value of those uniforms as votegetters. Instead of commanding the admiration and enthusiasm of the German voter the uniform will remind him of the imperialism of the fatherland, which he came to this country to avoid."

"In the six National elections since Grant 'was President", said Col. J. B. Cleaves, of Tenn., "the democrats have had a plurality of the popular vote four times and the republicans but twice. Garfield had a plurality 1880, although it amounted to but 7,000 votes, and Mc Kinley in 1896. In 1876 Tilden had a plurality over Hayes; in 1884 Cleveland over Blain; in 1888 Cleveland over Harrison, and again in 1892 Cleveland over Harrison. Because McKinley had a plurality of 600,000 four years ago is no reason why Bryan should not have a plurality this year. Greater changes than that have taken place, even years ago when the total vote was much smaller. In 1872 Grant had a plurality of 760,000, and in 1876 Tilden's plurality was 250,000, a change of more than a million votes. When you stop to think that the vote in 1896 was something like 13,600,000, as against 6,400,000 in 1872, more than as much again, it isn't hard to believe that Bryan has a show of wiping out that plurality of 600,000 and himself receiving a plurality of the votes."

By rejecting the three bids submitted for armor plate for the new battleships by the Carnegie, Bethlehem and Midvale companies and calling for new bids the Navy Department has put off for a time the decision which Secretary Long was authorized to make as to whether the extortionate prices should be paid or a government armor making plant be established with the $4,000,000 Congress placed at his disposal for that purpose. Although the date set for opening the new bids is October 2, there is reason for the belief that it is the intention of the Administration to find some way to keep the matter open until after election and then to accept the bids of the Carnegie Armor Trust.

The democratic National Campaign Committee is meeting the efforts of the republicans to befog the Porto Rican question by circulating the proclamation issued by Gen Miles when he took possession of the Island, in which he told the Porto Ricans that the U. S. forces had "come bearing the banner of freedom" and to "bestow upon you the immunities and blessings of the liberal institutions of our government". How well the republican administration and Congress kept the promises of Gen. Miles was shown by the telegraphic news of the present week, stating that a delegation of several hundred starving natives from the interior had visited the governor begging for bread or work. The Porto Rican chapter is one of the most disgraceful in the record of the republican administration in Congress and the people of this country should not be allowed to forget it, and will not be.

In a letter to a local democratic paper, denying the editorial statement that the negro vote was solid for Mc Kinley, a negro office holder said: "I am in a condition to know whereof I speak when I say that Mr. Bryan will poll a larger negro vote than ever was polled by a democratic candidate for President. Mr. Bryan will poll a splendid negro vote in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and West Virginia. These are states where the negro vote is a factor, and where also you need every vote you can get. In New York he will poll 25 per cent of the colored vote."

Democratic Convention.

At Buffalo yesterday the Democratic County Convention was called to order by county chairman, Dr. Shannon, who read the call.

J. F. McDonnell was elected temporary chairman, and made a neat little speech.

J. E. Madigan was chosen temporary Secretary.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Credentials, W. H. Spath, M. A. O'Hair, W. S. Huntington, Dr. E. A. Shannon, C. M. King.

Permanent organization, H. K. Kelley, T. J. Catlin, J. D. Cady.

Resolutions, F. W. Schmidt, H. Tanner, B. F. Remington.

Adjourned to 1 p. m.

Afternoon session.

Committee on credentials report read and accepted.

Wm. Ziebarth and Herman Otto were, on motion, elected to represent Franklin, and Joseph Campbell for Otsego;

On recommendation of committee the temporary organization was made the permanent organization.

A motion was made and carried that delegates present be allowed to cast the full vote of the delegation.

On motion it was decided to elect four delegates from each commissioner district and three at large.

DELEGATES TO STATE CONVENTION.

W. S. Huntington, J. F. McDonnell, Dr. E. A. Shannon, C. M. King, H. K. Kelley, A. Westrup, R. H. Melrose, S. R. Wells, Joseph Reems, B. F. Remington, Joseph Campbell, M. A. O'Hair, Charles Bugbee, E. F. Ziebarth, Wm. Ziebarth, F. W. Schmidt, Levi Cochran, T. N. Dygert, Levi Dnmas, Fred Martin, Ole Hendrickson, Carl Luhman, S. A. Youngbert.

Resolutions were read and adopted, several speeches made and the convention adjourned, seemingly determined to win a victory at the polls this time sure.

CHARLES A. TOWNE made a grand speech at Duluth, on Monday, as an opener of the campaign. He has gone west to work in the cause of Bryan and Bryanism.

WE must be making rapid strides toward "civilization" when the Pioneer Press gives the first place in the paper to the prize fight with the same display that it announces in the opposite corner that we have "No Formal War Against China".

Privilege and Duty Plain.

It is the privilege and duty of every male citizen, with few exceptions in our state to vote. The constitution of our country makes the people sovereign. We have no kingly descent, no monarchial family who inherit from generation to generation the White House, at Washington. Once in four years the people are called on to choose from among their number a man, a plain everyday man, for the chief executive of our country. Every voter's ballot is as effective as is the ballot of any other man in the land. The poorest and most humble citizen can vote as well, and his ballot will count for as much, as will the ballot of the president of the United States. It is as much his privilege, and the obligation to cast his ballot is as imperative as with the man who gazes upon the flocks of a thousand hills and calls them his, or the manufacturer who employes hundreds of his fellow men, or the banker who counts his millions. It is not sordid wealth, it is not princely incomes, it is not rich clothes that makes the government of our land. The majority rules, and the majority of our citizens earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. This being so they should be careful to use their power, whenever opportunity presents, to maintain their rights. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty". Every voter should read, should understand what is going on in his community, in his county, state, country, and in the world. He should think out for himself what is best for him, for his country. He should satisfy his own conscience by casting his ballot, like a man, for what he honestly believes to be right.

When our country was being established among the nations of the earth, men knew on which side they stood. They were for liberty, or against it. A man who did not take part, on one side or the other, was the exception, was not respected by either party. So with the voters of today. They see the peril. They admit things need changing. They have their ideas about how our government can be made better. They talk plainly in favor of reforms that could be made. They admit that parties are working in the right direction, but, some of them, like the Tories of the Revolution, prefer to be neutral; to take no part. They have thoroughly decided they will not vote for a plan they feel in their inmost soul will, if continued, lead to the downfall of our glorious republic, but they have not yet decided to take the firm stand for the right, to vote their convictions.

Who were the heroes when our nation was born? They who assembled and voted a declaration of Independence. They who wrote and signed the document, knowing they risked their all, their lives. They who advocated it among the people. They who heard, "Give me liberty or give me death!" and cheered the sentiment. They who have guarded faithfully our government and its free institutions ever since. They who were active, who were in the front, who stood guard, who suffered, and they who died, that we might have the blessed privileges they desired.

A privilege so sacred, that has cost what our right to vote has cost, should be guarded faithfullyy. The best watch we can keep is to use it, use it honestly, conscientiousl upon every occasion, not only by voting for the president of the United States, certainly a great honor, but by voting our beliefs, our ideas, at school, village and other elections, not forgetting the primaries, the very fountain heads from which spring the political stream and on the purity of which so much depends.

Let every voter make up his mind to enjoy his sacred privilege; to discharge his duty, the obligation he ows to his fellow men, to posterity, and to those who have given him the opportunity, and so cast his ballot on Nov. 6, that he may go to bed with a clear conscience and rising on the next morning learn that he was right, and that the majority of thinking, freedom loving citizens of his land voted as he did. Let there be no shirks.

Not on a Gold Basis.

It seems after all the blowing of gold bugs that "free silver is dead"; that if Bryan is elected he can't do a thing with it, that Secretary Gage don't look at it that way. Here is a part of an article from the Pioneer Press with a quotation from the Secretary of the Treasury:

"Mr. Gage says "that Bryan could order his secretary of the treasury to make payment in silver of all the public debt payable in coin and for all current disbursements of the government as well." This is precisely what Bryan has pledged himself in advance to do. This is the way it would work according to Secretary Gage:

The announcement by the treasury department of its purpose to pay silver in settlement of all interest on the public debt not specially payable in gold, and to make its daily disbursements to its creditors in silver, would stop the inflow of gold, or at least very largely diminish payments in gold and correspondingly increase payments into the treasury of silver and silver certificates. It, therefore, might be anticipated that with a good deal of perverse ingenuity the time would come at no distant day when all the revenues of the government would be paid to it in silver dollars or silver certificates, and all disbursements made by it would be made in silver dollars or silver certificates. There would thus be established a circuit of silver out of the treasury into the hands of the people, from the people to the banks, from the banks into the custom house and into the hands of the collectors of internal revenue."

TURNING THE BABIES IN BED.

Women sho' is cur'ous critters, an' dey ain't no doubtin' dat,
She's a mess of funny capahs f'om huh slippahs to huh hat.
Ef you tries to un'erstan' huh, an' you fails, dea' up an' say:
"D'ain't a bit o' use to try to un'erstan' a woman's way."

I don' mean to be complainin', but I's jes' a-settin' down
Some o' my own obserwations, w'en I cas' my eye eroun',
Ef you ax me fu' to prove it, I kin do it moughty fine,
Fu' dey ain't no bettah 'zample den dis ve'y wife o' mine.

In de ve'y hea't o' midnight, w'en I's sleepin' good an' soun',
I kin hyeah a so'tah rustlin' an' somebody movin' 'roun',
An' I say: "Lize, what you doin'?" But she frowns an' shek huh haid;
"Heish yo' mouf, I's only turnin' of de chillun in de bed.

"Don' you know a chile gits restless, layin' all de night one way?
An' you' got to kind o' 'range him sev'al times be'o' de day?
So de little necks won't worry, an' de little backs won't break;
Don' you think case chillun's chillun dey hain't got no pain an' ache."

So she shakes 'em, an' she twists 'em, an' she tu'ns 'em, 'roun' erbout,
'T'well I don' see how de chillun evah keeps f'om hollahin' out.
Den she lif's 'em up head down'ards, so's dey won't git livah-grown,
But dey snoozes des' ez peaceful ez a lizard on a stone.

W'en hits mos' nigh time fu' wakin' on de dawn o' Jedgment day,
Seems lak I kin hyeah ol' Gab'iel lay his trumpet dowa an' say:
"Who dat walkin' 'roun' so easy, down on earth ermong de dead?"
'Twill be Lizy up a-turnin' of de chillun in de bed.

INCREASE RAPIDLY.

Trades Unions in New York Show Net Gain of 62 Unions and 8,152 Members in Three Months.

The quarterly bulletin of the bureau of labor statistics just issued shows that between December 31, 1899, and March 31, 1900, a net gain of 62 unions and 8,152 members was made by the labor organizations of the state. The aggregate membership is now 232,535, which is 30 per cent. larger than it was at the corresponding dates in 1898 and 1899. Since 1897 the number of women belonging to labor organizations has more than doubled.

The proportion of trade unionists not at work at the end of March was 20 per cent., as compared with 18.3, 21.0 and 30.6 per cent. at the end of March, 1899, 1898 and 1897, respectively.

A Question of Color.

Don't forget, says the Chicago Times-Herald, when the census man asks you what color you are that he is not supposed to believe the evidence of his own eyes.

"SHADOWS CAST BEFORE".

Our Country Imperiled—Republican Schemers Unmasking.

Under the suggestive head "Ready for a Change," the Weekly Globe of Des Moines, Iowa, publishes on its editorial page the following article, which we take to be one of the "ready made editorials" which are being sent out by a political press bureau. We quote in full for the information of Enquirer readers: "If anything was needed to demonstrate the inability of our present form of Government, to cope with the new conditions which we have entered into, it is the disgraceful frauds of the Cuban Postal Department. For a long time thinking people, who have large commercial interests, have felt unsafe with our present form of government, from the fact that we are controlled by cheap John politicians and ward healers. Now is a good time to do away with our old, obsolete constitution and adopt a form of Government that will be logical with our new expansion ideas and will give ample protection to capital. We should not be disgraced in the sight of civilized nations by such a sight as the violence and killing that accompany the operation of street cars in St. Louis now. A constitutional monarchy is probably the most desirable plan that we could now adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We have a large army, and it can be increased under almost any pretext without causing any alarm to the masses. This country has been so prosperous that the voters have lost that spirit of patriotism and honesty that are necessary to the successful operation of republics. The strong iron hand of discipline will have to be used to bring the masses to a sense of proper behavior. We take it that the great farming interests of our land will readily adapt themselves to the change. The farmer is a great lover of law and order, and under monarchy these results will follow. Our constitution is largely the expression of French revolutionary ideas; ideas suggested by hot headed theorists. Jefferson and Paine found American soil suitable for the promulgation of Voltaireism and Rousseauism. Now the church is strong enough to go back to biblical teaching of Kingship. It need take but a few years to convince our political rulers to make the change. Certainly it must have suggested itself to the mind of the states men in Washington."

Let every patriot read and and ponder over the situation, then go to the polls and vote to maintain the republic or surrender his liberty and establish a monarchy upon its ruins. Exalt patriotism above partyism and stand by the Republic.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DAINTY LITTLE FLOWER.

Little flower, little flower, blest with beauty as thy dower,
Sending fragrant incense heavenward in the quiet twilight hour,
Full of tender fragile grace, sweet of odor and of face,
Like a morsel of Heaven's purity set in an earthly place,

We poor mortals much may learn from the tints which glow and burn,
In thy petalled altar kindled, as within a sacred urn,
For they speak of good and God, prints of beauty on the sod,
Marking with Heaven's light and color where His kindly footsteps trod.

How thy willing heart distills scent the world with fragrance fills,
Though no eye but God's may see thee in the fastness of thy hills;
Or in some neglected glen hidden from the eyes of men,
But thy worship is but sweeter and completer offered then.

Modest, beautiful and shy, often born to blush and die,
Or in crushed and bruised forgetfulness unheeded there to lie,
Never murmur or complaint though thy fragrant breath grow faint,
But a mournful resignation as becomes an humble saint.

All the hills are diademed, all the vales and forests gemmed,
All the meadows with thy beauty well adorned and widely hemmed,
Thou a thing of heavenly birth springing upward from the earth,
Where thy gentle smile illumes its ills and mitigates its dearth.

Much may mortals learn from thee of what is and is to be,
If the eyes are rightly focused by a spirit trained to see;
May be angels, too, may know every flower which bloomed below,
That they rim the crystal rivers which by heavenly mansions flow.

I. EDGAR JONES.

Greatest Game of Poker

Fathers, Sons and Grandsons Played It for Half a Century.

THE two men approached the card table reluctantly, without that eagerness shown by most persons about to sit into a game of poker. These men seemed burdened almost by the famous "weight of centuries" that M. Millet and Mr. Markham exploited with so much sorrow and profit. After they had sat down, they did not take up any pack of cards. Though there were no cards on the table, they began to bet, sadly, as if their hearts were not in what should have been a pleasure to both, though a profit to only one.

"I raise you one cent," sighed John Oxheart, the third of that name. And his friend said, gloomily:

"I see you and go you one better."

"I raise you the limit," remarked Oxheart, and George Flint the third again replied:

"I see your raise and raise you all the way."

So the game went on until ten bets had been made. In one corner of the room sat an intelligent stenographer, who in an old-fashioned notebook had been taking down each bet as it was made. He now closed the notebook, laid it on the table, and retired.

Thirty-six years ago Col. John Oxheart, of the Ninety-seventh Virginia, fell at the head of his men on that bloody field of ——. Every student of American history knows full well the battle to which the writer refers. By his side fell Lieut. Col. Flint. Their deaths ended the first act of the comedy that became almost a tragedy. Eight years earlier, in 1856, these two gallant Virginia men had met at a friendly game of cut-throat poker. Their names expressed their characters. When not troubled or thwarted, nothing could be more lovable than these two gentlemen. But cross them in anything, however little—the littler the better—and they became wild animals. Thousands and thousands of slaves had these gentlemen struck down, maimed, dying, even dead, when angered by some trivial fault. Each had only one son surviving out of large families, the wives and other children having in both families died of decline superinduced by ill-treatment. Yet these two gentlemen were loving and respected neighbors.

So, to while away a dragging hour, they sat down to play poker. The limit was five cents; simple minded children of nature, they did not make the limit too high. They played merely for amusement; the money in the game affected them not. So they began. After an hour or so, when Maj. Oxheart had about eight cents of Col. Flint's money (they had not then their final military titles) it was the major's turn to bet. He bet the limit; and the captain saw him and raised the limit. Two or three breathless minutes passed during which each in turn saw his friend's raise, and raised it. There must have been $1.58 on the board.

The major evidently took in ill part the pertinacity of his friend.

"Yeh betteh drop out, George," he said. "I've got yeh kilt."

"I won't drop out yet awhile, seh," answered Flint. "It'll take moh'n yeh have to kill me."

"Don't yeh reply to me in tha' tone o' voice, seh!" cried the major, angrily. "I'm wohnin' yeh fo' you' health, seh!"

"I thank you, seh," answered Flint, sarcastically; "I'm suht'nly everlastingly obligated to yeh, seh; but I can stay you' hand out."

The major swore a great oath that he could and would beat the captain's hand, and both friends glared angrily at each other across the table. They stood like that for so long that the hotel keeper, aroused at the unwonted quiet, entered the room to see what was the matter. He called help; the two friends, who had become almost cataleptic, were taken apart, and trouble was averted for the time. But Capt. Flint bade the tavern keeper to seal his hand of cards in a package, and saw it done before he left the hotel. Maj. Oxheart saw his hand sealed in a similar package.

A few days later the two friends met again, and after some talk returned to the game. The hands, still sealed up, were produced by the hotel keeper, and the game began where it had left off. Disagreement again broke up the game, and again the boniface, Col. Carter, took charge of the hands, sealing them in second envelopes. So for five years the game went on, never finished, and at each separation Col. Carter sealed the hands in additional envelopes.

The war interrupted the friendly contest, but not for long. Again and again, as chance permitted, Col. Oxheart and Lieut. Col. Flint would get the packages from Gen. Carter and begin the never ending game. When Gen. Carter fell at the head of his men on that fatal day with which every reader, etc., he had strength to turn over the packages to his adjutant. Taking them from the bosom of his dress coat—he always wore full uniform in battle—he gave them to Maj. Tolliver and bade him care for them with his life's blood. Then the gallant sportsman and soldier died.

When Oxheart and Flint were found dead, Col. Tolliver (he had been promoted) gave the packages to the representative of the heirs. Col. Jones Enraughty-Darby, who placed them in a safe deposit vault. Under the circumstances, it was only natural that the two heirs should be represented by one person. Col. Enraughty-Darby related the facts in the case to the two young men and left it to their consciences to lead them to do what should be done. He knew well what they would do. They went on with the game! The same rules stood; they began where their fathers had left off. The progress made was little and slow, for their altered circumstances kept them apart much of the time.

In time they married and had sons; to the eldest son each man told the story of the great game; and it is these men, grandsons of the original players, that carried on the game. Every week if they could get together they met and made ten bets. Neither faltered, though both knew that when the end should come one of them would be ruined for life. But still they played on.

After the stenographer had gone they sat down idly at the table and called for refreshments. They were still discussing the market, for they were partners, one living in this city, the other in Chicago, when a cry of fire rang through the hotel. They escaped with their lives, not remembering until too late that on the table lay the record book in which were put down every bet that they, their fathers and their grandfathers had made on the long-dealt hands. Their first feeling was one of dismay. Then, simultaneously, over each man's face came a look of relief, of joy.

"Hurrah!" they shouted together, and in the open street they fell on each other's necks and wept. The records destroyed, how could they continue the game?

George Flint telegraphed at once to Tolliver Enraughty, of Enraughty & Carter, esquires, of Richmond, who soon appeared in the city with a parcel—the two packages containing the hands over which so many thousand bets had been made. Solemnly, as if at the reading of a will, the packages were opened. Each was marked on the outer covering with the name of its holder.

"This was my grandfather's," said Oxheart, with a quiver in his voice.

"My grandfather held this," said Flint, softly, caressingly.

The lawyer went on with his work in silence. It was almost like unrolling a mummy to take off one by one the many envelopes in which these hands were wrapped. At last Mr. Enraughty stopped and read from the envelope unopened in his hand:

"I do not know which of these hands belonged to which of those fools, so I have marked this one for Flint, and the other for Oxheart. Dorsey Carter," and then followed the date, that of the second meeting of the original players. The two grandsons looked at each other silently, then they both said: "Go on."

In the other package Mr. Enraughty found a similar note.

"Gentlemen," he said, "shall I open the last envelopes?"

"No," said both Flint III. and Oxheart III. together. The lawyer held the two envelopes in the fire until they were destroyed.

"Now," said he, "can we get decent whisky in this benighted town?"—N. Y. Sun.

By the census Buffalo (N. Y.) has gained 96,555 in population in ten years, showing that "Put Me off at Buffalo" was taken literally by the public.

Competent authorities assert that South America has greater undeveloped resources than any other portion of the world. Any crop grown elsewhere can be duplicated there, and the country abounds in coal, silver and gold, most of which have been only slightly developed.

The friends of Andree will never give up hope. A dispatch from Stockholm tells of a letter, signed by Andree, found in the Arctic by an American. It has not been over two years since Andree sailed away for the north pole in his balloon, and it is foolishness to expect that he is alive.

Most anything seems to be good enough reason for bringing divorce proceedings. A Washington woman has sued for freedom on the ground that her husband is not as strong politically as he thought and said he was, and a Leavenworth sister has just burst her matrimonial bonds because her husband would not take her to church.

Activities of a presidential campaign explain the comparative neglect of the sea serpent this summer, but a San Francisco romanticist does his best to make amends by describing how a whale nearly upset a steamer. That the whale should be roaming around in a small bay and that a marine "artist" should present the sole proof add to the beauty of the fiction.

From the great shipyards at Stettin, which have already sent forth the Deutschland and the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, is soon to come another leviathan of the sea which, it is affirmed, will make an hourly speed of 24 knots. It may yet come about that a person who has a week and some cash to spare for an ocean voyage may cross and recross the Atlantic in seven days.

The new French duel code, which is the work of Prince Bibeseo, an authority who "has been out" a great many times and has killed his man, provides that early morning encounters in the suburbs must be more strenuous than for some time past. In the first place, no duel can end without the shedding of blood, but, what is much more rigorous, no account of the proceedings can be published unless there has been gory result, nor until the insult causing the duel has been published.

If some one could graphically describe how the legationers at Peking felt when they first saw the flags of their various countries advancing with the allied troops it would make an addition to literature that would live forever. In any event, when the whole story is told, there will be a great opportunity for the novelist and the poet, both in the defense of the legations and in the forced march of the troops that went to their relief. There is little in history to equal either.

One good result has been accomplished by the present Chinese crisis. The European powers, it is said, now recognize the fact that China can be governed only by the Chinese. The most that the powers which were recently plotting so gayly the dismemberment of the Flowery kingdom now seem to hope for is the direction of that government and they do not seem to be altogether certain whether they will succeed even in that. When 400,000,000 people insist that they will govern themselves their wishes are pretty apt to be respected.

Thirty years' review of life insurance reveals some interesting and stupendous figures. Thirty years ago the largest life insurance company in the country had $31,000,000 of assets. Today there are ten companies each holding more assets than the largest had 30 years ago. In these years premiums to the amount of $3,250,000,000 have been received, while interest and other income of over $900,000,000 bring the total up to $4,137,000,000. Payments to the policy holders during these 30 years amount to $2,139,597,029. Life insurance is a great enterprise.

Stephen Peacock, son of George Peacock, of Yonkers, N. Y., and George Peacock, son of Stephen Peacock, of Peekskill, were drowned in the Hudson river. They were cousins, and went in swimming at the same hour, Stephen at Yonkers and George at Peekskill. Each boy became exhausted, got beyond his depth and was drowned before aid could reach him. Each father sent a telegram to his brother telling him of the loss, and each received it at the water's edge while aiding in the efforts to recover the body of his own son.

It will surprise many to learn that one tribe of Indians has arrived at such a grade of civilization as to make contracts with the national government. The Crows, of Montana, have entered into a contract to supply the Cheyennes with flour. The Crows have constructed a system of irrigation for their farms and have a good flour mill at the agency and are building another. They have sold farm produce for years to buyers in the surrounding country and cattle and horses, but this is the first time a government contract was ever let to a "blanket Indian."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The indications were that war between Morocco and France was inevitable.

It is said Theodore Tilton will return to the United States and take to the lecture platform.

Off Tangier a United States warship has arrived to collect a claim from the sultan of Morocco for the murder of an American citizen by a band of religious fanatics.

In Pretoria Lieut. Corduo, leader of the conspirators against Lord Roberts, was shot by order of a court-martial.

French and Hungarian governments have adopted more stringent measures against the anarchists.

Our government will withdraw Gen. Chaffee and his troops should Russia persist in making war on China. President McKinley has instructed ministers in European capitals to sound governments as to future policy. Advices from Shanghai and other points indicated that peace is at hand. A military administration consisting of a representative from each of the allied powers, has been established at Peking, and the future movements of the allied forces depend upon instructions from the home governments.

A dispatch says Lord Roberts has left Pretoria and has fixed his headquarters at Wonderfontein. The Boers in a fight near Machadorp inflicted heavy loss upon the Liverpool regiment.

A cablegram received in Washington says that the report that Russia, Germany and Japan had declared war on China and had invited England and the United States to retire is untrue. The allies have driven the Boxers from Peking. The Japanese government has notified Earl Li that negotiations for peace will be impossible until plenipotentiaries acceptable to the powers are appointed. A dispatch received at the Japanese legation in Washington said the Chinese were rallying their forces ready to attack the allied armies at Peking.

Great Britain sees signs of preparations for war in France and a scare develops in the United Kingdom.

HAVE NOT DECLARED WAR.

Russia, Germany and Japan Have Not Joined to Fight China—Latest from Conger.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Russia, Germany and Japan have not declared war upon China, either separately or in concert. This statement is made upon authority of the highest character. What those nations may do within the next 48 hours, or within the next fortnight, is a question which no one in Washington is prepared to answer.

London, Aug. 27.—Shanghai advices say that the report of the capture of Emperor Kwang Hsu by the Japanese was erroneous. It was a case of mistaken identity. The Paking correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, wiring August 19, reasserts that the empress dowager fled westward, and adds: "She has a bodyguard of 1,500, and as the mountainous character of the country would prevent artillery following, it is believed that she will not be pursued."

Washington, Aug. 28.—After several days' intermission in Chinese advices the government Monday received two dispatches which presumably bring its advices up to the most recent date. There are indications that the principal delays in the lines of communication are encountered between Tientsin and Peking, a fact explainable by the newspaper advices that small bands of Boxers are operating on the line of communication of the Peking campaign force. Such interruption would delay all messages several days, as they would have to be sent from Chefoo to Shanghai by steamer, a trip of about four days.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The department of state makes public the following dispatch from Minister Conger, received Monday morning:

"From Taku, Aug. 27.—Secretary of State, Washington: No important movements since last dispatch. Military is trying to restore. No representative of the Chinese government encountered yet. Several ministers of the tsung-li-yamen reported in the city and are expected to appear soon. Generals decide not to enter imperial palace, leaving it practically vacant. Two thousand Germans arrived to-day.

(Signed) "CONGER."

FOOLS THE BRITISH.

De Wet Is Headed for the Orange River Colony—Troops Stumble Into a Boer Plot.

Krugersdorp, Aug. 27.—Commandant De Larey appeared Friday before Bank Station with a large force and summoned the garrison, commanded by Lord Albemarle, to surrender, which the garrison refused to do. In the meantime De Wet took advantage of this ruse and crossed the river towards the Orange River colony.

London, Aug. 27.—Lord Roberts has left Pretoria and has fixed his headquarters at Wonderfontein, the second station west of Machadodorp, where the bulk of the Boers in arms are supposed to be. Wiring from there, August 24, he says:

"Buller reports the Boers laid a trap for his cavalry August 23, opening with several guns at fairly short range. The English guns silenced the Boers, but when the firing ceased and the pickets were being placed for the night by some mistake two companies of the Liverpool regiment advanced 1,500 yards into a hollow out of sight of the main body, where they were surrounded by the Boers and suffered severely."

The Liverpools lost ten men killed and Capt. Plomer and 45 men wounded. In addition, they had 32 men missing. Gen. Buller's other casualties August 23 were 20 men killed, wounded or missing.

London, Aug. 28.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts:

"The Boers have been beaten back by Bruce Hamilton at Winburg. Gen. Olivier has been captured."

Lord Roberts adds that Gen. Olivier was "the moving spirit among the Boers in the southeast portion of the Orange colony during the war."

RETIRES FROM THE RING.

Robert Fitzsimmons Says Henceforth There Will Be One Man Less in the Heavyweight Division.

New York, Aug. 28.—Robert Fitzsimmons has announced his retirement from the pugilistic ring. He made an ineffectual attempt to get on a match for the heavyweight championship with James J. Jeffries to take place before the Horton law expires at midnight next Friday, and has issued the following statement:

"I am through with fighting. I will retire from the ring and will not claim the championship from Jeffries. I am ready and on edge to meet him next Friday night, as his manager suggested ten days ago, but as he claims he is in no condition to fight on that night, I am through with him and with the ring. Henceforth there will be one man less in the heavyweight division, for I will go out with the Horton law."

May Lose a Congressman.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Omaha, Neb., is the first city thus far counted in the twelfth census to show a decrease in population during the past decade. The count of the population of Omaha just completed shows 102,555. The population in 1890 was 140,452. This indicates a decrease in ten years of 37,897, or 26.98 per cent. The impression prevails that Nebraska's population has decreased to such an extent that the state will be deprived of one of its six congressmen when the new apportionment shall have been made.

Conspirator Is Shot.

London, Aug. 25.—Lieut. Cerdua, the Boer officer convicted by court-martial as one of the ringleaders in the conspiracy to abduct Lord Roberts and to kill leading British officers was executed at Pretoria late Friday afternoon. Lord Roberts, to whom the verdict and sentence of the court had been referred, approved it and the execution followed within a few hours.

New Trial Refused.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 24. — After considering the affidavits submitted by both sides and hearing arguments, Judge Cantrill overruled the motion for a new trial in the case of Former Secretary of State Caleb Powers, convicted last Saturday as an accomplice before the fact in the murder of William Goebel last January.

Aged Couple Murdered.

Freeport, Ill., Aug. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. John Bobb, an aged couple living alone on a farm 12 miles north of this city, were murdered Friday night and all the money there was in the house, about $100, which the aged couple had saved up for their funeral expenses, was stolen.

THE NAME OF OLD GLORY.

The following new poem by James Whitcomb Riley was read by the author at the Iron Brigade banquet of the G. A. R. encampment in Chicago:

Old Glory! say who,
By the ships and the crew
And the long, blended ranks of the gray and the blue—
Who gave you, Old Glory, the name that you bear
With such pride everywhere
As you cast yourself free through the rapturous air
And leap out full length, as we're wanting you to?
Who gave you that name, with the ring of the same
And the honor and fame so becoming to you?
Your stripes stroked in ripples of white and of red,
With your stars at their glittering best overhead—
By day or by night
Their delightfulest light
Laughing down from their little square heaven of blue;
Who gave you the name of Old Glory?—say who—
Who gave you the name of Old Glory?
The old banner lifted and faltering then
In vague lisps and whispers fell silent again.

Old Glory, speak out. We are asking about
How you happened to "favor" a name, so to say,
That sounds so familiar and careless and gay
As we cheer it and shout in our wild, breezy way—
We, the crowd, every man of us, calling you that—
We, Tom, Dick and Harry, each one swinging his hat
And hurrahing "Old Glory!" like you were our kin,
When, Lord! we all know we're as common as sin!
And yet it just seems like you humor us all
And waft us your thanks as we hail you and fall
Into line with you over us, waving us on
Where our glorified, sanctified betters have gone.
And this is the reason we're wanting to know
(And we're wanting it so—where our own fathers went we are willing to go),
Who gave you the name of Old Glory—oh, ho!—
Who gave you the name of Old Glory?
The old flag unfurled with a billowy thrill
For an instant, then wistfully sighed and was still.

Old Glory, the story we're wanting to hear
Is what the plain facts of your christening were—
For your name, just to hear it,
Repeat it and cheer it, 's a tang to the spirit
As salt as a tear—
And seeing you fly, and the boys marching by,
There's a shout in the throat and a blur in the eye
And an aching to live for you always, or die,
If, dying, we still keep you waving on high.
And so, by our love
For you, floating above,
And the stars of all wars and the sorrows thereof,
Who gave you the name of Old Glory, and why
Are we thrilled at the name of Old Glory?
Then the old banner leaped, like a sail in the blast,
And fluttered an audible answer at last.

And it spake, with a shake of the voice, and it said:
"By the driven-snow white and the living-blood red
Of my bars and their heaven of stars overhead—
By the symbol conjoined of them all, skyward cast,
As I float from the steeple or flap at the mast
Or droop o'er the sod where the long grasses nod,
My name is as old as the glory of God.
So I came by the name of Old Glory."

OLD SOLDIERS WELCOMED.

Chicago Greets Grand Army Veterans —Parade of Naval Veterans— Many Reunions.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Chicago extended the handclasp of welcome Sunday to the Grand Army of the Republic. The city greeted the great vanguard of the veterans, but the vast body of the still numerous though decreasing soldiers of the union is pouring in from all parts of the country.

Special patriotic services in all the churches ushered in the week of celebration and the other notable events of the day were the religious exercises afternoon and evening at the Coliseum. With to-day the many social and recreative features that mark a G. A. R. encampment will be in full blast.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—'Mid lines of cheering thousands, under emblematic arches and fluttering ensigns of stars and stripes, the navy veterans of the '60s marched Monday, with escorts of honor, in their last great martial pageant of the waning century, across the years of which they have emblazoned so glorious a record. The hand of Chicago, with her throngs of visitors, was raised in loving salute for the scarred and serried ranks of the men who manned the ships of Farragut, Porter and Foote.

The leading affair Monday evening was the banquet of the Iron brigade at the clubhouse of the Athletic club. The speakers were Speaker Henderson, of Iowa; Senator Burrows, of Michigan; Gov. Mount, of Indiana; Gov. Scofield, of Wisconsin; Commander Shaw, of the G. A. R.; Charles G. Dawes, comptroller of the currency, and Gen. Edward S. Bragg, of Wisconsin. James Whitcomb Riley recited a poem.

A meeting of the National Association of Ex-Prisoners of War was held in the Coliseum in the evening, which drew a large crowd, an attractive programme being rendered. An address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Harrison.

Many regiments held reunions Monday in different parts of Chicago. Some of the soldiers had not seen each other since the war, and greetings between them were warm. Campaigns were fought over again and old stories were retold. The reunions seemed to bring youth back to the veterans again and many said they felt able to fight for their country again should occasion arise.

Sharkey Whipped in Two Rounds.

New York, Aug. 25.—Whipped into insensibility in less than two rounds is the story in brief of Tom Sharkey's meeting with Bob Fitzsimmons at the Coney Island Sporting club Friday night. The brevity of the fight proves that Fitzsimmons is still a great fighter and able to beat the best of the heavy weights. He has beaten Corbett, Ruhlin and Sharkey. The finishing blow was a left hook on the jaw.

News from Manila.

Manila, Aug. 28.—The official reports show the last fortnight's scouting to have had insignificant results. The United States transport California, which sailed from San Francisco July 17, via Honolulu July 27, for Manila, is now a week overdue.

AN ALL-NIGHT BATTLE.

Fatal Attempt to Arrest a Female Doctor at Gilman, Ill.—Two Persons Killed.

Gilman, Ill., Aug. 28.—Two men killed, three wounded—two of them perhaps fatally—one woman wounded and her residence burned, are the results of an all-night battle between a mob and Mrs. Dr. C. W. Wright, who was accused of the murder of Dessie Salter, the 16-year-old daughter of a citizen of Gilman.

THE DEAD—John Myers, laborer employed by Mrs. Dr. Wright.

Michael Ryan, citizen serving as deputy constable.

FATALLY WOUNDED—Lawrence Ryan, brother of the dead man, wounded in abdomen.

George Willoughby, citizen, shot through left lung.

Mrs. Dr. C. W. Wright, shot through right shoulder, bullet taking downward course.

SERIOUSLY WOUNDED—Peter Lauer, member of the citizens' attacking party; shot through stomach.

The tragedy was precipitated by the investigation of the coroner's jury into the death of Dessie Salter, a 16-year-old girl of Leonard, Ill., who died in Mrs. Wright's lying-in hospital Friday night. A warrant was issued for Mrs. Wright's arrest.

A number of deputies gathered upon the street, accompanied by Constable Nilstead. Mrs. Wright barred the door, and in forcing an entrance the constable encountered unexpected opposition. They broke the outer door open and entered the darkened rooms. Michael Ryan felt his way across the first room and was about to enter the door of the inner apartment, when a shot rang out, and he fell dead.

About three o'clock the family of Michael Ryan arrived. The dead man had been carried to the bushes near the house where he met his death. A mob of probably 250 people had gathered. Most of them were armed. The scenes of grief which followed the arrival of Ryan's wife and children fired the crowd with frenzy. They seized dozens of bundles of straw, saturated them with petroleum, piled them against the front and sides of the so-called hospital, and applied the torch. In a moment the place was a mass of flames.

The mob then dispersed. It had been reported that there were three women in the house besides Mrs. Wright, but no signs of them have been found. The house was destroyed with its contents.

MR. BRYAN DECLINES.

Will Not Attend Grand Army Encampment in Chicago Because of President McKinley's Absence.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—William J. Bryan has declined to be a visitor at the national G. A. R. encampment. He sent a message to William H. Harper, head of the local committee, saying that because of the absence of President McKinley from the encampment he considered it advisable to remain away. His telegram follows:

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 27.—W. H. Harper, Executive Director Grand Army Reunion, Chicago: Since President McKinley is detained by public business, I believe the proprieties of the occasion demand that I also decline, and thus relieve the reunion of any appearance of partisanship.

W. J. BRYAN.

The local committee, through Mr. Harper, expressed its regrets at the inability of Mr. Bryan to be present by sending him the following message:

Chicago, Aug. 27.—W. J. Bryan, Lincoln: Your telegram declining invitation to the grand army reunion because of President McKinley's absence by reason of his public duties is received. The executive committee appreciates your delicacy of sentiment under the circumstances, while regretting that we cannot have the pleasure and honor of entertaining you.

W. H. HARPER.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Man and Wife Meet Death in an Electrical Storm—Camp Meeting Grounds Flooded.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 27.—Thousands of dollars' damage was caused in this vicinity by a terrific rainstorm. The residence of William Brader, three miles north of Holcomb, was struck by lightning and Brader and his wife killed in their bed. Their child, two years old, who was sleeping with them, escaped with slight injuries. There are many reports of live stock killed by lightning, 20 horses and cattle perishing in the vicinity of Holcomb. The storm was severe in Rockford. Streets were washed out and basements and cellars filled. At Epworth Grove, where the Methodist camp meeting is being held, the grounds were flooded and tents leveled, the campers taking refuge in the tabernacle.

BOAT TIPPED OVER.

The Wife and Three Little Sons of Henry Quaddy Drowned in a Wisconsin River.

Kaukauna, Wis., Aug. 27.—In full view of a large party of picnickers Mrs. Henry Quaddy and three little sons were drowned in the river, while Mr. Quaddy with his daughter narrowly escaped the same fate. Mr. Quaddy, who is a carpenter, and his family were in a small skiff about half way across the river when the boat was overturned. Mr. Quaddy, by clinging to the boat, managed to save his 12-year-old daughter, while his wife and three sons, aged from six to nine years, were drowned. The body of Mrs. Quaddy has been recovered.

Aged Couple Killed.

Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 28.—A frightful accident, resulting in the death of an aged couple, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Beason, occurred near Gladbrook. They were crossing the Chicago Great Western track when the buggy was struck by a passenger train. The woman was instantly killed, and the man died about 20 minutes later.

Double Shooting in New York.

New York, Aug. 28.—H. H. Stridiron, a wealthy Chicago lumber merchant, was shot twice in the head in his room in the Vendome hotel, Forty-first street and Broadway, by his friend, John H. Esson, also of Chicago. Esson then turned the revolver on himself and sent a bullet into his own brain.

St. Louis Shows Gain.

Washington, Aug. 25.—The population of St. Louis, according to the count of the twelfth census, just completed, is 575,238. In 1890 the population of St. Louis was 451,770. The increase during the past ten years was 123,468, or 27.33 per cent.

KIDNEY TROUBLES OF WOMEN

Miss Frederick's Letters Show How She Relied on Mrs. Pinkham and Was Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes am troubled with a white discharge. Also have kidney and bladder trouble.

I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. Now I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough to you for what you have done for me."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio, Sept. 10, 1899.

Backache Cured

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to thank you for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. It is the only medicine I have found that helped me. I doctored with one of the best physicians in the city of New York, but received no benefit. I had been ailing for about sixteen years, was so weak and nervous that I could hardly walk; had continued pain in my back and was troubled with leucorrhœa. Menses were irregular and painful. Words cannot express the benefit I have derived from the use of your medicine. I heartily recommend it to all suffering women."—MRS. MARY BARSHINGER, Windsor, Pa.

MR. BRYAN'S GREATEST SPEECH

Reply to Notification Committee at Indianapolis Accepting the Nomination for the Presidency.

Magnificent Statement of the Issues Upon Which the United Democracy Goes Forth to Victory This Fall.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Notification Committee: I shall, at an early day, and in a more formal manner accept the nomination which you tender, and I shall at that time discuss the various questions covered by the Democratic platform. It may not be out of place, however, to submit a few observations at this time upon the general character of the contest before us and upon the question which is declared to be of paramount importance in this campaign.

When I say that the contest of 1900 is a contest between Democracy on the one hand and plutocracy on the other I do not mean to say that all our opponents have deliberately chosen to give to organized wealth a predominating influence in the affairs of the Government, but I do assert that on the important issues of the day the Republican party is dominated by those influences which constantly tend to substitute the worship of mammon for the protection of the rights of man

In 1859 Lincoln said that the Republican party believed in the man and the dollar, but that in case of conflict it believed in the man before the dollar. This is the proper relation which should exist between the two. Man, the handiwork of God, comes first; money, the handiwork of man, is of inferior importance. Man is the master, money the servant, but upon all important questions to-day Republican legislation tends to make money the master and man the servant.

The maxim of Jefferson, "equal rights to all and special privileges to none," and the doctrine of Lincoln that this should be a government "of the people, by the people and for the people,' are being disregarded and the instrumentalities of government are being used to advance the interests of those who are in a position to secure favors from the government.

The Democratic party is not making war upon the honest acquisition of wealth; it has no desire to discourage industry, economy and thrift. On the contrary, it gives to every citizen the greatest possible stimulus to honest toil when it promises him protection in the enjoyment of the proceeds of his labor.

Property rights are most secure when human rights are most respected.

Property rights are most secure when human rights are most respected. Democracy strives for a civilization in which every member of society will share according to his merits.

No one has a right to expect from society more than a fair compensation for the services which he renders to society. If he secures more it is at the expense of someone else. It is no injustice to him to prevent his doing injustice to another. To him who would, either through class legislation or in the absence of necessary legislation, trespass upon the rights of another the Democratic party says, "Thou shalt not."

Against us are arrayed a comparatively small but politically and financially powerful number who really profit by Republican policies; but with them are associated a large number who, because of their attachment to their party name, are giving their support to doctrines antagonistic to the former teachings of their own party.

Republicans who used to advocate bimetallism now try to convince themselves that the gold standard is good; Republicans who were formerly attached to the greenback, are now seeking an excuse for giving national banks control of the nation's paper money; Republicans who used to boast that the Republican party was paying off the national debt are now looking for reasons to support a perpetual and increasing debt; Republicans who formerly abhorred a trust now beguile themselves with the delusion that there are good trusts and bad trusts, while, in their minds, the line between the two is becoming more and more obscure; Republicans who, in times past, congratulated the country upon the small expense of our standing army, are now making light of the objections which are urged against a large increase in the permanent military establishment; Republicans who gloried in our independence when the nation was less powerful now look with favor upon a foreign alliance; Republicans who three years ago condemned "forcible annexation" as immoral and even criminal are now sure that it is both immoral and criminal to oppose forcible annexation. That partisanship has already blinded many to present dangers is certain; how large a portion of the Republican party can be drawn over to the new policies remains to be seen.

Partisanship has already blinded many to present dangers.

For a time Republican leaders were inclined to deny to opponents the right to criticise the Philippine policy of the administration, but upon investigation they found that both Lincoln and Clay asserted and exercised the right to criticise a President during the progress of the Mexican war.

Instead of meeting the issue boldly and submitting a clear and positive plan for dealing with the Philippine question, the Republican convention adopted a platform the larger part of which was devoted to boasting and self-congratulation.

In attempting to press economic questions upon the country to the exclusion of those which involve the very structure of our government, the Republican leaders give new evidence of their abandonment of the earlier ideals of the party and of their complete subserviency to pecuniary considerations.

But they shall not be permitted to evade the stupendous and far-reaching issue which they have deliberately brought into the arena of politics. When the President, supported by a practically unanimous vote of the House and Senate, entered upon a war with Spain for the purpose of aiding the struggling patriots of Cuba, the country, without regard to party, applauded.

Although the Democrats realized that the administration would necessarily gain a political advantage from the conduct of a war which in the very nature of the case must soon end in a complete victory, they vied with the Republicans in the support which they gave to the President. When the war was over and the Republican leaders began to suggest the propriety of a colonial policy opposition at once manifested itself.

The menace of imperialism became apparent.

When the President finally laid before the Senate a treaty which recognized the independence of Cuba, but provided for the cession of the Philippine islands to the United States, the menace of imperialism became so apparent that many preferred to reject the treaty and risk the ills that might follow rather than take the chance of correcting the errors of the treaty by the independent action of this country.

I was among the number of those who believed it better to ratify the treaty and end the war, release the volunteers, remove the excuse for war expenditures and then give to the Filipinos the independence which might be forced from Spain by a new treaty.

In view of the criticism which my action aroused in some quarters, I take this occasion to restate the reasons given at that time. I thought it safer to trust the American people to give independence to the Filipinos than to trust the accomplishment of that purpose to diplomacy with an unfriendly nation.

"CAN ALIENS MAKE TREATIES EASIER THAN FRIENDS CAN MAKE LAWS?"

Lincoln embodied an argument in the question when he asked, "Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws?" I believe that we are now in a better position to wage a successful contest against imperialism than we would have been had the treaty been rejected. With the treaty ratified a clean-cut issue is presented between a government by consent and a government by force, and imperialists must bear the responsibility for all that happens until the question is settled.

If the treaty had been rejected the opponents of imperialism would have been held responsible for any international complications which might have arisen before the ratification of another treaty. But whatever difference of opinion may have existed as to the best method of opposing a colonial policy, there never was any difference as to the great importance of the question and there is no difference now as to the course to be pursued.

The title of Spain being extinguished we were at liberty to deal with the Filipinos according to American principles. The Bacon resolution, introduced a month before hostilities broke out at Manila, promised independence to the Filipinos on the same terms that it was promised to the Cubans. I supported this resolution and believe that its adoption prior to the breaking out of hostilities would have prevented bloodshed, and that its adoption at any subsequent time would have ended hostilities.

If the treaty had been rejected considerable time would have necessarily elapsed before a new treaty could have been agreed upon and ratified, and during that time the question would have been agitating the public mind. If the Bacon resolution had been adopted by the Senate and carried out by the President, either at the time of the ratification of the treaty or at any time afterwards, it would have taken the question of imperialism out of politics and left the American people free to deal with their domestic problems. But the resolution was defeated by the vote of the Republican Vice-President, and from that time to this a Republican Congress has refused to take any action whatever in the matter.

Would have taken the question of imperialism out of politics.

When hostilities broke out at Manila Republican speakers and Republican editors at once sought to lay the blame upon those who had delayed the ratification of the treaty, and, during the progress of the war, the same Republicans have accused the opponents of imperialism of giving encouragement to the Filipinos. This is a cowardly evasion of responsibility.

If it is right for the United States to hold the Philippine Islands permanently and imitate European empires in the government of colonies . e Republican party ought to state its position and defend it, but it must expect the subject races to protest against such a policy and to resist to the extent of their ability.

The Filipinos do not need any encouragement from Americans now living. Our whole history has been an encouragement, not only to the Filipinos, but to all who are denied a voice in their own government. If the Republicans are prepared to censure all who have used language calculated to make the Filipinos hate foreign domination, let them condemn the speech of Patrick Henry. When he uttered that passionate appeal, 'Give me liberty, or give me death," he expressed a sentiment which still echoes in the hearts of men.

Let them censure Jefferson; of all the statesmen of history none have used words so offensive to those who would hold their fellows in political bondage. Let them censure Washington, who declared that ...e colonists must choose between liberty and slavery. Or, if the statute of limitations has run against the sins of Henry and Jefferson and Washington, let them censure Lincoln, whose Gettysburg speech will be quoted in defense of popular government when the present advocates of force and conquest are forgotten.

Some one has said that a truth once spoken can never be recalled. It goes on and on, and no one can set a limit to its ever-widening influence. But if it were possible to obliterate every word written or spoken in defense of the principles set forth in the Declaration of Independence, a war of conquest would still leave its legacy of perpetual hatred, for it was God Himself who placed in every human heart the love of liberty. He never made a race of people so low in the scale of civilization or intelligence that it would welcome a foreign master.

A war of conquest would still leave its legacy of perpetual hatred.

Those who would have this nation enter upon a career of empire must consider not only the effect of imperialism on the Filipinos, but they must also calculate its effects upon our own nation. We cannot repudiate the principle of self-government in the Philippines without weakening that principle here.

Lincoln said ...at the safety of this nation was not in its fleets, its armies, its forts, but in the spirit which prizes liberty as the heritage of all men, in all lands, everywhere, and he warned his countrymen that they could not destroy this spirit without planting the seeds of despotism at their own doors.

Even now we are beginning to see the paralyzing influence of imperialism. Heretofore, this nation has been prompt to express its sympathy with those who were fighting for civil liberty. While our sphere of activity has been limited to the Western Hemisphere, our sympathies have not been bounded by the seas. We have felt it due to ourselves and ... the world, as well as to those who were struggling for the right to govern themselves, to proclaim the interest which our people have, from the date of their own independence, felt in every contest between human rights and arbitrary power.

Three quarters of a century ago, when our nation was small, the struggles of Greece aroused our people, and Webster and Clay gave eloquent expression to the universal desire for Grecian independence. In 1896 all parties manifested a lively interest in the success of the Cubans, but now when a war is in progress in South Africa, which must result in the extension of the monarchical idea, or in the triumph of a republic, the advocates of imperialism in this country dare not say a word in behalf of the Boers.

Sympathy for ...e Boers does not arise from any unfriendliness towards England; the American people are not unfriendly toward the people of any nation. This sympathy is due to the fact that, as stated in our platform, we believe in the principles of self-government and reject, as did our forefathers, the claims of monarchy. If this nation surrenders its belief in the universal application of the principles set forth in the Declaration of Independence, it will lose the prestige and influence which ... has enjoyed among the nations as an exponent of popular government.

The American people are not unfriendly toward the people of any nation.

Our opponents, conscious of the weakness of their cause, seek to confuse imperialism with expansion, and have even dared to claim Jefferson as a supporter of their policy. Jefferson spoke so freely and used language with such precision that no one can be ignorant of his views. On one occasion he declared: "If there be one principle more deeply rooted than any other in the mind of every American, it is that we should have nothing to do with conquest." And again he said: "Conquest is not in our principles; it is inconsistent with our government."

The forcible annexation of territory to be governed by arbitrary power differs as much from the acquisition of territory to be built up into states as a monarchy differs from a democracy. The Democratic party does not oppose expansion, when expansion enlarges the area of the Republic and incorporates land which can be settled by American citizens, or adds to our population people who are willing to become citizens and are capable of discharging their duties as such.

The acquisition of the Louisiana territory, Florida, Texas and other tracts which have been secured from time to time, enlarged the Republic and the Constitution followed the flag into the new territory. It is now proposed to seize upon distant territory already more densely populated than our own country, and to force upon the people a government, for which there is no warrant in our Constitution or our laws.

Even the argument that this earth belongs to those who desire to cultivate it and who have the physical power to acquire it, cannot be invoked to justify the appropriation of the Philippine Islands by the United States. If the islands were uninhabited American citizens would not be willing to go there and till the soil. The white race will not live so near the equator. Other nations have tried to colonize in the same latitude. The Netherlands have controlled Java for 300 years and yet today there are less than 60,000 people of European birth scattered among the 25,000,000 natives.

The white race will not live so near the equator.

After a century and a half of English domination in India, less than one-twentieth of one per cent of the people of India are of English birth, and it requires an army of 70,000 British soldiers to take care of the tax collectors. Spain had asserted title to the Philippine Islands for three centuries and yet, when our fleet entered Manila bay, there were less than 10,000 Spaniards residing in the Philippines.

A colonial policy means that we shall send to the Philippine islands a few tracers, a few taskmasters and a few office holders and an army large enough to support the authority of a small fraction of the people while they rule the natives.

AN IMPERIAL POLICY DEMANDS THE MAINTENANCE OF A GREAT STANDING ARMY.

If we have an imperial policy we must have a great standing army as its natural and necessary complement. The spirit which will justify the forcible annexation of the Philippine islands will justify the seizure of other islands and the domination of other people, and with wars of conquest we can expect a certain, if not rapid, growth of our military establishment.

That a large permanent increase in our regular army is intended by Republican leaders is not a matter of conjecture, but a matter of fact. In his message of December 5, 1898, the President asked for authority to increase the standing army to 100,000. In 1896 the army contained about 25,000. Within two years the President asked for four times that many, and a Republican House of Representatives complied with the request after the Spanish treaty had been signed, and when no country was at war with the United States.

If such an army is demanded when an imperial policy is contemplated, but not openly avowed, what may be expected if the people encourage the Republican party by indorsing its policy at the polls?

A large standing army is not only a pecuniary burden to the people and, if accompanied by compulsory service, a constant source of irritation, but it is ever a menace to a republican form of government.

Large standing army a menace to a republican form of government.

The army is the personification of force, and militarism will inevitably change the ideals of the people and turn the thoughts of our young men from the arts of peace to the science of war. The government which relies for its defense upon its citizens is more likely to be just than one which has at call a large body of professional soldiers.

A small standing army and a well equipped and well disciplined state militia are sufficient at ordinary times, and in an emergency the nation should in the future as in the past place its dependence upon the volunteers who come from all occupations at their country's call and return to productive labor when their services are no longer required—men who fight when the country needs fighters and work when the country needs workers.

The Republican platform assumes that the Philippine islands will be retained under American sovereignty, and we have a right to demand of the Republican leaders a discussion of the future status of the Filipino. Is he to be a citizen or a subject? Are we to bring into the body politic eight or ten millions Asiatics, so different from us in race and history that amalgamation is impossible? Are they to share with us in making the laws and shaping the destiny of this nation? No Republican of prominence has been bold enough to advocate such a proposition.

The McEnery resolution, adopted by the Senate immediately after the ratification of the treaty, expressly negatives this idea. The Democratic platform describes the situation when it says that the Filipinos cannot be citizens without endangering our civilization. Who will dispute it? And what is the alternative? If the Filipino is not to be a citizen, shall we make him a subject? On that question the Democratic platform speaks with equal emphasis. It declares that the Filipino cannot be a subject without endangering our form of government. A Republic can have no subjects. A subject is possible only in a government resting upon force; he is unknown in a government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed.

The Republican platform says that "the largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and our duties shall be secured to them (the Filipinos) by law." This is a strange doctrine for a government which owes its very existence to the men who offered their lives as a protest against government without consent and taxation without representation.

In what respect does the position of the Republican party differ from the position taken by the English government in 1776? Did not the English government promise a good government to the colonists? What king ever promised a bad government to his people? Did not the English government promise that the colonists should have the largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and English duties? Did not the Spanish government promise to give to the Cubans the largest measure of self-government consistent with their welfare and Spanish duties? The whole difference between a Monarchy and a Republic may be summed up in one sentence. In a Monarchy, the King gives to the people what he believes to be a good government; in a Republic the people secure for themselves what they believe to be a good government.

The Republican party has accepted the European idea and planted itself upon the ground taken by George III, and by every ruler who distrusts the capacity of the people for self-government or denies them a voice in their own affairs.

Republican party on ground taken by George III.

The Republican platform promises that some measure of self-government is to be given the Filipinos by law; but even this pledge is not fulfilled. Nearly sixteen months elapsed after the ratification of the treaty before the adjournment of Congress last June and yet no law was passed dealing with the Philippine situation. The will of the President has been the only law in the Philippine islands wherever the American authority extends.

Why does the Republican party hesitate to legislate upon the Philippine question? Because a law would disclose the radical departure from history and precedent contemplated by those who control the Republican party. The storm of protest which greeted the Porto Rican bill was an indication of what may be expected when the American people are brought face to face with legislation upon this subject.

If the Porto Ricans, who welcomed annexation, are to be denied the guarantees of our Constitution, what is to be the lot of the Filipinos, who resisted our authority? If secret influences could compel a disregard of our plain duty toward friendly people, living near our shores, what treatment will those same influences provide for unfriendly people 7,000 miles away? If, in this country where the people have a right to vote, Republican leaders dare not take the side of the people against the great monopolies which have grown up within the last few years, how can they be trusted to protect the Filipinos from the corporations which are waiting to exploit the islands?

Is the sunlight of full citizenship to be enjoyed by the people of the United States, and the twilight of semi-citizenship endured by the people of Porto Rico, while the thick darkness of perpetual vassalage covers the Philippines? The Porto Rico tariff law asserts the doctrine that the operation of the constitution is confined to the forty-five States.

The Democratic party disputes this doctrine and denounces it as repugnant to both the letter and spirit of our organic law. There is no place in our system of government for the deposit of arbitrary and irresponsible power. That the leaders of a great party should claim for any President or Congress the right to treat millions of people as mere "possessions" and deal with them unrestrained by the constitution or the bill of rights shows how far we have already departed from the ancient landmarks and indicates what may be expected if this nation deliberately enters upon a career of empire.

The territorial form of government is temporary and preparatory, and the chief security a citizen of a territory has is found in the fact that he enjoys the same constitutional guarantees and is subject to the same general laws as the citizen of a state. Take away this security and his rights will be violated and his interests sacrificed at the demand of those who have political influence. This is the evil of the colonial system, no matter by what nation it is applied.

What is our title to the Philippine islands? Do we hold them by treaty or by conquest? Did we buy them or did we take them? Did we purchase the people? If not, how did we secure title to them? Were they thrown in with the land? Will the Republicans say that inanimate earth has value but that when that earth is molded by the divine hand and stamped with the likeness of the Creator it becomes a fixture and passes with the soil? If governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, it is impossible to secure title to people, either by force or by purchase.

How and why did we secure title to the Philippines?

We could extinguish Spain's title by treaty, but if we hold title we must hold it by some method consistent with our ideas of government. When we made allies of the Filipinos and armed them to fight against Spain, we disputed Spain's title. If we buy Spain's title we are not innocent purchasers.

There can be no doubt that we accepted and utilized the services of the Filipinos, and that when we did so we had full knowledge that they were fighting for their own independence, and I submit that history furnishes no example of turpitude baser than ours if we now substitute our yoke for the Spanish yoke.

Let us consider briefly the reasons which have been given in support of an imperialistic policy. Some say that it is our duty to hold the Philippine islands. But duty is not an argument; it is a conclusion. To ascertain what our duty is, in any emergency, we must apply well settled and generally accepted principles. It is our duty to avoid stealing, no matter whether the thing to be stolen is of great or little value. It is our duty to avoid killing a human being, no matter where the human being lives or to what race or class he belongs.

Everyone recognizes the obligation imposed upon individuals to observe both the human and the moral law, but as some deny the application of those laws to nations, it may not be out of place to quote the opinions of others. Jefferson, than whom there is no higher political authority, said:

"I know of but one code of morality for men, whether acting singly or collectively.

Franklin, whose learning, wisdom and virtue are a part of the priceless legacy bequeathed to us from the revolutionary days, expressed the same idea in even stronger language when he said:

"Justice is strictly due between neighbor nations as between neighbor citizens. A highwayman is as much a robber when he plunders in a gang as when single; and the nation that makes an unjust war is only a great gang."

A nation making unjust war is only a gang.

Many may dare to do in crowds what they would not dare to do as individuals, but the moral character of an act is not determined by the number of those who join it. Force can defend a right, but force has never yet created a right. If it was true, as declared in the resolutions of intervention, that the Cubans "are and of right ought to be free and independent," (language taken from the Declaration of Independence) it is equally true that the Filipinos "are and of right ought to be free and independent."

The right of the Cubans to freedom was not based upon their proximity to the United States, nor upon the language which they spoke, nor yet upon the race or races to which they belonged. Congress by a practically unanimous vote declared that the principles enunciated at Philadelphia in 1776 were still alive and applicable to the Cubans. Who will draw a line between the natural rights of the Cubans and the Filipinos? Who will say that the former has a right to liberty and that the latter has no rights which we are bound to respect? And, if the Filipinos "are and of right ought to be free and independent," what right have we to force our government upon them without their consent? Before our duty can be ascertained, their rights must be determined, and when their rights are once determined, it is as much our duty to respect those rights as it was the duty of Spain to respect the rights of the people of Cuba or the duty of England to respect the rights of the American colonists. Rights never conflict; duties never clash. Can it be our duty to usurp political rights which belong to others? Can it be our duty to kill those who, following the example of our forefathers, love liberty well enough to fight for it?

Some poet has described the terror which overcame a soldier who in the midst of battle discovered that he had slain his brother. It is written "All ye are brethren." Let us hope for the coming of the day when human life—which when once destroyed cannot be restored—will be so sacred that it will never be taken except when necessary to punish a crime already committed, or to prevent a crime about to be committed!

It is said that we have assumed before the world obligations which make it necessary for us to permanently maintain a government in the Philippine islands. I reply first, that the highest obligation of this nation is to be true to itself. No obligation to any particular nations, or to all the nations combined, can require the abandonment of our theory of government, and the substitution of doctrines against which our whole national life has been a protest. And, second, that our obligation to the Filipinos, who inhabit the islands is greater than any obligation which we can owe to foreigners who have a temporary residence in the Philippines or desire to trade there.

Obligation to Filipinos greater than to foreigners.

It is argued by some that the Filipinos are incapable of self-government and that, therefore, we owe it to the world to take control of them. Admiral Dewey, in an official report to the navy department, declared the Filipinos more capable of self-government than the Cubans and said that he based his opinion upon a knowledge of both races. But I will not rest the case upon the relative advancement of the Filipinos. Henry Clay, in defending the right of the people of South America to self-government, said:

"It is the doctrine of thrones that man is too ignorant to govern himself. Their partisans assert his incapacity in reference to all nations; if they cannot command universal assent to the proposition, it is then demanded to particular nations; and our pride and our presumption too often make converts of us. I contend that it is to arraign the disposition of Providence Himself to suppose that He has created beings incapable of governing themselves, and to be trampled on by Kings. Self-government is the natural government of man."

Clay was right. There are degrees of proficiency in the art of self government, but it is a reflection upon the Creator to say that He denied to any people the capacity for self government. Once admit that some people are capable of self government and that others are not and that the capable people have a right to seize upon and govern the incapable, and you make force—brute force—the only foundation of government and invite the reign of a despot. I am not willing to believe that an all-wise and an all-loving God created the Filipinos and then left them thousands of years helpless until the islands attracted the attention of European nations.

Republicans ask, "Shall we haul down the flag that floats over our dead in the Philippines?" The same question might have been asked when the American flag floated over Chapultepec and waved over the dead who fell there; but the tourist who visits the City of Mexico finds there a national cemetery owned by the United States and cared for by an American citizen.

Our flag still floats over our dead, but when the treaty with Mexico was signed American authority withdrew to the Rio Grande and I venture the opinion that during the last fifty years the people of Mexico have made more progress under the stimulus of independence and self government than they would have made under a carpet-bag government held in place by bayonets. The United States and Mexico, friendly republics, are each stronger and happier than they would have been had the former been cursed and the latter crushed by an imperialistic policy disguised as "benevolent assimilation."

"Can we not govern colonies?" we are asked. The question is not what we can do, but what we ought to do. This nation can do whatever it desires to do, but it must accept responsibility for what it does. If the constitution stands in the way, the people can amend the constitution. I repeat, the nation can do whatever it desires to do, but it cannot avoid the natural and legitimate results of its own conduct.

Not what we can do, but what we ought to do.

The young man upon reaching his majority can do what he pleases. He can disregard the teachings of his parents; he can trample upon all that he has been taught to consider sacred; he can disobey the laws of the State, the laws of society and the laws of God. He can stamp failure upon his life and make his very existence a curse to his fellow men, and he can bring his father and mother in sorrow to the grave; but he cannot annul the sentence, "The wages of sin is death."

And so with the nation. It is of age and it can do what it pleases; it can spurn the the traditions of the past; it can repudiate the principles upon which the nation rests; it can employ force instead of reason; it can substitute might for right; it can conquer weaker people; it can exploit their lands, appropriate their property and kill their people; but it cannot repeal the moral law or escape the punishment decreed for the violation of human rights.

"Would we tread in the paths of tyranny,
Nor reckon the tyrant's cost?
Who taketh another's liberty
His freedom is also lost.
Would we win as the strong have ever won,
Make ready to pay the debt,
For the God who reigned over Babylon
Is the God who is reigning yet."

Some argue that American rule in the Philippine islands will result in the better education of the Filipinos. Be not deceived. If we expect to maintain a colonial policy, we shall not find it to our advantage to educate the people. The educated Filipinos are now in revolt against us, and the most ignorant ones have made the least resistance to our domination. If we are to govern them without their consent and give them no voice in determining the taxes which they must pay, we dare not educate them, lest they learn to read the declaration of independence and constitution of the United States and mock us for our inconsistency.

The principal arguments, however, advanced by those who enter upon a defense of imperialism, are:

First—That we must improve the present opportunity to become a world power and enter into international politics.

Second—That our commercial interests in the Philippine islands and in the orient make it necessary for us to hold the islands permanently.

Third—That the spread of the Christian religion will be facilitated by a colonial policy.

Fourth—That there is no honorable retreat from the position which the nation has taken.

ARGUMENTS ADDRESSED TO THE NATION'S PRIDE AND POCKETBOOK.

The first argument is addressed to the nation's pride and the second to the nation's pocketbook. The third is intended for the church member and the forth for the partisan.

It is a sufficient answer to the first argument to say that for more than a century this nation has been a world power. For ten decades it has been the most potent influence in the world. Not only has it been a world power, but it has done more to affect the politics of the human race than all the other nations of the world combined. Because our Declaration of Independence was promulgated others have been promulgated. Because the patriots of 1776 fought for liberty others have fought for it. Because our Constitution was adopted other constitutions have been adopted.

The growth of the principle of self-government, planted on American soil, has been the overshadowing political fact of the nineteenth century. It has made this nation conspicuous among the nations and given it a place in history such as no other nation has ever enjoyed. Nothing has been able to check the onward march of this idea. I am not willing that this nation shall cast aside the omnipotent weapon of truth to seize again the weapons of physical warfare. I would not exchange the glory of this Republic for the glory of all the empires that have risen and fallen since time began.

Would not exchange glory of this Republic for glory of all the empires.

The permanent chairman of the last Republican National Convention presented the pecuniary argument in all its baldness when he said:

"We make no hypocritical pretense of being interested in the Philippines solely on account of others. While we regard the welfare of those people as a sacred trust, we regard the welfare of the American people first. We see our duty to ourselves as well as to others. We believe in trade expansion. By every legitimate means within the province of government and constitution we mean to stimulate the expansion of our trade and open new markets."

This is the commercial argument. It is based upon the theory that war can be rightly waged for pecuniary advantage, and that it is profitable to purchase trade by force and violence. Franklin denied both of these propositions. When Lord Howe asserted that the acts of Parliament which brought on the Revolution were necessary to prevent American trade from passing into foreign channels Franklin replied:

"To me it seems that neither the obtaining nor retaining of any trade, howsoever valuable is an object for which men may justly spill each other's blood; that the true and sure means of extending and securing commerce are the goodness and cheapness of commodities, and that the profits of no trade can ever be equal to the expense of compelling it and holding it by fleets and armies. I consider this war against us, therefore, as both unjust and unwise."

I place the philosophy of Franklin against the sordid doctrine of those who would put a price upon the head of an American soldier and justify a war of conquest upon the ground that it will pay. The Democratic party is in favor of the expansion of trade. It would extend our trade by every legitimate and peaceful means; but it is not willing to make merchandise of human blood.

But a war of conquest is as unwise as it is unrighteous. A harbor and coaling station in the Philippines would answer every trade and military necessity and such a concession could have been secured at any time without difficulty.

Not necessary to own people in order to trade with them.

It is not necessary to own people in order to trade with them. We carry on trade today with every part of the world, and our commerce has expanded more rapidly than the commerce of any European empire. We do not own Japan or China, but we trade with their people. We have not absorbed the republics of Central and South America, but we trade with them. It has not been necessary to have any political connection with Canada or the nations of Europe in order to trade with them. Trade cannot be permanently profitable unless it is voluntary.

When trade is secured by force, the cost of securing it and retaining it must be taken out of the profits, and the profits are never large enough to cover the expense. Such a system would never be defended but for the fact that the expense is borne by all the people, while the profits are enjoyed by a few.

Imperialism would be profitable to the army contractors; it would be profitable to the ship owners, who would carry live soldiers to the Philippines and bring dead soldiers back; it would be profitable to those who would seize upon the franchises, and it would be profitable to the officials whose salaries would be fixed here and paid over there; but to the farmer, to the laboring man and to the vast majority of those engaged in other occupations it would bring expenditure without return and risk without reward.

Farmers and laboring men have, as a rule, small incomes and under systems which place the tax upon consumption pay more than their fair share of the expenses of government. Thus the very people who receive least benefit from imperialism will be injured most by the military burdens which accompany it.

In addition to the evils which he and the farmer share in common, the laboring man will be the first to suffer if oriental subjects seek work in the United States; the first to suffer if American capital leaves our shores to employ oriental labor in the Philippines to supply the trade of China and Japan; the first to suffer from the violence which the military spirit arouses and the first to suffer when the methods of imperialism are applied to our own government.

Is it not strange, therefore, that the labor organizations have been quick to note the approach of these dangers and prompt to protest against both militarism and imperialism.

The pecuniary argument, though more effective with certain classes, is not likely to be used so often or presented with so much enthusiasm as the religious argument. If what has been termed the "gunpowder gospel" were urged against the Filipinos only it would be a sufficient answer to say that a majority of the Filipinos are now members of one branch of the Christian church; but the principle involved is one of much wider application and challenges serious consideration.

It is what has been termed the "Gunpowder Gospel."

The religious argument varies in positiveness from a passive belief that Providence delivered the Filipinos into our hands for their good and our glory to the exultation of the minister who said that we ought to "thrash the natives (Filipinos) until they understand who we are," and that "every bullet sent, every cannon shot and every flag waved means righteousness."

We cannot approve of this doctrine in one place unless we are willing to apply it everywhere. If there is poison in the blood of the hand it will ultimately reach the heart. It is equally true that forcible Christianity, if planted under the American flag in the far-away orient, will sooner or later be transplanted upon American soil.

If true Christianity consists in carrying out in our daily lives the teachings of Christ, who will say that we are commanded to civilize with dynamite and proselyte with the sword? He who would declare the divine will must prove his authority either by Holy Writ or by evidence of a special dispensation.

NOTHING TO WARRANT IMPERIALISM IS FOUND IN THE BIBLE.

Imperialism finds no warrant in the Bible. The command "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" has no Gatling gun attachment. When Jesus visited a village of Samaria and the people refused to receive Him, some of the disciples suggested that fire should be called down from Heaven to avenge the insult; but the Master rebuked them and said: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; for the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." Suppose He had said: "We will thrash them until they understand who we are," how different would have been the history of Christianity! Compare, if you will, the swaggering, bullying, brutal doctrine of imperialism with the golden rule and the commandment "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Love, not force, was the weapon of the Nazarene; sacrifice for others, not the exploitation of them, was His method of reaching the human heart. A missionary recently told me that the Stars and Stripes once saved his life because his assailant recognized our flag as a flag that had no blood upon it.

Let it be known that our missionaries are seeking souls instead of sovereignty; let it be known that instead of being the advance guard of conquering armies, they are going forth to help and uplift, having their loins girt about with truth and their feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, wearing the breastplate of righteousness and carrying the sword of the spirit; let it be known that they are citizens of a nation which respects the rights of the citizens of other nations as carefully as it protects the rights of its own citizens, and the welcome given to our missionaries will be more cordial than the welcome extended to the missionaries of any other nation.

Were not compelled to hold Cuba.

The argument made by some that it was unfortunate for the nation that it had anything to do with the Philippine Islands, but that the naval victory at Manila made the permanent acquisition of those islands necessary is also unsound. We won a naval victory at Santiago, but that did not compel us to hold Cuba.

The shedding of American blood in the Philippine Islands does not make it imperative that we should retain possession forever; American blood was shed at San Juan Hill and El Caney, and yet the President has promised the Cubans independence. The fact that the American flag floats over Manila does not compel us to exercise perpetual sovereignty over the islands; the American flag waves over Havana to-day, but the President has promised to haul it down when the flag of the Cuban Republic is ready to rise in its place. Better a thousand times that our flag in the Orient give way to a flag representing the idea of self-government than that the flag of this Republic should become the flag of an empire.

There is an easy, honest, honorable solution of the Philippine question. It is set forth in the Democratic platform and it is submitted with confidence to the American people. This plan I unreservedly indorse. If elected, I will convene congress in extraordinary session as soon as inaugurated and recommend an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose, first, to establish a stable form of government in the Philippine Islands, just as we are now establishing a stable form of government in Cuba; second, to give independence to the Cubans; third, to protect the Filipinos from outside interference while they work out their destiny, just as we have protected the republics of Central and South America, and are, by the Monroe doctrine, pledged to protect Cuba.

An European protectorate often results in the plundering of the ward by the guardian. An American protectorate gives to the nation protected the advantage of our strength, without making it the victim of our greed. For three-quarters of a century the Monroe doctrine has been a shield to neighboring republics and yet it has imposed no pecuniary burden upon us. After the Filipinos had aided us in the war against Spain, we could not honorably turn them over to their former masters; we could not leave them to be the victims of the ambitious designs of European nations, and since we do not desire to make them a part of us or to hold them as subjects, we propose the only alternative, namely, to give them independence and guard them against molestation from without.

When our opponents are unable to defend their position by argument they fall back upon the assertion that it is destiny, and insist that we must submit to it, no matter how much it violates moral precepts and our principles of government. This is a complacent philosophy. It obliterates the distinction between right and wrong and makes individuals and nations the helpless victims of circumstance.

Opponents insist that it is destiny and we must submit.

Destiny is the subterfuge of the invertebrate, who, lacking the courage to oppose error, seeks some plausible excuse for supporting it. Washington said that the destiny of the Republican form of government was deeply, if not finally, staked on the experiment entrusted to the American people. How different Washington's definition of destiny from the Republican definition!

The Republicans say that this nation is in the hands of destiny; Washington believed that not only the destiny of our own nation but the destiny of the republican form of government throughout the world was intrusted to American hands. Immeasurable responsibility! The destiny of this Republic is in the hands of its own people, and upon the success of the experiment here rests the hope of humanity. No exterior force can disturb this Republic, and no foreign influence should be permitted to change its course. What the future has in store for this nation no one has authority to declare, but each individual has his own idea of the nation's mission, and he owes it to his country as well as to himself to contribute as best he may to the fulfillment of that mission.

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen of the Committee: I can never fully discharge the debt of gratitude which I owe to my countrymen for the honors which they have so generously bestowed upon me; but, sirs, whether I be my lot to occupy the high office for which the convention has named me, or to spend the remainder of my days in private life, it shall be my constant ambition and my controlling purpose to aid in realizing the high ideals of those whose wisdom and courage and sacrifices brought this Republic into existence.

I can conceive of a national destiny surpassing the glories of the present and the past—a destiny which meets the responsibilities of to-day and measures up to the possibilities of the future. Behold a republic, resting securely upon the foundation stones quarried by revolutionary patriots from the mountain of eternal truth—a republic applying in practice and proclaiming to the world the self-evident proposition, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with inalienable rights; that governments are instituted among men to secure these rights, and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Behold a republic in which civil and religious liberty stimulate all to earnest endeavor and in which the law restrains every hand uplifted for a neighbor's injury—a republic in which every citizen is a sovereign, but in which no one cares to wear a crown. Behold a republic standing erect while empires all around are bowed beneath the weight of their own armaments—a republic whose flag is loved while other flags are only feared. Behold a republic increasing in population, in wealth, in strength and in influence, solving the problems of civilization and hastening the coming of an universal brotherhood—a republic which shakes thrones and dissolves aristocracies by its silent example and gives light and inspiration to those who sit in darkness. Behold a republic gradually but surely becoming the supreme moral factor in the world's progress and the accepted arbiter of the world's disputes—a republic whose history, like the path of the just, "is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

No national destiny surpassing the glories of the present.

STEVENSON ACCEPTS NOMINATION

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8.—Mr. Stevenson, replying to Gov. Thomas of Colorado, chairman of the committee appointed to notify the vice-presidential nominee, said:

"I am profoundly grateful for the honor conferred upon me by my selection by the national democratic convention as its candidate for the high office of vice-president of the United States. For the complimentary manner in which such action has been officially made known to me I express to you, Mr. Chairman, and to your honored associates of the committee, my sincere thanks.

"Deeply impressed with a sense of the responsibility assumed by such candidacy, I accept the nomination so generously tendered me. Should the action of the convention meet the approval of the people in November, it will be my earnest endeavor to discharge with fidelity the duties of the great office.

A Wise Provision.

"It is wisely provided in the constitution that at stated times political power shall return to the hands of the people. The struggle for political supremacy, upon which we are now entering, is one of deep moment to the American people. Its supreme importance to all conditions of our countrymen cannot be measured by words. The ills resulting from unjust legislation and from unwise administration of the government must find their remedy in the all-potent ballot. To it we now make our solemn appeal.

"The chief purpose of the great convention whose representatives are before me was redress for existing wrongs and security against perils yet greater which menace popular government. Your convention, in language clear and unmistakable, has presented the vital issues upon which the pending contest is to be determined. To its platform I give my earnest assent.

Sympathy for Sister Republics.

"Clearly and unequivocally the democratic convention has expressed its sympathy with the burghers of the South African republics in their heroic attempt to maintain free government. In this the convention not only voiced the sentiments of American democrats, but of liberty-loving men everywhere. It is not strange that those who have kept the political faith of the author of the declaration of independence should express their abhorrence at the effort of a great European power to subjugate a people whose only crime is a death struggle to maintain their liberties.

"The earnest utterances of the convention that our sympathies are with the Boers in their unequal struggle, meets a hearty response from all who venerate the principles of our fathers. Is it not true that in all the past, a belief in the inalienable rights of all peoples has been with us a living faith? That our sympathy has ever been with the oppressed; with those who were struggling for a larger measure of freedom—for self-government?

America in the Lead.

"For this reason, our government was among the first to extend recognition to the republics of France and Mexico; prompt to extend our sympathy, as well as official recognition, to the little South American states on their escape from the despotism of Spain, and upon their efforts to establish for themselves representative government fashioned after our own. History has but repeated itself, and the struggle to maintain free government a century and a quarter after the promulgation of the declaration of independence has been transferred from the new world to the old. Is it to be wondered then that the political disciples of Jefferson should express their sympathy for the oppressed republics of South Africa? Only those who believe that our own country has outgrown the doctrines of the fathers are in sympathy with England's attempt to establish monarchy upon the ruins of republics.

War Taxes and Expenditures.

"The lavish appropriations by the present republican congress, should challenge the attention of all thoughtful men. Subsidy bills and all unnecessary taxes are condemned by our platform. The accumulation of surplus revenues is too often the pretext for wasteful appropriations of the public money. The millions of surplus now accumulating in the treasury should remain in the pockets of the people. To this end the democratic party demands a reduction of war taxes to the actual needs of the government, and a return to the policy of strict economy in all governmental expenditures.

Laws to Curb Monopolies.

"In apt words the Dingley tariff law is condemned. It is tersely characterized as legislation skillfully devised in the interest of a class, and to impose upon the many burdens which they should not bear. Adhering to the time-honored doctrine of the democratic party, we oppose all tariff legislation, the necessary consequence of which is at the expense of the consumer, to secure unjust advantage to the favored few. Experience has demonstrated that unjust tariff laws have deprived the government of needed revenues, secured to favored beneficiaries colossal fortunes, and largely increased to the people the cost of the necessaries of life. The baleful but logical result of the tariff law condemned by our platform is seen in the sudden growth of giant monopolies, combinations in restraint of lawful trade and 'trusts,' more threatening than foreign foe to the existence of popular government. Believing that "wherever there is a wrong there must be a remedy," the democratic party will favor such legislation as will curb the spirit of monopoly and place an effective barrier against the unlawful combinations of capital which now prove an insuperable obstacle to legitimate enterprise and investment.

Trust Power Felt.

"The deadly power of the trust is felt in all channels of trade. This is but the beginning. Is it too much to say that unless restrained by wholesome laws, wisely and efficiently administered, the danger becomes appalling? Fostered by the Dingley tariff law, the trusts, during the present republican administration, have enormously increased in number and in power. A determined effort for their suppression must now be made. Delay would still further endanger every lawful business interest of the country. The imperative necessity for a remedy being conceded, the question arises: Into whose hands shall be committed the work of formulating laws looking to the suppression of trusts? To whom shall be intrusted the execution of such laws? Shall it be to the victims or to the beneficiaries of the overshadowing evil? If to the latter, then a further lease of power to the present administration is all that is needed.

Trust Evil Not Self-Curing.

"Can any sane man believe that the trust evil is one that will cure itself, or that its destruction will be compassed by those to whom it has brought princely fortunes? If so, let him point to a single honest attempt of republican officials to enforce the laws now upon our statute books against the most stupendous commercial evil known to any period of our history. The democratic party stands pledged to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in every form. It demands the enforcement of existing laws against trusts and the enactment of laws yet more stringent. It wisely demands publicity as to the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. As one means to the important end of curtailing the power of trusts, we favor such amendments of our tariff laws as will place the products of trusts upon the free list, and thereby prevent monopoly under the plea of protection. During almost four years of republican control of all departments of the government, the trust evil has grown to its present overshadowing proportions. What finger has been lifted for its suppression? With its friends again intrenched in power, what hope is held out for the future?

Railroad Discrimination.

"At this hour I can but allude in brief words to other needed reforms to which the attention of the country is called by the democratic platform. Prominent among these, is such enlargement of the scope of interstate commerce law as will protect the public from unjust transportation rates, and individuals from unfair discrimination. As is well known, this law has failed to effect the wise purpose for which it was enacted. In fact, it is now little more than a dead letter upon the statute books. Under well-considered amendments the commission should be vested with ample power to prevent injustice to individuals and to the public.

Labor and Pensions.

"Our platform favors the creation of a department of labor, whose chief officer shall take rank with other constitutional advisers of the president. This is in the interest of justice and will prove an important step looking to the proper recognition and encouragement of the producers of wealth.

"In explicit terms it favors liberal pensions to our soldiers and sailors and to those dependent upon them.

"With equal justice it reiterates the demands of a former democratic platform for bimetallism; the restoration of silver to its proper function in our monetary system.

"For the protection of the home laborer it demands the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion act.

Favors Nicaraguan Canal.

"And in the interest of an enlarged commerce it favors the immediate construction of the Nicaraguan canal. This, however, with the provision that it shall remain forever under the exclusive ownership and control of the United States. The pending Hay-Pauncefote treaty is condemned as a surrender of American rights, not to be tolerated by the American people. In the construction and control of this great work there can be no concession of right to any European power. Commercial interest and national safety in time of war, alike demand its permanent ownership by our government.

The Paramount Issue.

"A question is yet to be discussed, to which all of these are of secondary importance. It is solemnly declared by our platform to be the paramount issue. Questions of domestic policy, however important, may be but questions of the hour—that of imperialism is for time. In the presence of this stupendous issue, others seem but as the dust in the balance. In no sense paltering with words, it is the supreme question of republic or empire. The words of the eminent republican senator, Mr. Hoar, challenge attention: 'I believe that perseverance in this policy will be the abandonment of the principles upon which our government is founded; that it will change our government into an empire; that our methods of legislation, of diplomacy, of administration must hereafter be those which belong to empires, and not those which belong to republics.'

"Upon every phase of our foreign policy, the language of the democratic platform is too clear to admit of misconstruction. It favors trade expansion by all peaceful and lawful means.

Constitution Follows the Flag.

"We believe that liberty, as well as the constitution, follows the flag. Democrats in common with many republicans, oppose the Porto Rican law as a violation of the constitution, and a flagrant breach of good faith toward a dependent people. It is imposing government without the consent of the governed. It is in conflict with that provision of the constitution which declares that 'Duties, imports and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.' Believing that this constitutional provision applies to every part of the United States, we condemn the tariff taxation imposed by a republican congress upon the helpless and distressed people of Porto Rico. Such legislation—inspired solely by greed—is indeed the harbinger of evil to the republic. The attempt to collect unjust taxes with one hand, and with the other to return them in part to a plundered people, is utterly without constitutional warrant or justification. We give our earnest assent to the declaration: 'Our plain duty is to abolish all customs tariffs between the United States and Porto Rico, and give her products access to our markets.' No party exigency or pressure could justify a departure by the president from the plain pathway of duty he had here so clearly indicated. The law imposing tariff duties upon the people of Porto Rico is in palpable violation of the constitution, and a flagrant breach of the pledged faith of the nation.

Deplores Spirit of Empire.

"The democratic platform condemns the policy pursued by the present administration toward the Philippine islands. This policy—inspired by the greedy spirit of commercialism—has embroiled our government in an unnecessary war, sacrificed valuable lives, and placed the American republic in deadly antagonism to our former allies in their efforts to secure their liberties. For the first time in our history we are boldly confronted with the question of 'imperialism—the spirit of empire.'

"This is, indeed, the supreme question to which all others are of secondary importance. Before we break irrevocably with the past and abandon the doctrines of the fathers, it is well that we deliberate upon the consequences of a permanent departure from the settled governmental policy of more than a century. The success of the imperialistic policy foreshadows the empire. Shall the closing hours of the century witness the American people abandoning the sure pathway in which past generations have found prosperity and happiness, and embarking upon that of aggression and conquest, against which we are warned by the wrecks that lie along the entire pathway of history?

"Standing out against the new policy of conquest, with all that it involves of European complication, are the warnings of the founders of the republic. Out of fashion, as it may appear, I quote the last words of Washington to the oncoming generations of his countrymen: 'The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible.' It was the author of the declaration of independence who said: 'Our first and fundamental maxim should be never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe.' Is it not to well to ponder these warnings before permanently embarking upon an untried pathway beset with foreign jealousies, complications and antagonism?

Jeffersonian Expansion.

"The democratic party has ever been the advocate of wise territorial expansion. It was in control of the government during forty years of the first half of the present century. During that period new states were admitted into the federal union, and our western border extended beyond the Mississippi. Out of the Louisiana country—acquired under the first democratic administration—have been carved fourteen magnificent states. Under a later democratic administration—and as the result of the treaty which terminated our war with Mexico—we acquired California and neighboring states and territories, thus bringing under our flag, to remain forever, the vast expanse stretching to the Pacific.

"The policy of aggressive expansion—of subjugation of distant islands—pursued by the present administration, finds no precedent in the peaceable cession of the Louisiana country by Napoleon, that of Florida by Spain, nor that yet later, of the vast western area by Mexico. The territory acquired under democratic administrations was, with favorable climatic conditions, the fit abode for men of our own race. At the time of annexation it passed under the rule of the Anglo-Saxon, who carried with him our language and our laws. It was territory contiguous to our own, and acquired with the declared intention—when conditions and population would justify—of carving it into states. The result: Millions of American homes, our national wealth increased beyond the dream of avarice, and the United States chief among the nations of the earth. Can it be that the new policy of forcible annexation of distant islands finds precedent in the historic events I have mentioned? The answer is found in the bare statement of facts. The territory acquired under democratic administrations is contiguous—the Philippine islands 8,000 miles distant. The acquisition of territory upon our own continent added little to the national expense—to maintain permanent sovereignty over the distant islands necessitates immense expenditures upon our army and navy. More than that, it contemplates methods of administration that pertain, not to the republic, but to the empire. Can it be doubted that the attempt to stifle the spirit of liberty abroad will imperil popular government at home?

Administration's Policy Analyzed.

"What is proposed by the party in power for the government of these islands? If it be intended to establish there our political institutions, what then becomes of the Monroe doctrine? This vital international policy, announced by the president of the United States seventy-seven years ago, was: 'We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety.' This was supplemented by a disclaimer, in substance, upon our part, of any intention to force our institutions upon the nations of Europe or their dependencies.

Monroe Doctrine Enduring.

"The Monroe doctrine is wholesome and enduring. It is the faith of Americans of every creed and party—is of the very warp and woof of our political being. It was promulgated at the critical moment when the 'holy alliance' was attempting to stifle the republican spirit and re-establish the despotism of Spain upon her revolted colonies in South America and Mexico. The essence of the doctrine as then understood by the world was, while we forbid the establishment of despotic governments upon the American continent, we recognize the corresponding obligation to refrain from any attempt to force our political system upon any part of the old world. This has been our settled rule of faith and practice for more than three-quarters of a century. Its promulgation defeated the purpose of the 'holy alliance' and destroyed forever the power of Spain upon this continent.

"Under it Louis Napoleon, a third of a century ago, was compelled to withdraw the French army from Mexico and leave the ill-starred Maximilian to his fate. Under it the empire established by foreign bayonets disappeared and the republic was restored. Are we now to say we still recognize the binding force of this doctrine upon other nations, but not upon our own?

Government by Force a Despotism.

"If ultimate statehood for these remote islands—and others yet to be conquered—be disclaimed, how, then, are they to be held and governed? The only alternative is by force—by the power of army and navy, and this not for a day, or for a year, but for all time. What, then, becomes of the bed-rock principle that 'governmens derive their just powers from the consent of the governed?' If they are to be held permanently as conquered provinces, it will be not only outside of the constitution, but in direct antagonism to the letter and spirit of the declaration of independence. It is no less true now than in the days of our revolution that 'government by arbitrary power is still despotism.'. The attempt, then, either to give these people American citizenship or to hold them as subjects, is to us alike fraught with peril. Should there not be an immediate declaration by our government of its purpose toward them? They should be given unmistakable assurance of independence. Protection by our government should not be withheld against outside interference. The same protection should be theirs heretofore extended to the little states of Central and South America.

Should Give Protection.

"Under existing conditions there should be no hesitation upon our part in giving them protection against the cupidity or aggressive spirit of other nations. All this, not to the end of subjugation or of conquest upon our part, but to that of the full enjoyment by them of liberty and of the ultimate establishment of stable government furnished by their own hands. Against this policy stands imperialism. In American politics the word is new—fortunately the policy is new. We are daily becoming familiar with its meaning, with its forebodings—and the end is not yet. It means a permanent departure from all the traditions of the past; from the high ideals of the founders of the public. It abrogates the holding of our great court that the declaration of independence is the spirit of the government—the constitution but its form and letter. Imperialism knows nothing of limitations of power. Its rule is outside the constitution. It means the adoption by the American republic of the colonial methods of European monarchies. It means the right to hold alien peoples as subjects. It enthrones force as the controlling agency in government. It means the empire.

Militarism a Corollary to Imperialism.

"As a necessary corollary to imperialism will come the immense standing army. The dread hand of militarism will be felt in the new world as it is in the old. The strong army of power will be substituted for the peaceable agencies which for more than a century have made our people contented and happy. It was Jefferson who said, 'A well disciplined militia — our best reliance in peace, and for the first moments of war.' True, at the beginning of the century, with a few millions of population; no less true at the close, as we stand in the forefront of the nations with a population of eighty millions. The result of our recent conflict with Spain gives emphasis to the prophetic words of Jefferson. Existing conditions in continental Europe—entailing taxation and misery to the verge of human endurance—illustrate by sad object lesson the inevitable result of large standing armies in time of peace. Shall we still give heed to the warning of the great sage of the revolution, or enter upon a new century with European monarchies as our model? Without a large standing army, but relying upon the patriotism and courage of American manhood, we were victorious in the second war with Great Britain, with Mexico, in the great civil strife, and with Spain. In the light of history, can it be possible that the American people will consent to the permanent establishment of a large standing army, and its consequent continuing and ever-increasing burdens of taxation?

Republic Always a World Power.

"We are told that our republic is now to become 'a world power.' In the highest sense—with the declaration of independence as its corner stone—it has been in all its past a world power. It has been the lofty ideal to all liberty-loving people; the model for all builders of republics for more than a century. In the sense used by the imperialists the expression is one of terrible significance. It necessitates the methods and equipments of monarchies. It means the creation of and maintenance by our republic of standing armies equal to those of the world powers of Europe. At no less cost can we hold place as a world power. Study existing conditions in European nations, and know what this all means to us. It means taxation to the verge of despair. It means, as has been truly said, that 'every laborer must carry an armed soldier upon his back as he goes to his daily toil.' All history teaches that the corner stone of imperialism is the force of the standing army.

"We stand 100 years from the hour when the political forces were gathering which were to result in the election of the first democratic president. The anniversary of the masterful day in our history was wisely chosen for the assembling in convention of the representatives of the historic party whose founder was Jefferson—and whose platform is the declaration of independence. In the great struggle now upon us we invoke the co-operation of all who revere the memory of our fathers, and to whom this declaration is not unmeaning parchment—but the enduring chart of our liberties. Upon the supreme issue now in the forefront—and to the end that republican government be perpetuated—we appeal to the sober judgment and patriotism of the American people."

A DEMOCRATIC ADVANTAGE THIS YEAR.

"We have an advantage in this campaign—a wonderful advantage—over the campaign of 1896, because then the papers were full of announcements of Democrats who were leaving the party, and now it requires an expert mathematician to stand at the door and count them as they come back."—W. J. Bryan's Speech at Indianapolis.

Richardson to Bryan

DEMOCRACY'S HIGHEST HONOR PLACED IN GREAT LEADER'S KEEPING.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8.—Hon. James D. Richardson, of Tennessee, chairman of the notification committee, announced the nomination of Mr. Bryan in the following speech:

"Mr. Bryan: On the 124th anniversary of the birth of this republic there assembled in Kansas City the most intensely American convention that ever came together in its history. This great body was made up of men from every state and territory in the union. They came from their respective districts filled with unfeigned enthusiasm for the inspiring cause which brought them together. Their 7,000,000 of constituents had empowered them to frame a platform of principles and select a candidate for president and vice-president of the United States in what they conceived to be the supremest political crisis that ever came to our country.

"These delegates all realized that the republic is in peril. They felt that the duty was theirs to take such action as would rescue the state from the gulf of imperialism in which it has been plunged, and thus preserve for themselves and posterity unimpaired the priceless blessings of free government and civil liberty. You see before you today a committee of delegates from that convention, and for whom I speak, upon which is represented each state and territory whose duty it is to convey to you in formal manner the notification that the august assembly I have mentioned, acting for its members, their constituents, and for all who love and cherish liberty everywhere, with no dissenting voice, chose you as the candidate for president, and adopted a platform of principles upon which the campaign we now are inaugurating shall be conducted.

"The declaration of party principles enunciated I now have the honor to present to you. Here the duties of our committee might with propriety end, but I beg indulgence for a few moments.

Work at Kansas City.

"The delegates assembled at Kansas City did not take hasty action. Their conduct was characterized by the greatest firmness and determination. In the alarming condition in which the country has been placed by the present weak and vacillating and un-American administration at Washington, they realized, as do our fellow citizens generally, that a change of men and policies is imperiously demanded. They proceeded deliberately and chose you to lead in the battle for the restoration of the true political faith.

"Four years ago you led the party in the most brilliant contest it has ever experienced. You then failed to win the goal, the presidency, but you did more; you won the respect and admiration of your political foes and the ardent love and admiration of your followers. That contest was made by you against stupendous odds, in the face of a hostile press and with unhappy division in your ranks. I congratulate you and the country that all these unfortunate conditions do not confront you today.

"It is true you were then bitterly sometimes wantonly assailed, and when when partisan rancor ran high occasionally coarse things were said of you and your party. But you and they survived them all, and were perhaps stronger for them. We trust this campaign will be pitched on a higher plane and that it will be conducted in a manner worthy of the great dignity which attaches to the two most exalted offices at stake.

"It is true that you and your party friends have already been characterized as dishonest and lawless at home, and as cowards abroad. I feel sure, however, it will stop at this, or, at least, if such hyperbolic flowers of speech are used at all, it will be in rare instances, and only then by someone whose coarse manners before the public are equaled only by the roughness of his riding habit.

Bryan Prominent in 1896.

"During the eventful and exciting campaign of 1896 you were constantly before the public. The eyes of the nation were fixed upon you and your utterances, as they were never before upon a public man. Then, and in all times since, you have been under a light as glaring as the sun at high noon, yet no flaw of dishonor or cowardice is pointed out in your record by any foe.

"Review and criticism have wholly failed to injure or weaken you in public esteem. And now you are, with absolute unanimity, by every state, territory and district in the union, made the candidate of a reunited and harmonious party. You are by all real Americans regarded as the best exponent of the faith of our fathers, which was articled in the declaration of independence and sealed by the blood of patriots. We deny that that declaration is a back number.

"We solemnly affirm that by the faithful it is yet venerated as the grandest charter of human rights and human liberty ever devised by man. The lust of greed and power preaches contempt for its superb doctrine, but we hold it as the only guiding star by which our ship of state can be safely sailed. We know that it has served our purpose well and gloriously until of late, when another star, the star of imperialism, has been selected as the guide of our course.

"The platform which I handed you is a new declaration of independence. You will see it takes no step backward upon any issue or party creed heretofore promulgated. It solemnly affirms that the question of imperialism is the paramount issue of this campaign.

Issue of the Republicans.

"This declaration did not make it so, but only gave recognition to an admitted fact. The Republicans have made it the issue which in this campaign overtops all others. They may well endeavor to run away from it, as they are doing, but they cannot escape it. 'By their fruits ye shall know them' was the best philosophy nineteen hundred years ago, and it is the best now.

"Imperialism consists in levying upon the people and collecting from them unequal taxes. It consists in levying taxes on one territory of the United States and not levying the same on other portions thereof. The constitution says that all taxes shall be uniform throughout the United States. The power to tax is the power to destroy. When those in power proceed as they have done by recent acts of congress to construct a tariff wall against one territory and thus exclude its products from other territories and states of the union, seek to dodge as they may, they exercise imperial power. No king or emperor can do more. They cannot do the acts and deeds which can only be done in a kingdom or an empire and say they are not imperialists and that there is no issue of imperialism.

"The platform declares that imperialism means conquest abroad and oppression at home; it means the strong arm of the military and its concomitant great standing army, which has ever been fatal to all free institutions. It was this that drove from Europe to our shores millions of our fellow citizens and which is a constant menace to the liberties of the people. Large standing armies have no place in a republic. An imperial government can only be maintained by brute force and without militarism imperialism cannot exist.

"The union or mating of the two brings forth Caesarism, whether under that or some other name. Imperialism means death to democracy and republicanism. It means more swords and fewer plowshares. Militarism means death to self-government and more spears and fewer pruning forks.

Fight Is on Imperialism.

"In the great battle upon us we will make the fight thickest and hottest upon this monster imperialism, which always feeds upon the life blood of liberty. The cause you represent, sir, is humanity. The highest duty of humanity is to help others to be free. The just punishment of a people that enslave and rule over another is the loss of their own liberty, for a democracy cannot be an empire and remain both.

"The platform also declares unceasing warfare in nation, state and city against trusts and private monopolies in every form. This declaration means that the laws now on the statute books against this growing evil must be enforced by honest and competent officials, and that there shall be enacted other laws efficient enough to completely govern and control all trusts and monopolies.

"The baneful effects of these organizations cannot be estimated or described. They have grown up under the fostering care of the party now in power, which has completely controlled all the law making authority for nearly four years. By its inaction this party confesses its inability or disinclination, either of which is criminal, to deal with the trusts. If the people, therefore, would put a curb on the trusts they must vote the government out of the hands of the trusts.

"We recently saw a Republican congress surrender the combination of the treasury vaults to the armor plate trust one day, and on a different day, for the benefit of another trust, withdraw the constitution from our newly acquired territory. The trusts now count the United States as one of their assets. They claim to own congress. Self-control is a great attribute. These trusts, therefore, are in favor of the regulation of trusts by a congress controlled by trusts.

Trusts' Faith in Congress.

"In other words, the trusts will trust the congressional trust to control the trusts. The serious objection to trusts is that by their methods they are rapidly acquiring all the business of the country. They have driven out of business by their methods tens of thousands of heretofore prosperous establishments trading in a comparatively small way.

"The prosperity which they have created is Republican prosperity and not the prosperity of the masses of the people or of the vast body known as the middle classes. They multiply the fortunes of a few until they are many times millionaires. One of our trust magnates boasts that he intends to die a billionaire. Still the sweat shops increase and the wage of those in the rural districts barely sustains life.

"The friends of the trusts and those who are their immediate beneficiaries do not hesitate to assert that the day of the individual has passed. This being admitted, then the day of monopoly, the syndicate, the combine and the mother of these, the trusts, is come. The man full of true American vim and vigor, brains, skill and energy is to count as nothing in the eternal fight for bread, and the unfeeling, soulless and heartless corporation is to rule.

"Financial independence among the prosperous middle classes and merchants of moderate means will depart, and they are to be driven into financial obscurity and ruin. This is an alarming, unhealthy condition, unjust to the great majority of the people, and altogether un-American.

"If this fashion continues, ere long only a few masters will grasp the whole domain. The well-to-do and contented citizen will be dispossessed, and in the place of happy homes unwieldy wealth and cumbersome pomp will repose. The rich man's wealth will increase while the poor will decay, and all will realize how wide the limit stands between a splendid and happy land.

"Under the new policy of the ruling party our country would be dominated by trusts, and the wide-spread and almost universal prosperity hitherto pervading the middle classes, and which was peculiarly characteristic of America, will become an unhappy reminiscence. The simple government of our fathers will be supplanted by the trust-ridden empire, and all will give way to the new order of things, founded on gold, grandeur, greed and glory.

"Our platform quotes with hearty approval the following words of Thomas Jefferson: "Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations; entangling alliances with none.' These words were not idle or meaningless when first uttered, nor are they now. The Republican party has not kept and is not keeping peace with other natangling alliance which threatens to involve us, and which will in the end inevitably lead us to bloody wars.

"They have as a part of their policy made an alliance with Great Britain, which at present, for prudential reasons only, they seek to conceal, but the fact is apparent. It may not have the solemnity of a formal alliance, but it is a secret understanding and agreement. If this were not true why was it that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was negotiated, a treaty which abandons and virtually abrogates the Monroe doctrine.

"Other evidences of the fact are manifest in the startling declaration made by one high in the party councils in the congress that our next war is to be with Germany, England's most powerful rival; in the distribution by the administration through two or more of the bureaus of the government of English literature highly favorable to England in her contest with the Boer republics; and still further facts that might be mentioned.

England Seeks an Alliance.

"England is anxiously seeking a closer friendship with us. If we accept her overtures and depart from our traditional policy of treating all nations impartially, we may gain her good will, but it will be at the expense of incurring the ill-will of all the other nations with whom we should live in peace and friendship, while for the reason I have mentioned, or from timidity, the administration denies that such an alliance exists with England, the voice of the latter government is bolder and her object is openly avowed.

"In a public speech, startling in its character, her secretary of state for the colonies (Chamberlain), not long since said:

" 'The time has arrived when Great Britain may be confronted by a combination of powers, and our first duty, therefore, is to draw all parts of the empire into close unity, and our next to maintain the bonds of permanent unity with our kinsmen across the Atlantic. There is a powerful and generous nation speaking our language, bred of our race, and having interests identical with ours. I would go so far as to say that as terrible as war may be, even war itself would be cheaply purchased if in a great and noble cause the stars and stripes and the union jack should wave together over an Anglo-Saxon alliance."

"If the administration is not openly, it is covertly, but none the less certainly leading up to such an alliance as is described. What have our patriotic citizens born in lands other than England to say in such an exigency? We are opposed to all discrimination against other fatherlands in favor of Great Britain. Why should England or any other nation be singled out to become a special object of favoritism on our part?

"The immortal Washington, in his farewell address, says: "Nothing is more essential than that permanent and inveterate antipathy against particular nations and passionate attachments in others should be excluded, and that in place of them just and amicable feelings toward all should be cultivated.'

Party Will Follow Bryan.

"I cannot without trespassing upon the propriety of this occasion further discuss or even make mention of the other issues of the campaign. The vast multitude before us is impatient and eager to catch the first utterance of your lips and hang on your eloquent words.

"I need not tell you that we will follow wherever you lead, knowing that there never was and cannot be a sublimer duty than that of defending and encouraging freedom at home and championing it abroad. Our platform is American. It was constructed by Americans for Americans, native and foreign born. It is democratic, and all who love liberty and despise tyranny can stand upon it and support our nominees.

"We know that we can, with entire confidence, make appeal to the people for our country's rescue in this hour of our peril. We appeal to all who loathe imperialism and venerate our constitution. We appeal to all who despise militarism and love liberty. We appeal to all who oppose high war taxes in time of peace and other increase of taxes, and who favor a just system of revenue collection, and all who in every way oppose unequal taxation. We appeal to all who favor our hitherto free institutions and equal opportunity for all under the law.

"We appeal to all who are willing to resist the ever-increasing oppression and robbery by the trusts and monopolies. We appeal to all who are opposed to the criminal aggression of forcible annexation, and who do not favor having our flag float with its protecting aegis over Sulu slaves and Oriental harems. We appeal, in short, to all patriots and lovers of liberty, regardless of past party affiliations, to enlist in our cause and help triumphantly to bear our banner.

"In this unparalleled contest we pledge you the earnest, zealous, unbought, unfaltering, enthusiastic support of 7,000,000 voters of the republic as you go forth to battle, and as the constitution of our beloved land should follow its flag, so this undismayed and unconquerable band of patriots will follow you as you bear their flag to victory in November."

STEVENSON IS NOTIFIED.

Hon. Charles S. Thomas, Governor of Colorado, Delivers Convention's Message.

Governor Thomas said:

For a second time you have been chosen by the national Democracy as its vice-presidential candidate. This signal honor is not unprecedented, but it is none the less exceptional. Elected to that high office eight years ago, you discharged its duties faithfully and well, retiring with the respect, the love and the confidence of all the people. Thus endeared to your party, its recent action was both merited and appropriate.

Long before the Kansas City convention was called, its presidential candidate had been selected. Its platform had been foreshadowed by that of Chicago, and by the events of the succeeding years. To complete the ticket wisely and appropriately was a serious and exigent duty. Arrayed against money, monopoly and militarism, the associate of our great leader should be devoted to the same ideals, equipped for the same duties, inspired by the same convictions and prepared to sustain the same burden if Providence should so decree. Conscious of this great responsibility but ready to meet it squarely, our convention on the first ballot gave you its nomination. The Democracy long ago indorsed its action. The people will gloriously vindicate it in November.

Fitness of Nomination.

From the moment that your name was presented by the great state of Illinois, no doubt existed as to the result. To the underlying principles of Democracy you had ever been steadfastly loyal. You had traversed a long and honorable career, reaching from humble beginnings to the most exalted position save one in the gift of the people. You have been equal to every responsibility to which your countrymen have called you. You justly possess in unusual degree the affections of men. Upon the great questions of the hour you stand four square with Bryan and the people, and in your nomination is given the full assurance of our desire to make our pledges and our purposes effectual.

The campaign of 1900 is no holiday affair. Like that of Jefferson it involves the great question whether the people or the classes shall rule, whether the principles of his immortal declaration are transient or fundamental. It holds before the public the gold and silver of the constitution, the freedom and the welfare of the citizen at home, the duty of the nation towards feeble communities struggling for liberty and independence in distant lands.

Democracy's Strong Arm.

Democracy is everywhere the aggressor. It demands the restoration of the bimetallic coinage of the constitution. It denounces the surrender of private corporations of the sovereign power of note issue. It protests against a currency system based and grounded upon the national debt. It would interpose the mandate of the law between monopoly and the people. It realizes that the trust and the constitution cannot both endure, and has highly resolved that the constitution shall live. It has sworn that the present and the future of a people which renewed its struggle for liberty at our instance shall not be measured by the sordid standards of avarice and greed. It would lift the reproach that commercialism has placed upon the honor of the nation. It declares that justice is still the standing policy of our country. It would rescue liberty from the atmosphere of the counting room. It would remove the dollar mark from the face of duty. It would rise to the height of other and better days, and make the Declaration of Independence the common heritage of the Cuban and the Filipino. Each lighted his torch at the altar of the American Union. We cannot preserve the one if we shall extinguish the other. Each welcomed us as a common deliverer from a common tyrant. We cannot be true to one if we shall prove false to the other. We bid both to be of good cheer. The bow of promise that gilds the Cuban sky is behind the thunder cloud of the Orient. Its splendor shines through the solemn pledges of our July convention, its majesty will be revealed in the elections of November.

The attitude of the Republican party of 1900 is and must continue to be a strange anomaly. It safely piloted the nation through the awful perils of slavery, yet it would conjure again into life that terrible evil whose sepulchre is sealed with the blood and the treasure of the republic. It justly claims the statesmanship of Seward and Sumner, while its platform gives the lie to the loftiest precepts. It cherishes the memory of Blaine, but Democracy alone represents and asserts his vigorous Americanism. It cheers McKinley, but repudiates the wisdom of his utterances upon the nature and essentials of free government.

The Spirit of Lincoln.

It worships at the shrine of Abraham Lincoln, but dares not ask his benediction upon its unholy scheme of conquest.

In pleasing contrast Democracy invokes in support of its great cause the memory and the teachings of all our statesmen, jurists and philosophers. It marshals them all under the banner of freedom. They live though they speak not. Their presence consecrates the air around us, though we see them not. With their example before and above us, with Bryan and Stevenson to lead us, with the declaration and the constitution to sustain us, we shall overcome all the hosts of the mighty.

Sacrified in Philippines.

American casualties in the Philippines since July 1, 1898, inclusive of all current official reports given out in detail at Washington to Aug. 10, 1900, are as follows:

Total deaths since July 1, 1898	2,031
Wounded	2,199
Total casualties since July 1, 1898	4,230

UNVARNISHED TRUTHS

WORK OF THE STATE RAILROAD AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION.

The Grain Inspection—The New Freight Schedules—The Republican Bureau of Prevarication—Odds and Ends of Interest to the Reform Forces.

Reform Press Bureau,
St. Paul, Aug. 27, 1900.

The Republican bureau which has been established for the purpose of manufacturing alleged facts for use in the campaign in this state has succeeded in persuading a considerable number of the country papers that some good might be done at this time by the publication of certain falsehoods concerning the present administration of the state grain inspection department. In effect, the statement which has been sent out is this: When Mr. Clausen was chief grain inspector the inspection fee was only 15 cents per car load. Under the present administration the fee was raised to 20 cents, then to 25 cents, and now it may be raised to 30 cents. From these alleged facts the farmers are asked to draw the inference that the department is managed less economically than it was under the old regime.

The Republican campaign managers know the charges to be false in every essential feature; but some who are publishing them may regard them as true. It may, therefore, not be amiss to give the exact facts in the case and put the falsifiers down. The figures are taken from the official records of the railroad and warehouse commission and their correctness may be verified by anyone interested in learning the truth.

During the greater part of the time when Mr. Clausen was chief grain inspector the fee was 25 cents. This was the case in 1895 and 1896. On Jan. 1, 1897, the fee was reduced to 15 cents. This reduction could be made because there was a large amount of money standing to the credit of the department. On Nov. 30, 1896, this amount was $123,268.54. The fee of 15 cents was entirely inadequate to defray the expenses. As a result the cash in the grain inspection fund was reduced in two and a half years from $123,268.54 to $21,236.10. The last session of the legislature having created a board of appeals and thereby increased the expenses of the department by about $20,000 a year, it was necessary to increase the inspection fee. It was raised to 20 cents and then, after most of the crop of 1899 had been marketed, to 25 cents. This action had to be taken in order that a deficit might be avoided.

The salient point is that there was a loss of $40,000 a year when the fee was 15 cents. The department could stand this for two years by using up more than $100,000 of the cash standing to its credit in the treasury. But the drain could not go on any longer without plunging the department into debt. The actual cost of the inspection and weighing service was, according to the official accounts, lower in 1899 than in any previous year except 1892. In 1896 it was $174,808.24 for 179,307,770 bushels; in 1897 it was $176,220.97 for 156,168,200 bushels; in 1898 it was $191,681.12 for 158,092,600 bushels, and in 1899 it was $213,764.54 for 213,133,100 bushels.

It will be necessary for the Republican bureau to invent a new story for the one about the alleged extravagance in the grain inspection department is too plainly at variance with the demonstrable facts.

Sept. 4 is the date fixed by the railroad and warehouse commission for the final hearing in the matter of rates on merchandise to be charged by the railroads of this state. A proposition has been made by the commission which was submitted to the railroads some days ago. Without going into details the result of the commissioners' schedules, if adopted by the railroads, will be: First, to place all distributing or competitive merchandise and manufacturing industries on the same footing—thus permitting industries in the smaller towns to compete on a fair basis with like concerns in the larger centers; second, to establish a uniform gradation of rates substantially on a mileage basis, while permitting the long lines to compete with the shorter ones; third, a moderate and conservative reduction of rates on all merchandise, both from terminals and between local stations.

It has been the aim of the commission to abolish the shortsighted policy, so often adopted by railroad managements when left to their own devices, of loading down the smaller towns with unjust and prohibitive discriminations. These discriminations, while they dwarf the energies of the smaller places, are also a positive damage to the centers which it is attempted to favor, because it dwarfs the development of the country upon which they depend for support. It is a very reasonable view, too, that if you build up the country the cities will benefit by the country's prosperity; while if you attempt to build up the city at the expense of the country you injure and dwarf both of them.

In going about this matter the commission has had in view the failures of states that have attempted to accomplish too much at once, and have submitted a proposition so eminently fair and safe that no fears are entertained as to its ultimate success.

It is generally admitted that much good work has been done by the department of public instruction in Minnesota since Superintendent Lewis was placed in charge by Governor Lind. What has been accomplished will be far reaching in its effects in the raising of standards and the betterment of educational conditions. "Keep us posted on your new ideas. We feel that Minnesota is taking many steps in advance of us in educational matters," so writes the Ohio commissioner of education to Superintendent Lewis.

One important action taken by Superintendent Lewis has been the revision of the normal school system of the state. The Minnesota normal schools had long been below the standard of other normal schools in the country and below the standard contemplated when they were founded. They were doing high school and grade work. Superintendent Lewis insisted that in giving their time to work which was better done in the state high schools, the normal schools were not fulfilling their proper functions. He therefore, with the cordial support of the governor, drafted a scheme to raise the standard of the normal schools by making the conditions for admission more stringent, stiffening the course of study, doing entirely away with the elementary courses, and extending the work required for graduation from the advanced course.

At first there were some objections against the proposed change but it was put into effect, and today the Minnesota normal schools rank as high as any in the whole country. Furthermore, the department under Superintendent Lewis prepared and secured the passage by the legislature of a law for the uniform examination of state teachers. The superintendent was instrumental, also, in securing the passage of the Argetsinger bill, which more than doubled the state aid to the high schools and the common schools in the rural districts.

These are only a few instances of many, indicating how the service has been improved during the present state administration.

A report to the railroad and warehouse commission shows that the Duluth weights on grain have during the present year fallen short in Buffalo by only 8 pounds per 1,000 bushels. Considering the fact that the grain is handled twice, in and out, this is a remarkably good showing. In the preceding six years the weights fell short, per 1,000 bushels: Thirty-five pounds in 1894, 36 pounds in 1895, 30 pounds in 1896, 17 pounds in 1897, 20 pounds in 1898, 17 pounds in 1899.

The Republicans are making much ado about the return of Senator Stewart of Nevada to the Republican fold. There is nothing surprising about his action. In order to secure a re-election he was compelled to make terms with the late Collis P. Huntington and his railroad interests, and since that time he has voted with the Republicans on all questions.

In a letter to General John M. Palmer, Theodore Roosevelt has explained that in speaking of the Democrats as standing for dishonor and dishonesty at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad, he did not mean all Democrats, but only those who endorse the Democratic platform and vote the Democratic ticket. This is a distinction without a difference and puts Roosevelt in even a worse light than before he offered his explanation.

The gist of the Republican charges against Governor Lind is that he has a habit of displaying pernicious activity in doing his official duty. He refuses to follow the Republican example of drawing his salary and letting the business of the state run itself. One of the latest instances of his pernicious activity is a letter to Professor Otto Lugger asking that the farmers of the state be warned against the danger from locusts or grasshoppers, and advised how they may protect themselves against future damage by the simple method of plowing all their stubble fields during the fall.

In his speech at Topeka Aug. 24, in reply to the committee which gave him the official notification of his nomination by the Populists as their candidate for the presidency, Mr. Bryan effectually gave the lie to the assertion made by Republicans that he is trying to dodge the silver issue. He spoke with all possible clearness and emphasis, showing that while imperialism now has become the most threatening danger, the money question has by no means been definitely settled. In 1896 this question was, he declared, of paramount importance and the allies in that campaign united in the demand for the immediate restoration of silver by the independent action of this country. They were defeated, but that did not end the matter. The Democrats were defeated in 1888, but that did not end the agitation for tariff reform. Defeat at the polls does not necessarily decide a great problem.

"If an increase in the volume of the currency since 1896, although unpromised by the Republicans, and unexpected, has brought improvement in industrial conditions, this improvement, instead of answering the arguments put forth in favor of bimetalism, only confirms the contention of those who insisted that more money would make better times.

"The Republican party, however, while claiming credit for the increase in circulation, makes no permanent provision for an adequate supply of standard money. It denies the necessity for more real money, while it permits national banks to expand the volume of paper promises to pay money."

The silver question is not dead, but is merely allowed to rest while matters more pressing at this time are being discussed. No question is finally settled until it is settled right. P. S.

The Parson's Revenge.

It had been the custom of an Atchison man all his life to time his preacher at church, and when the preacher had talked 30 minutes the Atchison man thought it long enough and got up and walked out. He died recently, and the preacher took advantage of the fact that the knocker of his sermons couldn't get away, and preached a funeral sermon lasting an hour and 15 minutes.—Atchison Globe.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Is Pleased.

Secretary Randall of the state fair is very much pleased with the outlook for the exhibit in the department of vegetables and farm products. At one time this summer the prospects for this part of the show were rather dubious but now they are first-class. The individual exhibits from farmers and gardeners will be large as well as the big county exhibits which are the cream of the districts represented.

N. S. Gordon, of Crookston, is superintendent of division J, which covers the subjects of garden and field produce from the farms. The premium offers for this division have been arranged with great care for the encouragement of individual as well as county displays.

Eighteen collections of vegetables are enumerated. The first lot is a collection of fifteen varieties with premiums of $10, $7.50 and $5. Then follow special collections of beets, cabbage, celery, sweet corn, etc., the premiums being usually $3, $2 and $1. An exception is made in the case of early and late potatoes where the range is $5, $4 and $3.

In single varieties there are offered no less than three premiums in 115 lots ranging down the vegetable alphabet from beans to watermelons. The premiums are usually $2, $1 and 50c, though in the case of potatoes, special collection premiums of $7, $5 and $3 are offered.

Census Figures.

The census bureau announces the population of Minneapolis as 202,718 and St. Paul 163,632. The following are the official bulletins:

The population of the city of Minneapolis, according to the official count of the returns of the twelfth census is as follows:

Minneapolis city 202,718 in 1900, as against 164,738 in 1890.

These figures show for the city as a whole an increase in population of 37,980, or 23.05 per cent from 1890 to 1900.

The population in 1880 was 46,887, showing an increase of 117,851, or 251.35 per cent from 1880 to 1900.

The population of the city of St. Paul is as follows:

St. Paul city 163,632 in 1900, against 133,156 in 1890.

These figures show for the city as a whole an increase in population of 30,476, or 22.89 per cent, from 1890 to 1900.

The population in 1880 was 41,473, showing an increase of 91,683 or 221.07 per cent, from 1880 to 1900.

Too Late for the Census.

One little passenger came into Minneapolis the other morning on the Milwaukee's "Pioneer Limited" from Chicago who did not have to pay any fare. When the "Pioneer Limited" left Chicago Friday evening among the passengers on the sleeping car Winona was Mrs. J. B. Richardson, wife of Rev. J. B. Richardson, who has recently moved to Hopkins. Mrs. Richardson gave birth to a boy at 3:40 yesterday morning, just after the train left La Crosse, Wis. Immediately after the train left La Crosse the boy was born. By the time the train reached Minneapolis mother and child were doing finely and were taken to Asbury Hospital. None of the other occupants of the coach knew that anything unusual had occurred until they awoke in the morning.

Important Ruling.

The ages between which children may be received into the model departments of normal schools may be established by the state normal board, according to a ruling made by the attorney general. The question asked of the superintendent or public instruction by the normal board was whether it had the power to include in the curriculum of its model schools the kindergarten department, and receive into the latter pupils of less than five years, which admits children to the general schools. The attorney general holds that it may, inasmuch as it does not participate in the apportionment fund or benefit by special tax levy, in the absence of any limitation fixed by the legislature.

IT GOT HIM A LICKING.

An Ohioan's Hard Luck When Starting Out as a Newspaper Reporter.

Col. N. S. Jones, who presides over the matrimonial bureau of the probate court, had his newspaper aspirations chilled in a moment when he was starting out in life. He was living in the little town of Genoa, O., and the proprietor of the country weekly asked him if he would not write a "squib" occasionally, says the Toledo Bee. The colonel promised, as he saw an opening in the newspaper field, and had long yearned for a chance to secure a place in the profession which seemed to him to offer many inducements. Consequently he wrote up several items. Hard luck came at the start. Among the first of his items was the following:

"Our esteemed friend and fellow townsman, Seth Bennett, is the greatest man in the world. He licked his wife the other night and came out without a scratch."

Hardly had the paper appeared on the street before Seth was on the lookout for the colonel, and found him. Now all that the colonel remembers of the fray was that he gave Seth a harder fight than Seth's wife had done. But he severed his connection with the paper immediately. He carried scars for weeks to remind him of his first and only experience as a molder of the public mind.

Dangers of the Socratic Method.

This happened at a well-known San Francisco Sunday school: Teacher—"When you look around and see all the fine houses and stores and lots, do you ever think who owns them now? Your fathers own them, do they not?" Boys (in chorus)—"Yes, ma'am." Teacher—"Where will your fathers be 30 years from now?" Boys (in one shout)—"Dead." Teacher—"That's right. And who will own all this property then?" Boys (in ungrammatical concert) — "Us boys!" Teacher—"Right. Now, tell me, did you ever in going along the street notice the drunkards lounging around the saloon doors waiting for some one to treat them?" Boys (heartily)—"Yes, ma'am, lots of them." Teacher—"Well, where will they be 30 years from now?" Boys—"Dead." Teacher—"And who will be the drunkards then?" Boys (in enthusiastic chorus)—"Us boys."—San Francisco Wave.

It Would Not Hurt Him.

A man who looked the typical tramp came into a drug store on Main street yesterday. He was unshaven, ragged, and with that air of uncertainty that tramps have. The drug clerk thought he was after a handout, either of cash or medicine, but such was not the case. The man wanted to buy. He held out a bottle to the clerk and announced his desire for five cents' worth of fluid extract of sarsaparilla. The clerk took the bottle and was about to fill it, when he noticed it was full of eggshells broken fine.

"Shall I rinse it out first?" he asked.

"Never mind," said the man. "It don't matter. I'm gettin' it for the boss."—Worcester Spy.

My husband was in debt and I, being anxious to help him, thought I would sell American Self-Heating Flat Irons, and am doing splendidly. A cent's worth of fuel will heat the iron for one day, so you have a perfectly even heat. You can iron in half the time and no danger of scorching the clothes, as with the old iron, and you can get the most beautiful gloss. I sell at nearly every house, as the iron is so convenient and economical everybody wants one. I have not made less than five dollars any day I worked. My brother is doing well, and I think any one can make lots of money anywhere selling these irons. Retail price $3.75 each. The Roberts A. & O. THE DELICATE FLAVOR.

Unique Method of a French Chef Who Made a Most Palatable Salad.

At one of his famous little dinners a prominent professional man of Washington was greatly pleased with the salad, as were also his guests. Evidently it was partly meat and partly vegetable, but the flavor was new, distinct and undeterminable. This was so faint that one guest declared: "It's not a taste at all; only a smell."

At length some one suggested, says What to Eat, that the chef be asked for the recipe, upon which the host remarked:

"My man greatly dislikes being asked for recipes. On this occasion, however, his vanity may overcome him if we tell how greatly we have enjoyed the dinner, and the salad in particular. At any rate, we'll see."

The Frenchman soon appeared, and was visibly affected, not to say elated, by the compliments.

"Eet gif me great plaisir," he said, "to tell how I mak ze sal-lad. Eet ver' seemple. I haf ze laitue 'rrange ready, an' I haf ze meat chop ver' fine an' dry; de celeri I haf chop ver' fine, and I haf ze pomme de terre, ze patate, an' stan' a leetle an' dry; zen I mix zem up. A Female Enigma.

Even the census enumerator, armed as he is with sweeping authority, doesn't find his work always as calm as sailing on a summer sea. An enumerator in a New York district encountered a female enigma whom he had to report to the government from data obtained from the following conversation:

"In what year were you born?" asked the enumerator.

"In 1846," answered the lady.

"Then you are 54?" said the enumerator.

"Indeed, I am not. I am 52," she retorted.

"And yet you were born in 1846?"

"That is what I said, sir."

"Then you must be 54."

"No; 52."

"Well, how do you account for the additional two years?"

"I don't account for them. I don't have to. It's none of your business. I was born in 1846 and am 52 years old, and that is all there is about it. I know my own age, I suppose."—N. Y. Sun.

THE DEWEY HOMESTEAD.

The above picture shows the house where George Dewey was born December 26th, 1837. It was occupied by the Dewey family until after the death of the Admiral's father. It then came into the possession of Captain Edward Dewey, who sold it to its present owner and occupant, T. R. Gordon, Esq., in the summer of 1889. Mr. Gordon moved it to its present site in the following February 1890, and has occupied it until the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are unfailing in their courtesy to the thousands who visit this shrine, the birthplace of Admiral Dewey.

A recent letter from T. R. Gordon to the Peruna Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, O., reads as follows:

"It is with great satisfaction that I find myself able, after an extended trial to write you in this emphatic manner of the good your Peruna has done my wife. "She has been troubled with catarrh from childhood, and whenever she has a cold, or any unusual condition of the weather it was worse than usual, and seemed more than she could bear. The dropping in her throat at night prevented refreshing sleep, in fact, we had come to look upon it as incurable, and from the many remedies used in vain, we had reason to.

"We are thankful and happy to say that your "Peruna" has been of great benefit to her, and I confidently look for a complete and entire cure. High praise is not too much to bestow upon your remedy." T. R. Gordon.

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and spring is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1.00.

—New plank have been laid at the Third street R. R. crossing. A good move.

—Photographer Carver lost a Golden opportunity to sell some photographs Monday.

—John Brandser and crew now make suits to Lucrezia Borgia on the violin, by his son Oscar.

—A slight frost on Tuesday morning, Aug. 28, is reported by early risers, but not enough to damage anything.

--The State Fair grounds was the scene of another fire. Fires may be good advertisers, but liable to be expensive.

—Word was received here on Tuesday, of the death of Ed Bork, at Hinkley, where he, with his brother Oscar, was running a saw mill.

—Quarterly conference will be held at the M. E. church, on Saturday, Sept. 8. Presiding Elder Hingsley will be present and preach on Sunday.

—George Sutton hauled the lumber for flooring the Quady bridge this week. The North Fork bridge and the Ruckoldt bridge are also being re floored.

—Mayor Lohmiller informs us that on account of election coming on Labor Day, the election for voting on bonds will be postponed till Sept. 10, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

—The story of the Philippines and Our New Possessions, by Murat Halstead, published at Chicago, by Our Possessions Publishing Company, is interesting reading. The de Lux edition is a fine center table ornament.

—Read our supplement. When you have read it well you will know whether or not you wish to vote for W. J. Bryan. His speech is clear, and everyone who reads it will be satisfied that its maker means what he says.

—We are informed that Sam Coffin and George Kurtz, two Delano High school graduates will enter the Medical Department of the State University this year. Delano seems to be doing its share toward replenishing the ranks of the Medical profession.

—William Ewart Gladstone, by Thomas W. Handford, is one of the finest works of biography now on the market. The edition we have lately received is nicely bound and would make an ornament for any ones center table. The Dominion Company, of Chicago, publishes the book.

—On Monday evening the bids for making a new well at the school house were opened. William Murphy, Thos. Rader and Clark Sturman had in bids. Murphy's being the lowest, $46, was accepted, provided proper bonds be given. It seems to most people as if a better job would probably be had if the work had been let by the foot, and a well put down far enough to get below surface water.

LATER: Murphy has notified the board that he will not comply with the requirements,

—On Tuesday evening a democratic primary for electing delegates to a county convention, to elect delegates to the congressional and to the state convention was held. Only an even dozen votes were cast and that after considerable drumming. This ought not to be. On the actions of primaries throughout the district and state depends who will run for Congress, and for state officers. Every voter should have his say as to who he wants for candidates.

—One of our village gardeners was so fortunate as to raise several nice water melons and musk melons this year. A few evenings ago when his son called on him he sallied forth to bring in some melons. Lo, the best were gone. After some talk about what had become of them, etc., etc., and what to do about it, a neighbor's boy came over and acknowledged that he had taken them, and offered to pay the damage. The gardner kindly refused remuneration. It is to be hoped the young man will profit by his kindness, for he could just as easily have sent him to the reform school.

—A very narrow escape was that of William Lewis and wife on Wednesday evening, as they returned from visiting at Earl Hoisington's. On the road a short distance out the mare, a 11 year old, family driver, all at once kicked over the fills. The occupants of the buggy got out to fix things, when the mare jumped sideways and down an embankment four or five feet into the weeds and sent both hind feet through the dash board, Mr. Lewis hanging onto the lines and draging on the ground. Help happened along and the animal was unhitched and Earl Hoisington was notified and drove over and brought his company home.

—Peter Bork arrived from Hinkley last night. He was in the mill where his son Ed was killed last Tuesday. He says it was carlessness of a man who was helping a farmer take care of the lumber which Ed was sawing, a board caught on the saw cutting it in two, a piece about five feet long with a sharp point was driven into Ed's head just behind the ear, killing him instantly. He was buried at Kimball where his family lives.

—The Eagle is going on 30 years old.

—A new veterinarian, "Dr. Lobelia" we understand, did business at Young's barn last week.

—Election to vote on bonds for waterworks, Monday, Sept. 3, postponed till Monday, Sept. 10.

—Mr. Steinberger on the west road to Buffalo, raised some of the finest musk melons we ever saw. His watermelons were good also.

—A number of young people held a picnic at Lake Rebeccah last Saturday. They report a good time and didn't get caught in a rain storm either.

—The family of J. A. Soderstrom has been saddened by the loss of a little child, on Tuesday morning, from cholera infantum.--Cokato Enterprise.

The family have the sympathy of many friends in Delano, where they once lived.

—Several Delanoites having declared their intentions to become citizens of Itasca county, by filing on homesteads there, will probably go on a hunting excursion about Nov. 1, to the neighborhood of their claims; or loose their votes.

—The Epworth League rainbow social held in the City Hall last Saturday evening was a success. Quite a large crowd was in attendance, and a pleasant evening spent. The young people made merry with the usual games until the lights went out.

—Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carlton were surprised at their home on the farm, about three miles south of town, last Wednesday evening, by a load of their old friends. Lunch baskets were taken along, and the contents thereof, together with watermelons and honey from the farm helped make a repast fit for a king. A very pleasant evening was spent with the newly married couple, the party not returning home until about one o'clock a. m.

—Wednesday evening a reception dance was given in the City Hall in honor of Miss May Mowatt. About fifty young people were present and the occasion was a very delightful one. Cake and frappe were served as refreshments. The party held session until one o'clock. The affair was given as a surprise to Miss Mowatt, who expects to leave tomorrow for Winona, to attend the State Normal School at that place. While all are sorry to lose her from their midst, they are glad to see her ambition for higher intellectual training, and wish her success in the pursuit of her studies at the Normal.

County Cullings.

The State Fair next week.

Fishing, in Buffalo, is being carried on as a business by several, and for pleasure by many more.

Next Thursday, Sept. 6, our State convention will be held, and the campaign will be in full blast. The Sixth district congressional convention will be held the 5th at Aitkin.

"13th Minn. Regiment U. S. V. No. 76" can get his keys by calling on J. Ojunpera and paying for a notice in the Cokato Enterprise, according to a notice in that paper this week.

When all admit the necessity of being on guard, of looking out for the interests of our free country, it is astonishing how few are enough interested to risk their business interests by attending primary elections. Are they heroes; or are they cowards?

Read Bryan's speech in our supplement this week. Read the parts your neighbor is doubtful on, to him, and see if he don't fall into line all right. Keep the speech in circulation until election day, and then we hope to be ready for the inaugural on March 4.

Rev. Valentyne is, we understand, getting up a havest festival at the Endeavor church. One of the attractions is to be a discussion on the question of Expansion, as advocated by the administration. A. B. C. Dickinson and Frank Peterson for the affirmative. Henry Crandall and Mr. Parker negative. A lively time is looked for.

Editor French, of the Wright County Times, and Cyrus King, one of the orators of the county, are among the new acquisitions to the Democratic party. French says he always was a Lincoln Republican, and he thinks the Democrats are now, and the other fellows are not; so he is going to work and vote as he believes. There are others.

Maple Plain.

August 28, 1900.

Almost frost last night.

Farmers are busy cutting corn now, in order to get it out of the way of frost, for we expect that will come soon this fall.

H. L. Bowen and wife attended camp meeting at Elk River last week.

E. W. Hall returned to Hutchinson last Saturday.

Our depot at Maple Plain has been remodeled somewhat.

The two creameries in our town are running on full time and turning out a good grade of butter.

Prohibition meeting at school hall tonight. It is expected they will have a good hearing.

Post master R. M. Mills has gone to Chicago to attend the national G. A. R. encampment.

Not much news this week. Everybody is waiting for orders from head quarters.

It is expected the state campaign will open just after John Lind's nomination for governor.

Mark Hanna, the political manipulator of the republican party says Bryanism must be forever killed. Hanna is big but it will take more avoirdupois than he carries, to kill Bryanism.

We read in Holy writ about the devil entering into the heard of swine, and they went violently down a steep place and were drowned in the sea; but we think by some means one must have escaped and has turned up in the form of this Marcus A. Hanna.

Rockford.

Creamery meeting held by the farmers of Rockford and Greenwood at G. A. R. Hall, Aug. 25, 1900. 50 or more farmers were at the hall at 2 o'clock P. M. and organized by electing G. O. Crandall chairman and Irvine Omera secretary. The butter maker at Delano was present and made a few remarks. Mr. Henry Crandall, Charles Meyer, Frank Peterson and many others made short speeches. On motion that the farmers form a co-operation creamery association, 33 voted yes, none voted no. On motion voted that a committee of six to draft resolutions and by laws be chosen, to report at next meeting. Committee elected: G. O. Crandall, Irvine Omera, C. F. Sexaur, Frank Peterson, George Kittenaked, Chas. Omera. Voted to adjourn to Sept. 8, at this hall at 2 o'clock p. m.

It looks as if we should have a Farmers' Co-operative Creamery at Rockford. About 100 farmers united and working together are sure to succeed. The only draw back that was heard was the failure of the old or first farmer's creamery at Rockford, but this was not a strictly farmer's association. A majority of the share holders and the managers generally were not farmers but village business men. Organized on the right plan as other like societies are organized, with an honest capable manager and there can be no failure. In selecting a general manager it is often said that a man who is successful in his own private affairs is a good and proper person for the public or a corporation to have for a manager. This may be true, but there are men who look out so clearly and intently for their own interest that public or company money finds its way by hook or crook into private pockets.

Among our Exchanges.

Minneapolis Times: August H. Kitman died yesterday at the city hospital in St. Paul, and the cause as set forth in the death certificate was "exhaustion due to a burn." He was injured last December in a street car accident, and a mustard plaster was applied. This did not relieve his suffering, and he was sent to the hospital. He was discharged as cured, but was returned and discharged again the same day, since it could not be seen that he was suffering from anything serious. His folks say that last April two physicians who examined him with an x-ray machine burned him, but this is denied by the physicians.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 17 1900.

Although members of the Administration admit that the situation in China has grown more critical since the taking of Pekin and rescue of the foreigners by the allied army, Mr. Mc Kinley would not forego his vote hunting junket to the G. A. R. encampment, in Chicago. Reports from Gen. Chaffee and Minister Conger on the continued fighting in and around Pekin were received this week, but were not made public. One reason for the suppression of these reports is that they show that it is the Chinese government, and not a mob, which has been and is making war upon the foreigners, and for some reason of his own Mr. McKinley insists upon acting on the theory that the Chinese government is friendly, although in refusing Li Hung Chang's request for the appointment of a commissioner to negotiate terms of peace he practically said that he doubted whether China had a government. The pretence of regret on the part of officials that circumstances--continued fighting—have made it impossible to withdraw the American troops from China is farcial. The War Department has been forwarding supplies from the first on the understanding that the troops would be in China all winter.

Capt. Patrick O'Farrell, who stumped for McKinley in in 1896 and who is now vigorously opposing him because of his imperial policy, made a red hot speech before the Central Bryan and Stevenson Club, in which he said of the Philippine war: "Who authorized this war? Theoretically and virtually we are at war with no one. Congress alone has the right to declare war. Who gave the president such authority? And why are ships, loaded with volunteers, being sent to the Philippines to shoot the natives and in turn to be shot by them? What will happen if you elect McKinley and a republican Congress next November? There will be a call issued for a regular army of 150,000 men, backed by 100,000 volunteers. Every working man will have to hoist a soldier on his back, not for freedom, but to fight a lot of men against whom we have no grudge."

A letter received in Washington from ex-Senator J. B. Henderson, who was prevented by sickness from attending the Liberty Congress at Indianapolis, over which it had been expected he would preside, contains food for careful thought. For instance the following quotation therefrom: "Our government is rapidly changing its form. The U. S. is no longer a republic. Two wars—one against the Philippines, the other against China—are being waged by the President without any constitutional sanction. The Russian Emperor claims no greater power than that which is exercised, almost without protest, by an American president. The war with the Philippines is worse than useless. It is wholly without any purpose less criminal than the pampering of army contractors and the enrichment of hungry officials from the toil of labor. The islands cannot be colonized or occupied by Americans. And American law, equally with American prejudice, already forbids American citizenship to their inhabitants. If they are not to be incorporated as States, they must be governed as colonies, and this reduces them to slavery and ourselves to forms of despotism. In the case of China, American troops, without pretense of law, are to be placed under the command of the German Emperor, who openly, proclaims against the Chinese the war of Israel against the Amelekite."

Representative T. J. Bradley, of New York City, was among the visitors to the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee Headquarters this week. He said: "Both New York and New Jersey will give Bryan their electoral votes this fall. In Presidential years New Jersey generally goes as New York does. Did you ever notice that? They will both go democratic this time."

Representative Wheeler, of Ky., said of the outlook in that State: "Bryan and Stevenson will carry the State of course, by an old time majority, and our State ticket will pull through safely. We will not only hold our own in the Congressional districts, but I think we will gain one and maybe two districts. When the republicans talk about carrying Kentucky they base their hopes upon the narrow margin between Goebel and Taylor. They overlook the important fact that in that contest the vote was not brought out in the heavy democratic section of the State."

Representative Clayton, of Ala., who was in Washington this week, said: "I have traveled considerably over the country since the Kansas City convention, and I find the people everywhere North, East, West and South, interested only in one question--that of imperialism. It seems to be impossible to get them to think about anything else. In the light of my experience I am convinced that the man who insists that imperialism is not the paramount issue of this campaign is either an ignoramus or a knave."

Criticism of its policy in Cuba has brought out a denial from the administration that it is interfering or intending to interfere with the making of a constitution by the Cubans, and the statement that the decision of whether the constitution is satisfactory after it is made will come from Congress and not Mr. McKinley. If this turns out to be true, it will mean that the administration has been frightened into changing some of its plans.

T. J. CATLIN, Editor.
A. G. CATLIN, Publisher.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

REPUBLICAN papers complain that W. J. Bryan is carrying on his own campaign; that he is subject to no dictation by the National committee. How is it with their own candidate? Does he make a move without orders from Hanna?

THE republicans are unfortunate in having at the head of the state press bureau the man who assisted the Dispatch into a lawsuit with Gov. Lind, in which the Gov. came out first best. People are not sure but their political stories will have to be retracted or paid for, consequently they don't make the most assuring arguments.

ACCORDING to the theory of those who accused Bryan of dishonesty in making a speech without free silver being the paramount issue, Hon. Knute Nelson is a very dishonest orator in making his opening campaign speech at Alexandria the other day without mentioning the tariff, especially the import and export duty between Porto Rico and the balance of the country.

Truelsen for Congress.

The Democratic Congressional Convention at Aitkin, Wednesday, nominated for Congress Henry Truelson, of Duluth, by a vote of 105½ to 47½ for C. O. Baldwin. Mr. Truelson has been Mayor of Duluth, and was beaten by a narrow majority at the last election. Mr. Baldwin carried St. Louis, Carlton, and Hubbard counties. Four counties, Beltrami, Cass, Cook, and Lake were unrepresented. Most of the other counties instructed their delegates for Truelsen.

CONSIDERABLE comment has been made on Col. Bryan's declining to attend the G. A. R. meeting, at Chicago, after President McKinley had announced his inability to attend on account of press of business. Because Bryan was honest enough to offer as a reason for not going, that he did not wish to give his visit the appearance of a political movement, he is criticised. It makes no difference. If he had attended and made a speech, he would have been as roundly denounced for going as he now is for staying away. Such is politics.

Honest Newspapers

"Honesty is the best policy" is an old but true saying. Honest men are respected the world over. They are not ashamed to meet their fellow men. They are not obliged to take stimulants nor sedatives in order to rest at night on account of the prickings of a guilty conscience. It is a hard matter for the tongue of calumny to so besmirch the character of honest people as to do them injury where they are known, among their true and tried friends. But among strangers it is different. A breath of suspicion once raised ripples into bigger waves as it extends, until communities are led by a short story, perhaps told jokingly, for fun, to the injury of the reputation of individuals, so that they suffer in business relations, and if they chance to run for office they are defeated by men far behind them in integrity of character.

Newspapers are made by people. Brains are used in making them. Honest brains make honest newspapers. Dishonest brains usually show, at least at times, traces of dishonesty, deceit and catering to popular opinion or to the side they think will be of the most immediate pecuniary benefit to them.

Honest men may become convinced of the error of their ways, and change their ideas of certain things. They may become better acquainted with political issues and see them differently. They may learn more of a man's past history, and of the ways and means he uses at present, and conclude he is a better or a worse man than they had thought him, and change their leaders occasionally.

But news is news, and when great daily papers stoop to publishing day after day a pack of lies in big type at the top of the columns to be denied in smaller type at the bottom, to reap the pennies of the poor, and to take up the time of men who should be at work, in reading and unreading, it is about time something should be done to stop it.

We believe in the freedom of the press; in newspapers and people being allowed free discussion of political subjects, but to mislead and deceive people by false reports conjured up in the brain of some irresponsible individual, of wars and rumors of wars, and other important matters must make some writers see ghosts some dark nights, if there are any ghosts.

SENATOR NELSON has made an opening campaign speech, at his home, Alexandria. He pitches into the Filipinos in a way calculated, by him, to knock them out of the box. But which will react in a way to knock the Hon. Knute himself, out of the Senatorship. He argues at length on the treachery of Aguinaldo, admitting that the bargain he claims Aguinaldo made with the Spaniards was not kept by the latter. If there was a bargain and the Spaniards failed to keep their part of it was not Aguinaldo at liberty to transact business as if there had never been a bargain? When Admiral Dewey hauled Aguinaldo and seventeen of his chiefs back to Manila, why did he do so if he did not wish to use them in his business? It looks a little lame for Senator Knute to find fault with Admiral Dewey for doing so. To say that he was an honest old Tar" as if he thought that wasn't the kind of a man for the place. If we had a few more "honest old Tars" and honest men in other lines we wouldn't be getting mixed up so badly with other nations. The boys in America understood when they enlisted to fight Spain that they were going to free the Cubans from Spanish tyranny. The people understood that the Filipinos were fighting the same enemy and for the same cause as Cubans were, and when Dewey's victory was gained, everybody, unless it was a few designing, schemy politicians and greedy money graobers understood that the Filipinos had by the aid of Uncle Sam, also got their freedom. Afterwards they were surprised by the announcement that we had bought the Philippines from Spain, that we intended to own them. That we had, aping England, become possessed of colonies which must pay us tribute. That we had simply taken up Spain's fight against the Filipinos, and become even worse task masters than they had in Spanish tyranny. Senator Nelson don't seem now to behold those things in the same light that the American people did before the Spanish war.

Now it came to pass in the 124th year of our national independence from the crown of Great Britain and King George the third, and also in the days of Marcus Alonzo Hanna, whose fame had gone abroad throughout all the land as chief butler at the White House, and as one well versed in all political chicanery, there rose up from among the Jews and suburbs of New York one Roosevelt, great in stature and mighty in power, a cow boy graduate from the gumbo plains of Montana, and an expert at slinging the lasso, by chance had become governor of New York and also candidate for vice president of the United States on the republican ticket. This said Roosevelt also claims to be a follower and disciple of King David; killed more Goliaths at San Juan hill than King David ever saw. This Roosevelt opened up his campaign as candidate for vice president of the United States at St. Paul, July 17, 1900, by making a speech in his own behalf, denouncing the democratic party and all its followers as a lawless set of cowards and unfit to govern a free republic; they are for dishonor and disorder, etc., and his whole speech was only a tirade against the democratic party and the Kansas City convention. In 1896 Bryan carried 22 states and McKinley carried 23; Bryan had 6,500,000 and McKinley 7,000,000 votes.

Mark Hanna comes to the front and says Bryanism must be killed and killed forever; says we are confronted with a dangerous foe. Do Mark Hanna and this Roosevelt want to incite the people to an open insurrection and make them believe if Bryan is elected their property will be confiscated and they turned out upon the commons. Tell the truth though it shame the devil. But they style themselves leaders (Hanna and Roosevelt) as much so as did Moses, who was pulled out of the bull rushes on the banks of the river Nile and was general and law giver to that people Israel, until they reached the border of Canan, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

We understand this Roosevelt who wants to be vice president of the United States and have the honor to preside over the U. S. Senate claims the honor of being one of the first to stand upon the peak of El Caney, but we read that it was one Col. Aron A. Daggett who was in command of the twenty-fifth infantry, colored troops, that went up the steep hill first, took the stone fort and captured the Spanish flag. What have you to say about it, Teddy?

Admitting Teddy's story to be true it would cut no figure as to his being fit for vice president.

We quote from the Minneapolis Times, August 21 in which it says: "We are doing business with Spain once more and our trade with that country is greater than it was before the war. Was it necessary to have a war of subjugation and conquest, spend $186 000,000 and kill 3.000 of our best men in order to establish commercial intercourse between that country and the United States beside paying them $20,000,000 and also another $100,000 for two small islands left out according to treaty stipulations. If the democrats are as mean as some of our republican friends say we are, it is a wonder the Lord allows us fellows to live. But let us see. Who was it that made the green back money? Abraham Lincoln and the Republican party, and it was the best paper money we ever had. But what happened to it? After the first $60,000,000 was issued, the bankers of Boston, New York and other large cities lobbied with a republican congress and got them to put in an exception clause on all greenbacks issued thereafter, saying this is a legal tender for all debts public and private except on import duties and interest on the public debt, and at one time gold went up to $2.85. My republican friend who was it that paid the freight then? It was the poor man, and the mud sill asked in the shackles. Now these same men tell us the greenback is no good. It was the money the soldier received for fighting in the war of the rebellion. What was the next act of the republican party? A bill was passed, fathered by Secretary Chase, establishing a National banking system based upon the bonded debt of the country. A banking corporation could buy $100,000 worth of government bonds and start a National bank. The government would let them have $90 000 of it to do business on, pay the bond holder interest on the full $100,000 and on these bonds they are exempt from taxation and the banks loan the money out at a high rate of interest. Who pays the freight on this second act? The poor man. By this means with a high protective tariff and the trusts as an accompaniment, the wealth of the country has got into the hands of the few, and the debtor class have become subservient to the creditor class, and so money has the right of way, but the finance bill that was passed at the last session of Congress is more glorious in its apparel and gives the national banker a greater privilege. The banker can buy $100,000 worth of bonds and have the whole amount to do business on, draw his interest and pay no taxes. Who pays the freight on this? The poor man. The same bill makes gold coin the only money of redemption, and all obligations must be paid in gold coin. Is this not enough to make the very stones under our feet cry out. They also tell us we have a spurious money in the silver dollar, say it is worth only fifty cents. If that be true then this republican administration is practicing a deception upon the people of the United States, for they are making 1,000 of them every day, and Congress should be impeached for the constitution of the United States has the power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coins etc. Now what is the matter with it my republican friend? Money is a creature of law and must forever remain the same until the ratio is changed by Congress, whether silver bullion is worth ten cents per ounce or $1 00 per ounce, and the man who talks about that 50 cent dollar makes an unsophisticated ass of himself.

In 1896 the republican party says give us the leverage of this country and we will bring about good times. They knew there was nothing in sight to bring about good times and so did everybody else, but it is a common saying that a war makes good times and so a war was inaugurated. A war of subjugation and conquest was brought about, they claim to civilize and christianize a forlorn race of people. Transportation companies carry live soldiers over to the Philippines and bring dead soldiers back at a great expense to the government, and yet they claim that this prodigal waste of life and money is necessary for the good of humanity and also to bring trade and commerce to our country, but this story has the same face upon it, as did the lie the devil told our foreparents in the garden of Eden, when he said if ye eat of the fruit thou shalt not surely die. Now all this war business has put money in circulation in many ways. The government or army contractors always get a big pull out of the government and the people pay the freight. Many things must be bought by the government in order to prosecute a war of subjugation and conquest, such as arms, amunition, clothing, mules, horses, blankets, and all equipment necessary to carry on a war, and all this put money in circulation, and without all this there was nothing in sight at the time of the republican party coming in power for them to make prosperous times out of, and we know it, and they know we know it. So what is the use trying to stuff the people with an orthodox belief that is not true. Our flag is an emblem of freedom and liberty, of valor and purity. Let us honor it as such. But because we are great in power and strength it is not necessary to spend our nations wealth, and have our young men killed off, the flower of our nation, to gratify the lust and greed of a few whereby they can get gain and lay up for themselves treasures, not in Heaven but on earth, where thieves break through and steal and leave man out.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent 16,

OUTFLANKING PAPA

WHEN Sir Richard Flamborough said a thing, even in the heat of an exciting moment, he made a point of holding to his words, sometimes at the cost of considerable personal inconvenience, and therefore when his only daughter Grace informed him of the proposal which she had received from that impecunious young engineer, Percy Boufield, and he angrily insisted upon an instant cessation of all communication between them, the fond and devoted couple knew that nothing short of an elopement could meet their needs. Indeed, so promptly did action follow upon declaration that when Boufield appeared in the afternoon to make a formal offer to Sir Richard he was met by the chain-shot: "Not at home."

There was a stolen meeting down by the lodgekeeper's cottage in the evening and a plan of campaign was arranged.

Sir Richard watched his daughter keenly as they sat at dinner. Motherless girls have a knack of twisting unwary fathers round their little fingers, and, although he felt no particular regret at the prospect of losing his only child, whose masterful ways had long bored him exceedingly, he was quite determined that his son-in-law should be one of his own selection.

"The spirit of independence in children of to-day is not only wrong; it is annoying to parents who have a duty to perform. I will make it my business to find some man of breeding and position—in fact, I have one in my mind at this moment—who will speedily cause you to forget this schoolgirl fancy for a lad whose youth alone made me look upon him as a harmless companion for you."

"Oh, thank you, papa," said Grace, with such an emphatic tone of gratitude that Sir Richard looked up suspiciously.

"Understand that you as a minor cannot marry without my consent, also that I absolutely forbid any written communication with Percy. I have sent a letter explaining the position to his father and a note to him."

The exposure of the steel hand, innocent of any glove, velvet or otherwise, was the surest method of confirming a rebellious daughter in her defiance of authority.

The little rose-bowered wayside station of Berry was separated only by the width of the park from the Flamborough mansion. No main line train ever stopped there unless signaled up or down by the request of Sir Richard, who was wont to impose upon the courtesy of the company by creating quite unnecessary delay when in the mood to display his haughty disregard of time-tables. The next stopping place on the way to London was Wellby Junction.

The plan of the proposed elopement was exceedingly simple.

Grace was to walk to Berry, through the park, overnight, and ask, as if from Sir Richard, to have the 9:30 "up" signaled next morning. She was to leave home unobserved and journey by that train to Wellby, where she would be joined by Percy, and they would continue the journey to Scotland; for in that country Percy owned a female relative, who would see them through the formalities of a North British marriage. Gretna Green up to date, be it observed.

The day had been agreed upon, and on the fateful morning Grace, accompanied by an unobtrusive handbag and a pair of tremulous knees, set out through the park.

She had barely started before Sir Richard, with a telegram in his hand, was ordering a mounted man to the station to signal the 9:30, and demanding the immediate presence of his daughter, as important business called him unexpectedly to town.

"Signal 9:30 up!" said the groom, without dismounting, and swerving around to return.

"Sir Richard don't think much o' my memory," said old Bilksby, the station master, to whom Grace had given the same order the night before.

Grace gained courage as the distance between her and home increased, and when she emerged from the park and was walking up the incline of the gravel platform her step was firm and steady. She asked for a ticket for Wellby without any sign of nervousness, but she almost dropped her purse when Mr. Bilksby said:

"May I give you Sir Richard's, miss? It will save time."

Her reply was drowned by a shriek from the train, which drew up with grinding brakes. Mr. Bilksby slid out a second ticket, but Grace did not see it as she turned to the platform.

With a gasp of dread she saw Sir Richard's dogcart swing around an angle of the road, just as the guard came forward civilly to open a carriage door.

"In your van, please, quickly," she said, looking straight into his eyes and extending a half sovereign.

Sir Richard strolled into the booking office, saw, and pocketed, his ticket, said "Back to-night" to Mr. Bliksby, and walked down the platform, followed by a handsome Russian greyhound.

"Here, guard," he said, "I can't take this dog in the carriage. He bites strangers, and goes wild in a dog box. I must bring him and ride with him in your van."

"But, Sir Richard—"

"Bit late, I fancy, are you not?" he said, as he and the dog stepped in together.

The guard glanced at his watch, waved his green flag and swung himself in.

"What is the brute after, behind those boxes?" asked Sir Richard, as he laid a rug on the narrow wood seat in the corner. "Come here, Kirtoff! Come to heel!"

The dog came reluctantly and a moment later bounded across the van to where several boxes stood, one on the other.

"You'd better keep that dog back, sir," said the guard, tipping his peaked hat aside and wiping drops of perspiration from his forehead. "There is an animal behind there that'll make mincemeat of him if he gets loose."

"What sort of animal?" asked Sir Richard, curiously, holding his dog by the collar and moving in the direction of the dark angle where the boxes stood.

A quavering treble howl sounded from the corner, and Sir Richard looked uneasy as the dog strained and whined in reply.

"I can't put a name to it," said the guard, "but it's dangerous, and more than twice the size of that dog. I have been well paid to keep it out o' sight and I hope you won't get me into any trouble."

"Certainly not; certainly not!" said Sir Richard, hastily, seating himself with his face to the corner whence the strange sound had proceeded. "How far is it going?"

The guard went over to the corner and peered behind the boxes; then he returned for a match from his overcoat, and striking it, held it over the space beyond them until it burned out; then he lit a second match and passed one hand warily into the space and drew forth a slip of paper, from which he read.

"It will be called for at Wellby," he said, slowly, "by its keeper."

For the remainder of the run to Wellby Sir Richard was almost as restless as his dog, and when that station was reached he stated his intention of removing the hound to a safe distance during the transference of the animal in the corner to its owner.

Percy Boufield walked twice from one end of the train to the other, staring a trifle rudely, as some passengers considered, into every compartment. During the second trip he cannoned into Sir Richard, who, having secured Kirtoff to a post, was watching the door of the guard's van afar off.

Both men mumbled an apology, and Sir Richard, not wishing to repeat the meeting, took refuge in the refreshment room.

Grace was instantly informed by her faithful guard, and appeared, somewhat crumpled, from her shadowy hiding place. For a few moments she stood by the door, looking anxiously out. Kirtoff gave an echoing bark of welcome, and Percy, catching sight of the well-loved form, was with her before the sound had died away.

GRACE GAINED COURAGE.

"Love," she said, "you are here in charge of a dangerous animal on its way to the zoo, or to a private collection is more truthful; stand by the door, guard it, as Horatius did the bridge, or we shall never see Scotland in company."

Percy, his senses quickened by danger, unhung a heavy chain which occupied a hook above the brake handle, and, swinging it ostentatiously, remained by the door until the train was on the point of starting.

"Guard," said Richard, "what can I do with my dog? Is that the owner of the animal standing there?"

"Yes, sir; going through he is, taking it to London."

"Well, you must take my dog."

"Sorry, sir, I'm afraid I can't."

"But I insist. I cannot leave him here."

"Have you a ticket for the dog, sir?"

"No," said Sir Richard, fuming; "I had no time."

"Better get one here, sir," said the guard, as, touching his cap, respectfully, he whistled, waved, and stepped neatly on the moving train.

Sir Richard's state of mind was advertised by so furious a countenance that the guard was startled and alarmed to hear behind him a sound like a short, soft hiss. He was not quick enough to see how it was produced, for when he turned his lady passenger was looking out at the opposite window, and the young man was hanging up the chain.

As the van passed Kirtoff, tied to his post, a small lace handkerchief fluttered to his feet.

"Where on earth—" began Sir Richard, as he reached the dog; for he had not seen it fall, but recognized his daughter's property, and picked it up. "Confoundedly careless of me! Must have had it in mine," he added, as he turned to find the station master, complain of the guard, take a dog ticket, and ascertain how long he had to wait for the next train.

Within an hour a telegram was handed to him, as he paced the platform, chewing the stump of a cigar impatiently.

"I dropped my handkerchief at Wellby, dad, as a flag of truce, on my way northward for engineer reenforcements."

Sir Richard bit his cigar stump in two; but he honored the flag, and a month later returned it, as a token of forgiveness.—Ladies' Journal.

The Dutch war in Java is one of the most extended on record. It has now been running for two centuries and there are more Javanese and more Dutchmen than ever.

Chicago police have recovered a $1,000 poodle that was abducted the other day, but there are a number of $4.36 children quite hopelessly missing, to say nothing of a $25 parrot.

In a Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) newspaper the following marriage notice appeared: Holder—Close—At Jersey City, by Rev. Charles J. Allen, Charles E. Holder to Lillie W. Close, both of Poughkeepsie.

An inventor has hit upon a method of putting stone soles on boots and shoes. He mixes a waterproof glue with a suitable quantity of clean quartz sand and spreads it over the leather sole used as a foundation. These quartz soles are said to be flexible and to give the foot a firm hold even on the most slippery surface.

The "missing link" has again been found, this time in Java, where Dr. Dubois has unearthed certain fossil remains of such an interesting character that Prof. Haeckel, the celebrated German biologist, has determined to go there himself and investigate. Dr. Dubois is firmly of opinion that the bones belong to a species intermediate between the highest ape and prehistoric man.

Prof. Herman V. Hilprecht, of the University of Pennsylvania, has added another to his many discoveries in the archaeology of Babylon. He has dug up a library of 17,000 tablets which belonged to the great temple of Nippur. Not one of these tablets is of a date later than 2280 B. C. Prof. Hilprecht says that five years will be consumed in unearthing the remaining treasures of the temple.

Gen. Chaffee had orders not to stop hostilities until the legations were rescued, and he seems to have obeyed them to the letter. One report says the American troops led the way into Peking. Had anyone in 1897 ventured to predict that before the close of the century American troops would enter Manila and Peking he would have been regarded as a dreamer or a crank. Yet history has now recorded the fact.

A process by which water may be so used as to effect an immense saving in the consumption of coal has been invented by A. G. Ingalls, a graduate of McGill university, Montreal. Full details are not given out, but briefly it may be said that a thin spray of water is spread over a coal flame in such a way and with such auxiliaries that the heat of the flame is wonderfully augmented. The discovery can be applied to gas and other flames.

A civil engineer who is in Alaska has written home to Chicago that the rails on the Chilkoot Pass railway expand with the cold instead of contracting, as they would be supposed to do. A temperature ranging from 12 to 40 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, would not appreciably affect the length of rails, but severer cold than that would be attended with expansion. This is certainly an exception to a law of nature, although water shrinks as it cools until 39 degrees Fahrenheit is reached, when it begins to expand.

The government is to bring back something like 3,000 unfortunate Cape Nome goldseekers, and they will come back absolutely penniless. "To him that hath shall be given and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that little which he hath" is probably better exemplified in the gold regions of Alaska than anywhere else on earth. With few exceptions the men with ample resources are the ones who have been successful, but, so long as human nature remains the same, few men will profit by the lesson thus conveyed.

Caleb Powers, the Kentuckian convicted of complicity in the murder of Goebel, may be excused if he put some faith in the idea that 13 is an unlucky number. He was nominated for office June 13, 1899; arraigned July 13, 1900, as one of 13 conspirators named; was defended by 13 lawyers; his sweetheart was the thirteenth witness; the evidence showed that 1,300 soldiers were ready to defend him; he gave Culton $1,300 to pay the expenses of the mountaineers; he took $1,300 with him when he fled; the evidence closed August 13.

George Gould attended a meeting of the Union Pacific railroad directors in New York and lighted a cigarette. "Drop that cigarette," said Chairman Harriman. "I have issued an order forbidding employes to smoke cigarettes. You are an employe; you get ten dollars for attending one of these meetings. You, too, Mr. Schiff," addressing another millionaire director who was toying with a lighted perfecto. "We directors must not make rules for employes and then break them ourselves." The distinguished employes quietly obeyed orders.

The foreign demand for American corn is rapidly increasing. Until recent years Europe failed to recognize the superiority and economy of corn as a cheap food for animals, but they are awakening to that fact. Indeed, the increase in the export observed in the last five years has been the most striking feature of our foreign commerce, it being during that period equal to about 254 per cent. The maximum was reached in the last fiscal year, when the exports attained the unprecedented total of 209,348,273 bushels, valued at $85,206,359.

A dispatch from Pretoria says that Gen. Roberts has conferred the award of the queen's scarf on Trooper Chadwick, of Roberts Horse, who was chosen by the troopers as most distinguished for bravery, the queen having conferred four scarfs for bravery, one each for representatives of the colonial troops from Canada, New Zealand, South Africa and Australia. Chadwick is an American, serving in the United States navy helped to cut the cable at Cienfuegos. It is a just cause for pride that the bravest man in the English army is an American!

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

England views with suspicion the peace plans of the United States and Russia, but the London papers admit that the withdrawal of the armies of the two nations may force the other powers from Chinese soil. Gen. Chaffee has been ordered to hold his troops in readiness to evacuate Peking and when the czar gives the word the Russians and Americans will march to Tientsin. Li Hung Chang says if the foreign troops are withdrawn from Peking he will take vigorous measures to restore order.

Lord Roberts reports that the British had Gen. Botha hemmed in at Helvetia and London thinks the war is practically at an end.

Russia and the United States have formed a compact for the settlement of the existing Chinese question and Great Britain, France and Japan have agreed to the proposals. The Russian minister and troops have been ordered to leave Peking and the United States minister and troops will go to Tientsin. READY TO STEP OUT.

Russia's Declaration of Purposes Concerning China.

Not Seeking for New Territory in the Empire—United States Says Concurrent Action Will Bring About a Settlement.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The state department has just made public the text of the Russian proposal and its own response, as follows:

Department of State, Washington, Aug. 29, 1900.—The Russian charge yesterday afternoon made to me an oral statement respecting Russia's purposes in China, to the following effect:

"That, as already repeatedly declared, Russia has no designs of territorial acquisition in China; that equally with other powers now operating there Russia has sought safety of legation at Peking and to help the Chinese government to repress the troubles; that, incidentally to necessary defensive measures on Russian border, Russia has occupied Nieuchwang for military purposes, and, as soon as order is reestablished, will retire troops therefrom if action of other powers be no obstacle thereto; that the purpose for which the various governments have cooperated for relief of legations in Peking has been accomplished, that, taking the position that, as the Chinese government has left Peking, there is no need for her representative to remain, Russia has directed Russian minister to retire with his official personnel from China; that the Russian troops will likewise be withdrawn, and that when the government of China shall regain the reins of government and afford an authority with which the other powers can deal, and will express desire to enter in negotiations, the Russian government will also name its representative. Holding these views and purposes, Russia expresses hope that the United States will share the same opinion."

Reply of United States.

To this declaration our reply has been made by the following memorandum:

Memorandum in response to the Russian charge's oral communication, made on August 28, 1900, to the acting secretary of state, touching the purposes of Russia in China: "The government of the United States receives with much satisfaction the reiterated statement that Russia has no designs of territorial acquisition in China, and that, equally with the other powers now operating in China, Russia has sought the safety of her legation in Peking, and to help the Chinese government to repress the existing troubles. The same purposes have moved and will continue to control the government of the United States, and the frank declarations of Russia in this regard are in accord with those made to the United States by the other powers.

Should Not Be Difficult.

"All the powers, therefore, having disclaimed any purpose to acquire any part of China, and now that adherence thereto has been renewed since relief has reached Peking, it ought not to be difficult by concurrent action through negotiations to reach an amicable settlement with China by which the treaty rights of all the powers will be secured for the future, the open door assured, the interests and property of foreign citizens conserved and full reparation made for wrongs and injuries suffered by them.

Greater Part of China at Peace.

"So far as we are advised, the greater part of China is at peace and earnestly desires to protect the life and property of all foreigners, and in several of the provinces active and successful efforts to suppress the Boxers have been taken by the viceroys, to whom we have extended encouragement through our consuls and naval officers.

"This present good relations should be promoted for the peace of China.

"While we agree that the immediate object for which the military forces of the powers have been cooperating, viz.: the relief of the ministers at Peking, has been accomplished, there still remain the other purposes which all the powers have in common, which are referred to in the communication of the Russian charge and which were specifically enumerated in our note to the powers of July 3.

Further Need of Troops.

"These are: To afford all possible protection everywhere in China to foreign life and property; to guard and protect all legitimate foreign interests; to aid in preventing the spread of the disorders to other provinces of the empire, and a recurrence of such disorders; and to seek a solution which may bring about permanent safety and peace to China, preserve Chinese territory and administrative entity, protect all rights guaranteed by treaty and international law to friendly powers, and safeguard for the world the principle of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese empire.

Favor Joint Occupation.

"In our opinion these purposes could best be attained by the joint occupation of Peking under a definite understanding between the powers until the Chinese government shall have been reestablished and shall be in a position to enter into new treaties with adequate provisions for reparation and guarantees of future protection. With the establishment and recognition of such authority, the United States would wish to withdraw its military forces from Peking and remit to the processes of peaceful negotiation our just demands.

Will Order Withdrawal.

"The result of these considerations is that, unless there is such a general expression by the powers in favor of continued occupation as to modify the views expressed by the government of Russia and lead to a general agreement for continued occupation, we shall give instructions to the commander of the American forces in China to withdraw our troops from Peking after due conference with the other commanders as to the time and manner of withdrawal.

"No obstacle in this regard can arise through any action of the United States, whose policy is fixed and has been repeatedly proclaimed.

"ALVEY A. ADEE,
"Acting Secretary, Department of State.
"Washington, Aug. 29, 1900."

You will communicate the foregoing to the minister of foreign affairs and invite early consideration and response.

Arkansas Goes Democratic.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 4.—The entire democratic ticket headed by Hon. Jeff Davis, of Pope county, for governor was elected in Arkansas Monday. Early returns indicate that the vote will be lighter than was expected. H. L. Remmel, the republican candidate for governor, made a good showing and his increased vote over two years ago will probably reduce the usually large democratic majority.

Census Returns.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The census bureau announces that the population of Sioux City, Ia., is 33,111, as against 37,806 in 1890, a decrease of 4,695, or 12.42 per cent.; Davenport, Ia., is 35,254, as against 26,872 in 1890, an increase of 8,382, or 31.19 per cent.; Elmira, N. Y., is 35,672, as against 30,893 in 1890, an increase of 4,779, or 15.47 percent.

Breaks Records.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 3.—The flour mills at Minneapolis, whose year has ended, have eclipsed all previous records in the history of the industry. The year that ended with September 1, 1899, was the greatest in the history of local milling, the product for that year being 14,291,280 barrels. The product for this year is placed at 14,500,00 barrels.

Coinage of Philadelphia Mint.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—During August 12,706,000 coins, of the face value of $1,324,160, were the product of the mint in this city. Of this amount, there were 6,194,000 coins in silver, of a value of $1,136,000, and 6,512,000 in the base metals, valued at $188,160.

RASSIEUR IS CHOSEN.

St. Louis Man Is Made Commander-in-Chief of G. A. R.—Officers Selected.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Leo Rassieur, of St. Louis, will be in command of the Grand Army of the Republic during the coming year. At the session Thursday of the thirty-fourth annual encampment in Studebaker theater his name was presented, and received the unanimous support of the delegates. Past Commander in Chief Maj. William Warner, of Kansas City, presented the name of the Missourian, and Adjt. Gen. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, seconded the nomination. Officers selected follow:

Comander in chief—Leo Rassieur, St. Louis.

Senior vice commander—E. C. Milliken, Maine.

Junior vice commander—Frank Seamons, Tennessee.

Surgeon general—John A. Wilkins, Ohio.

Chaplain in chief—A. Grahms, California.

The following resolution dealing with the pension problem and calling for legislation to put an end to the alleged violations of the law by the present commissioner at Washington, H. Clay Evans, was adopted:

"Resolved, That the commander in chief appoint a committee of five comrades to present to the president a certified copy of the acts of the national encampment, with the expression of its earnest desire for justice only to our disabled comrades and the widows and orphans of our dead under the letter and spirit of the law."

A thorough investigation was ordered of a report made by a special committee to the effect that perverted histories of the rebellion are being used in southern schools to perpetuate sectionalism and disloyalty in the minds of the rising generation of the south, and the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That we call upon the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, together with all patriotic citizens, to aid in banishing from our schools all books and teachings of a partisan, sectional or disloyal character."

Denver was selected as the next place of encampment.

Judge Leo Rassieur was born in Baden, Alsace, Germany, in 1844. His people came to this country in 1849, settling in St. Louis. At the breaking out of the civil war Leo Rassieur, who was 17 years of age, enlisted as a private in the Thirtieth Missouri. He steadily rose through the ranks and at the end of the war held a major's brevet. In addition to his service in the union army, Judge Rassieur has been a member of the St. Louis board of education five years and attorney for the board ten years; has spent four years on the bench of the probate court of St. Louis, organized and served as president of the Western Riding club, the principal organization of its kind in the Mississippi valley, and has built up one of the largest law practices in St. Louis, as well as becoming one of St. Louis' most prominent citizens. He is a member of Frank P. Blair post, G. A. R.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Ogden H. Fethers, of Wisconsin, Elected Supreme Chancellor—The Next Meeting in San Francisco.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 31.—Supreme Vice Chancellor Ogden H. Fethers, of Janesville, Wis., has been elected supreme chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. His vote was 88, to 59 for Supreme Chancellor Sample. This continues the Pythian custom of rotation in office, which has been the most discussed subject of the biennial gathering. The officers elected are as follows:

Supreme chancellor, Ogden H. Fethers, of Janesville, Wis.; supreme vice chancellor, Tracy R. Bangs, of Grand Forks, N. D.; supreme keeper, R. L. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn.; supreme prelate, C. F. Easley, of Santa Fe, N. M.; supreme master exchequer, Thomas D. Mears, of Wilmington, N. C.; supreme master at arms, W. Simmons, of Wilmington, Del.; inner guard, J. F. Bean, of Portland, Me.; outer guard, John Thompson, of Washington, D. C.

San Francisco was chosen as the next place of meeting.

DEFEAT FOR FILIPINOS.

Complete Rout of a Band on Bohol Island with a Loss of 120 Killed.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The war department has received the following dispatch from Gen. MacArthur:

"Manila, Sept. 3.—Adjutant General, Washington: Gen. Hughes reports outbreak in Bohol. First Lieut. Lovack, Forty-fourth volunteer infantry, reports engagement near Carmen, Bohol. Our loss in killed, one; wounded, six. Enemy's loss in killed, 120. Have not received further details. MACARTHUR."

Bohol is an island in the southern part of the archipelago, 365 miles from Manila. It lies north of the large island of Mindanao and is not far from Cebu.

Crossed Wires Cause Two Deaths.

St. Louis, Sept. 4.—Electricity killed two St. Louis policemen and badly shocked or burned 13 others Monday night. The officers were attempting to use the patrol boxes to telephone to the central station. These boxes are connected with the police stations by private city wires strung by a new electric lighting company and 8,000 volts were loaded on the wire. One of these wires came in contact with the telephone service at some point and when the patrolmen placed their hands on the transmitters they received the full force of the current.

Chinese Had 20,000 Dead.

Denver, Col., Sept. 4.—Maj. S. J. Hooper, of this city, has received a letter from Lieut. Col. C. A. Coolidge, dated Tientsin, China, August 8. Lieut. Col. Coolidge led the Ninth infantry in its attack on the inner walls of Tientsin. The letter gives an account of the fighting at Tientsin, and continues:

"There were 20,000 dead Chinese and probably one-third of the city is burned by shot and shell or incendiaries. On account of the crowded condition of the city it would be a good thing if one-half of it were destroyed."

OBSERVE LABOR DAY.

Bryan and Roosevelt Speak to Workingmen in Chicago—Parades in Many Cities.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Organized labor marched Monday, with thousands of men in line in excess of the numbers of other years, to demonstrate the numerical growth of the labor movement in Chicago. With wives and children, the workmen legions also flocked to Electric park in the afternoon and listened to a number of notable orators. The parade started at 9:30 o'clock and was witnessed by large crowds from one end of the route to the other. The men, as a rule, were plainly dressed, the gaudy uniforms seen on other occasions of a like nature being missed. At the reviewing stand the parade was witnessed by many notable persons, among them William J. Bryan, democratic nominee for president; Samuel Alschuler, democratic nominee for governor of Illinois; Mayor Harrison, Gov. Roosevelt, the republican candidate for vice president; United States Senator William E. Mason and Judge Richard Yates, the republican candidate for governor of Illinois. Bryan and Roosevelt came in for a noisy and hearty reception by the marchers. Later in the day Mr. Bryan addressed a large audience at Electric park, his speech being devoted to a review of labor's victories, with much advice regarding party issues. Gov. Roosevelt also spoke. He discarded politics entirely, confining his remarks to a dissertation on the beauty and influence of fellow-feeling and the possibilities of association. Addresses were made by others, including Messrs. Yates and Alschuler, rival candidates for governor.

Following is an estimate of the number of men in line in Labor day parades in various cities:

Chicago	18,158	Topeka	2,500
St. Louis	25,000	Milwaukee	4,000
Cincinnati	12,000	Streator, Ill.	4,000
St. Paul	11,000	Evansville	3,000
Minneapolis	5,000	Des Moines	2,500
Springfield	9,500	Terre Haute	1,200
Louisville	9,000	Centerville, Ia.	1,000
Indianapolis	8,500	Atlanta	5,000
Pittsburgh	7,000	Memphis	2,700
Detroit	6,000	Nashville	2,500
Denver	5,000	Knoxville	600
Cleveland	8,000	Charleston, S.C.	1,500
Dayton	4,108	Madison, Wis.	400
Columbus	3,000

FAILURES ARE LESS.

Statement for August Is the Best Made This Year—Trade Revival Seems Near at Hand.

New York, Sept. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Commercial failures during August were 735 in number, with liabilities of $7,223,963. Manufacturing were 174 for $2,945,607, trading 519 for $3,585,667, and other commercial 42 for $792,629. There were only two banks, with liabilities of $146,000. This is the best monthly statement for 1900 thus far, but shows an increase over the corresponding month in the two preceding years.

An important influence of the week has been favorable weather for development of corn over the greater part of the surplus corn states, though heavy rains in the spring wheat region have retarded harvesting. The cotton movement is slow and late, but weather conditions average better, except in the Carolinas. Price changes are small.

"Steady improvement is seen in the iron market. It is not marked by large advances, but wherever change occurs it is in the right direction. It is claimed by some authorities that orders currently booked aggregate more than present production and shipments. Special concessions to secure prospective business are withdrawn, and buyers seek contracts for prompt delivery.

"Western stove manufacturers have been buying freely, and more bridge builders signed contracts for structural material. Merchant steel advanced on increasing orders, while domestic purchases of cotton ties were large, although rather late. Copper exports average 1,000,000 pounds per day, and the market is in a strong position.

"Failures for the week were 175 in the United States, against 141 last year, and 19 in Canada, against 25 last year."

SHOWS BIG INCREASE.

Statement by Controller of Currency Regarding the National Bank Note Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The monthly circulation statement issued by the comptroller of the currency shows that at the close of business August 31, 1900, the total circulation of national bank notes was $324,223,810, an increase for the year of $82,152,018, and an increase for the month of $4,208,454. The circulation based on United States bonds was $290,641,356, an increase for the year of $84,468,007, and an increase for the month of $4,193,922.

The circulation secured by lawful money amounted to $33,582,450, a decrease for the year of $2,315,989, and an increase for the month of $14,532.

The amount of United States bonds on deposit to secure circulating notes was $295,790,380, and to secure public deposits, $88,840,280.

AGAIN BREAKS RECORD.

Deutschland Makes Fastest Trip Yet Between Europe and America.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Deutschland, which was reported off Sandy Hook lightship shortly before seven o'clock Saturday morning, lowered all trans-Atlantic records. She left Cherbourg on August 26 about 9:30 p. m. Her time therefore is about 5 days 14 hours and 30 minutes, which is over three hours better time than was made by the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on her fastest trip from Cherbourg.

Many Killed in Wreck.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Thirteen persons killed and over 30 others injured is the appalling record of a rear-end collision between an excursion train and a milk train on the Bethlehem branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railway Sunday morning at Hatfield, Pa., 27 miles north of this city. The wrecked train consisted of ten day coaches and was the first section of a large excursion made up of people from Bethlehem, Allentown and surrounding towns to Atlantic City. The wreck is supposed to have been due to negligence or disregard of signals.

Flood in Santiago.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 4.—Santiago is now experiencing the severest weather known here since 1877. The lower part of the city is five feet under water. The firemen and police are assisting the sufferers.

A Bad Fire.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 4.—Fire at Potosi, Wis., wiped out the entire business portion of the town, causing a loss of $25,000. The hotel, post office, two saloons and a barber shop were burned to the ground.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Will Lose Their Votes.

There are many voters scattered over the state, particularly in the central and northern part, who are bemoaning their fate because they cannot assist in shaping the politics of their individual districts.

They have filed claims on government lands, many of them during the past year, and are consequently obliged to acknowledge their claims as their residences, which deprives them of voting at the election next month.

The United States land offices at St. Cloud, Marshall and Crookston have recorded big increases in the number of homesteads filed upon this year, and at the rate government land is being taken up there will be little left in a short time.

There is no loss without some small gain, however, and the homesteaders realize that their claims are increasing in value according to the rapid rate in which the north is being opened up. Business is pushing toward the northern boundary of the state at a rate highly gratifying to those who have claims.

Grades Established.

The Minnesota State Board of Grain and Warehouse Commissioners met and agreed upon a basis of grades for this year. The rules of last year were mainly renewed, but a few changes were made. Last year it was allowed to mix with the number one hard wheat from the Red River Valley five per cent of red winter wheat. This resulted in loading the Red River Valley wheat and virtually depressing its price. This has been changed this year by adopting the rule that any admixture of other wheat will cause it to grade as mixed winter wheat.

Fine Appearance.

The fair grounds present an unusually fine appearance this year. The rains of July and August came at the time when the grass is usually just beginning to dry up in this vicinity, and they have been so numerous and frequent that the fair grounds look like a part of the city park system. The trees, too, are in fine foliage, and have added another year's growth since they were examined by the public last. Secretary Randall has seen to it that the walks and drives have been kept in good order.

A Duel with Razors.

Donald Gray and Marcus Hutchinson, colored, armed with razors, fought a bloody duel at St. Paul, and the former may die from his injuries. The men began quarreling over a girl, and before any one was aware, they were slashing each other frightfully. The men fought until Gray fell exhausted from the loss of blood. He was taken to the hospital, while Hutchinson was locked up. Gray is horribly lacerated and cut about the face and body, and it is believed that he cannot live.

Died at a Ball Game.

John Ford, of Randolph, Minn., died suddenly in the grandstand at Lexington Park while watching a ball game between the Hastings team and that of Lennon & Gibbons. His daughter was by his side and after bidding her good-bye he expired before aid could reach him. Death was due to hemorrhage of the lungs. He was 45 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

News in Brief.

An intoxicated man was arrested in a Minneapolis saloon who had $1,520, all in $20 gold pieces, in his pocket.

The fourth-class postoffice at Stephens will be raised to the third class, commencing Oct. 11. The postmaster's salary will be $1,000 per year.

The executive committee of the Minnesota State Bankers' Association will meet in St. Paul some time during the state fair.

Chester R. Smith, St. Paul, is to be the manager of the evening program at the fair. Everybody in St. Paul knows that this means success. Mr. Smith has been a leader in all of St. Paul's great festive occasions, and is quite at home managing and planning brilliant spectacles like the evening entertainments at the fair.

An opium joint at Duluth was raided by the police and the alleged proprietor, Alex Kennedy, and two inmates, all colored, were arrested.

A laborer named Larry Kustlewski was instantly killed by the caving in of a sewer in which he was at work in the western part of Winona.

A Norwegian hospital for St. Paul is projected under the auspices of the Norwegian Lutheran Seminary at Hamline. Committees have been organized to ascertain if a sufficient sum can be subscribed to erect a good, large hospital in St. Paul.

The remains of Knute Knutson, a man about 60 years of age, were found in a field near the Berlin postoffice.

The steamer Eclipse, one of the best raft boats on the upper Mississippi, has sunk at a point some distance down the river from Winona. It broke from its moorings during a storm and floated upon some rocks. It now lays in about four feet of water. Work of raising it has already been commenced.

Fire destroyed the general store, building and contents belonging to S. N. Thompson, of Grey Eagle. It was insured for $1,800. The postoffie was in the building.

State Auditor Dunn has withdrawn the state's one-third of the wolf bounty, being $5 for males and $15 for females. He says there are people in the state who operate wolf farms on account of the bonus and find it a paying industry.

The girl inmates of the state training school are camping at Point Au Sable. A girl named Annie Mooney was drowned.

While making a leap down the steep banks of the paddock to escape from dogs at Minnehaha Park, an antelope broke one of its forelegs. The limb has been set and bound in splints. The animal may not recover.

William Schaal, a farmer living at Warwick, near Minneapolis, started to drive to the South St. Paul stock yards with a load of hogs Monday. Near Midway the team ran into a live electric wire and both horses were instantly killed.

Willie Gustafson, aged 12, was drowned while bathing in Ely Lake. His parents reside at Ely.

UNDISGUISED GREED

ONE OF THE CONVERTS TO THE REPUBLICAN GOSPEL OF GREED.

The Awful Anarchist Plot—Republican Anti-Imperialists. General Apathy Will Be the Explanation—The Independent Republican Governor of Wisconsin—Other Odds and Ends.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 8, 1900.

Charles Denby, ex-minister to China, is being paraded in the Republican press as a recent convert to the McKinley cause. A convert, indeed! Mr. Denby was made a member of Mr. McKinley's first Philippine commission because he was known to be an imperialist. Since that time he has been engaged in writing of the advantages of imperial dominion. He is, as the Chicago Chronicle says, an imperialist of the most sordid kind, with no admixture of religion, humanity, benevolent assimilation or anything but pure and blind greed. Witness this extract from an article which he wrote for The Forum, and which was printed in that magazine in the number for February, 1899:

"The hard, practical question alone remains: Will the possession of these islands benefit us as a nation? If it will not set them free tomorrow and let their people, if they please, cut each other's throats or cut what pranks they please."

The Chronicle offers this pertinent comment:

"It will be seen that there is no Christianity or humanity or duty or destiny nonsense about that. There is no fear that "the world would laugh at us" or that some vulture nation would swoop down and make a meal of the islands if we should "haul down the flag" and "sail away."

"Denby's policy immediately the subjugation enterprise was openly entered upon more than a year and a half ago was the most cold-blooded "scuttle policy." His policy was: Keep the Philippines regardless of the wishes of their ten millions of people if you can make it pay. If you cannot make it pay turn them loose and let the people cut each other's throats or go to the devil any other way. You are out for the stuff, and all talk of humanity or duty is mere stuffing for sentimental ears."

Everybody is now laughing at that awful plot to assassinate President McKinley, which was reported to have been hatched by Italian anarchists and which was recently unearthed by the chief of our government secret service. The prompt arrest of two of the desperate anarchists on their arrival in New York from Naples was expected to result in some terrible revelations and create a sentimental regard for the president whose life had thus been providentially saved. But the thing has fallen flat.

The real facts appear to be these: Natale Moresca, one of the men arrested on suspicion of having been sent to this country by the Italian anarchists with orders to assassinate President McKinley, was a poor laborer in Naples. He wanted to marry a girl, who also was courted by another lover. Moresca was the favored suitor. He decided to go to America in hopes of making some money, and it was understood that the wedding would take place on his return to Naples. He secured a situation as waiter on the Kaiser Wilhelm and sailed for New York. His rival wrote an anonymous letter to Mr. Byington, the United States consul at Naples, denouncing Moresca and another man, Guida, who also sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm, as anarchists who were going to the United States for the purpose of murdering the president. The consul wired the startling news to New York and the two men were arrested immediately on their arrival.

This appears to be the whole truth regarding the awful tragedy which was averted by the courage and skill of the detectives in the secret service of our government.

There was a time when John Hay, the present premier of the McKinley government, believed what would be rank treason in one of the latter-day Republicans. In his book, "Castillian Days," he says:

"There are those who think the Spaniards are not fit for freedom. I believe that no people are fit for anything else."

Charles Sumner, one of the greatest of Republicans in his time, said in a speech on the acquisition of Alaska:

"I cannot disguise my anxiety that every stage in our predestined future shall be by natural process, without war, and, I may add, even without purchase. There is no territorial aggrandizement which is worth the price of blood."

Another old fashioned Republican, John Sherman, said in a speech at a soldiers' reunion in Mansfield, O., Aug. 26, 1899:

"I am and always have been opposed to war in the Philippines. We have no business there, and I hope they will soon be left alone to govern themselves. I shall be glad to welcome the day when the soldier boys shall be called home from the Philippines. We shall then again be the same great family as we have been heretofore. The war is not only an expensive war, but it is also unnecessary, uncalled for, and unjust."

Republicans everywhere appear to be casting about for some plausible explanation which they may offer when their fears have been realized in November. They are saying that they will win if they only succeed in getting out their full vote. But they fear the result because of over-confidence. There is, they say, general apathy in their ranks. Several of the leaders have sounded a note of warning against over-confidence. Of course, this simply means that Republicans are troubled with apathy, not because they are confident of McKinley's election, but because they don't care whether he is elected or not.

Lyman Gage, secretary of the treasury, says that if Bryan should become president "he could order his secretary of the treasury to make payable in silver all the public debt payable in coin and all current disbursements as well."

If this were true it would prove the loose-jointedness of the Republican legislation for the firm establishment of the gold standard.

Nothing, says the Philadelphia Record, affords more convincing proof of the plutocratic tendencies of the Republic party than the frank confidence with which Chairman Hanna goes from city to city making his levies for campaign funds upon rich men and office-holders who have obtained wealth and preferment through partisan favoritism. He told the Philadelphia magnates who on Saturday last were gathered to see him that Philadelphia would be drawn upon for $600,000. This is an immense sum. If the size of the draft be any criterion of the real exigencies of the McKinley campaign it is an evidence of desperation.

Edward Scofield, governor of Wisconsin, is a Republican who refuses to take his views ready-made from the headquarters of his party. At the banquet of the Iron Brigade in Chicago some days ago the governor made a speech and raised his voice in warning against the growing spirit of militarism. He used this language:

"The most highly trained army, all the authorities to the contrary notwithstanding, can never subdue wholly an army of intelligent men fighting for their homes. This fact becomes more true every year and our nation will do well to head it. We have had a taste of war recently, which unquestionably has awakened a military spirit, and what we have now to guard ourselves against is a too great and dangerous growth of this spirit. We prefer peace and we are a nation whose glory is that when it does engage in war it is not for conquest, but for righteousness sake."

He declared that "our path to glory in an honorable future does not lie through bloody seas."

The poem entitled "America and Liberty," by Professor Wilhelm Petterson of Minneapolis, is becoming famous. It contains these spirited and patriotic lines, which will appeal to every believer in the true American doctrine of human rights:

Who said "Haul down our flag?" No man Whose warm blood is American.
"Thou Freedom's noblest symbol, rise
In growing splendor to the skies;
And be, where'er thou art unfurled,
The flag of hope to all the world."
But, mark ye well, our flag must wave
O'er loosened chains, to free, to save.
And if they say it waves its folds
O'er ships with slavery in their holds;
And if they say it waves o'er lands
Where men in arms as conquerer stands,
'Tis but a false, pretentious rag,
'Tis not OUR flag, 'tis NOT our flag.
OUR flag must wave, where'er it be,
For Justice, Right and Liberty.

The Goodhue County News pays this deserved tribute to Governor Lind:

"There is not a department of the state's activity where his influence is not felt, invariably in the people's interest. The secretary of state neglected his duty; Governor Lind called his attention to the lapse by citing facts without comment. Other governors never troubled themselves with the state's affairs in the attorney general's office. Governor Lind, without officiousness, has had more consultations with the attorney general than all his predecessors. Other governors have named railroad commissioners and let it go at that. Governor Lind knows what the railroad commission is doing and has made not a few suggestions upon which some of their most important initiatives were based. In the coal rate case, the Southern Minnesota grain rates, the Northern Minnesota joint rate case, he has been informed of every step.

"Other governors have appointed their boards and then gone off and left them. Governor Lind never fails, if he can help it, to attend the meetings of the prison board, the charities and corrections, and so on. There is not an institution with whose workings he is not familiar. There is not a problem he has not studied. There is not an interest of the state upon which he is not informed. There is not an interest of the people for which he is not zealously concerned.

"Nobody knows how much he has done for the state, how useful his labors have been. He is governor every minute and to every purpose."

The Des Moines Weekly Globe, a Republican paper, believes in imperialism and makes no secret of it. The paper speaks right out in favor of a change in our form of government. It develops its views in this wise:

"For a long time thinking people who have large commercial interests have felt unsafe with our present form of government from the fact that we are controlled by the little cheap John politicians and ward heelers. Now is a good time to do away with our obsolete Constitution and adopt a form of government that will be logical with our new expansion ideas and will give ample protection to capital. A constitutional monarchy is probably the most desirable plan that we could now adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We take it that the great farming interests of our land will readily adapt themselves to the change. The farmer is a great lover of law and order, and anti-monarchy is largely the expression of French revolutionary ideas suggested by hot-headed theorists. P. S.

The Parson's Revenge.

It had been the custom of an Atchison man all his life to time his preacher at church, and when the preacher had talked 30 minutes the Atchison man thought it long enough and got up and walked out. He died recently, and the preacher took advantage of the fact that the knocker of his sermons couldn't get away, and preached a funeral sermon lasting an hour and 15 minutes.—Atchison Globe.

STEEL TRACK ROADS.

Utility of the System Has Been Demonstrated by Experiments Here and Abroad.

The illustration shows a section of a steel track road without wooden superstructure of any kind. The steel track here indicated consists of a built section as shown, in the detail drawing (Fig. 2), made up of a steel channel riveted on either side to angle irons. This gives a flat surface eight inches wide for the wheels of the vehicle, the rails being laid at a convenient distance apart to accommodate vehicles of a standard gauge. It will be seen that there is a projecting flange which tends to keep the wheels from leaving the track, but being not more than half an inch high this flange does not prevent turning out easily when necessary. The rails are well filled underneath with cement to afford a continuous bearing, while the projecting flanges are securely imbedded in the concrete of the roadbed, insuring rigid immobility. The rails are not dependent on any system of cross ties for support, but where the ends of the rails are joined the joints are firmly bolted to a common cross tie which also helps to maintain the rails at a uniform distance apart and to keep their surfaces horizontal.

On the score of expense the steel roadway is not extravagant, viewed in the light of the long service and low cost of maintenance that may be expected of it. Of the experimental sections thus far built, it is said that the total cost has been not far from one dollar per foot, but in the event of building such roads on a large scale this cost can no doubt be reduced by at least 30 per cent.

In Europe we may find a few interesting examples of steel road construction in a small way. The road between Grao and Valencia in Spain was completed in its present form in 1892. It is two miles in length and consists of parallel steel rails laid at a suitable distance apart to accommodate the wheels of passing vehicles. At each side of the rails are layers of binding stones, the road between the rails being paved and slightly higher than the face of the rails.

Previous to 1892 this road was constructed of flint stone, and on good authority the expense of keeping it in repair is stated to have been 3,500 pesetas or about $532 annually. Since the adoption of the steel rail system the annual cost of keeping in repair the central portion of the highway thus relieved from heavy traffic which passes over the steel rails, is stated to be only 2,500 pesetas or about $380, at the current rate of exchange.

This road has attracted some little attention, and in response to inquiries from various parts of Spain and elsewhere the municipality of Valencia has made a statement to the effect that it is the opinion of its officers that the saving in the cost of repairs by reason of a road of this kind pays for its construction in a short time.

The total cost of the two miles of road was a little less than $10,000; 3,200 vehicles pass over it daily, and a toll of about three-fourths of a cent is charged each vehicle.

The most interesting fact in regard to this road is that after eight years of service it is still in good condition, the rails exhibiting a wear of not more than three one-hundredths of an inch annually and requiring little or no attention of any kind.—Country Gentleman.

Study the Market Reports.

Every orchardist should make himself familiar with the fruit-crop conditions of each year. In that way only can he know how valuable is the fruit hanging on his trees. A few years ago, when everything pointed to the probability of high prices for apples, the farmers in some counties almost gave away their apples. Buyers that understood the conditions bought up crops on the trees at ten cents per bushel and made enormous profits out of the transaction. The growers thus failed to get their part of the profits. What shall it profit a man to spend money and time in planting an orchard and bringing it into bearing and then give away its product? The grower should get more out of it than any other person; yet it is too often the middleman that gets all the profits.—Farmers' Review.

Change in Farm Operations.

Farm operations for the next few years are likely to be modified very much by labor conditions, especially in the eastern and middle states, where industrial activity has robbed the farm of its workers to a large extent. In some sections this year there has been the greatest difficulty in securing hands enough to take care of the limited harvest. In such localities farmers are preparing to sow and plant only such land as they must, rather than suffer inconvenient labor. Less farming and more grazing is the tendency in such cases—and when all is counted up there need be no loss to figure either.—National Stockman.

Green Food for Dairy Cows.

If you are going to feed green food to your cows, do not wait until the hot sun has wilted it, but cut it early in the morning and keep it in the shade until fed. Compare the condition of corn, or even cow peas, at sunrise and at two o'clock in the afternoon, and you will see the force of this advice. At sunrise the earth is comparatively cool, the leaves of the plants stand up stiff, are full of juice and tipped with dew; at two o'clock the ground is hot and hard, the plant leaves hang limp and lifeless, are hot and unpalatable.—Jersey Bulletin.

PRIVATE DAIRYING.

Where It Is Conducted Properly the Results Are Bound to Be Reasonably Satisfactory.

As a matter of fact the private dairyman has a decided advantage over the creamery butter-maker, so says Mrs. Carrie Wilson in a paper read before the Vermont State Dairy association. He controls the feeding of his cows and the handling of the milk from the time it is drawn from the cow until the butter is made. The patrons of the creamery always have among them one or more who are not as careful or as cleanly in their methods as they might be, nor does the carrying of the milk or cream one to three miles on a hot day add to its desirable qualities; but the creamery buttermaker is an expert; he is methodical, exact, and knows how to offset to some extent the carelessness of his patrons. Hence his product is more even in quality and flavor than that of the average private dairy. If all private dairies were conducted on the same lines as the most successful creameries, then the product of the former would in nearly every instance excel that of the latter. This is not written in the way of disparaging the creamery. Quite the contrary. It has been the main factor in improving the qualities of the dairy herds, the methods of the dairyman and the quality of the butter made in this and other states. It would have required long years, perhaps a generation, to bring about the improvements in dairying that the creamery has done in the past ten. We only wish that every poor buttermaker in the state would become patrons of a creamery. It would not only help the quality of the butter market, but it would be a great help to the market by ridding it of the vast amount of wretched stuff which now crowds it and depresses prices. But the private dairyman, just the same, has advantages which the creamery cannot, from the nature of the business, enjoy.

LOCK FOR MILK CANS.

A Device That May Prove Quite Popular in Large Cities Where Petty Thieves Abound.

Many housekeepers know by experience how disagreeable it is to wake up in the morning and find the milk can and contents gone, or perhaps the drained can is left to tell the tale of a petty thief. Here is a cheap and simple device which will prevent the theft of the milk without making it any more difficult for the housekeeper to take in the pail in the morning. The cut shows a small casing, which may be attached to the door frame at the right height to place the pail within convenient reach. A small opening in the top of the casing allows the shank of the angle iron on the can to be inserted, while a sliding catch at the rear of the casing engages a notch cut in the side of the shank. The latch extends backward to the edge of the door, so that when the latter is closed it prevents the latch being drawn backward to release the shank. Besides preventing theft this device also supports the can in a position to remove the danger of tipping it over with the foot, and there will be no milk stains to clean up, as is often the case when the can is placed on the steps. The inventor is Louis Munch, of Philadelphia.—Chicago Daily News.

Cows in Hot, Dry Weather.

Cows that are forced to undergo annual periods of starvation, during the annual droughts, must of necessity gradually deteriorate in milking powers. If cow owners would but consider how the poor animals must suffer toiling through the blazing heat trying to gather enough food to satisfy their hunger from the sunburned pastures, common humanity would move them to relieve them. But they do not think, they do not consider, more is the pity. We are glad to know, however, that the number of such inconsiderate cow owners is growing less every year. The practice of providing green food to supplement the pastures during the drought is rapidly extending among cow owners, and especially among owners of Jersey cows.—Jersey Bulletin.

Many Fruits on One Tree.

George Febrey, residing near the College of St. James, Washington county, has a plum tree on which he expects to grow, besides plums, peaches, almonds, apricots and nectarines. He sawed the top off the plum tree and grafted on an almond branch, on which he has now budded peaches, apricots and nectarines. Some time ago he bored a hole through an elm tree and inserted a growing Concord grapevine, which, when it had grown so it filled the hole, was cut off at one end. The vine continued to grow, being fed with sap from the elm tree, and bore luscious grapes.—Baltimore Sun.

Bees Carry Heavy Weight.

Observations made to test this question showed that bees can carry with ease twice their weight in honey. Several bees were caught as they returned to their hives laden with honey, and, after inclosing them in a little box, they were carefully weighed. When the bees unloaded their honey, they were again caught, placed in the same box and weighed a second time. This experiment showed that the bees when laden weighed three times as much as when empty. It was therefore proved that a bee can carry twice its own weight in honey, and can fly very long distances with that weight.—Rural World.

Russia's New Calendar.

It is said that Russia is about to adopt a new calendar. Each year contains 13 months of twenty-eight days each, and begins on Monday and ends on Saturday. The main feature of this calendar is its apparent stability, and in this it resembles the sovereign remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has held an unmovable position for half a century. Try it for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness, or insomnia, but be sure you get the genuine.

My husband was in debt and I, being anxious to help him, thought I would sell American Self-Heating Flat Irons, and am doing splendidly. A cent's worth of fuel will heat the iron for one day, so you have a perfectly even heat. You can iron in half the time and no danger of scorching the clothes, as with the old iron, and you can get the most beautiful gloss. I sell at nearly every house, as the iron is so convenient and economical everybody wants one. I have not made less than five dollars any day I worked. My brother is doing well, and I think any one can make lots of money anywhere selling these irons. Retail price $3.75 each. The Roberts A. & O. Iron Co., St. Paul, Minnesota, are the sole manufacturers and will start any one in the business, as they did me, if you will address them.

DELANO, FRIDAY, Sept. 7, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1.00.

—There will be a horse race Fair Day.

—About 15 young folks went to Lake Rebecca last Saturday and spent the day picnicing.

—Owen Davis and G. F. Herman have arranged for a horse race tomorow (Fairday) afternoon.

—Tomorrow, Saturday, Sept. 8, will be Fair Day. There will of course be a lot of candidates in town.

—Street Commissioner Welker had the street grader at work Wednesday. He did some good work as far as he went.

—Minnesota fruit this year is all right. Apples, plums, and grapes are fine as in any state in the union. If we only had more of them.

—Mrs. Walter Brothers vs. Jonas Dahl, assault and battery, was before Justice Walters Wednesday. The suit was continued until Friday.

LATER:—Defendent discharged.

—Earl Hoisington is moving to town. He proposes to build on the lots recently purchased on S. Third street and will then occupy his new home.

—Services will be held at the German Evangelical church, in Delano, on Sunday, Sept. 9, at 4 p. m. Rev. Wernicke, of Cottage Grove, will preach.

—Delano has reformed one seventh. Instead of seven saloons it has had only six since Sept. 1; Len Dedrick having retired from the business and moved onto his farm.

—The Delano Cemetery Association met Monday evening and allowed bills for cleaning up grounds and repairing fence. Several deeds have been made out since the plat was put on record.

--Otto Marr's people received a letter from him a few days ago. He is on a small boat sailing around the Philippines, having left the Newark, which is now in Chinese waters. His time is out next March.

—Several loads of very fine sorghum have been hauled through town this week to the mill. It is a wonder more sorghum is not grown in this vicinity. It makes the best and healthiest molases we get.

—School was held on Monday, Labor Day. Books were distributed and things put in order for an early start on Tuesday. Teachers were all on hand, and most of the pupils were in attendance, except some visiting the State Fair.

—Henon Cyrus got in the way of August Berneck's dog a couple of days ago and got a hole tore in his pants, and quite a wound in the leg. G. W. Garver who has been looking for a good watch dog has now become proprietor of the animal.

—Delano High School teachers are as follows: Herbert Carleton, principal; Miss Gould, Asst. Prin.; Miss Rose Teeter, 6th and 7th grades; Miss Madgelene Klopsteg, 5 and 4; Miss Evangelyne Weber, 2 and 3; Miss Rose Murphy, primary.

—Three new residences in a row, on South Second street help fill up that end of town. George Kittock is building next to Gralla and Kelsey. We hear he intends building another house on an adjoining lot as soon as he gets the one he is working at now completed.

--Monday was Labor Day. Flags floated from the school house and from Eppel's liberty pole. The bank was closed. Several visitors from the city where the day was observed as a holiday took the occasion to visit friends in the village. Otherwise things were much the same as usual in Delano.

—The village council have posted new notices for an election to vote on bonding the village for $2,000 to extend waterworks. It would be a good plan to secure water for village purposes that could be used for drinking purposes as well as to sprinkle lawns, and put out fires before going in debt too much for extensions of the present plant.

—People are entitled to but one homestead. That is the one they call home, and where they live. It seems several individuals, in neighboring towns of course, whose debts were growing faster than their incomes took up homesteads in the northern part of the state, recently, and their creditors seeing their opportunity "jumped" the old homes for debts. Then voting has to be done at one home, and not in two homes. Laws will be better understood after a little perhaps.

—The game laws for ducks and partridge were up last Saturday and those birds may now be hunted. There are not many ducks here yet as it is early for any except those raised in this locality; pheasants are quite numerous, and gray squirrels are reported to be uncommonly pleanty this fall. The woods resound with the report of fire arms, and the wily squirrel from this out, will have to eat his acarns on the jump, while the life of a stray duck or partridge wouldn't be worth much to an insurance company; that is, not if the number of hunters has anything to do with it.

—Ladie's Aid tea at 5 o'o'clock today at the home of Mrs. J. D. Young.

County Cullings.

Don't forget the Harvest Festival at Endeavor Church, Monday afternoon, nor the debate at night.

The new Democratic paper, Minneapolis Star, has absorbed the American, and subscribers to the American who have paid $1.00 are to have the Star one year, for their money.

The Howard Lake Herald has again changed hands. This week's issue contains the valedictory of M. O. Manaige, and the salutatory of L. W. Ham as editor. Politics the same as before.

We have been supplied with proper credentials for receiving subscriptions to the new Democratic daily, Minneapolis Star. Bring or send your cash, $1 00 for one year's subscription, outside of Minneapolis. This is cheap. You had best send $2 and get the GAZETTE one year at the same time. A daily and a weekly ought to keep you posted on politics and news.

Wright county Republicans appear to think their fences need more than the usual amount of repairing this year. They are at it late and early, chasing over the country trying to fix them up. From the present outlook several Democrats will be elected this time. This way of haying one Democrat to sixteen republicans in county office has been played long enough. The voters want a change. Wright county people are not imperialists. They don't believe any man or set of men entitled to feed out of the public crib everlastingly. They favor the good old Democratic plan of rotation in office. Give some other fellow a chance.

Democratic Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted at the Wright County Dem. Convention held at Buffalo.

"We, the Democratic party of Wright county, in convention assembled, heartily endorse the platform adopted by the Democratic national convention at Kansas City, and we call upon all voters who are opposed to trusts and imperialism to join with us in supporting said platform.

The Democratic party firmly believes in commercial expansion as the source of our future greatness, but not as stated by President McKinley: 'Forcible annexation which would be criminal aggression.' In view of evils threatening our nation when hordes of vampire combinations, vulture-like, feed upon the necessities of the common people; when pretended politicians seek to divert the Declaration of Independence—the basis of the nation's stability—and thus resolve our Constitution into a trade character; when the leaders of a once great party are subject to mercenary and merciless bossism; when our national emblem, the stars and stripes, is no longer a symbol of freedom; when our chief executive within sixty days will veer like a weather vane; when new issues confront the welfare of our country; we demand a peerless leader—one whom the people can trust—he comes from the west and his name is William Jennings Bryan.

In Gov. Lind we recognize an honest, able and conservative statesman whose whole life is beyond reproach and whose administration has been eminently successful, reflecting credit upon the commonwealth and satisfying beyond measure the judgment of the people whose votes made him their chief executive; therefore, we recommend that the unanimous vote of our delegates to the state convention be cast for his renomination.

We recommend that delegates to the congressional convention cast the whole vote of Wright county for the man who will best represent the principles enumerated in the Kansas City platform.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 17 1900.

Mr. McKinley and his Cabinet, or rather the five members of it who are in Washington, have been giving a continuous diplomatic performance this week. They have been holding daily sessions-one day they held two sessions-to wrestle with communications from the imperial partners with whom Mr. McKinley has been doing business in China. The contents of those communications have not been made public, but the semi official news disseminators say they relate to a united agreement for a settlement of questions relating to China, and that the Emperor of Germany now stands obstinately in the way of an immediate settlement. That may or may not be true, but there are reasons for the belief that the Emperor of Germany, or anybody else, who prevents an agreement that would necessitate a show down of the administration's Chinese hand until after the Presidential election would be regarded by Mr. McKinley as an almighty good find.

Washington is entirely in the dark as to what is going on in and around Pekin, as no telegrams have come through that were not more than a week old when received and they have contained little that was important.

History teaches that it is the usual thing for nations to do what their rulers had declared they would not do. Perhaps that is why so little attention has been given to the declarations of the diplomats of the allied nations as to the intentions of their respective governments in China. This government was first to declare that it wanted no Chinese territory and that it was opposed to any other nation taking any; that was followed by similar declarations from Germany and Japan, and now Russia has come forward to say that it wants nothing but peace and the preservation of the Chinese empire, and that it stands ready to give up the Chinese territory it recently seized to restore order. These have been official statements publicly made. England is said to agree with them, although no official statement to that effect has been made public and there are some rumors to the contrary. It must be apparent to the observant that if those five governments really held the sentiments expressed by them, there would be no further talk about a general land grab in China; they have the power to compel a settlement on the lines they wish. That there is continued talk is why it is believed that these official utterances have merely been made for effect-to keep the world in the dark while the plans for cutting up China are perfected.

Representative Davey, of La., was at democratic Congressional head quarters this week. He said of the republican claim of La. Congressional districts: "The Republican National Committee were told sometime ago that the second and third districts would be republican; also the sixth. I do not understand why all the La. districts were not included in the claim. Personally, I have no doubt about all six of the La. democrats being re-elected. The republicans in La. are united this year, but that will not win them any Congressional seats."

The Democratic Campaign Text Book is ready for distribution. It is a very warm book of fifty chapters, seventeen of which are devoted to imperialism. One chapter is devoted to evidence showing the existence of a secret alliance between the McKinley administration and Great Britain; the Porto Rican legislation, which is described as "imperialism applied" gets several chapters and one of the longest chapters is given up to republican stealing in Cuba. Other chapters show the attitude of republican party toward trusts; railroad discriminations in favor of trusts, the proposed ship subsidy job, etc. The book is a corker.

Representative Hay, of Va., who is recognized as one of the best friends of the National Guard in Congress, says in a signed statement on the dangers of militarism: "The republican party advocates a large and permanent standing army and it will insist upon a large increase in the standing army, should it continue in power. Apart from the immense cost which such a military establishment would entail permanently on the government the effect of its maintenance would be to discourage the formation of National Guard organizations, and to sap the military spirit of our people. This large standing army is necessarily a part of the imperial and military system which the present administration is seeking to force upon the country. It is an open secret that the people who are advocating this system desire to use these troops at home as well as abroad, for the suppression of the liberties of the people. The policy of the democratic party is to oppose militarism, and it denounces in its national platform the maintenance of a large standing army."

Representative Gaines, of Tenn., has been looking up Mr. McKinley's inconsistent record on the trust question. He finds that Mr. McKinley declared in a speech in the House, May 18, 1888, that Congress had the power to crush home trusts. Mr. Gaines also asks very pertinently why Mr. McKinley has done nothing toward crushing the trusts since he became President, and why he should be a trust follower instead of a party leader? Mr. McKinley has been inconsistent on almost every important public question. He can't help it. By nature he is a wobbler.

INCREASE RAPIDLY.

Trades Unions in New York Show Net Gain of 62 Unions and 8,152 Members in Three Months.

The quarterly bulletin of the bureau of labor statistics just issued shows that between December 31, 1899, and March 31, 1900, a net gain of 62 unions and 8,152 members was made by the labor organizations of the state. The aggregate membership is now 232,535, which is 30 per cent. larger than it was at the corresponding dates in 1898 and 1899. Since 1897 the number of women belonging to labor organizations has more than doubled.

The proportion of trade unionists not at work at the end of March was 20 per cent., as compared with 18.3, 21.0 and 30.6 per cent. at the end of March, 1899, 1898 and 1897, respectively.

AIDED THE BRITISH.

Incident of 41 Years Ago Recalled by Taking of Taku Forts.

American Captain Helps British Admiral Out of Perilous Position—Originated Phrase "Blood Is Thicker Than Water."

The Taku forts, recently occupied by the international forces, just 41 years ago were the scene of an episode which gave to the world that famous phrase: "Blood is thicker than water."

A British fleet of 11 small gunboats, under Admiral Hope, was engaged in an assault on the mud batteries just inside the Pei-Ho river bar on June 25, 1859, when the tide went down and left them helpless in the mud under the fire of the Chinese smoothbores.

Capt. Tatnall, the flag officer commanding the United States China squadron, which was anchored off the bar, nominally guarding American interests, perceiving the plight of the British admiral, lowered his barge, and with his flag lieutenant and 20 men rowed up the river to show the Englishman how to point his guns. The flag lieutenant, Stephen Decatur Trenchard, was badly wounded, and one man in the barge was killed in passing through the fire from the forts. Once on board, however, the British guns were so well served by the Americans that the forts were silenced and Tatnall himself piloted the gunboats by a channel he had discovered until they found the protection of the fleet outside.

Tatnall's action was regarded by the authorities at Washington as tantamount to disobedience of orders, as he had been strongly cautioned by his government to preserve neutrality and limit his activity solely to the protection of Americans. He was detached from command and brought home, where he only avoided a court-martial through the great popularity his brave act gave him. The "blood is thicker than water" phrase was coined in English newspapers at that time, and was echoed so vigorously in the American press that the navy department finally approved Tatnall's action.

THE CALF PATH.

One day through the primeval wood,
A calf walked home, as good calves should.
But made a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail, as all calves do.
Since then two hundred years have fled,
And, I infer, the calf is dead:
And still he left behind a trail,
And thereby hangs my moral tale.

The trail was taken up next day
By a lone dog that passed that way:
And then a wise bell-weather sheep
Pursued the trail o'er vall and steep,
And drew the flock behind him, too,
As good bell-weathers always do.
And from that day o'er hill and glade
Through these old woods a path was made.

And many men wound in and out,
And dodged, and turned, and bent about,
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because twas such a crooked path,
But still they followed—do not laugh—
The first migrations of that calf;
And through the winding woodway stalked
Because he wabbled when he walked!

This forest path became a lane,
That bent, and turned, and turned again.
This crooked lane became a road,
Where many a poor horse with his load
Toiled on beneath the burning sun,
And traveled some three miles in one.
And thus a century and a half
They trod the footsteps of that calf.

The years passed on in swiftness fleet,
The road became a village street;
And thus before men were aware,
A city's crowded thoroughfare;
And soon the central street was this
Of a renowned metropolis,
And men, two centuries and a half,
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.

Each day a hundred thousand route
Followed the zigzag calf about;
And o'er the crooked journey went
The traffic of a continent.
A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead.
They followed still his crooked way,
And lost one hundred years a day;

For such reverence is lent
To well established precedent.
A moral lesson this might teach,
Were I ordained and called to preach;
For men are prone to go it blind
Along the calf path of the mind,
And work away from sun to sun
And do what other men have done.

They follow in the beaten track,
And out, and in and forth, and back,
And still their devious course pursue,
To keep the paths that others do
But how the wise old wood gods laugh
Who saw the first primeval calf!
Ah! Many things this tale might teach
But I am not ordained to preach.

VERMONT recently showed by the vote for state officers that the Republicans had a loss of 20 per cent while the Democrats had a gain of 11 per cent. Now comes Maine with a loss of ten per cent for Republicans and a gain of 18 per cent for the Democrats. At this rate of loss for Republicans and gain for Democrats in all the states of the Union, the Democrats are sure to win.

SMOOTH talkers from the various walks of life are canvassing the country. Many of them appear to be especially interested in the election of William Mc Kinley for President. Their standard argument is that no well read, sensible man believes a monarchy possible in this country. They insult the intelligence of a free and independent people at the outset. "Why!" they say: "What is imperialism?" "Who wants it?" "What signs of it can be seen?" A republic is good enough for us. We understand what a republic is, and we know that imperialism means something else. Many of our citizens came from imperialistic countries to live in a republic, and they know better than smooth talkers for Hanna can tell them what both are, and which they prefer, and which to vote for.

REPUBLICANS tell us that we change our issues; that formerly we were for free trade, then free silver, and now we are howling against imperialism. Of course we are. People who have freedom are for freedom all along the line. They are for free trade, free coinage of gold and silver, and for free people. If a small fire should break out on a ship all intelligent people on board would interest themselves about suppressing it. They would be mindful of the danger to the lives of all on board. But should the vessel then strike a rock and break a big hole into her side, and begin to sink, all hands would immediately change their efforts to prevent the greater danger of being drowned.

Protective tariff is class legislation. Gold standard is in the interest of those desiring to control the currency of the country. Imperialism favors those who wish to govern other countries.

THE republican party took control of our government, March 4, 1897. Since that time,

Trusts have flourished.

A riot with Montana miners has occurred.

A democratic governor has been shot.

A republican postmaster and family killed and wounded.

A sultan's harem and slaves have been salaried.

Tariff duties, export and import, have been levied between Porto Rico and the rest of the country.

Race riots have occurred in New Orleans, New York Akron, Ohio, and in Illinois.

One of the biggest strikes in the history of the world has been declared for next Monday.

And a lot of other evils, not excepting the army canteen have existed.

Allies and Allies.

Our administration seems to be inclined to make a big distinction between its allies. Or, is it possible that it has concluded to change tactics concerning all allies. After Aguinaldo and his followers were supplied with arms, ammunition, transportation, and other necessaries by our government, and had cooped the Spaniards up in Manila, so that we could capture them, he is denounced as a traitor to his country and to the United States, and told that he is no ally of ours, and never was! But that having freed the Philippines from Spanish tyranny we are entitled to collect all the taxes Spain ever imposed on them and some of our own, while they are denied a representation in our government; that their country is ours, and we will govern the people there as we see fit.

With our allies in China it is different. With German, French Japanese, and Russian soldiers our boys entered Pekin, the Chinese capital. We were allies as much as the Filipinos and United States troops were allies in conquering the Spanish at Manila, and it would seem that if we were so much in duty bound for the good behavior of the Filipinos at Manila that we might be a little interested in the way some of our allies in China treated the Chinese people. What reason can the administration give for treating the Filipino allies differently than the Russian allies? Is it because the Filipinos are a smaller and gentler race of people? If we are responsible for one ally are we not responsible for all? If we are not responsible for one why should we be for the other?

Democrats Have it Fixed

By wire from Chicago, Sept. 12

Secretary Walsh and National Committeeman Johnson, of the Democratic national committee, have prepared a set of figures based upon their 1st cent of gain in Maine, upon which they claim the following states for Bryan:

Maryland by a majority of 8,000.
Indiana, 80,000.
Michigan, 35,000.
Minnesota, 2,000.
Kentucky, 75,000.
West Virginia, 20,000.
California, 45,000.
Delware, 2,000.
North Dakota, 2,000.
Illinois, 37,000.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sep. 7, 1900.

Mr. McKinley is still in Washington, but instead of devoting his time to Chinese matters—he has reason to think that there will be no withdrawal of allied troops from Pekin for many months and that the settlement of the matter will not be until long after the election,—he is hard at work studying up schemes to help his waning political fortunes and to head off the stampede of republicans to Bryan, which confidential reports have caused him to fear. He will send four members of the cabinet on the stump. Postmaster General Smith has already gone to Maine and from there will go on an extended speaking tour, including W. Va., Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, and any other states where there is a demand for his services. Secretary Wilson will stump in agricultural sections. Attorney General Griggs will not make a long trip, but will speak whenever Hanna desires, and Secretary Root will make a few speeches, mostly in the big cities. Mr McKinley's personal task is to try to answer in his letter of acceptance some of the broadsides fired at the administration by Col. Bryan in his speeches, and he recognizes that it is a difficult one. Secretary Gage is not a speaker, but he was ordered to write the answer to the recent letter of Hon. Carl Schurz, which tore Mr. Gage's recent attempt to create a financial scare so effectively, and as soon as he finished the task he went away for a month's vacation. The contents of Mr. Gages last letter may be summed up as "what I said first, I say last".

Senator Blackburn spent several days in Washington this week. He has no doubts of the result in Kentucky. He said of democratic prospects: "Mr. Bryan will carry the state by a large majority. Mr. Beckham will also be elected. There is already a movement on foot to flood Kentucky in November with U. S. deputy marshals. It has been talked over by the republicans and the plans will be carried out. We have but one U. S district in Kentucky, and Judge Evans presides over the court. He and I have long been warm personal friends. We served together in the State legislature, and there has never been anything to mar the pleasant social relations between us. But in politics Judge Evans is a bitter and narrow partisan. The law allowing deputy marshals at the polls was repealed eight years ago, but last year Judge Evans claimed authority for appointing them, and he will do so again this year."

It is stated that the Cabinet considered the horrible stories of looting and murder in China by the Russian and French sections of the allied army, sent by the Associated Press, and published all over the U. S this week, and decided to do nothing, because the matter did not concern the U. S. If that decision was actually made, Mr. McKinley and his advisers have made another serious mistake. This government has made itself an equal partner with the other powers which have troops in China and the improper acts of the troops of any one of these powers does very seriously concern the U. S., as Mr. McKinley will learn when the people are heard from. The proper thing for this government to do is to ascertain officially whether those stories of horrible barbarities, which would disgrace an army of savages, are true, and if they are, to make a strong protest to the governments of Russia and France, accompanied by a demand that steps be taken to prevent their repetition while this government is a member of the alliance. If such things are countenanced, the claim of civilization and Christianity now made by the allied powers will necessarily become ridiculous.

Chairman Richardson, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, will, during the remainder of the campaign divide his time between Congressional headquarters, in Washington, and the New York branch of the National Committee headquarters.

The administration this week decided that Minister Conger should remain in China and represent the interests of this county until some sort of a settlement is reached. This decision was largely brought about by the published interview with special envoy W. W. Rockhill giving views antagonistic to those held by the administration. Rockhill has denied the authenticity of the interview, but it is not believed that the denial will save him from a speedy recall. Although stated in the most positive terms at the State Department that nothing is officially known of the replies of the powers to Russia's proposal for the evacuation of Pekin, there is plenty of evidence in sight that the administration knows the nature of those answers, whether it knows officially or unofficially; that it is, in fact, acting upon that knowledge. Long messages were received this week from Minister Conger and Gen. Chaffee. The latter was made public but not the former.

What's in a Name?

The lady reporter has been detailed to procure the names of prominent persons in attendance at a performance of grand opera.

"I beg your pardon, madam," she said, approaching one of the occupants of a private box, "but will you oblige me by giving me your name?"

"Mrs. Archibald Jo Neeze," replied the lady.

"Pardon me," replied the reporter; "I did not quite catch the last name."

"Jo Neeze."

"May I ask you to spell it?"

"Certainly. Jones, Jo Neeze," haughtily answered the occupant of the box, and the reporter retired to the foyer to fan herself.—New York World.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

TOGETHER.

What of the stormy weather
Where wild waves lash the shore,
And you and I together,
Sweetheart, forevermore?
"Forevermore!" No tether
Of any time or tide:
Forevermore together
O'er the green world and wide!

To tread the dim ways lowly
Where thorns or violets grow;
To face God's starlight holy
On Alpine heights of snow!
In starred or stormy weather—
To shiver or adore,
Together—still together,
Sweetheart, forevermore!

Life like a dream is lying—
Into the black void drawn;
The lights—the lights are dying
Even as the brave lights dawn.
While the white teardrops glisten
And dim the morning light,
We listen—still we listen
For the calling of the Night.

But the Night shall fall in splendor
Over life's storm-swept shore,
And the keen thorns shall be tender,
With you, forevermore!
And what the stress of weather—
Dark angels hovering o'er—
So that we are together,
Sweetheart, forevermore?

THE DOGWOOD'S SECRET

By Gabrielle E. Jackson.

"CAN you come with us?"

"Come where?"

"Out to the woods. We are going to gather wild flowers for the flower table at the fair to-night."

"Wait a second and I'll ask mamma. Yes, it's all right; I may go;" and a moment later Madge Spaulding had whisked on her straw sailor hat and was bounding down the piazza steps to join the girls waiting for her. They were a jolly, happy lot, a dozen or more from the big boarding school on the hill, an ideal one, by the way, where much liberty and few rules left the girls free to enjoy themselves according to their fancies, the wise principal realizing that much more was to be expected from girls who were guided by love and taught to understand the limitations of the word "gentlewoman" than from those who lived in constant apprehension of the bugbear word "don't." Madge was a day pupil at the school and had many friends among the boarders, by whom she was always included in any plans for a good time.

"Where are you going to get the flowers?"

"Up in the Ogden woods. There are loads there, and the dogwood is perfectly beautiful now," said Paula Barnett.

The woods were soon reached and the girls scattered to the various parts offering the greatest attractions. Madge and Paula strolled away together. It was an ideal afternoon in the latter part of May, and the woods were as they can only be in late springtime. Birds were calling to each other in the maddest, merriest way and waking the echoes with their jubilant songs. Sunbeams played at hide and seek with the children, danced upon the bright green leaves and painted the flowers with more brilliant hues.

"Let's go down this path," said Madge. "I see loads of dogwood blossoms in that little dell."

"All right; come on, and I'll make you a beautiful wreath."

The girls were seen in the little dell, a fairylike spot in the midst of the woodland, where the grass seemed greener, the sun brighter and the dogwood blossoms more snowy white than elsewhere. A hedge of the trees grew about the edge of the open space, which seemed to have been planned by Dame Nature for fairy revels.

"Now, sit right down on the soft, grassy bank and I'll dress you up," said Paula, and she had soon woven a pretty wreath of blossoms about Madge's sunny head.

"I see some beauties over there. Don't stir while I get them."

Madge snuggled down in her soft nest and Paula wandered further and further away. Madge's eyes followed her in a dreamy sort of way, for how could one help being dreamy when the very sunshine was brimful of dreams?

Presently, as she sat there in the absolute silence of the woodland, broken only by the distant call of a hermit thrush or hum of an insect, she became conscious of another sound, a very singular one, indeed. Sitting straight up, she said, aloud: "Can Spottie have followed us?" Spottie was her fox terrier.

"Yap, yap! Yap, yap!"

Madge looked all about her, but saw no sign of a dog.

"How funny. I wonder where they can be, for I surely hear dogs barking, although they must be a long way off."

"No; we are not, either. We are right here, close beside you."

Madge held her breath, and listened intently.

"Well, I'd like to know what you are and where you are, any way," she cried, in a flutter of excitement.

"I supposed everybody knew what we were, or rather, what we are. What we were I'm about to tell you, if you care to listen. Didn't you ever hear why we are called dogwood?"

"Hear about you? Of course not. Do you mean to say you are doing all this queer, yapping talking? I can't decide whether it sounds like puppies yapping or the leaves rustling."

"Oh, think it is both, if you want to. That doesn't matter; only pay attention to what I am going to tell you and try to understand that you are a very lucky girl to be told at all." Then the blossoms on her head bent down lower and lower till they were close to her ears, and tiny voices continued:

"Now, sit still, and pray don't interrupt oftener than once in five minutes. Paula won't bother us, for she has gone off hunting for finer blossoms than we are, but she won't find them; we are as fine as any, only she can't see it, for we shook some of our pollen in her eyes and that has magical powers. She will keep trotting about here, there and yonder and never stop a second until the power of the pollen is spent. You've heard of the dog trot, haven't you? Well, she is on one."

"I wish you'd hurry and get on with your story," cried Madge.

"Patience, my dear. You are lucky to hear it at all. When you learn that you are the only person among the millions on this earth who is privileged to do so, you may congratulate yourself. You've heard of the dog star, of course. Everybody has. Sirius, the grown-ups call it, although I could never understand why, for there is nothing very serious about it. If they could go there they would change their minds pretty quick. Such romps! Such fun! Nothing like it is ever known down here. Once a year the dog star sends its rays straight to this earth, just to see if something cannot be done to stir things up a bit. The people say then that 'dog days' have come and the dogs go nearly wild with delight, for they understand the meaning of the messages sent by the dog star. The people do not, and very often the poor dogs have to suffer."

"How can the dogs understand?" questioned Madge.

"Dogs understand a vast deal more than they are given credit for, let me tell you. The dog star is the dog's kingdom. Such a blissful place! Such liberty! Such fun! A leading string is unknown, for there are no two-legged creatures to hold the other end of it. And a muzzle! If such a thing were mentioned no one would know what was meant. Would we were back there and in our former shapes!

"Long, long ago, a certain king of Sirius gave a magnificent fete and all the kingdom was commanded to be present. It was a gathering! Days and weeks of feasting in right royal style. Joints, birds—words fail me; I cannot describe it, but everything a dog could want a dog could have. If fat sides and sleek coats were an evidence of high living, there was surely no want of it. And yet, even in the midst of all that lavish supply of good things, there were those who were ungrateful and discontented. Not content with being disagreeable themselves, they must set about to make trouble elsewhere, and ere long we had a pretty state of affairs. A general uprising among the malcontents, which threatened the kingdom and nearly cost our noble king's life."

"What was the king?" asked Madge.

"A noble St. Bernard, greater and grander than you ever dreamed of, and his only thought was for the good of his fellow-creatures. But the plot was discovered in time and the punishment of the evildoers was swift and sure.

"It was midnight, as you count time here, and all Sirius was illuminated. Everybody was joyous and happy when the miserable curs who made all the trouble were brought into the king's presence. How sad and grieved he seemed when he had heard all! His splendid eyes were so eloquent in their pity.

"But would you believe it?—even when all had been exposed he would not punish them as they deserved, but this is what he did. You have no doubt heard of a shower of stars. Perhaps you have seen them. Had you been looking into the sky upon the night I speak of you would have seen a shower I shall never forget it.

"I cannot tell you how often it was done, for that is a Sirius secret, but those conspirators were launched off into space, and as they fell downward, downward, ever falling, falling, straight toward this earth, they became tiny stars, and lest they should vanish forever and never be heard of more, King St. Bernard let them fall gently upon the trees, where they became the pearly white stars you call dogwood blossoms."

"But were there so many that had behaved badly?" asked Madge, in surprise.

"Oh, no. Only a few hundreds, but you must remember that it all happened ages ago, and once transformed we could never resume our former shapes, but must go on year after year living and blooming as dogwood blossoms."

"Is it true that you sometimes poison people?"

"Only those who are unkind to dogs. For just one hour during an afternoon in May we may choose a mortal child and tell her the dogwood's secret, and I have chosen you. Would you like me to tell you how we live in the dog star?"

"Oh, ever so much. Please do."

"Well, you must know," began the blossom voices, but just then Paula came hurrying back and the voices instantly ceased.

"Why, how funny you look!" cried Paula. "Have you been dreaming?" You have such a funny stare in your eyes!" Madge jumped up, saying, in a queer voice:

"Maybe I have, but it was a lovely dream, and I wish I could have another. No, I haven't been asleep."—N. Y. Herald.

Ten car loads of American tableware, 150,000 pieces in all, were recently shipped to Sydney, New South Wales. This is the first shipment of the sort that ever went from this country to the antipodes.

The New Hampshire Federation of Woman's Clubs has adopted the following apt motto: "In principles like our granite, in aspirations like our mountains, in sympathy swift and far-reaching like our rivers."

The population of the United States in 1890 was 62,622,250 and the estimate of the treasury department on July 1 last was 77,816,000. The vote cast for president in 1888 was 11,388,038; in 1892, 12,110,636; and in 1896, 13,923,643.

According to a recent order of the marquis of Londonderry, postmaster general of England, post office clerks must hereafter use "Esq." in addressing all male correspondents unless they "are evidently laborers, personal servants or tradesmen."

The Boston Elevated Railway company distributed about 100,000 free tickets, through churches and charitable associations, so that mothers and children and sick and aged persons who cannot pay may be carried to the woods or the seashore.

The secret service bureau has made a report for the fiscal year. It has secured the arrest of 554 persons and has convicted 218. Missouri heads the list with 78 cases. The counterfeit money captured by the department amounted to $55,000, while 209 plates and 310 molds were seized.

The Philadelphia Times states that Porto Rican pesos and centavos are daily finding their way into the United States mints in large numbers, in exchange for United States money. So far a total of $4,862,798.30 of the Porto Rican coins have been received at the Philadelphia mint.

Here are some of the titles which officially belong to Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey: The beloved sultan of sultans, emperor of emperors, the shadow of God upon earth, brother of the sun, dispenser of crowns to those who sit upon thrones, sovereign of Constantinople and the great city of Brousa, as well as of Damascus, which is the scent of paradise; king of kings, whose army is the asylum of victory, at the foot of whose throne is justice and the refuge of the world.

The sinking of the torpedo boat destroyer Framee by the big battleship Brennus, recalls the terrible mistake which ended in the destruction of one of England's finest battleships. During the meneuvers of the English squadron in 1893 a misunderstanding ended in the collision of the battleships Camperdown and Victoria, the latter going to the bottom. The loss of life in that terrible calamity was 356 officers and men. Practice work in naval warfare seems to be almost as expensive as the real thing.

Some of those who are watching the Belgian hare craze which is sweeping this country at present fear that when it subsides the land will be afflicted with a pest which will threaten the agriculture. T. S. Palmer, acting chief of the biological survey, has sent out warning letters in which he suggests that steps be taken to keep under observation the hares that have been liberated and that all possible measures be adopted to discourage the liberation of the animals.

It is suggested that the expression "Dear Sir" at the beginning of business letters and "Yours truly" or "Yours sincerely" before the signature to such communication be dropped. The reformers believe that the name of the man or firm addressed is all that is necessary and that the writer's signature at the bottom will suffice. It is said that the time has come to quit calling men "dear" or "respected" when there is no proof to that effect and to cease calling yourself some business man's "obedient servant."

Sing Sing (N. Y.) penitentiary, the largest penal institution in the country, has declared against the old-time "lock step" walk and it has been abolished. The lock step requires that each man march almost in the footsteps of the man in front, with the left hand on his shoulder. The prisoners are much pleased over the innovation, because in no other way than the prison lock step is their degradation brought home to them. The Sing Sing convicts are now marched in companies in double file. Other states may emulate the example.

An evangelistic campaign has been planned in England for next February. Regrets are expressed in this country that our religious bodies have not taken steps to organize a similar campaign with which to open the new century. An effort is being made now to ascertain if such a campaign cannot still be arranged for, if not in January, then for as early a date in 1901 as may be. The English campaign will begin in February of the new year, and will last eight days and nights. It will include Gospel meetings to be held in every town.

What Has Happened Throughout the Civilized World.

A WEEK'S NEWS CONDENSED

A Complete Review of the Happenings of the Past Seven Days in This and All Foreign Lands.

GIVEN IN THE PRESS DISPATCHES

FROM WASHINGTON.

The census returns from 54 cities show a population of 14,044,711, an increase of 3,494,660 in ten years.

The president has received ex-President Cleveland's declination of his appointment as a member of the international board of arbitration under The Hague treaty. Ex-President Harrison has accepted the appointment.

It is announced by the census bureau that the population of Portland, Ore., is 90,420, as against 46,385 in 1890. This is an increase of 44,041, or 94.95 per cent.

Sunday night President McKinley gave out his letter of acceptance, pledging support to the Philadelphia platform and meeting the issues put forward by democrats. The financial question is given a prominent place and the isthmian canal is advocated. The letter treats of the Philippine question at length, reviewing the events leading up to the present situation. He asserts that his policy will be "to establish in the islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants and prepare them for self-government." Conditions in Cuba and Porto Rico, the trusts, civil service reform and his Chinese policy are among other topics discussed.

THE EAST.

The women singers in Roman Catholic churches are alarmed because of the decree which forbids their appearance in choirs.

At West Point the freshman class, 176 in number, is the largest in the history of the military academy.

At the leading clearing houses in the United States the exchanges during the week ended on the 7th aggregated $1,145,371,988, against $1,128,946,198 the previous week. The decrease compared with the corresponding week of 1899 was 16.4.

In the United States there were 145 business failures in the seven days ended on the 7th, against 175 the week previous and 132 the corresponding period of 1899.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., John Reider, aged 69, killed his wife, aged 49, and himself. Jealousy was the cause.

The Fifth Avenue Savings and Loan association at McKeesport, Pa., was placed in the hands of a receiver, with liabilities of $500,000.

At the races at Hartford, Conn., The Abbott lowered the trotting record to wagon to 2:05½.

Albert D. Shaw, former commander in chief of the G. A. R., was nominated for congress by the republicans of the Twenty-fourth New York district.

The death of Thomas Kingsford, head of the Kingsford Starch company's works at Oswego, N. Y., occurred at the age of 73 years.

The big excursion steamer John Endicott struck a sunken rock off Minot's light, near Cohassett, Mass., Sunday night and founderd. All on board were saved.

WEST AND SOUTH.

STORM'S AWFUL WORK

Hurricane and Flood Causes Terrible Disaster in Texas.

Galveston Struck Hardest—Deaths Will Number Not Less Than 1,500—Property Worth Millions Destroyed.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11.—From the latest reports which are considered reliable the disaster at Galveston and along the cost has not been exaggerated. The waters of the gulf and bay met, covering the island to a depth of six to twelve feet. During this sudden flood a most terrible storm was raging, the wind blowing about 80 miles per hour. Many of the dead have been uncovered; others are still under the debris; others carried out to sea. It is not possible to give, at this time, a reliable report as to the number of deaths. From estimates made by reliable persons who have just come from Galveston, it is believed that no less than 1,500, and possibly as many as 5,000, people were destroyed. Of course, the wounded and broken are numerous. The damage to property is most shocking.

Some of the best public buildings and private establishments were wrecked. Thousands of homes were swept entirely away. It is quite safe to set this down as one of the greatest disasters that has ever visited the United States. The loss of property is irreparable; the loss of life is appalling.

A Prompt Response.

Gov. Sayers appealed to President McKinley for aid. This appeal was met with by a prompt response from the president, who stated that 10,000 tents and 50,000 rations have been ordered to Galveston. Gov. Sayers also addressed an appeal to each municipality in the state, asking for prompt assistance in caring for the sufferers.

Telegrams of inquiry and sympathy have been pouring in from every state in the union, and in almost every instance substantial relief has been offered.

The stricken city is in imminent danger of a water famine, and strenuous efforts are making here to supply the sufferers.

A Resume.

Some figures showing the appalling nature of the disaster are given below:

Total property loss	$40,000,000 to $50,000,000
Dead at Galveston (estimated)	1,000 to 5,000

Following is the estimated number of dead at other places:

Dickerson	9
Texas City Junction	5
Richmond	3
Booth	1
Beasley	4
Letitia	1
East Bernard	3
Houston	1
Virginia Point	7
Morgan's Point	3
Brazoria	6
Fulshear	1
Rosenberg	1
Angleton	2
Oyster Creek	9
Sabine Pass	2
Texas City	3
Brookshire	4
Seabrooke	4
La Porte	2
Alvin	6
Southwest Pass	6
G., C. & S. F. R. R. wreck	1

In the following places no deaths are reported, to have occurred, but the property loss is heavy: Heckley, Waller, Hearne, Cypress, Hempstead, La Marque, Genoa, Clear Creek, Webster, Eagle Lake.

Soldiers Perish.

A special to the News from San Antonio, Tex., says: At military headquarters, department of Texas, the information is that of 120 men stationed at Fort San Jacinto, Galveston, only 15 escaped. Further information is that the captain in command is among the victims. Lieut. Col. C. S. Roberts, adjutant general department of Texas, is in Galveston on a tour of inspection. It is not known if he is among the small number at the fort who have escaped.

Louisiana's Loss.

New Orleans, Sept. 11.—The total damage in Louisiana by the late storm is estimated to be about $620,000. The greatest damage was done in southwest Louisiana, and the sufferers were in nearly all cases farmers. It is thought the loss in the southwestern tiers of parishes will be $400,000, principally due to destruction of rice and vegetables. Plaquemine parish seems to have been the heaviest sufferer, the loss being $90,000. In the southern counties, near the gulf line, no cotton is raised. Louisiana cotton is grown north of Red river, and is well in the interior. The loss to the steamboat owners was estimated at $50,000; the railroad losses were $25,000, and the loss to the sugar planters was $30,000. The losses of the railroads in Texas was about $300,000—60 miles of tracks.

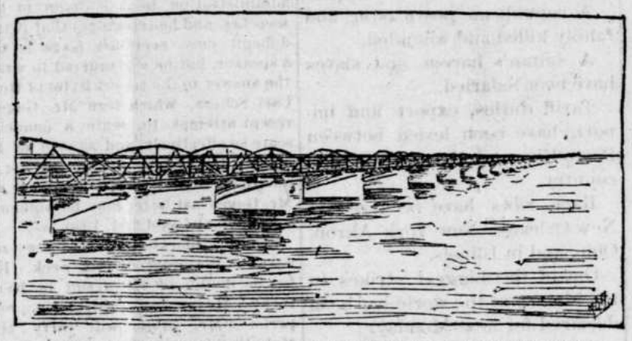
Crops Ruined.

A Waco (Tex.) dispatch says: The big cotton plantations in the Brazos valley look as if armies had fought battles in them, the plants being laid flat on the ground. The wind blew 60 to 70 miles an hour for 14 hours before subsiding. The late peaches, which were plentiful and had been sold in advance, were swept clean from the trees.

Regret the Prayer Chain.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—The general officers of the National W. C. T. U. met at their headquarters at Rest cottage, Evanston. Among other matters discussed was the prayer chain inaugurated by the members of the Indiana W. C. T. U. for the defeat of President McKinley at the coming election. They were unanimous in regretting this action and will not cooperate with the plan.

GREAT BRIDGE WRECKED BY STORM.



LONGEST BRIDGE IN THE WORLD, SPANNING GALVESTON BAY.

WILL SOON WITHDRAW.

Developments Indicate United States Will Soon Order Troops from China.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The developments thus far in the Chinese situation still point to a speedy withdrawal of the United States troops from China. Gen. Chaffee has added the weight of his opinion to that already entertained by many officials here. It probably is significant that the general's statement on this point was given publicity by the administration. No confirmation is at hand here of the report that Great Britain and Germany have joined in an agreement to remain together in Peking regardless of the attitude of the other powers. Should this be true, the fact doubtless would hasten the rearward movement of the American troops, for there is a firm determination to avoid becoming involved in any clash between the powers, such as might reasonably be expected to follow the execution of this reported British-German programme.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The following dispatch has been received at the war department:

"Taku (no date).—Adjutant General, Washington.—Two, afternoon 4th. Evidence accumulates that diplomatic relations will not be resumed here for a long time. Russian legation leave very soon for Tientsin. Appears to me certain Chinese government will not return here whilst foreign army remains, and if this true our legation can transact no business. My opinion Peking to be merely camp foreign army pending settlement by powers at other points.

(Signed) "CHAFFEE."

London, Sept. 11.—A special dispatch from Berlin says that Great Britain and Germany have agreed not to evacuate Peking until full satisfaction for the recent outrages has been obtained.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The Chinese minister has received an imperial edict conferring on Li Hung Chang extraordinary powers for the complete settlement of the Chinese trouble. It gives him authority to make any terms according to his own discretion without referring them to the emperor. This is an unusual authority and it is claimed at the Chinese legation gives Li Hung Chang credentials adequate to meet all the objections heretofore raised as to his power to negotiate for peace.

CLEARS WAY FOR BULLER.

Ian Hamilton Succeeds in Turning the Right Flank of the Boers.

London, Sept. 10.—The following dispatch has been received at the war office from Lord Roberts:

"Belfast (Friday), Sept. 7.—Ian Hamilton succeeded in turning the Boers' right flank, clearing the way for Buller's advance.

"Dundonald and Brocklehurst occupied Lydenburg Thursday.

"The Boers are split up and going northward and eastward. Most of the guns and stores have been sent to Krugerspost.

"Hart, who is operating southwest of Krugersdorp, reports that among the dead Boers left on the field it is believed that the body of Theron has been found."

Krugerspost is a small town about 20 miles north by east of Lydenburg.

London, Sept. 10.—President Kruger's latest capital at Lydenburg has been captured and the Boer forces have split up and are falling back to the northward and eastward of that town into the mountains.

Cape Town, Sept. 10.—Sir Redvers Buller continues his advance. He crossed the Mauch Berg, ten miles east of Lydenburg, and came into action with the Boers. The occupation of Lydenburg, which took place last Thursday, is regarded as marking one of the last stages of the war. The Boers now talk of trekking into German territory.

THE ELECTION IN MAINE.

Returns Show a Republican Plurality in the State of About 33,000.

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—The republicans elected their state ticket Monday by a plurality over the democratic candidates of over 33,000. The vote was almost as large as four years ago. The returns show a republican loss of 11 per cent., and a democratic gain of 18 per cent. On this basis it is estimated that the republican majority this year will be about 32,978.

Congressman Amos L. Allen, Charles E. Littlefield, Edwin C. Burleigh and Charles Boutelle are reelected by majorities ranging from 6,000 to 10,000. In all but one of the 16 counties the republicans elected their county tickets. The legislature is about the same as at present.

Terrible Tragedy.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 11.—At West Station, five miles north of here, George W. Moore, a prominent merchant, who had been suffering with periods of insanity for some time, administered strychnine to his wife and two little children, telling them it was quinine, to keep off chills. Within a few minutes all three were dead. Moore then took a pistol and, firing two bullets through his own heart, fell to the floor across the dead body of one of his little children.

Death of Aged Minister.

Williams, Cal., Sept. 8.—Rev. Lorenzo Waugh, the oldest Methodist minister in the world, died suddenly in the railroad depot here just after alighting from a train. He celebrated his ninety-second birthday on August 28.

Delano, Minn.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 14, 1900.

Nebraska and the two Dakotas, in the year 1899 produced:

	Bushels.	Farm value.

Wheat	20,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	224,000,000	51,000,000

The total value of the crops named of all these states for last year was only $221,000,000, less than we are paying annually for our army and naval establishments under the imperial regime.

The entire amount expended for education in the United States for the year 1898, which is the last year for which I have authentic figures was $189,000,000. Our average consumption of wheat is less than five bushels per capita. Assuming our population to be 75,000,000, our consumption of wheat would be 375,000,000 bushels. At the average farm price, which does not exceed 60 cents, the cost of the nation's bread is $225,000,000, the same sum that we pay for our army and navy. When the people find that they are paying more for the instrumentalities of war than they are for education and as much as for bread, will they not conclude that it is time to weigh carefully the merits of imperialism, before taking the final step and fastening it upon our country?

The same interests that prompted the formation of trusts in industry, that advocate the establishment of a colonial system and the maintenance of a large military establishment, have induced the Republican party to surrender to them the country's finances. Garfield said that he who controlled a country's volume of money controlled its trade and industry. By the legislation of the last congress, which, finally turned over the governmental function of issuing paper money to the national banks, those favored institutions have obtained complete control of our finances and our business. It is in their power to suffer good times or to produce a panic. They can pursue either course as suits their caprice or interest. No other country on earth has committed such power to private hands. We believe that the issuance of money is a governmental function and should not be delegated to private corporations. We believe that the coinage of both silver and gold as standard money and as a basis for credit would insure greater stability in prices and more equal justice between borrower and lender and all interests; but the people by their representatives have adopted the gold standard and the complexion of the senate is such that however this election may turn, there is that this can be disturbed during the next administration. Hence it is of no profit to discuss that question at this time. I repeat, as I said two years ago, the gold standard is on trial. If by reason of an increase in the output of gold, or for other cause, that metal alone shall prove sufficient in quantity adequately to perform the functions of standard money, and as the basis of credit, then we are all satisfied. If it fails in that regard, our people will not be the only nation to discover it, and the question of standard will then be adjusted in due season, as other economic questions have been adjusted from time to time in the past. It is, after all, only an ecomomic question, and as such, whether settled rightly or wrongly, cannot materially affect our institutions. Economic questions in the nature of things are only relatively right or wrong. They are not like the questions that go to the very core of our institutions and to the form of our government. This is illustrated by the tariff question. During the history of our country we have had free trade, and we have had extreme protection. Now, one or the other of those policies, in the nature of things, must be right or wrong. They cannot both be right in the same country under substantially the same conditions and within a short period of time; but the country has continued to increase in wealth and the people have prospered under each regime so that the utmost that can be said of an economic question is that it is only, as I have said, relatively right or relatively wrong. A mistake of that character can be righted. If we convert our republican institutions into an imperial form of government, the history of the world holds up no promise but that of national destruction.

I do not contend that the election of Mr. McKinley this fall would result in the establishment of an empire during his administration. But I do believe, and I do insist that the victory of Hannaism which his election would imply and lead to, would irrevocably fasten upon the country policies which would eventually, notwithstanding that our institutions for a long time continued republican in form, lead to empire as certainly as the succession of day and night.

These are the facts; this is the situation. Is it difficult, then, to determine what the issues are?

STATE ISSUES.

Important as these questions are, there are other questions involved in this campaign peculiar to our people as Minnesotans, that deserve our attention and the careful consideration of the people quite as do the national questions.

First and foremost among these is the question of taxation. What I assumed the discharge of the duties of my office, I found, as I had contended the facts to be in the preceding campaign, that the bulk of the taxes collected by the state and by the municipalities under it were levied and collectetd from the people's homes, rather than upon income bearing wealth and the specitl advantages and franchises enjoyed by the few. In my message to the legislature I said upon this subject:

"The truth of the matter is that our state is today exacting taxes on the little stock, tools, implements—the means of subsistence of numbers of our citizens who are struggling to support themselves and their families, while thousands who possess great wealth escape. Besides the inherent injustice of this, the state can ill afford to have those already battling for an independent existence loaded with additional burden, which will sooner or later transfer many of them into the dependent classes. That this condition of affairs exists, the most cursory investigation of the subject will show. It is no more just or candid to charge this to the depravity of the wealthier members of the community than it is to cry demagogy whenever the subject is brought up. It is in my judgment a condition resulting from the new forms that wealth has assumed under the remarkable progress and the economic changes which have taken place in this century. It is not a subject for declamation or invective, but for patriotic, speedy solution, now and here, and as rapidly as the forms of our institutions permit."

To remedy in part this condition of affairs I made three specific recommendations to the legislature. One was the imposition of a license fee upon foreign corporations doing business in this state, the same as is imposed upon the formation of corporations under our statute. Second, that the legislature enact legislation providing corporations doing business in this state, the same as the law authorizes the taxation of domestic corporations. Third, that the gross earnings tax upon the railroad property in this state be increased to a figure somewhat commensurate with the rate of taxation imposed upon other property in the state.

LEGISLATURE ACTED UPON ONE.

Of these recommendations the legislature saw fit to act upon one only, and that the least important. By the passage of the law known as the Somerville bill, a license fee was imposed upon foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business in this state. The law is rather crude in its provisions, and its enforcement having been committed to the office of secretary of state, the receipts under it have not been as large as would have been the case had it been more carefully drawn and more diligently enforced. Notwithstanding, it has brought upwards of $50,000 into the state treasury. By the omission to adopt my second recommendation, namely, the passage of a law to provide for the annual taxation of the business of foreign corporations in this state, the legislature prevented the people of the state from imposing any taxes upon the immense amount of foreign capital employed in profitable trade and business in this state, except such little office furniture and fixtures, or property of that character, as may be found at their places of business. As a citizen of the state, I feel humiliated to think that the legislature, elected by the people, sworn to support the constitution of our state, which imposes equal burdens upon all, and permits special privileges to none, should refuse to pass a law enabling us to tax the Standard Oil trust, which transacts millions of dollars' worth of business in the state annually, or the Federal Steel company, which owns nearly all the valuable mining properties in the northern part of the state, to say nothing about the lucrative business of the various loaning companies, machine companies, and other corporations that enjoy the advantage of our trade, protection of our laws, and the fruits of our industry. But such is the fact, and so it will continue until the people pass judgment upon such action in a manner that cannot be misunderstood.

GROSS EARNINGS TAX.

The inadequacy of the present gross earnings tax I called to the attention of the legislature. Our state auditor, Mr. Dunn, did the same in his annual report, but with a perversity that is inexplicable on principles that ordinarily guide human conduct, the senate absolutely refused to afford the taxpayers any relief from this unjust discrimination in favor of railroad property.

In Iowa railroad property is taxed 3 7-10 per cent on gross earnings; in New York 7 4-10 per cent; in Illinois 5 4-10 per cent; in Massachusetts 8 5-10 per cent; in Missouri 3 8-10 per cent; in Kansas 12 per cent; in Connecticut 5 per cent; and in Minnesota only 2.8 per cent. Were railroads in Minnesota taxed as in Iowa and Wisconsin they would pay one-fourth more taxes than they do now. Were they taxed as high as in Illinois they would pay double their present tax. Were they taxed as high in proportion to earnings as in New York, our receipts from that source would be increased over 150 per cent. Were they taxed in Minnesota as in Massachusetts the revenue from the railways in this state would increase over 200 per cent. The gross earnings of the railways in the state of Massachusetts for the year under discussion were $41,000,000, and were taxed by the state $3,527,820. In Minnesota they were taxed only $1,127,950. In Minnesota and Missouri, both agricultural states, the earnings were about the same, but the Missouri roads paid $336,000 more into the state treasury of that state. And yet, with all these facts before the Republican legislature of two years ago, with an overwhelming majority, with absolute power to pass or defeat any bill, the senate persistently fought and deliberately killed a bill to raise the gross earnings tax on the railroad property in this state to 4 per cent. By this action the taxpayers of this state and the state have been deprived of nearly $2,000,000, even though the next legislature, after the election of a new senate should act as promptly upon the question as the forms of law permit. Ordinary arguments of this question I fear are of no avail with the senators now elected. The only argument that can convince them is the citizens' argument at the polls. But these facts do not measure the convictions of duty of the present Republican state senate to the people of the state and to the state. I had specially called attention to the fact that one of the railroads in this state, operating under an old territorial charter, was not paying even the 3 per cent rate on gross earnings. It under provisions of its charter. The senate, with a quickened sense of public duty, which it had not experienced during the discussion of the general gross earnings bill, passed a bill through the senate imposing a 3 per cent tax on that company, but added a clause repealing the existing law for the taxation of railroad lands. The latter feature of the bill was discovered in the house, and its consequent speedy burial cut short its mission of senatorial usefulness. Had the legislature adopted the legislation which I recommended, the increased revenue to the state from those sources, together with careful and frugal administration, would have enabled us to start on the new century without being compelled to ask the taxpayers of the state for one cent for defraying the ordinary expenses of the state government or maintaining our state institutions; and I here and now pledge the people of the state of Minnesota that if they elect a house of representatives that will carry out these reforms and induce the present Republican senate to listen to the arguments of reason, justice, patriotism and duty, that, after the laws thus enacted in accordance with my recommendations have gone into effect, the taxpayers of this state will never again, under ordinary circumstances, be called upon to pay one cent of taxes for the support of the state government, or for the maintenance of state institutions.

CARE OF PUBLIC LANDS.

Another subject only second to that of taxation in importance is the care and administration of our public lands. Shortly after our admission to the Union the general government, with a munificence that should never be forgotten, granted to the state of Minnesota all the swamp and over-flowed lands within our boundaries. This grant will probably aggregate not far from 5,500,000 acres when the survey and the segregation of the lands are completed. Had this bountiful donation been husbanded even with reasonable care it would have proven ample in time, not only to drain the large bodies of wet and untillable land in the northern part of our state, but it would have contributed much to the maintenance of our state institutions and our public schools. But former legislatures and executives, with a prodigality little less than scandalous, have succeeded in frittering away more than 3,700,000 acres of that magnificent donation by grants to railway companies for other schemes.

Upon entering into office I found litigation in progresss between the state and the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad Company to test the validity of the grant to that company embracing some 600,000 acres of land. The railroad had not been built upon the line, or between the points designated by the legislature, nor had it been completed within the time fixed by the granting act for its completion. In fact, it was clear, and so conceded on all hands, that had the state authorities taken advantage of this failure of the company to earn the grant according to its terms in time, the state would not have lost the land; but instead of that it appeared upon the trial in the circuit court of the United States, as was the fact, that, notwithstanding the failure on the part of the company to build on the line of route designated or within the time stated, the governor and the state authorities, in whom the power was vested by the granting act to pass on the performance of these conditions, waived all these conditions and accepted the road as a compliance with the law and the terms of the granting act. Under this state of facts the circuit court decided, and I think rightly, under the rule that prevails in the federal court, that the state had waived its right to insist upon a compliance with the terms of the contract, and the grant was held valid. This company, which has the right to select its grant in the counties of St. Louis, Cook and Lake, now insists that the state swamp lands in those counties shall be held open by the state indefinitely to enable the company to select its quota at its pleasure and conveyance. A most careful consideration of the questions involved, by the state auditor and myself, has led us to believe that under the law we have the power this grant now, and we propose to do so as speedily as the work involved enables us to do it with accuracy and care. In this matter and in all other matters in which the discharge of my duties has required the co-operation of the state auditor it is only fair to that officer that I should say at this time that he has co-operated with me with an efficiency and in a spirit of zeal for the public good that deserves this acknowledgment at my hands.

About one year ago application was made to me to execute a patent conveying some swamp lands in Pipestone county to the Southern Minnesota company. On investigating the claim of title to swamp lands by that company, I found that it never had a swamp land grant; that the grant under which it claimed was on account of a branch of a main line which was never constructed; that notwithstanding this fact my predecessors in office had, from time to time, certified to that company without any excuse for such action upwards of 36,000 acres of valuable land in the southern part of the state. Unfortunately this land was certified so long ago that the statute of limitation has run on most of the conveyances. Besides, I regret to say that the attorney general, after some recent reflection, has concluded not to concur in the view that I have expressed, as to the sham character of this claim. But one thing is certain, that company shall not have another acre of the state's lands so long as I am in office unless awarded by the courts, and I hope to be able to have matters settled so that none can be claimed after I am out.

In the case of the swamp land grant to the Little Falls & Dakota Railroad company, now owned by the Northern Pacific, former governors conveyed to that company over 13,000 acres of land in excess of what it had earned, and which it was not entitled to.

Suit has been instituted for the recovery of this land to the state. I feel confident of a successful outcome. With this suit settled, and within the next two years, I believe it possible to adjust and finally dispose of every state land grant claim in the state. Several have already been finally adjusted and settled. I have devoted much time and study to the question, as I believe it absolutely essential to the interests of the state that these matters should be finally and speedily adjusted, so that the state can husband and care for what little is left of its once magnificent donation.

ADMINISTRATION OF GRAIN SERVICE.

To other important branches of state administration I can only give a passing notice. Since Jan. 1 a majority of the members of the railroad and warehouse commission have been in full sympathy with my aims in the administration of the important affairs committed to the management of that board. I believe that I am justified in saying that the grain service, which was reorganized at the opening of the crop year of 1899-1900 by the appointment of Hon. E. S. Reishus as chief inspector, has been managed in a way to do full justice to all interests, protecting the farmer in his just rights by fair grades and just weights, on the one hand, and establishing the fixity and reputation of the Minnesota grade on the other. That individual cases of error have not occurred I do not claim. Such a state of facts cannot be looked for in a business so extensive as the handling of the crop contributary to the terminal markets of this state. But I am gratified to be able to say to you and to the people of the state that since the reorganization of the service there has not been a single instance of complaint, either from the East or from European markets, either as to shortage in weight or grade, of a single bushel of wheat that had passed through the Minnesota service. Prior to that time, and under the administration of Mr. Reishus' predecessor, complaints from Buffalo and from England, both in regard to grades and shortage in weight, were persistent and common. Minnesota's leading grade, No. 1 northern, Duluth, has stood on an average as compared with the four leading competitive grades in the Liverpool market, two cents higher than those grades. During the crop year closed, No. 1 northern, Minnesota inspection, has ranked one to five cents per hundred pounds higher in the Liverpool market than No. 1 northern, Chicago inspection, the average for the year being three cents in favor of Minnesota inspection. Throughout the crop year, No. 1 northern Duluth and No. 1 hard Duluth have uniformly been quoted higher than the corresponding grades, No. 1 northern Manitoba, and No. 1 hard Manitoba. This ratifying result has been effected by enforcing the same standard of excellency upon grain inspected out of the terminal elevators as is applied to the farmers' wheat when it reaches the market. As to the manner in which the farmer's interest has been protected, he is the best judge, and I shall offer no comment. I will only add that these reforms in the grain service have been accomplished without any increase of expenditure. On the contrary, the expense of the service during the crop year just closed, under Mr. Reishus' administration, was $2,201.78 less than the cost of the service during the preceding year of Mr. Clausen's administration.

REGULATING RAILROAD RATES.

In the matter of the regulation of railroad rates, the commission since its reorganization has proceeded as expeditiously as possible. The first and most important question demanding the attention of the board was the grain rates in the southwestern part of the state. The rates on grain from that section of the state to Minneapolis and Duluth had always been maintained at a figure that seemed to me exorbitant and such was the judgment of the commission. Early in the year a hearing was ordered for the investigation of these rates. After full inquiry and repeated conferences with the several carriers in that part of the state, the commission promulgated a schedule which reduced the rates to 172 railway stations of the six roads which run through the 18 counties of the Second congressional district, and in four adjoining counties. The reduction per hundred pounds runs from 4½ cents down on flax seed, 3 cents down on wheat, and 2 cents down on coarse grain. The rate on wheat is reduced 1 cent at forty stations, 2 cents at 20 stations, 3 cents at 28 stations, and in fractions between and under these figures at other stations. On flax seed the reduction is 1 cent per hundred at 26 stations, 2 cents at 17 stations, 3 cents at 17 stations, 4 cents at 35 stations, and from ½ to 4½ cents at the other 70 stations. This reduction put in force by the commission is only from local points to the Minnesota terminal markets at Minneapolis and Duluth, but the railroads have now adjusted their Chicago rates to the new Minneapolis and Duluth rates, so that the rate reduction applies to both the Lake Superior and the Lake Michigan markets. A careful computation of the savings to the farmers of that part of the state by this change in the rate, indicates the amount to be in excess of $400,000 per annum, which is a sum much in excess of the state taxes collected from those counties. It would pay the $324,000 of county revenue taxes that it takes to run the county governments of the counties affected; besides, it would pay the charge of $58,000 for the care of the poor, and still leave a surplus of $18,000 for the road and bridge fund. I mention these details simply to indicate how important and how far-reaching the question of transportation rates is to a community.

ANOTHER QUESTION PENDING.

Another question relating to merchandise rates is now pending before the commission. What the outcome will be of the hearing now in progress no one can tell at this time; but of one thing I am assured, and that is, that the present commissioners will take no action that will be unjust or unfair to the legitimate claims of the interests involved. Nor will they consent to any schedule of rates that does not afford every community substantially the same rate and the same fair field as is afforded to any other community in the state engaged in the same line of business.

CONDITION OF FINANCES.

The finances of the state were never in better condition than at the present time, nor did its credit ever stand as high as it does to-day. I confess that I take some pleasure in referring to this fact, in view of the claim made by the opposition two and four years ago that my election as governor of this state would ruin its credit and destroy the business of the people. Thank God the wealth, industry and prosperity of this state, and I might say of this whole glorious country of ours, is better anchored than to be contingent on the political defeat or elevation of any individual. Providence has endowed me with enough good sense to know that it is not because of my election that the finances of the state and its credit are in their present condition. But that same sense also teaches me, and I believe that it will convince the good people of this state, that just, fair, economic and businesslike management of public affairs will never injure the credit of a commonwealth.

The last legislature provided for the issuance of short time certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of the tax levy for the erection of our new capitol. In order to secure these certificates for the school fund, I insisted on the rate of interest being fixed at 3 per cent, hoping thereby to escape foreign competition. But the credit of our state was such that, notwithstanding the short time of this paper, notwithstanding its low rate of interest, New York brokers bid a premium of $135 on the issue, and this at a time when the consols of imperialistic England, drawing the same rate of interest and heretofore recognized as the best security in the world, were selling at a discount in excess of 2 per cent.

THE LARGE SURPLUS.

The only difficulty with our finances at the present time is the large surplus in the treasury. At the end of the fiscal year, Aug. 1, the state treasurer had in his vault and on deposit in the various banks $2,169,337.52. This sum is largely in excess of the amount actually needed for the requirements of the state. And I cannot help but express my regret that the last legislature did not cut down the tax levy, as I advised in my message, notwithstanding the fact that they refused the legislation for the increase of the state's revenue as I recommended. The next legislature, even though it remains obdurate on the question of providing more revenue for the state from the sources that I have indicated, will be able to reduce the tax levy by one-third if the appropriations are kept down to the real wants and necessities of the state, economically administered.

During my administration not a cent of the state's fund has been lost or misappropriated, so far as I am advised, or have been able to ascertain. I mention this fact, not for the purpose of claiming any personal credit. For the excellent management of our state funds Mr. Koerner, the retiring treasurer, is in a large measure entitled to the credit, and I accord it to him cheerfully. This state has never had a more prudent, painstaking or conscientious servant. I am equally certain that if the gentleman whom you have this day nominated to succeed him is elected, the same may be truly said of him two years hence, as I say it of the outgoing treasurer today.

FROM INSURANCE DEPARTMENTS.

A goodly portion of the surplus in the treasury has been contributed by the efficient work of the commissioner of insurance. Instead of the $174,000 in taxes collected by the insurance department in 1898, $208,000 was collected last year. These figures were in a large measure due to examinations made by the department of companies writing inland marine insurance and transacting business with non-resident brokers and operating through pools. As a result of these examinations $3,300 has been collected in back taxes on premiums not reported in former years—in one instance as far back as 1891. In addition to this that department has rendered the people of the state most excellent service in weeding out the numerous "fake" and speculative insurance companies that were preying upon the credulity of the people and robbing them right and left under various schemes of hail, fire and life insurance.

EFFICIENT DAIRY DEPARTMENT.

The dairy department has rendered most efficient service in executing the laws now on the statute books against the adulteration of food articles and in prosecuting the illicit sale of oleomargarine, imitation butter and manufactured lard, by the inforcement of the laws in that behalf. Of the administration of the dairy and food department I feel justified in saying that never before in the history of the state were the dairy and farming interests so efficiently defended and aided as in the last two years.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

The general progress of the state has been nowhere more marked than in the matter of education. During the year just closed, our permanent school fund grew nearly $1,000,000 substantially all of which has been carefully invested in permanent securities of the highest character. The permanent fund of the university has also been increased nearly $100,000, bringing it up almost to the million dollar mark. These matters, while gratifying to us politically, are more significant to us as citizens, and to our children after us. With a careful administration of our wealth of swamp land, on the lines that I have indicated, and by proper legislation to secure and save the mineral rights, I hope to live to see the day when the permanent school fund of this state will reach the magnificent sum of $30,000,000.

Promising as is the financial situation of our school system, the progress on the educational side has been even greater. Our university continues to advance both as to the number of its students and in the quality and character of its work. Its cultural influence and power are being felt more and more among the people of the state in every relation of life. Our normal schools are doing good work. Their standard of excellence is advancing. The same is true of our high schools. But in no department under the state's care has greater progress been made than in our common schools and for no interest committed in part to my charge have I felt greater solicitude or keener interest. The common school divides with the home the duty of building American character. As are our common schools in this, so will our homes and institutions be in the next generation. Pursuant to the recommendation of our efficient state superintendent, the last legislature amended our school law so as to require all teachers' certificates, except temporary permits to teach under special circumstances, to be issued by the state superintendent upon examinations held under his direction. I have no hesitancy in characterizing this as a most important reform, certain to advance the cause of education more than any step affecting our schools taken by the legislature within my memory. I believe that it will be the means of permanently establishing teaching in our common schools as a profession. It has already resulted in higher efficiency, in better wages for teachers, and in better work in the schools. As your teachers are, so are your schools.

Minnesota has a better school system, on the whole, than any of our sister states. This while primarily due to the public spirit of our people, has been made possible by the efficiency, zeal and splendid professional spirit of our teachers. To guard their interests and the interests of our schools, I have spared no effort and neglected no opportunity.

I have thus briefly referred to some of the work which has more especially demanded and received my attention during my term of office. To its prosecution I have devoted every energy and every power that I possess. I have been most ably assisted by those in office, under my direction, and I express to them my gratitude for their earnest cooperation. For the mistakes of the administration I alone am responsible, but not culpably. Errors of judgment no man can guard against, and I know of no duty that I have knowingly neglected to perform.

With no aim but the honor of our great state and the welfare of our people, with no guide but the law and my conscience, I have administered the affairs of the office which I hold without fear and without favor. This is all that I can promise for the future.

Again I thank you for the honor conferred.

SENATOR HILL'S POSITION.

He Emphatically Endorses the Democratic Ticket and Advocates the Election of Wm. J. Bryan.

HERKIMER, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Ex-Senator Hill's appearance here this evening occasioned something of a sensation in political circles. He came ostensibly to visit his old friend, ex-Judge Earl, of that place. He was greeted by Judge Earl at the Central depot, and went with him to the Palmer house, where they had dinner together. In the evening the Fort band serenaded Mr. Hill, and a large crowd of citizens assembled. He was introduced by Judge Earl and made a speech, the chief feature of which was his reiterated declarations in support of Bryan. There was some talk that Judge Earl was to be advanced as a compromise candidate for governor, but Judge Earl said emphatically that his name was not to be considered.

Mr. Hill declared that he came on a purely social visit.

Mr. Hill spoke as follows:

"It is needless to say that I am heartily in favor of the election of Bryan and Stevenson. They are candidates of the Democratic party, duly and regularly nominated at a national convention of which I was a member, and which treated me, from beginning to end, with marked and unusual courtesy, and I am honorably bound to actively support a ticket of my party nominated under such circumstances.

"Our candidates represent the interests of the average man—the plain people of the country—the farmer, the mechanic, the laborer. The issues this year are very plain and cannot be misunderstood.

"One party favors large standing armies, immense public expenditures, a government of grandeur and magnificence, high protective tariffs, a British colonial policy, great combinations of corporate wealth and a centralized government.

"The other party favors a continuance of the plain and simple government of our fathers, public expenditures limited to the actual necessities of the government, tariff taxation for public purposes only, an army for defense and not for conquest, competition in business free from monopolistic combinations.

"An appeal is made by our opponents to our love of country. We heard the same specious appeal in 1896, and we always hear it when our opponents seek Democratic votes to aid their cause.

"It is a partisan and not a sincere and patriotic appeal. It is based upon false pretenses. The country is not in danger, except from those who are now administering its government. We will protect the flag wherever it goes, but we will see that the flag goes only where it belongs. It shall not be hauled down in disgrace, neither shall it be raised anywhere in dishonor.

"The people are opposed to this government acquiring territory which is not to be governed by the constitution. It is no more constitutionally right to set up a colonial system than it is to create a king. The foreign policy of the present administration has been weak and shifty and unpatriotic, and the best thought of the country—the best students of history—the most intelligent of Americans are against it.

"No right-minded man can defend a president who said in his annual message that it was 'our plain duty' to give free trade to Porto Rico with the United States and then within a few months thereafter signed a measure which imposed a tariff duty of 15 per cent.

"Our party has always been the true and genuine friend of labor, and aided in every opportunity the efforts of workingmen to improve their condition. For the first time in our national history a political party has incorporated in its national platform the creation of a department of labor, with a secretary thereof allowed a seat in the cabinet with the president of the republic. The Democratic party proposes this innovation in the interest of labor, and why should it not be done?

"If wise counsel shall prevail at the Saratoga convention next week and we proceed on right lines to plan for victory, instead of inviting defeat, and shall so shape our course and policies as to deserve the support of the great independent and conservative forces of this state—always an important factor in our elections—and the thousands of Republicans dissatisfied with the arbitrary machine rule of their party—we cannot only rescue the Empire state from further Republican control, but can give our electoral vote for our gallant national standard bearer, William J. Bryan.

"While disagreeing with Mr. Bryan in some matters, I need not reiterate that I earnestly desire his election.

"Our opponents are intrenched in patronage and power, and the struggle to oust them must necessarily be terrific.

"The tide, however, is with us. The skies are becoming brighter every day. Let us then all work enthusiastically for the cause and victory is within our reach."

Willing to Show 'Em.

An honest young man, who had escaped a great peril by an act of heroism, was much complimented for his bravery.

One lady said: "I wish I could have seen your feat."

Whereupon he blushed and stammered, and finally pointing to his pedal extremities, said: "Well, here they be, mum."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED

Governor John Lind Reviews National and State Issues in His Address at the Auditorium in St. Paul.

Facts and Pertinent Comment for the Consideration of the Electors of the State of Minnesota.

Last Thursday evening the Auditorium in the city of St. Paul was filled with an enthusiastic audience to listen to the presentation and discussion of campaign issues by Governor Lind, Mayor Gray, and others. The speech delivered by Gov. Lind was in acceptance of the unanimous nomination accorded him by the democrats, populists and silver republicans for a second term as governor, and was as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the Conventions: Four years ago when the same parties, who have today honored me with the nomination for the most important office in the state, first conferred upon me the same honor, the people of the state were not ready for the change of policy which my election would have implied; but not daunted nor discouraged, you again placed my name in nomination two years ago, and your action was ratified by the people by an overwhelming majority. Two years I have served as the chief executive of the state. My every act has been subjected to the most searching scrutiny, friendly and unfriendly. That you should again, without solicitation and without seeking on my part, place my name in nomination in the same manner for continuance in this great office, is evidence of confidence and approval more touching and gratifying to me than the mere political victory in which it may result if your selection is again approved by the people of the state. I thank you all sincerely for the honor conferred. I also desire to thank you, and I congratulate our political friends and the people of the state, on the wise selection that you have made for the other positions on the state ticket.

I have not, as yet, had an opportunity to study the platform that you have adopted, but I assume that it is in line with our endeavors in the state, and nationally, in the past. If the people of the state shall see fit to approve of your choice, and I believe that a true regard for their own best interest will prompt them to do so, the state will have an administration that will be fair, just and efficient in every department. In view of the occasion and the pending campaign, you will pardon me, I am sure, for devoting a few moments to the discussion of the questions awaiting decision at the polls.

AMBITION OF THE FEW.

Ever since the formation of our government, two tendencies have been apparent and operative in every general election that the country has had. In fact, they developed in the convention which formed the constitution, and in that convention was laid the foundation for the existence of the political parties which have in turn directed the administration of public affairs since that day. One of these tendencies, and it is a tendency inherent in every society and under every form of government, is the endeavor on the part of the few to control the government and to so direct legislation and the administration of public affairs as to secure to themselves and to their class special privileges and economic advantages through governmental intervention. The other is the effort of the common people at self-preservation, politically and economically. This was the issue in the memorable campaign of one hundred years ago which resulted in the election of Thomas Jefferson. The federal party of that day stood for the same principles and tendencies in government that Hannaism represents at the present time. Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, represented, and in his administration of public affairs developed and formulated, the principles of just and equal laws, fairly and efficiently administered, with equality of privilege and of opportunity to all men.

The party lines formed thus early have continued, though not with identity of name, to the present day. In 1830 Jackson represented the same principles contended for by Jefferson, and so did Lincoln in 1860. The slaveholding aristocracy of the south, without relinquishing the name of democracy, to which it was in no wise historically entitled, had adopted all the vicious principles of the old federal party. Their trust was in the power of wealth and in privilege, with force in the background, as is that of the Republican party today. Lincoln, on the other hand, represented the principles of Jefferson and the aspirations and conscience of the common people, as we believe that our valiant leader, W. J. Bryan, does at the present time. Our political and economic situation at this moment verifies this historical resume. Let us look at the actual conditions that confront the American people, and it is easy to determine what the real issues are in this campaign. Notwithstanding the fact that ours is the greatest, the most populous, the most intelligent, the most powerful and the wealthiest civilized country in the world, its entire industry has, with the aid and through the operation of class legislation, passed into the control of comparatively a handful of men. The enumeration of the trusts controlling our industries, which is given in the Minneapolis Journal Almanac, on pages 127 to 137, covers every form of American industrial enterprise, and shows that their domination is complete. The capitalization of the trusts that had been formed before the present year exceeded $7,000,000,000, and many have been organized since the 1st of January. With the power of such wealth exempt from taxation, with the monopoly of patents and the control of transportation facilities, with a tariff specially designed to accomplish their ends, it is not surprising that they control the industry of the nation.

PARTIES' ATTITUDE TOWARDS TRUSTS.

What is the attitude of the parties on this question?

The Republican party, in its platform, pays a tribute to the virtues of the trusts and extols their value in extending our foreign trade. It admonishes them to better behavior at home, it is true, but the real position of the party on this, as on other questions, is best defined by its chairman and acknowledged leader, Mr. Hanna. He defined the party's position on this subject, as I read from a dispatch to the Pioneer Press, under date of Oct. 19, 1899: "The Democrats say I am a fraud to talk about trusts. I am not going to talk about them. This combination of capital for one purpose and another is not a political question at all. It is a business proposition and ought not to have been brought into politics." And then he continues: "The so-called trusts are not new; they have been found in England and Germany as far back as 200 years and are increasing. Therefore, from a business standpoint of view, the foundation of these combinations, in one sense, is a step forward. The Democrats would have us believe that they are terrible anacondas that would swallow us up. However, if the trusts are a menace to the country, what party better than the Republican party will give us relief?"

Yes, my friends, we do believe that the trusts are anacondas, and we believe they will consume the substance of our people; that they will undermine the independence of our citizenship, and destroy the opportunities that ought to exist for the individual in a free country. On this point ex-Senator Washburn used the following language in an interview in the Chicago Times-Herald Sept. 11, 1899:

"When I was a young man—I am now sixty-eight—I had the world before me, and there was absolutely a fair field for me. Take all of our most successful business men of today and their experiences were like mine. They entered the race without a handicap, and their grit and capacity won. Now, this building up of trusts puts a stop to fair and equal opportunities for the young men of today. The young man just out of college has no opening, as a rule. He cannot begin business on his own account against organized capital. He must join the procession; he must content himself with being a mere clerk, and the chances are that he will never get any further because there are so many in his class. This makes the situation a serious one, and I am sorry for the young man of today. I have studied the situation, and I am sure of what I am saying."

HANNA'S DEFENSE OF TRUSTS.

I ask you, young men in this audience, whether this statement is true or not. "But," say Mr. Hanna, "from a business standpoint of view the formation of these combinations is in one sense a step forward." This may be true from Mr. Hanna's standpoint. It may be true from the business standpoint of Mr. Rockefeller; but is it true from the business standpoint of the farmer, of the merchant, of the mechanic, or of the man in any occupation who lives by the labor of his hands or of his brain?

Let us see what this "organized industry" has accomplished, for instance, for the farmer, who is a great producer and the foundation of the wealth and prosperity of this state. He produces for the competitive market at home and abroad. There is no trust to govern the prices of what he sells, and, in the nature of things, there cannot be; but every article that he buys, from the matches on the shelf to the coal in his stove and the lumber in his barn, from the salt on the table to the fencing for his stock, is controlled by the trusts, and the prices of these commodities, and hundreds of others, are arbitrarily fixed, without reference to market value or cost of production.

Taking the farm value of a bushel of wheat as worth at an average throughout Minnesota 10 cents less than the Minneapolis cash price, ten bushels would buy, at the wholesale prices quoted by the Commercial Bulletin, the official trade journal of Minneapolis jobbers, the following goods on the dates named:

Kerosene oil (Minnesota state test), Jan. 1, 1898, 101 gallons; Jan. 1, 1899, 70 gallons; Jan. 1, 1900, 56 gallons.

Granulated sugar, Jan. 1, 1898, 157 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 118 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 104 lbs.

Common salt, Jan. 1, 1898, 9½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1899, 6½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1900, 5 bbls.

Lumber (16 ft. 2x4). Jan, 1898. 723 feet; Jan. 1, 1899, 536 feet; Jan. 1, 1900, 418 feet.

Wire nails, Jan. 1, 1898, 4 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1899, 3 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1900, 1½ kegs.

Barbed wire (common painted), Jan. 1, 1898, 435 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 310 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 133 lbs.

The above figures are based on the wholesale prices of oil, salt, sugar, lumber, nails and barbed wire at Minneapolis. Freight, handling, and retailer's profits would probably make these articles cost, on the average, at the farm about 20 per cent more, and the amount of each of these articles which ten bushels of wheat would buy would be correspondingly less. Ten bushels of wheat, like any other product, are worth what they will buy. The prosperity of the farm is not measured by the volume of its product, nor even by the market value of the product, but by the net purchasing power of the commodities produced.

WILL BRING SERFDOM.

It needs no argument to convince you that the continuation of this condition of affairs will rapidly reduce the mass of the America people to a condition of absolute serfdom. Will you have that condition or will you not? It is for the people to answer at the polls. Hanna says:

"However, if the trusts are a menace to the country, what party better than the Republican party will give you relief?" This is great comfort and might carry some weight were it not for the fact that the Republican party has been in absolute control of every power of the government during the last four years and is today. If it were desirous of destroying the trusts and protecting the people, why has it not done so? To this the Republicans answer: "We proposed a constitutional amendment and the Democrats would not help to pass it. We are helpless; we can do nothing." What was the aim of that constitutional amendment and what was its purpose? The aim and effect of that proposed constitutional amendment would have been to deprive the states of every vestige of power that they now possess to protect the people against the oppression of these combinations. Its purpose was to defer action upon the question upon a plausible pretext until Hanna had had an opportunity to again call upon the trusts for the exigencies of this campaign. Every citizen knows that it takes years and years to bring about an amendment of the constitution. Is our constitution such a failure that it vests congress with no power to protect its own people against oppression? To admit that, is to admit that it is a lamentable delusion. The very men who argue to this effect insist that the congress of the United States has the power to govern other peoples and countries against the convictions of "plain duty." Is our constitution such a perversity that under it congress can legislate for the oppression of foreign peoples, but is powerless to legislate for the protection of our own? Such logic will not appeal to the American voter.

GOVERNOR JOHN LIND.

CONGRESS CAN THROTTLE TRUSTS.

With absolute control over interstate commerce, with obsolute control of the power of national taxation, congress has the power to drive every trust that ever existed into oblivion. Congress, by proper legislation, regulated the transportation of commodities manufactured by prison labor among the states. Isn't it absurd to say that it has not the like power to regulate the transportation of trust products? When congress saw fit to abolish the issue of paper money by state banks it put a tax of 10 per cent on the issuance of such notes, and state bank notes came suddenly to an end. Thank God the Kansas City convention did not stand terror stricken before this anaconda threatening the future of the American people! In language that cannot be misconstrued or misunderstood it said in its platform:

"Private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable. They destroy competition, control the price of all material, and of the finished product, thus robbing both producer and consumer. They lessen the employment of labor and arbitrarily fix the terms and conditions thereof, and deprive individual energy and small capital of their opportunity for betterment. They are the most efficient means yet devised for appropriating the fruits of industry to the benefits of the few at the expense of the many, and unless their insatiate greed is checked all wealth will be aggregated in a few hands and the republic destroyed.

"The dishonest paltering with the trust evil by the Republican party in state and national platforms is conclusive proof of the truth of the charge that trusts are the legitimate product of Republican policies; that they are fostered by Republican laws and that they are protected by the Republican administration in return for campaign subscriptions and political support.

"We pledge the Democratic party to an increasing warfare in nation, state and city against private monopoly in every form. Existing laws against trusts must be enforced and more stringent ones must be enacted providing for publicity as to the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce and requiring all corporations to show, before doing business outside the state of their origin, that they have no water in their stock and that they have not attempted to monopolize any branch of business or the production of any article of merchandise, and the whole constitutional power of congress over interstate commerce, the mails and all modes of interstate communication shall be exercised by the enactment of comprehensive laws upon the subject of trusts.

"Tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of trusts upon the free list to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection.

"The failure of the present Republican administration, with an absolute control over all the branches of the national government, to enact any legislation designed to prevent or even curtail the obsorbing power of trusts and illegal combinations, or to enforce the anti-trust laws already on the statute books, proves the insincerity of the high-sounding phrases of the Republican platform.

"Corporations should be protected in all their rights and their legitimate interests should be respected, but any attempt by corporations to interfere with the public affairs of the people or to control the sovereign which creates them should be forbidden under such penalties as will make such attempts impossible."

BELIEF IN FREE LIST.

If Bryan is elected what is here indicated will be acccomplished. With regard to many of these trust commodities, the simplest and easiest way to afford the people relief would be to put them on the free list. I saw an editorial statement in the Minneapolis Journal some six weeks ago to the effect that the sugar trust had raised the price of sugar five times since the 1st of May last, and each time it cost the country $8,000,000. When you bear in mind that the sugar trust is protected by a tariff of 1 95-100 cents, practically two cents a pound, and that the price of raw sugar is usually about two cents a pound, you can readily see how this grievance could be removed by putting sugar on the free list. And I ask you, earnestly and candidly, why in the world should this not be done? It was good Republican doctrine when I was a Republican; why is it not good doctrine now, as well as common sense? It would save the American people hundreds of millions of dollars and bring additional comforts to the table of every American home; but the sugar trust controls the administration and it cannot be done.

THEY WANT THE EARTH.

But these interests, these privileged classes, are not content with our own country. They want more worlds to conquer. They want to control populations that have less power of resistance than the white race—lands where their dominion may be complete, and so, taking advantage of the conditions growing out of the Spanish-American war, they are now endavoring to establish imperialism by fastening upon our institutions a colonial system and a large standing army. Our people know intuitively that there is menace and danger in this new departure. To overcome this feeling they appeal to the patriotism, to the national pride and to the selfishness of the people. They say that the glory of our flag and the prestige of our name demand it. They say that, besides, there is money in it. This latter they rely upon as their most convincing argument. Did the Spanish people find imperialism profitable? Did their colonial empire tend to the upbuilding of their industries, their trade and their progress? On the contrary, it had the opposite effect. From being the most powerful state of Christendom, the most enlightened and in many respects the most progressive, before it embarked in the venture of colonial empire, its power, its resources and its people had been dragged down to the lowest depths of degradation before we forced it to abandon the system. Shall we disregard the example of Spain and adopt the very system that destroyed her power and impoverished her people?

Nations can grow and expand, as ours has, to their political and economic advantage. But such national growth always has been, and always will be, through the occupation and acquisition of territory, not already occupied by a dense population, and by the planting therein of the expanding nation's own people and its own institutions. Such was our expansion over the territory acquired from Spain in the southern part of our country, and from France in the south and to the west of us. The same is true of Alaska. But the white race never has and never can permanently occupy and inhabit land within the tropics.

INTEGRAL PARTS, NEVER.

We can never hope to make the Philippine islands integral parts of our Union, occupied by people of our race, with our political and social ideals, as we have in Florida, Louisiana and California. Our occupation of these islands will be military and the government colonial, thus converting our own institutions from a republic, resting upon manhood suffrage, governed by laws of the people's own making, in other words, governed by the consent of the governed, to a military empire. Such changes in the institutions of nations in the past have always proven destructive of the liberties of the people, and in the end, of their national existence. This historical fact is well expressed by Froude, the historian, in his introduction to his "Life of Caesar." He says:

"To the student of political history, and to the English student above all others, the conversion of the oman republic into a military empire, commands a peculiar interest. Notwithstanding many differences, the English and the Romans essentially resemble one another. The early Romans possessed the faculty of self-government beyond any people of whom we have historical knowledge, with the one exception of ourselves. In virtue of their temporal freedom, they became the most powerful nation in the known world, and their liberties perished only when Rome became mistress of conquered races, to whom she was unable or unwilling to extend her privileges.

"If there be one lesson which history teaches it is this, that free nations cannot govern subject provinces. If they are unable or unwilling to submit their dependencies to share in their own constitution, the constitution itself will fall in pieces from mere incompetence for its duties."

The rightfulness of the proposition to govern other peoples against their will ought not to be open for discussion by the American people, whose government rests upon the proposition that government by force, against the will of the governed, and not instituted by the consent of the governed, is tyranny. The only answer that we can get to this proposition is that the Philippines are ours—that we have acquired them by purchase and by conquest. I deny the validity of each of these claims. There was a time when human beings could be bought and sold under our laws, but happily that time is past. McKinley's statement, that conquest is criminal aggression and cannot be permitted by our code of morals, is as true to-day as when he uttered it. Why did not he stick to his original code of morals? Why did he permit Hanna to revise it?

WILL NOT DISCUSS IT.

The truth of the matter is that we cannot enlist our opponents in an earnest discussion of this question, at least not upon the moral side of the controversy. They will not listen to it. If we appeal to the constitution, they say we have outlived it. If we refer to the Declaration of Independence, they say that that document is a collection of glittering generalities, good enough in their day, but not applicable now. If we cite them to the maxims of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, they say that these men are dead. Our only recourse, therefore, is to demonstrate to the people the falsity of the claim that imperialism will pay. A colonial empire may prove profitable to the trusts and to the army and navy contractors, and to the favored individuals, but it never can and never will profit the country or the people as a whole.

The only way in which the American people could secure gain from the possession of the Philippines would be by the expansion of our trade with them. The profit of such trade, in the nature of things, could not be greater than the value of the commodities that would pass in exchange. The total value of the exports and imports of the Philippine Islands have in no year exceeded $30,000,000. The profit on such trade cannot be many millions, and supposing it were doubled, trebled or quadrupled, the profit would not be large enough to bear the expense of the increased military establishment for one month. But whether the profits were great or small, one thing is certain: Those profits would not return into the pockets of the same people who have to bear the burden of maintaining the army and navy necessary for and incident to colonial empire. But the whole argument is fallacious. As was well said by Mr. Bryan, you need not own a people to trade with them. A friend is a better customer than an enemy. If we want the trade of the Philippines, let us secure it as we secure other trade, by the superiority and cheapness of our products, by fair treatment and by the establishment of mutual confidence and relations of good will. These are the conditions that bring trade—not conquest, not war nor oppression. But in considering the question of the profits of imperialism you must not lose sight of the expense of its companion evil—the large standing army.

THE LARGE ARMY.

When I was a member of congress, when we were building and providing for the navy which fought and won the victories of the Spanish war, when we had the same regular army establishment that we had at the commencement of that war, the total appropriation for the army and navy in no year during my term of service exceeded $80,000,000. This amount was not exceeded in any year prior to the Spanish war, except 1897, when it reached $82,000,000. That the standing army that we then had was ample and sufficient for the protection of our country and institutions is a matter of history.

When the war with Spain broke out, and the President made a call upon the states for additional forces, that call was responded to almost before it was made. And it is no exaggeration to say that if the exigencies had demanded, ten men could have been had for every one that was required. A large standing army may be necessary for the purpose of imperialism, but it is not necessary for the protection of republican institutions, and its necessity had never been urged until imperialism made its appearance. A popular government, while it should have a small number of trained and efficient regular troops and a sufficient number of officers for manning its defenses, for emergencies, and to form the nucleus in case of need for larger forces, should rely in the main for the defense of its institutions on its volunteer citizen soldiery. This we have done in the past, and this is in harmony with the theory of our institutions and the views of the fathers. Gen. Knox, a Revolutionary soldier, who was the first secretary of war under Washington, and under whom our army establishment was organized, used this language in his first report, which was forwarded to congress by President Washington with his approval:

"It is the intention of the present attempt to suggest the most efficient system of defense which may be compatible with the interests of a free people. * * * The modern practice of Europe with respect to the employment of a standing army has created such a mass of opinion in their favor that even philosophers and advocates for labor have frequently confessed their use and interest in certain cases. Whoever seriously and candidly estimates the power of discipline and the tendency of military habits will be constrained to confess that whatever may be the efficiency of a standing army in war, it cannot in peace be considered as friendly to the rights of human nature. * * * A small corps of well disciplined and well informed artillerists and engineers and a legion for the protection of the frontiers and magazines and arsenals are all the military establishment which may be required for the present use of the United States. The privates of the corps to be enlisted for a certain period, and after the expiration of which to return to the mass of the citizens. An energetic and national militia is to be regarded as the capital security of a free republic, and not a standing army, forming a distinct class in the community. It is the introduction and diffusion of evil and corruption of manners into the mass of the people that renders a standing army necessary. It is when public spirit is despised and avarice and indolence and effeminacy of manner predominate and prevent the establishment of institutions which would elevate the mind of the youth in the paths of virtue and honor that the standing army is formed and riveted to-ever."

WHY ANY INCREASE?

Are the people of the United States prepared to turn their back on these words of caution from the past? What reasons are assigned for the increase of our standing army to 100,000, according to the imperialistic programme? They say that we have grown to be a great populous nation, and, as such, should have a respectable army like the other powers of earth. If empire and conquest are our programme for the future, perhaps, yes. If the protection of our institutions and the development of our industries and commerce is our aim, then I say, no. There may be good reasons for an increase in the naval establishment, for the states have no naval militia, but there is none for the material increase of our standing army. But instead of arguing this proposition on theoretical and political grounds, let us look at it from the taxpayers standpoint. Let us count the cost of our present military establishment. Let me cite you to the last report of the secretary of war. He says, on page 60:

"The summary of expenditures for the fiscal year 1899, appropriations and allotments for 1900, and estimates for 1901, is as follows:

GENERAL OBJECT.	Expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899.	Appropriati'ns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900.	Estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901.
Civil establishment	$ 1,986,089.13	$ 1,967,700.00	$ 2,108,066.00
Military Establishment (support of the army and military academy)	*294,696,354.13	87,015,290.03	128,170,383.54
Public works (including fortifications and river and harbor improvements)	27,855,660.70	30,499,576.98	50,988,371.49
Miscellaneous	4,928,910.83	5,196,790.00	4,576,680.00
Grand total	$329,457,160.79	$124,679,371.71	$185,903,551.03

*Including expenditures from national defense.
Including allotments from national defense.

"The appropriations for the year ending June 30, 1900, were made on a basis of a military force which has been greatly exceeded by the exercise of the authority conferred under the act of March 2, 1899, and the raising, equipping and transporting to the Philippines of additional troops and supplies. It will therefore be necessary to ask congress for a deficiency appropriation of about $51,000,000, bringing the total amount of the appropriation for the current year up to about the amount of the estimates which have been submitted for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901."

The appropriations for the year ending June 30, 1899, embrace the cost of the Spanish war and cannot be considered. But the last two years show the requirements for the imperialistic peace establishments. From the totals given should be deducted $35,000,000 per annum on account of river and harbor improvements.

This leaves the annual expense of the present army establishment in round numbers $150,000,000. Add to this the annual cost of the naval establishment, which is in round numbers $75,000,000, and we have a total expenditure, for army and navy and for the instrumentalities of war, of $225,000,000, and this in times of peace! These figures do not include expenses that may be incurred in the Chinese difficulty. These are the appropriations for imperialism on a peace footing. This sum of $225,000,000 is so immense that the ordinary human mind can hardly grasp it. Let us express it in the leading products of the Northwest. According to the last report of the secretary of agriculture, the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin,

JOHN LIND IS CALLED

By Both the Democratic and Populist State Conventions of Minnesota.

Both Parties are Represented on the State Ticket. Harmony Prevailed.

At a Monster Ratification Meeting Gov. Lind Accepts the Renomination.

Governor—John Lind.

Lieutenant Governor—T. J. Meighen (pop.).

Secretary of State—M. E. Neary.

State Treasurer—H. C. Koerner.

Attorney General—Robert C. Saunders.

Railroad and Warehouse Commission—P. M. Ringdal (pop.), S. M. Owen (pop.), T. J. Knox.

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court—Judge Frank C. Brooks.

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court—Judge J. C. Netheway.

Presidential Electors—O. W. Anderson, first district; George Lester, second district; O. T. Ramsland (pop.), third district; Daniel Abberly, fourth district; F. D. Norenberg, fifth district; John Genswald (pop.), sixth district; T. C. Hodgson (pop.), seventh district; M. R. Prendergast (pop.), and Rudolph Schiffman, at large.

The democrats of Minnesota held their state nominating convention in the Auditorium in St. Paul, Sept. 6, and named the above ticket.

The gathering was called to order just a few moments after noon by Chairman Rosing, who congratulated the delegates present because of the magnificent showing presented by the Minnesota Democracy in the convention. Mr. Rosing declared he had no time to waste in speaking, as the work in hand must be expedited.

Capt. W. H. Harries, of Caledonia, was selected by the executive committee for temporary chairman of the convention, and Mr. Rosing expressed the hope that in the facilitation of business the delegates would have the good sense to make the temporary organization permanent.

Moses Scott Jamar was elected temporary secretary; Capt. J. E. Wood, assistant secretary. Thomas Van Eten, Benton county, and Peter Nelson, Goodhue county, and William Pitt Murray, Ramsey, vice-presidents. T. D. O'Brien moved that a conference committee be appointed, one from each congressional district, to confer with the Populists who were in session in Minneapolis.

The motion was adopted although there were a few noes. The chairman then announced that he was informed the Populistic conference committee was on its way from Minneapolis to the Clarendon hotel, St. Paul, where the conference was to be held. He appointed the committee as follows:

First district—Senator William Gausawitz. Second—William P. Brown. Third—Senator O'Connor. Fourth—T. D. O'Brien. Fifth—E. J. Conroy. Sixth—Dr. M. P. Cullum. Seventh—C. W. Stanton.

The committee on resolutions presented its report, which contained some very caustic criticism of the course of the Republican party, and of the administration of President McKinley.

The platform of the Democratic party as adopted at Kansas City was reaffirmed. The party was congratulated upon the nomination of W. J. Bryan and Adlai Stevenson, and their election was predicted.

In the afternoon Chairman Harries announced that the conference committees were still in session and then some one suggested that the convention proceed to nominate a candidate for governor.

In an instant almost every chairman of a delegation was on his feet, but Chairman Harries recognized Senator John A. Johnson and while an excited delegate down in the middle of the hall shouted for Lind Mr. Johnson pushed his way to the platform and in forceful speech presented the name of John Lind.

The nomination was seconded by P. B. Winston, of Hennepin, also Jones, of Rock county.

Gov. Lind was renominated by a rising vote of the convention, accompanied by cheers and music of the band.

The convention could proceed no farther until the agreement with the populists in Minneapolis could be reached.

When this agreement was learned the first trouble of the day hove in sight. The conference committee respectfully reported that it had agreed to give the populists the lieutenant governor, two railroad commissioners and electors from the third, sixth and seventh congressional districts and one at large.

The adoption of the report was suggested by one of the members of the committee, but a delegate from Hennepin wanted to know more about the situation.

After explanations and considerable speech-making the conference report was practically adopted, and the ticket nominated as indicated above.

In the evening the big Auditorium building was filled to the utmost to ratify the nominations. Many ladies were in the audience and enthusiasm was everywhere. Dr. A. J. Stone was chosen chairman. After short addresses by T. D. O'Brien and Mayor Gray of Minneapolis, the speaker of the evening, Gov. Lind, was introduced. He accepted the nomination and discussed the issues of the campaign.

The populists held their convention in Minneapolis and after considering a plan for fusion sent a committe to St. Paul to effect an agreement with the democrats.

The platform adopted is as follows:

The Democratic party of Minnesota, in convention assembled, renews its allegiance to the National Democracy and its principles as enunciated in the platform adopted at Kansas City, July 5, 1900.

We rejoice in the recommendation of that great American, William Jennings Bryan, and his illustrious associate, Adlai E. Stevenson, for the offices of president and vice-president, and bid them God-speed in the struggle in behalf of human liberty and for the preservation of this republic, and the maintenance of its constitution.

We believe that the constitution follows the flag, and that wherever that emblem of liberty floats "it is our plain duty" to give the people the benefit of free trade. Accordingly we condemn the Porto Rican tariff bill as unconstitutional and un-American and a despotic oppression of a suffering people.

We hereby extend to the Boers of South Africa our heartfelt sympathy in their heroic struggle. We condemn the Republican national administration for its implied hostility to the struggling republic of South Africa and for its failure to express toward them that sympathy which is due a brave and honest people in their defense of liberty. It is the first instance in the history of our country where official expression of sympathy was denied those who were striving to maintain the perpetuity of republics.

We condemn the high protective tariffs imposed by the Dingley bill as having created and fostered trusts, and the Republican party for its subserviency to corporate trust power. During the present Republican administration more trusts have been formed than before since the foundation of our government. While the avaricious combines have raised the prices and articles which they manufacture, yet the Republican party in possession of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government has not made an honest effort to prevent their creation or to enforce the laws restricting their operation.

We heartily approve the efforts of organized labor throughout the country in their endeavor to establish a reduction in the hours of a legal working day, and pledge the support of the Democratic party to aid organized labor in its efforts along these lines.

We condemn the Republican party for gerrymandering the legislative districts of this state, and promise if the Democratic party is placed in power it will repeal the present unjust apportionment and pass a law in accord with the constitutional requirement of equality between the different sections of the state.

We indorse the administration of Gov. John Lind as the most efficient, business-like, progressive and close to the people in 40 years of executive administration. It will be known in the history of Minnesota as one conducted for the people, the whole people, and no one but the people. We point to the several executive departments as conducted on a clean and thorough basis. Wheat inspection for the first time since the establishment of the state grain department has been conducted with even justice to producer and dealer alike, and with satisfaction to all interests, at the same time Minnesota wheat in the world's market has never been maintained at a higher standard. We point with hearty endorsement to the reduction of railway grain rates in west and southern Minnesota, the first time in the history of the state railroad and warehouse commission that said body has reduced railway rates on its own motion, and we indorse the efforts of the administration to secure further reforms in the direction of just transportation rates.

We indorse the proposition of Gov. Lind to the last legislature for tax reform as one which, based on the experience of progressive eastern states, would in a few years enable Minnesota to meet the expenditures of the state government from corporate taxes only.

We demand that the gross earning tax imposed upon railroads be increased to 4 per cent, as recommended by Gov. Lind to the last legislature. We denounce as hypocritical the plank in the Republican platform upon this question in view of the fact that the chairman of the late Republican convention was chairman of the judiciary committee of the present senate, and in that capacity led the Republican majority of that body in the fight against the gross earning tax bill, notwithstanding that its passage was demanded by the almost united voice of the people and press of the state.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Flour Statistics.

From the standpoint of statistics, the flour mill year, which closed at midnight, August 31, was the biggest in the world's history for any one community. More than 14,500,000 barrels of flour were manufactured in Minneapolis during the year, which is an increase over the world's record, held by the Minneapolis mills last year, when they produced 14,291,280 barrels. The general increase is taken by some millers to mean that because of prosperous times people have been eating more meat and less grain, as in spite of the increased output, prices and other conditions have not been satisfactory, and the millers claim that none of them has made any money to speak of during the year just closed.

During this year the mills required from 62,000,000 to 65,000,000 bushels of wheat, and even if the three great states of the northwest should raise 120,000,000 bushels this year, at least half of it would be needed by Minneapolis mills, as all are making plans to increase the output. Of the total, also, fully 15,000,000 bushels will be required for seed.

Sam Houghdahl, the buttermaker of the New Sweden creamery, Nicollet county, who has gained so many awards of highest honors at state and national conventions of buttermakers, has recently scored another victory which places Mr. Houghdahl and his creamery in the front rank of the world.

Mr. Houghdahl some time ago sent two tubs of his butter to the Paris exposition to compete in dairy products of the world. Last week he received word from P. A. Pearson, acting chief of the dairy division at Washington, that his butter had been awarded first place at the exposition.

Given a Holiday.

The convicts at the Stillwater prison enjoyed Labor Day in full measure. In the morning they congregated in the chapel, where an entertaining and instructive address was delivered by Rev. Thomas McCleary, Minneapolis, and following the chapel exercises they marched into the prison yard, where they made merry as best they could until noon. An extra dinner was served, and in the afternoon each inmate was granted the usual holiday privileges, such as letter writing, etc.

News in Brief.

The team of Oscar Bruber, Hay Creek, washed down Bush street, Red Wing, and crashed into the delivery wagon of J. A. Schonweiler, throwing the driver, Herman Johnson, beneath the wagon. The 6-year-old son of H. Tolman was also thrown out, but neither was seriously injured.

B. F. Seis, who is now proprietor of the St. James hotel, Red Wing, will sue the Minnesota Malting Company for $5,000 damages for injuries sustained by a fall.

Fire completely destroyed four barns, corncribs and several small houses at Brainerd. The barns contained large logging outfits whose loss will be over $5,000.

The 4-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Valesco, Holdingford, had both feet cut off by a mower operated by her father.

SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT.

It Is Shown in the Trade Situation Generally—Greater Activity Expected After Election.

New York, Sept. 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "The volume of business does not materially enlarge at the east, and there is only moderate improvement at the west and south; but if expectations of greater activity when politics cease to disturb are realized, current operations will be found to have laid a substantial foundation. The most important event of the week in the industrial world was the agreement on the tin plate wage scale with the Amalgamated association granting about 8 per cent. advance to 35,000 hands long idle. Other metal workers' disputes are nearing settlement, while the Borden purchase of 500,000 pieces of print cloths at 2⅞ cents clears up the Fall River market, and is believed to preclude serious wage differences there. The final decision of the dissatisfied anthracite miners as to a strike will be reached to-day. If a strike is decided upon, it is likely to involve only a portion of the anthracite interests, and the producers are well prepared, as production in August was 619,000 tons over last year, and coal has been moving to market for two weeks very heavily. Prices of grain are little altered, good crop reports coming in freely, but the effect being neutralized by a foreign estimate of a world's crop below requirements. Business in iron and steel products steadily increases, and mills are more actively employed. October 1 is mentioned as the probable date of a general resumption.

"Failures for the week were 145 in the United States, against 132 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 30 last year."

FUSION IN MINNESOTA.

Democrats and Populists Meet in St. Paul and Agree Upon a State Ticket.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 7.—The democratic convention in this city and the people's party convention in Minneapolis on Thursday worked in complete harmony, the former conceding to the latter the nominations for lieutenant governor and two of the three railroad commissioners. The ticket is as follows:

For governor, John Lind; lieutenant governor, T. J. Meighan; secretary of state, M. E. Neary; state treasurer, H. C. Koerner; attorney general, Robert C. Saunders; railroad commissioners, R. M. Ringdahl and T. J. Knox for four years, S. M. Owen for two years; chief justice, Frank C. Brooks; associate justice, J. C. Nethaway; elector at large, Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann; elector at large, M. R. Prendergast.

The platform renews allegiance to the national democracy and its principles, rejoices in the nomination of Bryan and Stevenson, condemns the Porto Rican tariff, extends sympathy to the Boer republics in South Africa, and condemns the republicans for not expressing sympathy with them, condemns the high protective tariff as productive of trusts, and approves the efforts of organized labor for a shorter working day.

AN IOWA DECISION.

A Des Moines Justice Declares a Labor Union to Be a Pool or Trust.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 7.—Justice Halloran rendered a decision in a justice court in the case of Ryan vs. Charles Weitz & Son, in which he held that a labor union is a pool or trust, the operation of which is in direct violation of section 5,060 of the code of Iowa, which says: "Any corporation or organization having for its object the maintenance or regulation of any commodity is a trust or pool." The American and English encyclopedia of law specifically defines labor to be a commodity, and it is on these two authorities that Mr. Halloran formed his opinion. Ryan is backed by the Teamsters' union of Des Moines, which will take the case to the district court on a writ of error. In all probabilities the supreme court will untimately be called upon to settle the question.

CAUSED BY TREACHERY.

Gen. MacArthur Sends Details of the Recent Fighting in Island of Bohol.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The following cablegram has been received at the war department from Gen. MacArthur:

"Manila, Sept. 5.—Adjutant General, Washington: Details outbreak Bohol, developed Pedro Samson, commandant police, left Tagbilarien ostensibly inspect police various towns. This he did until heard from in Carmen, with followers threatening attack garrison at Ubay. Two detachments ordered Carmen found town peaceful. No trace of insurrection. Detachment 27 men under First Lieut. Leback, August 31, were attacked near Carmen by 120 Bolomen; latter nearly annihilated, over 100 killed. Our loss as previously reported. Movement in interior now in progress.

Can Telephone Without Wires.

Bradford, England, Sept. 10.—At Saturday's session of the physical science section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, now in annual session here, Sir William Henry Preece, consulting engineer to the British post office, made the interesting announcement that as a result of his experiments with wireless telegraphy he had found it quite possible to convey audible speech six to eight miles across the sea without wires. He added that it was a practical commercial system and might be extended to communication between ships and between ships and the shore.

Vermont Election.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 7.—The election returns for Vermont are all in. A careful scrutiny of the county returns, based on official returns in all but a few towns, and in these the unofficial figures are being used, show that Stickney (rep.) for governor has a plurality of 31,468 and a majority over all of 30,192. The complete and revised returns give these results: For governor, Stickney (rep.), 48,466; Senter (dem.), 16,998; all others, 1,276. The republican plurality this year exceeds by 2,691 the average of the last three presidential years.

Deed of a Jealous Man.

Livingston, Mont., Sept. 11.—Frank Forest, residing on Rock creek, shot and killed Willis Howard, a rancher, and Miss Lenora Linn. The three were leaving church Sunday night when Forest fired four shots, all taking effect. Forest then ran 50 yards and shot himself through the heart. He was enamorated of Miss Linn and was insanely jealous.

Has Confessed.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Peter Austin, the farmer of Stormville who has been in jail since Friday on suspicion of having killed Charles Brower, his farm hand, 14 years ago, confessed Monday that he killed Brower, but says that he did it in self-defense.

FOR ABANDONED FARMS.

Worn-Out Properties Are Utilized to Splendid Advantage by Growing Violets.

The worn-out farms of Virginia, principally in Albemarle and adjacent counties, of late have been turned to good account by their owners, who have directed their attention to violet growing. The violet industry is spreading rapidly in that section and the growers, the most successful of whom are women, employ small negro boys to carry on the work, which, while not laborious, is tedious, for the violets require constant attention. The greater part of the yield is taken by Philadelphia dealers. Although they are not 'making wealthy,' the growers are receiving substantial returns and find this new industry more profitable than ordinary farming.

"The great violet growing center is Poughkeepsie, N. Y.," says Dr. B. F. Galloway, of the department of agriculture, who, according to the New York Tribune, has had the violet hobby for years. He is the author of several books on the subject of profit in violet raising. All violets from this district find a ready market in New York city and as the demand for them is increasing yearly a promising field is opened for the young, energetic and intelligent men and women of to-day.

Answering a question as to why the violet has always been a popular flower, Dr. Galloway said that for four or five months in the year the public has no violets at all. It is only from the middle of October to the end of Easter time that the violets are in season, and when they do arrive they are in great demand. On the contrary, roses abound all the year round. There is also a certain delicacy, a modesty, about the violet that makes it always wanted, while its perfume is another point in its favor.

Only two of the double varieties of violets are grown—the Maria Louise and the Lady Hume Campbell. There are many kinds of single flowers, which, while beautiful and fragrant, are not popular. This is a matter of taste, however. In Europe, especially in Paris, the single violets are in great demand. There is a growing demand for the single violet in this country, however. The old-fashioned way of growing violets, borrowed from the English 25 and 30 years ago, was in "cold frames." These were cheap, boxlike arrangements put up and covered over in winter with a glass sash. As the demand increased it was seen that this method of culture was not practical. Dealers in the cities were unable to secure the flowers at times, as the frames would be covered with two or three feet of snow, and it would be impossible for the growers to get at them.

American ingenuity took a hand at this point and cellars were constructed adjacent to the beds, and this difficulty was obviated. From this evolved the regular violet houses of the present time, properly heated and ventilated and so constructed that they can be reached at all times. Still a great number of violets are grown in frames, and for the beginners it is the best plan to adopt on account of its cheapness, as valuable experience can thus be won at slight expense.

Violets to be successful must be grown entirely from cuttings. Young offshoots taken early in the spring give the most satisfactory results. In some cases the old plants are allowed to remain year after year, but this is unsatisfactory, as each year's crop shows a decrease in the number and the size of the flowers. The best results are obtained by replanting every year. A start should be made every spring with your offshoots—baby plants—planted in small boxes. As soon as they make good roots they should be planted directly to where they are to stand all summer. It is at this time that they should be carefully watched. Dead leaves and runners should be taken off and the plant made to contract, each forming a bushy crown. By the middle of September, if properly treated, these plants should cover the entire ground. By October 1 they begin to blossom. At first the flowers are small, and, consequently, of little or no value and are thrown away. By the middle of October they are sufficiently large, however, to send to market, and immediately bring a good price.

Violets generally sell for not less than a cent apiece, and when the average of a single plant is 50 flowers a season, and, with good care, 100, the profit can be readily seen. In the vicinity of every city violet raising could be made profitable. Any land that will grow potatoes, made rich by the addition of fertilizer, proves excellent breeding ground for violets. In starting a violet house care must be taken to see that there are proper facilities for shipping, although a person from four to six hours from the city can ship to good advantage.

In the Virginia violet farms, after the young offshoots have been transplanted into open frames, rolling wooden screens are used on the top of the frames to regulate the amount of sunshine which shall be admitted to the plants.

Indian Wit.

There was a lawyer in the Indian country who had none too good a reputation for honesty. One of the aborigines employed him to do a little legal business. It was done to the client's satisfaction, the fee duty paid and a receipt for it duly demanded.

"A receipt isn't necessary," the lawyer said.

"But I want it," replied the red man. There was some argument, and the attorney finally demanded his reason.

"Since becoming a Christian I have been very careful in all my dealings, that I may be ready for the judgment," answered the brave sententiously, "and when that day comes I don't want to take time to go to the bad place to get my receipt from you." The receipt was made out and delivered promptly.—Philadelphia Call.

Were Early Historians.

The Chinese are remarkable as a nation for their carefully preserved historical annals, even from the most remote period of antiquity. The first mention of pottery is found in the reign of Emperor Hoangti in 2698, before the Christian era. Porcelain was made under the Han dynasty, 18 B. C., at least 1,600 years before it was known to the western countries of the globe.—N. Y. Times.

WAS NOT ASKED AGAIN.

One Occasion When the Piety of a Michigan Politician Was Not Conspicuous.

M. E. Chittenden, the Michigan politician who died recently, dearly loved a joke. His own initials, "M. E. C.," he always insisted, stood for Methodist Episcopal church, which organization, could it have secured him, would have acquired a very lively member.

"Mart," as Mr. Chittenden was familiarly called, relates the Chicago Chronicle, partially lost his hearing some years ago and communication with him thereafter was one of the fine arts. Being the agent of the Standard Oil company for a large territory, he traveled considerably, and on a certain occasion fell in with a couple of friends at Hillsdale, who invited him to go with them to dinner at the house of a resident acquaintance. One of them quietly said to the host: "Mr. Chittenden is an exceedingly pious man and likes to have the food blessed before partaking. You must invite him to ask the blessing."

Accordingly, when all were seated, silence fell upon the company, while the host turned to Mr. Chittenden with "Will you ask the blessing?"

Up went Chittenden's hand to his ear, with his usual, quick, nervous gesture, as in a listening attitude he responded in a tone more decided than unctuous:

"I've grown so all-fired deaf lately that if you've got anything to say to me you'll have to say it devilish loud."

A roar from the two friends disclosed to Chittenden and the astonished host that they had been the victims of a practical joke. But "Chit" enjoyed it amazingly when he understood what had happened.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

A Little Bit of Bluff That Failed to Work with a Wide Awake Man.

If there be one thing that I more than another admire it is the having one's wits about one—perhaps because I never had mine. To be possessed only of l'esprit d'escaliers is simply an aggravation, writes John Paul in Harper's Magazine.

As illustrative of ready-witted men I recall an incident that I have often told but never published. Let me do that now in justice to one that is gone.

In company with the late J. R. Osgood I once of an evening dropped in at Wallack's old Fourteenth Street theater. We could get no seats, as there was standing room only. At the end of the first act two orchestra seats were vacant in front, and we walked down and took them. Barely were we seated when two gentlemanly-looking young men came down the aisle and addressed me.

"Beg pardon, but have you checks for those seats?"

I was on the point of rising, when Osgood replied: "No. Have you?"

They hadn't. It was merely a bit of supreme bluff. But how few would have had the readiness to meet and parry it.

Rare Philippine Jewels.

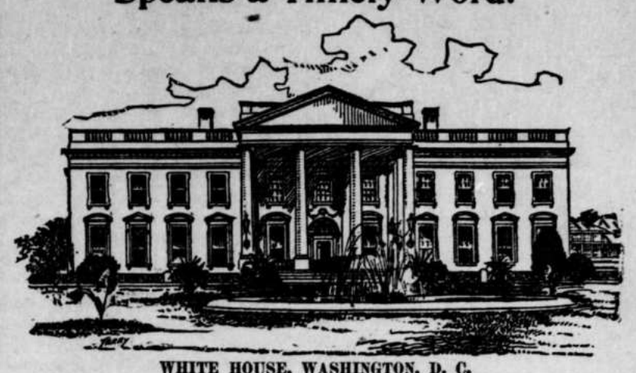
PRESIDENT TYLER'S DAUGHTER,

A Venerable Lady of Noble Lineage Speaks a Timely Word.



WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

"One of the most aristocratic faces seen in Washington is that of Mrs. Semple, daughter of President Tyler. She has passed her 80th year and yet retains an exceedingly youthful complexion. Personally she is charming, and impresses one as stepping out of the European courts," so says The National Magazine, under the heading "Social Sidelights at the Capital."

The following is a letter from this interesting lady, written from the Louise Home, Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, concerning their great catarrh tonic, Peruna. Mrs. Semple writes:

The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"Your Peruna is a most valuable remedy. Many of my friends have used it with the most flattering results and I can commend it to all who need a strengthening tonic. It is indeed a remarkable medicine."

Sincerely, Letitia Tyler Semple.

Every spring you clean the house you live in, to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected in the winter. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up during the winter with all manner of filth, which should have been removed from day to day, but was not. Your body needs cleaning inside. If your bowels, your liver, your kidneys are full of putrid filth, and you don't clean them out in the spring, you'll be in bad odor with yourself and everybody else all summer.

DON'T USE A HOSE to clean your body inside, but sweet, fragrant, mild but positive and forceful CASCARETS, that work while you sleep, prepare all the filth collected in your body for removal, and drive it off softly, gently, but none the less surely, leaving your blood pure and nourishing, your stomach and bowels clean and lively, and your liver and kidneys healthy and active. BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Sept. 14, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE, $1.00.

—The new addition to L. E. Bartlett's mill, for grinding flour, is nearly completed.

—In another place in this paper see 'Minnesota Game Laws", handed us by game warden Walter.

—Belgian hares have arrived. Tom Wolfendon has the first pair in Delano. Several other parties expect to be in the business soon.

—In another place read the interesting letter of Katherine Kelly Green from Pueblo, Col. She seems to be enjoying her trip.

—The well at the school house is now in front of the house, instead of behind it. The change is in accordance with civilized notions, to say the least.

—The election to vote on bonding the village for $2,000, to extend waterworks was held Tuesday, resulting as follows: For bonds, 47; against bonds 54. Two votes wrongly marked were thrown out.

—Tuesday, election day, saloons closed up on order of the Mayor. They would close on Sundays and observe the laws in other respects just as well if they were obliged to in the same way.

—Gov. John Lind's acceptance speech in supplement form accompanies this paper. It is good reading and will be good reference for campaign argument if preserved until election time.

—Presiding Elder Hingley held Quarterly Conference here Saturday. New trustees and stewards were elected for the coming year. On Sunday he preached one of his eloquent sermons.

—Rev. Savs is getting together one of the finest libraries in the village. He recently ordered $48 worth of medical books. He evidently expects to be up to date on physical as well as mental and moral man.

--Roads dry up very quickly after rains on our soil, where there is drainage in the right direction. But there are a few rut holes where water stands and keeps a mud hole on most of the roads longer than necessary.

—Captain Carver says some people have an awful lot to say about how one poor bulldog killed one child in 70,000,000, of people, and very little to say about the hundreds and thousands of children and grown people killed by whiskey.

—State of Minnesota vs. W. D. Albeitz, assault and battery, was tried Tuesday, before Justice Walter. Complaining witness, Thomas Janikula, claimed that he had been missused by Albeitz on Fair Day. The jury, after considerable deliberation acquitted the accused.

—Enoch Algers, of Independence, had some of the finest apples we have ever seen raised in Minnesota, on exhibition in town. They were of the Wealthy variety. One weighed nine ounces and measured in circumference 10 inches. He says he raised about 150 bushels of apples this year. Pretty good for a non apple state.

—Several covered wagons loaded with families passed through town yesterday morning bound toward Minneapolis. We took them for gypsies. The wagons were the finest of the kind we ever saw, having commodious covers of wood much like street cars. The windows were of stained glass and very fine. The gypsie queen must have been in the crowd.

—It seems as though old Jupiter Pluvius was trying to make up for lost time lately. We have been having heavy rains nearly every night and also a number of day sessions. According to official reports the rain fall for the month of August was the heaviest for a good many years, and judging from the amount of precipitation so far this month, September bids fair to take a prize also.

—Unless the laws of the land are observed a little more strictly there is apt to be a falling off in the saloon business. Last fairday intoxicants caused considerable disturbance; too much for our police force to cope with, and a law suit was the outcome. Of course the county can pay for these saloon rows; but won't the county get tired and vote local option before they pay very many times?

—Mr. Leonard and Miss Carrie Dedrick gave a party at their home on the farm, a mile and a half North of town, to a large number of their young lady and gentlemen friends, last Saturday night. For a general good time the occasion took first prize. Fine refreshments, consisting of watermelon and musk melon, cake a frappe were served. As usual for such occasions lately, in this part of the country, there was one of the heaviest rain storms of the season, and consequently the evening's programme was somewhat drawn out, the party not getting home until six o'clock the next morning. There was plenty of time for varied amusements, and games, dancing, music, singing, and speaking all had their turn. About five o'clock the rain let up a little, long enough to get home, and then started again in earnest and continued until nearly noon.

—Don't forget the Epworth League social tonight.

—Leo Eppel and Otto Metz bagged 24 ducks in a short time one day this week.

—The few frosty nights have thinned out mosquitoes, but flies seem all the more viscious.

—The Billings restaurant, corner of River street and and R. R. Aye. now has the front in and is rapidly assuming metropolitan airs.

—Cline Bros., of Michigan, have bought out E. Wandersee's Delano steam laundry. They propose to turn out first class work.

—The social at Mrs. J. D. Young's last Friday evening was an enjoyable affair to all present. Ruth says she is thankful for the crowd but would like a larger turnout next time.

—The Epworth League will hold a dime social in the City Hall this evening. Coffee, cake, and sandwiches will be served and a short programme rendered. Everybody is invited.

—Notices for the Democratic primary elections have been posted. The primaries will be held Monday, Sept. 24, between 7:00 and 9:00 p. m. If you are interested in having a good ticket, be there.

—Democrats are entitled to five delegates to the county convention which meets at Buffalo on Tuesday, Sept. 25. The primary for electing them will be held at the City Hall on Monday evening. Be there and help elect your men.

—The Delano steam laundry has been purchased, remodled and fixed up for first class work, by the Cline Bros. An experienced lady in laundry work and one or two girls to learn the trade are wanted. Apply at the laundry during working hours. The laundry will be known hereafter as the Grand Steam Laundry.

County Cullings.

Republican county and legislative tickets are to be made on Tuesday, the 18th inst. Some very good men for officers are canvassing for nominations. It remains to be seen if they can "bust" the ring and get on the ticket.

Democrats will hold their county convention on Tuesday, Sept. 25, and nominate men for county and legislative offices. It is to be hoped that good tickets will be placed in the field. The way to assist in having candidates to suit you, is to be at the primaries on Monday evening, Sept. 24 and help elect delegates to the county convention who will help make good tickets.

On account of the rain the debate on the question, "Resolved that the Expansion policy of the administration should be upheld by the people", to have been held last Monday evening at Endeavor church, did not take place, but was postponed until Monday, Sept. 17, at the same place, at 7:30 p. m. The speakers are: affirmative, Carey Dickinson and Frank Peterson; negative, Henry Crandall and Dr. Catlin. Prof. Hawker is to preside. Ice cream and refreshments are to be provided for the occasion. This is a continuation of the Harvest Festival. Notwithstanding the rain last Monday, about 100 people congregated and enjoyed a good time, supper being served at the home of Frank Peterson.

Build ye a house for thy soul, oh wayfaring man;
God being thy architect he draweth the plan.
Thy windows of faith toward the crystal sea;
Thy father in heaven doth carry this key.

Build ye a house for thy soul, oh builder of the world,
Though the storms on life's sea against it be hurled:
Make mighty thy walls, thy masonry just.
Neither crumbling, neither molding, or falling to dust.

Build ye, oh build ye a home for thy soul,
With spirals of love towards the heavenly goal;
Thy barque sailing safely to the haven of sweet rest:
It will be well with thy soul with the blessed of the blest.

Delano, Sept. 13, 1900.

Our Trip to Pueblo.

Leaving Minneapolis at 9:30 Sept. 4, on the C. M. St. P. & Omaha R. R., a branch of the N. W. Line, we passed through Southern Minnesota and North Western Iowa. The section of the country was decidedly prairie. The landscape presented an autumnal aspect, vast fields of corn and stacks of hay greeted the eye on every side, about one half of the corn was in shocks. Occasional groves of trees broke the monotony of the scene. The wild sun flower and golden rod on either side were mute reminders of the town we left behind us. Of the towns passed through a few arrested our attention. The town of Shakopee possessed a special charm for us. The old fashioned buildings and the traditions of Indian uprisings furnished food for reflection.

St. Peter, a short distance from the depot attracted us. Standing in bold relief, surrounded by fine walks and beautiful trees, is the abode of those whose lot in life has been less fortunate than our own.

Kasota is a small place sparcely scattered over the prairie, important for its Kasota Stone whose quarries first arrest our attention. Mankato is also worthy of a passing thought. The small stations in Iowa did not excite our interest unless it was Sioux City which we reached at 2:30 p. m.

At 10:45 p. m. we arrived at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and at Omaha at 11:50. "The Sable Goddess" had so completely enveloped both these cities within her mantle, that we did not presume to penetrate beyond the sacred barrier. Leaving Omaha at 1:30 each availed himself of what comforts the coach offered and silence settled over the scene; save the rumbling of the train on its western journey through eastern Nebraska. Morning dawned upon us in East Central Nebraska again vast prairies containing corn fields and grazing and groves of trees along the Platte River, greeted the eye. As we approached Western Neb. the scene changed,—dry barren districts, small isolated buildings and irrigation ditches confronted us. We closed our eyes on Eastern Colorado.

As we approached Denver, again the scene changed, vast fields of green alfalfa dissipated the gloom of past experiences and large gardens of cabbage like a chain of lakes whose blue waters could be seen as far as the eye could reach, prooved a soothing balm to our depressed spirits. On our right, in a semicircle, one could discern what appeared to be cumulous clouds from the horizon, one third the distance to the zenith, these were the Rocky mountains seen through the hazy afternoon sun light. We were tempted to remain over night in the beautiful City of Denver. Its cool balmy air, its artistic window displays and its tempting refreshments, afforded ample compensation.

The next day we visited some of the public buildings and the City Park. Of the buildings visited the Capital was our chief attraction. It is built of gray granite, supplied by the quarry outside the city. The park contains 320 acres. It has a chain of artificial lakes the largest of which contains 25 acres. Here one finds quite an extensive menagerie; buffalo, moose, bear, mountain lion, etc., not the least among which is a mammoth cow weing 28 hundred lbs.

The gorgeousness of the flowers both in variety of species and artistic arrangement defy the excution of the writers pen.

At 1:30 p. m. Thursday, we boarded the Rio Grande and resumed our picturesque way toward Pueblo.

Rockford.

Sept. 10.

Died, in this village, Sept. 8, 1900, Mr. Jefferson Benner, one of our oldest and most respected citizens.

Jefferson Benner was born at Monmouth, Ohio, Oct. 12, 1832. He came to Minnesota in 1858, and on April 29, 1861, enlisted in Co. F. first Reg. of Minnesota Volunteer Infantry and was in all of the battles fought by that famous regiment during the great rebellion; was mustered out May 5, 1864, and re enlisted in Co. E. Hatche's batallion, Aug. 24, 1864. He was mustered out as sergeant at Fort Snelling, May 1, 1866, and he came to Rockford the 15th of May 1866 and purchased a half interest in a general merchandise establishment where he has continued in business for more than thirtyfour years. He has had several partners in almost all kinds of trade, but has always been the head and front of all undertakings; besides the general store, he owned and managed the Rockford Woolen Mills, for many years. He was post master from 1870 to 1885. He will be sadly missed, not only in the village, but in the country for many miles around. He had an extensive acquaintance and hosts of friends. He seemed to wish to help everybody and in many things seemed to be almost too liberal for his own interest. Although doing a large business and dealing with hundreds, it is said that he never asked a credit customer for a settlement nor used what is called a dunn, and never sued a man or attempted to collect by law. In all town, village, church and society affairs he was ready and willing to do his part.

He was married to Miss Martha Northrop, of Rockford, April 17, 1870. He leaves his widow, and four sons and one daughter, all married except the youngest son.

His funeral was held at the Presbyterian church on Sunday, the 9th. Rev. Mr. Hixon of the Episcopal church officiating. Rockford post, G. A. R took part in the ceremonies at the grave. A large number of visitors were present from the neighboring towns and villages and many from the City. He rests in Elmwood.

School commenced on Monday with a very fair attendance. Everything looks favorable for good schools.

Messrs Thompson and Falny, the contractors on Hennepin county road work had quite a mishap on Monday. It is a wonder that it was not more serious. They are gravelling the Minneapolis road east of the village and had six men loading gravel on at Thompson's farm one mile east. They had tunneled into the bank 12 feet or more and had neglected to put in props. While four men were back in the pit shovelling two were loading near the front of the wagon. The bank fell nearly covering the wagon and buroing four shovelers out of sight. They were dug out as soon as possible. No bones were broken, but they are sadly and sorely bruised. If all of the men had been behind the wagon there would have been a fatal ending to some of them. The injured are Sam Thompson, H. Cunningham, W. Cunningham and Mr. Falny, brother of the road contractor.

Maple Plain.

Plenty of rain now days and the ground is plenty wet for plowing.

Farmers are now busy cutting corn, plowing, and hauling out dressing.

Quite a good many from our town attended the State Fair last week at Midway. They bring home favorable reports of the Fair in the way of fine stock, gambling, horse racing, etc. Jim Hill and the Fair grounds are one.

School begun at Armstrong and Maple Plain yesterday. Hugh Mc Clain, of Greenwood, teaches the school at Maple Plain and Miss Jadwin, of Watertown, is the teacher at Armstrong.

Mrs. S. R. Spates, of Markville was in our town on Sunday.

Presiding Elder Hingley, of Minneapolis, preached at Armstrong M. E. church last Sunday afternoon. Elder Hingley is a good talker and makes his subject interesting to his congregation.

James Personett received a telegram Saturday afternoon from Newcastle, Ind., informing him of the death of his mother. He took the train that afternoon for his old home, expecting to reach there in time to attend the funeral Sunday afternoon.

B. W. Mills, of Buffalo, is spending a few days with friends in our town.

John Beer will soon have his new hardware building ready to occupy.

Marion Batdorf is building a new dwelling house on Drake's addition to Maple Plain.

Campaign cigars are quite plenty around Maple Plain just now. Maple Plain is a temperance town and the campaigners can have nothing stronger than cigars and double extract of buttermilk.

If all the men who are running for office in Hennepin county get elected this fall, there will be plenty of employment for the tramp to act as servants.

The mongrel daily press are trying to make the people believe all kinds of hobgoblins. Do they take the people for a lot of fools and lop eared jackasses or do they think we are such imbeciles we cannot read the hand writing on the wall or discern the signs of the times. The producer, the laborer, and the man of all work are confronted with a dangerous foe in way of trusts, combinations and corporations. The Minneapolis Tribune of Sept. 4 says the majority of farmers are in need of money like most other people, and if they have wheat in their bins, they will sell it, no matter what the price. And yet these same papers are all the time telling how prosperous the farmer is under this present administration, a high protective tariff, etc.; that the mortgages on farm property is being reduced at a rapid rate, when in fact it is not. What we farmers want from the daily press is reliable news. It is not the intention to give the farmer much for his wheat. What are we getting for farm produce, and what are we paying for all kind's of building material, sugar, coffee, etc.? And these papers keep telling the farmer that he is prosper ing right along, making money and getting rich. They know more about it in fact than the farmer himself. If some of these daily papers would cut down the size of their paper and give us something reliable and interesting we would like it better.

The cartoon business is being overdone. We are getting tired on opening the paper and seeing nothing but a mess of donkeys and asses. It may be amusement for fools and imbeciles, but nothing for the thoughtful person.

I have before me a paper called "The South Minneapolis Telegram". Think it is something of a campaign paper; just sprung into life perhaps. This is what it says on its editorial page. One J. A. Folsom, publisher of Folsom's Political Handbook, has just returned from a trip over the Soo line. He finds the sentiment strong for Van Sant in most localities. There were some farmers in one locality leaning a little toward Lind, but before Folsom left they were all wearing McKinley, Roosevelt, Van Sant buttons and shouting for expansion. Now just for fun we would like to see that farming community that flopped so easy at the bidding of this Folsom. Must be a queer looking set of fellows. You are welcome to those fellows votes and brains too if you think they will be any good to you. But in all probability these fellows made a bigger fool of their political friend than he has any conception of. All the fellows who wear McKinley, Roosevelt, and Van Sant badges tie their coat together with a gold ribbon. All of them will not vote the republican ticket. There is policy in politics as well as in war. Vote for your country's interest and not for corporations. FARMER.

LEIGH HUNT.

MINNEAPOLIS has as candidates for mayor, Dr. A. A. Ames and James Gray.

BRYAN is to be in Minnesota for a few speeches before November. Be sure and hear him.

THE Prohibition candidates for president and vice president are expected to make a tour of this state soon.

THE congressional nominees, Henry Truelson and Page Morris are making things lively in the northern part of the district.

MOST people seem to think John Lind is sure to be the next governor of Minnesota, and have a legislature that will back him up in his suggestions for the betterment of the laws of the state.

GOVERNOR LIND has appointed a committee to receive subscriptions for the Texas people who suffered loss by the great storm that recently visited them, killing and maiming many and destroying their homes. The committee organized by electing Dr. Rudolph Schiffman 369 Jackson street, St. Paul, chairman; J. C. Elie, of Minneapolis, Treasurer; H. P. Hall, of St. Paul, Secretary. Contributions can be forwarded to either the chairman or treasurer.

Republican Harmony.

At the Republican County Convention Tuesday, Chairman Farnham and Secretary Bertram were in harmony; both made eloquent nominating speeches and saw their candidates go down to defeat; of course they were in harmony.

The brush for Treasurer was the first jar. Hudek won out. Hanaford introduced his successor in office, and O. W. Crawfords' nominating speaker, D. R. Thompson, moved a unanimous nomination of Hudek. This looked like fairly smooth sailing.

Next came the terrible tussle for sheriff. J. B. Dally, who Sam Bartholomew nominated as the man who could beat John Nugent was the choice by one vote over Montrose's candidate, who J. M. Belden had nominated as the man having all the requisites of a first class sheriff, not forgetting to mention the one thing, sorry to say necessary, which our candidate also possesses. More unanimous harmony.

But when the Pidgeon failed to make the roost "harmony" turned loose in chunks, just to think of Billy Cochrane landing ahead of him.

When young Mr. Oakley and A. T. Larson received the same figures, but reversed, 73 for Oakley and 37 for Larson, harmony began to manifest itself to [illegible] convention. [illegible] the ball mane and head erect, eyes flashing, voice keyed up by intense feeling, harmony of course, the "Goliath" of Cokato, led onto the front of the rostrum the "David" of Buffalo, as if to introduce him, and took occasion to allude, in forcible terms, to the "boy" who had won, through the fact that "somebody went back on me. I don't know who it was! I don't care!" Mr. Larson said he never had voted a Democratic ticket. [possibly he may next time]. He even intimated quite strongly that Democrats were to blame for his defeat, but "I am satisfied". [soto voice "why don't you sit down then?] "harmony! chunks of harmony!!

Mr. Oakey made a few remarks naming some of the valiant party leaders, Page Morris, and others [slight applause.] Andy Bertram called the speaker's attention to the fact that Knute Nelson had been ommitted. He was then added to the list [more faint applause]. Mr. Oakley said if elected he would try to serve well.

Clerk of Court Vorse retired from the race after one vote. The Swedes had to have his place as they had failed up to that point. Mr. J. J. Erickson drew the most votes.

August Zech, of Victor, was chosen school superintendent much to the discomfiture of Monticello, Superintendent Lee and Boss Buckley, who had buzzed busily about during the night before, and the day, in favor of Delano's man. Mr. Zech made a few remarks and was thankful to the convention for his election. Harmony jarred again.

Mr. Pidgeon, defeated candidate for Judge of Probate, who had evidently been "too full for utterance" now took the floor and proclaimed to the voters that "I am not sore." "You must go home and work for the state ticket". "I am not sore". "Because votes making nominations unanimous are passed" is not a good reason for thinking them so. "I am not sore". Harmony by this time was getting a little monotonus.

Things ran on quite well, until the chairman of the county committee was to be elected. Here Judge Alley's friends tried to get him in, but the present incumbent got too many votes to permit of a change and the "harmonious" convention adjourned, Great ice bergs of "harmony" seemed to permeate the vast corridors of the stately Court House as the delegates, candidates, defeated candidates, and spectators passed out of the building.

World: President Schurman of Cornell made one admission in his speech for McKinley on Friday night that ought to be hung up "printed large," in every Republican headquarters: "Patriotism, thank God, is not the monopoly of any party."

National Watchman; President McKinley and Secretary Gage credit Mr. Bryan with possessing extraordinary power when they claim that he would be able to change the money base while strictly obeying the letter of their boasted gold standard law. In view of the fact that silver was demonetized in 1873 and both political parties demanded a return to bimetallism in their platforms for twenty years thereafter and bimetallism was never secured, Mr. Bryan must be an extraordinary man if he can do away with the gold standard while strictly obeying the law as it exists and receiving no assistance from Congress. Mr. McKinley, is not your position a little absurd?

Macrum and His Charges.

The secret understanding was proved when our consular agent Macrum's letters were opened at Cape Colony, in transit to Pretoria, by British agents. Macrum complained; the country was astonished; the people felt outraged. At first the administration sought to discredit Macrum's statment, but he came home to make good his assertions, and gave such evidence as established his claim beyond the shadow of a doubt. If any other country had attempted to dishonor America by opening her agent's correspondence she would have been called to account at once but as a result of the "Anglo Saxon Alliance" the American government was forced to tamely submit. It was [illegible] removal of M[illegible]roved by the [illegible]acrum and placing in his stead the son of the present Secretary of State, who was so eager for English advance that he went out to meet his cousins on their way to the Boer capitol. It was proved by the almost ridiculous state of terror and trepidation in which official circles found themselves when the Boer envoys had reached the national capitol. It has been shown in China. It is making itself felt every day to the detriment of the interests of this country and to the advantage of Great Britain.—Wellington's speech.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sep. 7, 1900.

Putting the American flag where it ought not to be is a McKinley specialty which has brought the country trouble and humiliation in big chunks. But that did not prevent his ordering the flag to be raised in the wrong place again this week. It is by Mr. McKinley's order to be raised over the notorious Li Hung Chang, who is to be taken from Shanghai to Pekin under its protection; and on board of an American War ship if he wishes, and when he gets to Pekin Gen. Chaffee and his brave American soldiers are to be his body guard. What a use to make of the American flag and American soldiers! This old rascal has been afraid to leave Shanghai -afraid alike of his own countrymen and the powers, with the exception of Russia which is said to own him body and soul. And now Mr. McKinley rushes into the breach and raises the American flag over him and takes him to Pekin, regardless of whether the other powers consider such action an affront or not, and he goes even further. He has promised Li Hung Chang that he would use his good offices to persuade the powers to enter into negotiations with him, although several of them have already refused to do so. Mr. McKinley's friendship for Li Hung Chang is really suspicious.

It would be easily possible to get a decision from the U. S. Supreme Court before the Presidential election on the case involving directly the Constitutional status of Porto Rico, and incidentally that of the other island possessions of this government, which has been appealed from the U. S. Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York; but the administration is too much afraid that the decision will be against its position to take any chances. Consequently it may be accepted as certain that the decision will not be handed down until after election. This is not meant to infer that the court will in any way be a party to postponing action on this important question for partisan reasons. That will not be necessary. In the several legal preliminaries necessary to advance the case to an early hearing it will be an easy matter for the attorney representing the administration, usually the Solicitor General, to head off the attempt to get a decision before election without resorting to any extraordinary methods.

Publicly the republicans pretend, of course, that their majority in Maine and Vermont are entirely satisfactory, but they put a very different face upon the returns when discussing them among themselves. Every man who has been through even the kindergarten of politics knows that if the same percentage of republican loss shown in Maine and Vermont is shown throughout the Union in November that it will mean the election of Bryan and Stevenson by a larger majority in the electoral college than McKinley and Hobart received four years ago. It isn't pretended over confidence that exists among the republican leaders now, but genuine alarm. They realize that the trend of public sentiment is against imperialism, and that if they cannot stop it McKinley and McKinleyism are doomed to a crushing defeat.

Dr. Habercom, who had charge of the German work for McKinley four years ago and who is now working for Bryan and Stevenson, says of the outlook, as judged from extensive correspondence with prominent German voters: "The Germans know all about imperialism. They know that imperialism can only be maintained by militarism and that militaryism means heavy taxation and inroads on the young and producing element of the population and most likely conscription. Following the European models compulsory service in the army or navy for all men might be demanded. The German voter is going to strangle the empire before it strangles him. I don't think the President's letter of acceptance did him any good. The most that can be said of it is that it is the strongest argument that can be put up in a weak cause."

Hon. Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, who was a leading democrat in the House for 26 years and in the Senate for six, indignantly denies the report that he had flopped to McKinley. In his own words: "There is not a word of truth in it. I am a rawhide democrat. I am not taking an active part in politics, but you can bet your life I will vote for Bryan and do all I can for him."

Ex-Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, who enjoys the re[illegible]putation of a close and conservative political observer, is in Washington. When asked his opinion of the situation he said: "The democrats are making steady gains. They are gaining strength every day in New York, in Ohio, in Indiana—in fact, all over the country. If the election occurred today the democratic vote would be larger than it would have been yesterday. This far, I think there has been no day when we were not stronger than the day before. Such a condition surely promises well for success."

AID FOR STUDENTS.

Yale University Has Opened Up a New Department.

Ways Provided by Which Men of Limited Means Can Pay Their Own Way Through College by Work Performed.

A new department has just been opened at Yale where students of limited means can secure an education by their own labor.

Prof. C. L. Kitchell has been appointed head of the new department, which is a sort of employment agency. He will go between the Yale men who need assistance and the merchants who are willing to give them work. Prof. Kitchell will also investigate applications for remission of tuition, scholarships, fellowships, the kinds of employment offered and the manner in which the work is done by the Yale applicant.

The opportunities for paying expenses at Yale are classified as follows by the faculty: Prizes and scholarships, monitorships and choir work, tutoring, remission of tuition, waiting on table, organizing eating clubs, acting as subscription agents, newspaper writing, typewriting and stenography, teaching in the schools, positions as clerks, telegraphers, conductors and motormen on street cars, ushers, ticket sellers at theaters and concert halls, and caring for yards, furnaces or residences of private families in the city. The force of men employed for electrical work by the Yale athletic organization is now recruited almost entirely from the undergraduates. In the theological school a new system goes into effect in the distribution of the money paid to the undergraduates. The divinity students will make pastoral visits, lead prayer meetings, call upon the sick, take charge of city missions, and will be paid part or the whole of their scholarship expenses, according to the amount of work they do. This policy of distribution of scholarship funds was made at the demand of President Hadley, who believes that the system formerly in vogue tended to pauperize the students.

The Yale officials state that never before have there been as many chances for earning a part or all of the college expenses as at present. The class which was graduated last June shows that of 327 members 15 entirely paid their expenses, 15 others nearly all, and a total of 69 paid a large part of their way.

KITE PHOTOGRAPHS.

Inventor William A. Eddy Gets Good Results from Recent Experiments in Mid-Air Picture Taking.

William A. Eddy returned to Bayonne, N. J., from Asbury Park with 30 kites and 39 midair kitol photographs, covering the entire circle of the horizon, including the ocean.

He says the most important of his many discoveries made there during two weeks was the fact that the Davis keel buoys that started across the Atlantic on August 30 and September 3 made a northeasterly course out to sea, towed by kites, while the wind was blowing diagonally on shore from the southeast.

The Bradley buoy, which started on September 3, was towed by three kites five feet in diameter, having five American flags supported in midair by 1,000 feet of steel wire. It is fitted with a bottle containing a message, and has proper fastenings, enabling it to float for years. The steel wire will rust off if the kites come down, releasing the buoy, which may float many years. Mr. Eddy thinks that the three kites towed the buoy out at least as far as the gulf stream. The pilot buoy sent on August 30 also had in it a bottle message and was towed by cord and one kite six feet in diameter.

Neither buoy has been heard from.

BLOWS UP HIS OWN BANK.

New Brunswick (N. J.) Youth of Inventive Genius Secures Pennies with Which to Buy Dainties.

Jimmie Fisk, the six-year-old son of a farmer living at New Brunswick, N. J., tried for an hour to get the pennies out of his savings bank by rattling them. Then he attacked the safe with a meat ax, but it wasn't any good. He perched the metal savings bank on a box, double-loaded the family musket and blazed away at it. The bank was blown to bits, and all the small boy had to do was to sort out the pennies from the wreck. He did this until he had 35 pennies. He then started for the "harvest home" of the Methodist church, which had been his objective point.

His father found the musket and the pieces of the bank. He figured without much trouble where Jimmie was, and went after the young burglar. He found the boy sitting at an ice cream table, eating his fifth plate. When he saw his father he made a bolt for it, dived under tables, chairs and the legs of church people and tried to get away.

Then began a boy hunt, in which everyone joined. Jimmie was soon captured. His father couldn't wait until he got home, but spanked him then and there before all the people.

NOT VERSED IN ROMANCE.

Manuscript of Scott's "Ivanhoe" Was Rejected by Many London Publishers.

By way of practical joke a typewritten copy of Scott's "Ivanhoe" was recently sent the rounds of the London publishers, under the title, "When John Was England's King." It was returned in every case. The London Academy amuses itself by imagining the form taken by the letters of rejection. It thinks Messrs. Macmillan might have written somewhat like this:

"Messrs. Macmillan & Co. regret to have to return 'When John Was England's King,' but they fear that interest in historical fiction is diminishing. Their reader's report of the story is in the main favorable, but he points out that the charge of imitating 'The Forest Lovers,' one of Messrs. Macmillan's recent publications, might perhaps be difficult to rebut. In his opinion the author of 'When John Was England's King' would perhaps have made a better and more readable book had he studied Mr. Hewlett more carefully."

Here is another burlesque letter:

"Mr. John Murry begs to return the MS. of 'When John Was England's King,' and to quote a passage from his reader's report thereon: 'I do not recommend this novel, although it is painstaking and thorough. The author would, I think, have been wiser had he chosen another name for his hero. Ivanhoe has already been used by Sir Walter Scott.'"

DEATH IN CUPS AND GLASSES.

Americans Warned Against Using Silver-Mounted Drinking Vessels from Abroad.

Walter Schumann, United States consul at Mainz, has called the attention of the state department to the danger to the health of persons using silver-mounted glasses and porcelain wares. He says a Frankfort newspaper some time ago called attention to the fact that certain kinds of silver-mounted and porcelain wares, such as cups, glasses, jars, vases, etc., had been placed upon the market.

"The silver on these articles," he says, "is applied by means of a galvanoplastic process in baths which contain large quantities of potassium cyanide. As glazed wares have innumerable hair-like cracks, this deadly poison enters these cracks, and the articles, beautiful to look at, become a severe menace to the health of anybody using or handling them, and especially as it is impossible in the course of manufacture to remove this poisonous residuum.

"Only a short time ago a very severe case of poisoning resulted from the use of such ware. I am told that these goods are chiefly exported to the United States from Frankfort, Berlin and Stuttgart. It might be well for the public to be informed of the danger in these goods, and steps might be taken to prohibit their sale."

SPIDER TIME IN MANILA.

There Is Great Sport for the Filipino Boys in Making the Insects Fight.

When "spider time" arrives the Filipino boy is happy. He does not know much about marbles, but when spider time arrives, and that is just after the rainy season begins, he knows that he is to have great sport. There are two harmless varieties of spiders that are green and yellow in color that mature in June. They are as large as the common black spider so plentiful in California. The Filipino boy catches these and keeps them secure in a box. A small rod the size and length of a knitting needle is procured. A spider is then placed on the rod. Another boy comes along and he bets a cent that his spider will whip, says the San Jose (Cal.) Mercury. Then the sport begins.

The boy who is challenged produces his spider, places it on the rod with the challenger's. Each spider makes a rush for the other and a fierce battle ensues. Sometimes the stronger of the two will wind a web around the other, fastening him to the rod and completely "putting him out of business." The spiders sometimes fight for ten minutes. Nearly every boy has from eight to ten spiders, and they bet all the Filipino pennies they can get on the result of the fight.

MORAL SUASION ON A DOG.

How a Minister Easily Overcame the Animosity of a Belligerent Canine.

A clergyman who went up into the country to preach and lived there a considerable time had occasion in his ministrations to drive regularly over a certain road. At a house on that road lived a big bulldog which always came out and attacked him viciously. The minister stood this for a good while, until finally, as he drove past one winter night in a low sleigh, a means of correcting the dog by moral suasion occurred to him. He stopped his horse in the road before the house. The dog rushed out madly, barking and threatening to jump into the sleigh. The minister sat in his sleigh and paid no attention. The dog retired, returned to the assault, retired again, and a third time rushed out to the attack, but did not touch the man. Then he returned to the doorstep and laid down, apparently utterly crestfallen and disgusted with such a man; and, as he paid no further attention, the minister drove off. After this the minister drove many times past the house, but the dog paid no attention to him, and never seemed to see him at all. He was cured.

DELAND, Wright Co. MINN.

Did anyone ever read of a girl who was not beautiful being gallantly rescued from anything? Only children whose parents were not prominent? Why, dear?

Another family has been poisoned by eating toadstools for mushrooms. This fact seems to make it necessary to repeat once more as to mushrooms: Eat them, and if you die, they are toadstools; if you do not die, they are mushrooms.

People marvel at the mechanism of the human body with its 492 bones and its nerves and muscles and says how simple a railroad train is as compared with the human corp. That remarkable fish moves by fewer than 4,386 bones and muscles of human beings. It has 4,320 bones to say nothing of its 99 muscles.

A New York doctor recommends as a cure for consumption the drinking of buttermilk, and that the buttermilk be that of cows in milk, not that resulting from churning, usually called stripping, before the cream has obtained its natural heat. As a matter of fact, consumption is almost unknown in India, where buttermilk is the common drink, and it is possible that the disease was introduced into Wisconsin by those who had been benefited by buttermilk, evidently.

Mr. Hill of Lodi, Wis., died the other day who was a record of frugality and honesty and love for children. As to the latter, it is said: "At his funeral the children of Kenosha outnumbered everyone else." Many a boy and girl who was dead to all joy in childhood will in future years have a more tender memory of Mr. Hill than if a marble mausoleum will not have such a noble and honorable an epitaph as that simple statement of fact.

After all, we know but little about this world of ours. Sven Anders Hedin, the famous Scandinavian geographer, who has been making extensive explorations in Thibet, has found the ruins of an ancient city of great size. There are great broad roads intersecting the ruins, roads such as China cannot show to-day, and Hedin says that everything in the city was built upon a grand scale.

Russia expects to spend $100,000,000, in addition to the $40,000,000 already laid out, to complete and equip the Trans-Siberian road, and M. Boutfsky, a vice minister, who is at present in San Francisco, is authority for the statement that a considerable part of this immense sum will come to this country, it being the Russian government's intention to patronize American manufacturers very largely.

Frank Morehead, a New York insurance agent, had a bad fall from a bicycle lately on account of a New Jersey mosquito which insisted upon making itself acquainted with him. While raising his hands to drive it away he fell, but was not seriously injured. There are people who in preference to accepting this version will think that the mosquito very probably pulled him off his wheel.

A street faker in Kansas did a thriving business selling electric belts until some one examined one of them. Then it was found that beneath a strip of gauze was a layer of dry mustard. When the wearer perspired a little the mustard was moistened and set up a burning sensation, and the deluded victim believed in current of electricity was passing through him. Before all this was discovered, however, the fakir had smelled danger and was on his way to another gullible neighborhood.

A boxing match in a New York athletic house resulted in the pounding to death of one young man so that his life was despaired of. This is not unusual in clubhouse boxing matches. But the great point is that the victor was practically without scientific training. This shows what unaided native ability can do. True, with a careful training he might have killed his man on the spot, but even without training he came so near it that all ambitious young men who are so situated as to be deprived of scientific preparation must feel encouraged.

A Boston fire insurance company recently made an interesting investigation to discover, if possible, whether there is any reason for the popular belief that rats and mice set fires by gnawing matches. The experiment covered a period of three months. Rats and mice, singly or several at a time, were confined in large iron cages containing matches of various kinds and cotton waste. The mice, no matter how hungry they were, never gnawed the matches, but the rats set several fires, the sulphur matches being in each case the instrument.

The department of agriculture has issued a report on investigations of the big trees of California that brings out some interesting and new conclusions. It shows that the dimensions of the big trees are unequaled; that their age makes them the oldest living things. They are described by the report as the "grandest, largest, oldest and most majestically graceful of trees" and the scarcest of known tree species, with the extreme scientific claim of being the best representatives of a former geologic age." Being the oldest, they ought to be honored.

For years cattlemen have dominated the grazing country around Okmulgee, the capital of the Creek nation in Oklahoma. Now a Kansas City firm proposes to turn the rich valley into a gigantic wheat field. Already 25,000 acres have been leased. The Indians for years received only 25 cents an acre from the cattlemen for grazing privileges, and the entire country was given up to this. The new firm offers them 25 cents an acre for all lands and one dollar for all lands in cultivation. It agrees to erect wire fences and make other improvements.

WEST AND SOUTH.

It is announced by Gov. Sayers that at least $1,500,000 will be required for relief work. Ten thousand persons in Galveston are absolutely destitute and many thousands more nearly so. Contributions amounting to $750,000 have been received or pledged and provisions are flowing into Galveston, but not in adequate quantities. More than 2,000 bodies have been identified. Five hundred bodies have been burned, others buried in trenches. The latest estimates place the property loss from the storm close to $40,000,000. Galveston capitalists plan to rebuild the city on its present site, declaring it will rise to former greatness. Many residents are panic-stricken and are determined to seek safer home sites.

A census bulletin gives the population of Grand Rapids, Mich., at 87,565, as compared with 60,279 in 1890, an increase of 27,287, or 45.27 per cent.

The burning of bodies continues at Galveston, jewelry being consigned to the flames with the dead owners. The citizens are determined to build a city of substantial structures. Congressman Hawley severely criticised Quartermaster Baxter's report that the city was ruined. Conservative estimates place the loss of life at Galveston at 6,000, and this number may be exceeded. Relief contributions have reached a total of about $1,300,000. A more hopeful feeling is prevalent in Galveston and business is being resumed gradually. Life insurance companies will suffer heavily by the great storm. Relief committees from points along the coast call on Gov. Sayers and state their needs. Thousands of persons in the devastated district need food, clothing and money.

All of the engineers and firemen of the Monon road asked for an increase in wages, but were refused.

At Columbus the democratic campaign in Ohio opened, with W. J. Bryan as the principal speaker.

Responsive to a call of the commissioner of education at Manila the University of Chicago will send teachers to the Philippines.

According to reports from agents for lumber and logging concerns in the Puget Sound district a brisk demand exists for men at good wages.

Several Chicago and Milwaukee banks are offered a large share of the new German loan of $20,000,000.

It is announced that the population of Des Moines, Ia., is 62,139, as against 50,093 in 1900; an increase of 12,046, or 24.05 per cent.

Bay City, Mich., shows a population of 27,628, as against 27,839 in 1890; a decrease of 211, or .75 per cent.

In Chicago Peter Hartman, of Burkett, Ind., was murdered by thugs in an alley.

Many persons were at work trying to clean the streets of Galveston. Military authorities preserve order. Gov. Sayers says $500,000 has been sent Texas sufferers from the disaster, but many times that amount is needed.

At Mary's Home, Mo., Mrs. Henry Smith, wife of a tiemaker, gave birth to five boys at one time.

By the capsizing of a boat six men were drowned at Eau Claire, Wis.

Near Nevada, Cal., a lone highwayman held up a coach, securing $30.

Because of a loan made to a friend and not repaid George S. Forbes, teller of the First national bank, killed himself in Chicago.

R. M. Davis, an ex-policeman in Chicago, shot and killed his 19-year-old daughter, wounded the girl's beau, Harry Connelly, and then killed himself.

Miners say the season clean up on the Klondike will be $25,000,000.

Fire destroyed the Merchants' and Planters' oil mill at Houston, Tex., the loss being $400,000.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

A large amount of gold has recently been sent to the Transvaal to protect the Boer indebtedness in Europe.

A Peking dispatch says Japanese arrested a Chinaman who confessed to killing Von Ketteler by imperial order.

Rev. Ira D. Sankey was greeted with remarkable enthusiasm by the people of London.

Peace Envoy Li Hung Chang has departed from Shanghai for Peking.

It is charged that French soldiers operating in China are guilty of murders and cruelties equal to those inflicted by the Boxers.

Oom Paul Kruger, according to a dispatch from Lord Roberts, has resigned as president of the Transvaal. He is held practically a prisoner by the Portuguese government at Lourenzo Marques, not being allowed to see friends or Boer officials. Lord Roberts has issued a proclamation urging the Boers to cease resistance.

Reports of widespread destruction wrought by the gale in Newfoundland continue to pour in. Many vessels were wrecked and 14 lives lost.

A jealous Italian returned to Caserto, Italy, from New York, killed his wife, seven others and himself.

American troops will not be withdrawn from China at present. Instructions were cabled Gen. Chaffee to agree to no disposition of troops or authority that will leave the native Christian converts unprotected. A Peking dispatch states that the ministers and generals of the allies have declined to treat with Prince Ching on the ground that they have no powers. American troops fought 2,000 Boxers near Peking and killed 200.

Lord Roberts issued a proclamation stating that President Kruger and State Secretary Reitz had crossed the frontier of the Transvaal into Portuguese territory, taking with them the state archives, with the view to sailing for Europe. He also reports that there is strong reason to believe that Gen. De Wet, who has caused the British so much trouble, was killed on September 7 near Potchesfstroom.

While insane Capt. Charles McQuiston, of Indiana, serving in the Philippines, attacked his men and was killed by a private in self-defense.

LATER NEWS.

THE STRICKEN CITY

Estimates of Dead at Galveston Vary from 5,000 to 8,000.

It Is Said the Damage to Property by the Storm Will Reach $40,000,000—Liberal Responses to Call for Aid.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 17. — State Health Officer Blunt left here Sunday for Austin, where he will make a report to the governor concerning conditions in Galveston. It is said that this statement will estimate the mortality at 8,000 souls. Dr. Blunt was in Galveston several days and made a thorough investigation of the results of the storm.

Damage Will Reach $40,000,000.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 14.—Estimates of the property damage due to the storm and flood in Texas, based on information supplied by Gov. Sayers, the managers of railway, telegraph and telephone companies, cattle men, cotton men, merchants and others, fix the total at $40,000,000. The final total is likely to go above these figures.

The Known Dead.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 15.—The Post prints a list of 2,701 names of the Galveston dead, compiled from various sources, but believed to be authentic. There were hundreds of bodies burned, buried at sea and in the sand, of which no identification was possible; there were other hundreds who were buried on the beach of the mainland, few of whom have been identified. There are many bodies still in the ruins of Galveston, and scattered along the beach of the mainland and in the marshes, where they were thrown by the water. Some of these bodies have been sent 20 miles inland along small watercourses by the rush of high waters. Taking all things into consideration, there seems no longer any doubt that the number of dead will reach beyond the estimates of 5,000 which has been made by Mayor Jones, Maj. R. G. Lowe and other reliable citizens of Galveston.

City Well Protected.

Looting and the desecration of corpses have ceased since the military have assumed charge of affairs, and they are cooperating harmoniously with the civil authorities. Sheriff Thomas is in charge of the isolated district, and is directing interment and the recovery of property there. United States Marshal Grant has been given full authority by Gen. Scurry, and is directing affairs on the mainland, aided by a troop of rangers, who are ordered to make short work of looters and arrest all suspicious characters. The Rangers and the militia and civil guards stationed at Texas City and Virginia Point are under the direction of Marshal Grant. These are the two points of ingress into the city. He also has control over all the railways running into this city and all craft plying between Virginia Point and Texas City, and no one can embark or disembark at these places without his permission, unless having authority so to do from his superior officers.

No Danger of Epidemic.

New Orleans, Sept. 17.—A special from Galveston says: A more hopeful feeling is observable everywhere and the situation is brightening rapidly. Water has been turned on. Sewers and closets are flushed. The downtown portion of the city is being rapidly cleaned of debris and filth and gutters and streets disinfected. Buildings are being cleaned and floors scrubbed. Damaged stocks are being removed and aired. Cars are going through the streets sprinkling lime and a solution of carbolic acid and disinfectants over the dead and decaying matter.

Great Liberality.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Dispatches show the generosity of many cities to the distressed in Galveston. A compilation presents the following figures:

New York	$158,496	Cincinnati	$6,685
Chicago	74,279	Col. Springs	6,500
St. Louis	56,574	St. Paul	6,000
Boston	29,056	Topeka, Kan.	5,000
Philadelphia	26,374	Charleston, S.C.	5,000
Pittsburgh	25,900	Los Angeles	4,000
New Orleans	24,531	Detroit, Mich.	4,000
Kansas City	14,134	Indianapolis	3,000
Louisville, Ky.	12,000	Helena, Mont.	3,000
San Francisco	11,500	Johnstown, Pa.	3,000
Milwaukee	11,046	Columbus, O.	2,629
Baltimore	11,000	So. Bend, Ind.	1,500
Denver	11,000	Springfield, Ill.	1,500
Minneapolis	10,000	Peoria, Ill.	1,000
Cleveland	8,641

Order Being Restored.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 18.—Galveston is beginning to look like itself again. Horse cars are in operation in the business part of the city, and the electric line and water service has been partially resumed. The progress being made under the circumstances is little short of remarkable. According to statements made by Gen. Scurry, Mayor Jones, Alderman Perry and others, there is equally good reason to believe that the progress of the work during the next week or so will be even more satisfactory.

The Death List.

A partial census of 11 of the 12 wards in Galveston puts the death list by the storm at 5,000. One hundred and seven bodies were recovered and cremated on Sunday and 100 more were found yesterday. The property loss is now estimated at $40,000,000 and 20,000 survivors of the disaster are being fed and cared for by the relief committee.

Buy a Battle Ground.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Under the provisions of an act of the last legislature the state comptroller's department has completed the purchase of a plot of 25 acres of land at Lake George, including the site of the old battlefield of Lake George.

Bank Robbers Foiled.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 18.—At an early hour Sunday morning an attempt was made to blow open the safe of the Wilton (Wis.) bank, by three men, but it was frustrated by three citizens who were passing and heard the explosion.

A Fatal Explosion.

London, Sept. 18.—The British commander at Taku cables that a fatigue party, engaged in destroying gunpowder at Tung Chow, has been blown up. Two British-Indian soldiers were killed. The wounded include 13 British-Indian soldiers, Capt. Hill and 11 British-Chinese soldiers and 11 Welsh fusileers.

More Plague Cases at Glasgow.

Glasgow, Sept. 18.—Five additonal cases of the bubonic plague have been reported here, four of the stricken persons being members of the same family.

ACCEPTS THE NOMINATION.

Bryan Discusses Issues of the Campaign—Synopsis of the Letter.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 18.—William J. Bryan in the letter accepting the nomination for president by the democratic party, given out Monday, while declaring that imperialism is the most important question before the American people, opens with a discussion of trusts. His reason for this is given as follows: "Having in my notification speech dicussed somewhat at length the paramount issue, imperialism, * * * it is sufficient at this time to review the remaining planks of the platform."

He declares that no defense of trusts can be offered, and that if elected he will favor the dissolution of every private monopoly which does business outside of the state of its origin. He declares the Dingley tariff law is a trust-breeding measure. He favors enlarged powers for the interstate commerce commission. He reiterates the position of the democratic party on the money question and says its position has not changed since four years ago. He favors the election of senators by direct vote of the people. He deals at some length with labor questions, denouncing government by injunction and the black list and favoring arbitration and a department of labor in the cabinet. The exclusion of Chinese and similar Asiatic peoples is favored. He favors generous pension laws, a Nicaragua canal, statehood for Arizona, Oklahoma and New Mexico, home rule for Porto Rico and Alaska, and a system for the reclamation of arid lands, and an income tax. He questions the ability of the republican party to work out the welfare of the Cubans. Foreign alliances are opposed. He objects to the abandonment of the Monroe doctrine and favors a protectorate over the Philippines.

REAR ADMIRAL SICARD DEAD.

Succumbs to an Attack of Apoplexy at His Summer Home in Westernville, New York.

Rome, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Rear Admiral Montgomery Sicard died of apoplexy at nine o'clock Friday morning, at his summer home, Westernville.

Montgomery Sicard, rear admiral United States navy, retired from he service September 30, 1898. He was born in New York in 1836, and, when 15 years old, entered the naval academy, where he remained four years. His promotion in the navy was rapid. In 1858 he was made master; in 1861, lieutenant; in 1862, lieutenant commander; in 1870, commander; in 1881, captain; in 1894, commodore, and in April, 1897, rear admiral.

POPULATION OF SUPERIOR.

Wisconsin Town Makes Remarkable Gain in the Last Ten Years According to Census Report.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The census bureau announces that the population of Oshkosh, Wis., is 28,284, as against 22,836 in 1890; an increase of 5,448, or 23.86 per cent.

Superior, Wis., leads all other cities in the country as regards the percentage of increase in its population, so far as the returns of the census office show, and has graduated to the 25,000 class of cities. The percentage of gain is 159.46, the population being 31.091, an increase of 19,108 over 1890, when the population was 11,983. It will be seen that Superior almost trebled its population.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The census bureau announces that the population of Des Moines, Ia., is 62,139, as against 50,093 in 1890; an increase of 12,046, or 24.05 per cent.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The population of the city of East St. Louis, Ill., as officially announced, is: 1900, 29,655; 1890, 15,169. These figures show for the city as a whole an increase of 14,486, or 95.50 per cent., from 1890 to 1900.

The population of Newport, Ky., is 28,301, as against 24,918 in 1890; an increase of 3,383, or 13.58 per cent.

Official Vote of Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 18. — The complete vote in the recent state election for governor, the only contested office, was announced Monday officially. The total number of votes cast was 132,979, of which Jeff Davis (dem.), received 88,637; H. L. Remmel (rep.), 40,701; Abner W. Files (pop.), 3,641. Davis' majority, 44,295; plurality, 47,936.

Sale of a Mine.

Denver, Col., Sept. 18.—The News announces that Mr. Thomas F. Walsh will receive $13,000,000 for his Camp Bird mine at Ouray, Col., from a syndicate of English and American investors, headed by Alfred Beit, the South African diamond king, and J. Pierpont Morgan, the New York banker.

Cuban Elections.

Havana, Sept. 18.—Election returns in Cuba so far indicate equal strength of nationalists and republicans in the constitutional convention. No returns from Santiago.

Bible House to Be Sold.

New York, Sept. 15.—The old Bible house at Fourth avenue and Ninth street, home of the American Bible society for nearly 50 years, is to be sold and the great printing establishment of the society probably will be given up and the Bibles printed by contract.

Meets at Gettysburg Next.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 14.—The national encampment of the Union Veteran legion on Thursday elected officers. Gen. W. R. Wooters, of Philadelphia, was chosen national commander. Gettysburg, Pa., was chosen as the next meeting place.

FOUGHT WITH BOXERS.

Americans Victorious in a Recent Engagement—They Suffer No Loss.

Tientsin, Sept. 14, via Shanghai, Sept. 17.—A British signal officer reports a sharp engagement between a company of the Fourteenth United States infantry and 2,000 Boxers at Mo Tao (Ma Tow?) on the road to Peking. The Americans made a gallant stand, and a detachment of Bengal lancers near by, hearing the firing, came to their rescue and charged the Boxers in the rear. The Chinese were routed, leaving 200 dead. The Americans had no casualties. The Germans report an engagement with a heavy force of Boxers west of Peking. The German loss is said to have been 20. Indications now point strongly to the withdrawal of all the powers from Peking to Tientsin.

The Peking correspondent of the Daily News says that the assassin of Baron von Ketteler has been shot.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The desire of China to actually begin the negotiations for peace was evidenced Monday in a dispatch from Prince Ching, delivered by Minister Wu to the state department. The dispatch was dated at Peking, September 8, and in it Prince Ching states that he has been clothed with full authority, along with Li Hung Chang, to negotiate for peace. He expresses a desire to proceed in the matter and asks Minister Wu to submit a request to the secretary of state to send instructions to Minister Conger to begin the negotiations at once.

VICTIMS OF FLAMES.

Fire Destroys Salvation Army Nursery, Five Infants and One Adult Perishing.

Cincinnati, Sept. 18. — A branch nursery of the Salvation Army at No. 403 East Front street burned Monday evening, and its occupants were imprisoned so that many were suffocated to death and others seriously injured. At 4:50 p. m. Walter Fisher, a barkeeper in an adjoining saloon, discovered the fire and sent in a still alarm. On account of the cold weather a fire had been started in the stove for the little tots who are cared for there during the day while their mothers are engaged at work elsewhere. It is thought that this caused the fire, through some defect in the flues or other parts of the old tenement building of four stories.

The dead are: Myrtle Farrell, aged six; James Harkins, painter, aged 40 years; Herbert Harkins, aged four years, son of James Harkins; Rhoda Harkins, aged five months; Maggie Williams, aged three months; Edward Mullen, aged four years. All of the dead bodies were burned to a crisp and the charred remains of James Harkins were clasping what was left of his little son Herbert. The property loss was only $1,500.

GREAT STRIKE BEGINS.

Anthracite Coal Miners Lay Down Their Picks—112,000 Men Reported Idle.

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—The great strike of mine workers in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania, which represent practically the hard coal output of the world, began Monday. According to President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers of America, who is personally directing the strike from his headquarters at Hazleton, the success of the four days' effort to tie up the mines exceeded the expectations of the strike leaders. The hard coal region is divided into four great districts, the Lackawanna, Wyoming, Lehigh and Schuylkill regions. In the first two, representing nearly 90,000 men, the tie-up is practically complete. Only one mine, employing a few hundred men, is being operated, and this the strikers say they hope to close soon. In the Lehigh region the situation is a standoff, about 8,000 of the 16,000 mine employes having quit work.

SIX DROWNED.

Thrown Into the Water from a Boat Near Eau Claire, Wis., They Fail to Reach Shore.

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 17.—Eighteen men employed by the Northwestern Lumber company were crossing the pond above the mill dam on the Eau Claire river in a batteau early Saturday evening. A heavy gale dashed the waves over the side of the boat and swamped it. Eight men attempted to swim to shore, about a quarter of a mile distant, and six of them were drowned. The dead are: John McQuestion, Andy McQuade, John Leiter, Al Carr, Thomas Cameron and William Brayfrock. Two swimmers reached the land exhausted. The ten men hung to the batteau and were rescued by another crew.

Tragedy in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Despondent because his daughter Elenora was to wed Harry Connelly, Erastus M. Davis, 214 East Eightieth street, Cheltenham, shot the young woman twice, wounded Connelly and then shot himself through the heart, dying immediately. The daughter expired ten minutes later. Connelly will recover.

Brutal Murder and Robbery.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 18.—A brutal murder, followed by robbery, was committed in a saloon on the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Marshall streets, H. R. Dickel, the proprietor of the place, being the victim. Although the tragedy occurred about two o'clock, nothing was known of it until nearly four.

Will Reconvene October 8.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The supreme court of the United States will meet here for the October term on Monday, October 8. There are 414 cases on the dock.

The Red Men.

Milwaukee, Sept. 14.—The next meeting of the great council of the Improved Order of Redmen will be held in New York city. The matter of revising the ritual of initiation was considered Thursday, and a condensed ritual was adopted for the use of such lodges as may require it, those in Alaska and Manila being cited as examples.

Offer to Care for Kruger.

The Hague, Sept. 17.—The government of the Netherlands has telegraphed to Lourenzo Marques offering a Dutch warship to bring Mr. Kruger to Holland.

LETTER GIVEN OUT.

Gov. Roosevelt Announces His Acceptance of Vice Presidential Nomination—A Synopsis.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Gov. Roosevelt in his letter accepting the republican nomination for vice president, given out Monday, expresses his thanks for the honor conferred.

He declares that the most important of all problems is that of securing good government and moral and material well-being within our own borders, and declares the present contest is for the continuance of our civil and political integrity. He says the policy of the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 is a policy fraught with destruction to every home in the land The trust question is a matter for state control, but, he says, when they decline to cooperate the national government must step in. On imperialism and militarism Gov. Roosevelt enters into a lengthy exposition of the past history of our government in the acquisition of new territory, and declares that in the pursuit of our present policy in the Philippines we are making no new departure, and are not taking a single step which in any way affects our institutions or our traditional policies. In conclusion, Gov. Roosevelt says that granting self-government to the islands under Aguinaldo would be simply placing them at the mercy of a syndicate of Chinese half-breeds, under whom corruption would flourish far more freely than it ever flourished under Tweed, while tyrannical oppression would obtain to a degree only possible under such an oligarchy.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Situation in the Business World as Reviewed by Dun—Effect of Galveston Storm.

New York, Sept. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "The tropical storm that devastated the gulf coast, almost wiping out the city of Galveston and doing damage in other parts of the country, caused reduction in the volume of business at the south, and railroads in the gulf region have probably not shown their maximum losses of earnings as yet; but even after such a catastrophe a recuperative power is shown. An added cause of hesitation in business is the order for a strike of anthracite coal miners. Otherwise the working force has increased this week, for operations are resuming at steel mills, and the Michigan-Peninsular car plant and the Deering harvester works have started up after seven weeks' idleness with 3,000 hands each. From many quarters of the west and southeast a better distribution of merchandise is reported in jobbing and retail circles.

"Wheat rose above 80 cents again, in the face of receipts for the crop year thus far 8,415,956 bushels larger than last year, while exports decreased 10,251,378 bushels, including flour. Reports of heavy rains in some sections and injury to the crop, with better inquiries by foreign houses, explain the advance.

"More orders are being received at the iron mills and prices are steady. In structural and finished material there is much business, and activity is becoming almost universal in the iron region. Steel rails are waiting for the agreement as to prices, which is expected to be reached next week. A reduction in keeping with other steel products is considered certain, and then the market will be on a settled basis. Some large makers favor $27.50 as the new basis and believe that nearly 2,000,000 tons would be ordered at that figure. Ship building was never more active, and a feature was a contract for a coal pier to be used in the export trade.

"Failures for the week were 195 in the United States, against 149 last year, and 30 in Canada, against 32 last year."

SAYS HOWARD IS THE MAN.

Witness Identifies the Prisoner as the Man Seen Running from State House.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 18.—Bowman Gaines, the most important witness for the prosecution in the Jim Howard trial, testified that Howard is the man he saw run out of the state house grounds and jump the fence immediately after the shooting of Goebel. Bowman Gaines was severely cross-examined by Col. Owens, but the witness insisted that Howard was the man he saw running out through the rear grounds of the state house

Deputy Sheriff Stubblefield testified that Jim Howard told him he killed Goebel. Stubblefield was at Howard's house and they were intimate friends.

First Heavy Frost of Season.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 18.—The first heavy frost of the season along the Mississippi valley was reported Monday morning. It was quite general and in some instances it was a killing one. The temperature fell from 80 degrees to 40 in two days. The sudden change is quite remarkable. The first frost came earlier than it has for some years. Along the southern Minnesota division of the Milwaukee road a heavy frost is also reported.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 18.—A heavy frost Monday morning damaged late corn and flax, especially in the northern part of the state. Flax was the dependence of many farmers, who lost their wheat by drought. The loss on flax throughout the state will be heavy.

Snow Falls in Two States.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 17.—A drop of 25 degrees in temperature turned a rain into a snowstorm in North Dakota and northern Minnesota Saturday. In some places it reached a depth of three inches. A heavy fall of snow occurred in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Noted Divine Dead.

Dayton, O., Sept. 18.—Rev. George Willard, a noted divine of the Reformed church, died here Monday night, aged 82 years. He was for a quarter of a century president of Heidelberg university, at Tiffin, O., and held various pastorates in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Cyclone in Georgia.

Augusta, Ga., Sept. 15.—A special to the Chronicle from Madison, Ga., says a cyclone struck there Friday night, destroying a number of negro cottages. Two people are reported killed.

A Dressmaker's Luck.

New York, Sept. 15.—Just after a city marshal had served Miss Georgiana Edith Simonson, a dressmaker of this city, with dispossess proceedings an attorney who had been seeking her for several days called on her and notified her that she had fallen heir to $25,000.

Section of Dam Gives Way.

Milwaukee, Sept. 15.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Wausau says: A 50-foot section of the big paper mills dam in Wisconsin river at Brokawa, three miles above Wausau, has been carried out, allowing a large volume of water to rush through.

PLANS CHANGED

REPUBLICANS HAVE NO AMMUNITION SO THEY WISELY DECIDE NOT TO SHOOT.

If Lind and Van Sant Were Governor—Eddy's English Alliance—A Kandiyohi Statesman—L. C. Long Is With Us. A Sure Cure for Insomnia. Flotsam and Jetsam.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 17, 1900.

The chairman of the Republican state committee has announced that the Republican press bureau has received instructions not to indulge in personalities or mud slinging attacks on Governor Lind. There is a good reason for it, too. After getting their guns ready the Republican managers made the discovery that they had no ammunition, and so they have wisely decided that they will not shoot. They claim to have other reasons, also, but the one mentioned is entirely sufficient. There is a story that the people of a certain Swedish village failed to have a royal salute fired on one occasion when the village was visited by the king. The mayor offered an apology, saying that there were fourteen reasons why the salute had not been fired, the first of which was that the village had no cannon. "Stop right there," said the king," that one reason is sufficient; you don't need thirteen more."

The Goodhue County News thinks it is a pity that Governor Lind and Van Sant cannot both be elected. If they could everything would be lovely. Governor Lind could look after the interests of the state as he has been doing without interfering with his colleague, who never bothered his head about the interests of the state, and invariably forgot to vote when some interest of the state was involved while he was a member of the house.

And Governor Van Sant could continue to go up and down the state shaking hands as he has done for the last two years.

But the constitution and bylaws unfortunately provide for only one governor.

And the people will prefer the one who is carefully informed of every detail of the state's business, cordially in sympathy with every purpose of the people, unweariyingly zealous for what is just and right.

While Captain Van Sant in private life can continue to shake hands with everybody and be the genial, jolly good fellow that everybody likes, whom everybody wishes well.

It seems that Congressman Eddy of the Seventh Minnesota district is pinning his faith to the support of the Canadian and English-born voters. He thinks that they will, as a matter of course, vote the Republican ticket this year. Maybe so. According to a report from Mr. Eddy to Chairman Babcock of the Republican congressional committee, as wired from Chicago to the Minneapolis Tribune, there are 26,000 Canadian voters in the state, and many English-born citizens who have heretofore voted the Democratic ticket for the sake of free trade, but who will support the Republican party this year because the Democrats sympathize with the Boers. Then, there is the further reason, also, that McKinley and his secretary of state, Hay, have in many ways shown a desire to "loaf around the throne." So Mr. Eddy hopes to get the votes of those who by reason of early training and traditions may be supposed to look with fondness on a possible alliance between the United States and England, don't you know. It is more than likely that even as regards the Canadian and English-born citizens Mr. Eddy reckons without his host. But his open flirtation with them will not be relished by the other citizens, who do not believe in an alliance with England, but who want American ideas to obtain in this land of ours.

Mr. Henry Feig, once a Republican candidate for congress and still a loyal member of the G. O. P., has been racking his brains in search of an irrefutable proof that the gold standard is a good thing. And he thinks that he has found it. In a letter to the Willmar Argus he presents this argument, which he regards as unanswerable:

"Not far from the shores of beautiful Green lake, in section 7, town of Harrison, lies the farm formerly owned by N. P. Aspinwall, and comprising 234 acres. He offered it for sale for a long time owing to ill health, but during the Cleveland regime nary a buyer appeared. Three years ago he sold it to a party who, owing to reasons I need not allude to, let it go back to Mr. Aspinwall after a year's possession. He then sold it in the spring of 1898 to Hans Dahl, one of the most prosperous farmers in that town, at $22.50 per acre. Now, after a possession of less than two years and after taking two crops off it, Mr. Dahl has sold the farm for $7,000, or $29.91 per acre. Here, Mr. Editor, is an object lesson in facts and figures. Mr. Aspinwall a few years ago couldn't get a buyer at all and now Mr. Dahl makes a profit of nearly 25 per cent after 18 months' possession. Surely this gives the lie to the pessimistic prophesies of Bryan, Lind & Co."

Only think of the high plane of intelligence on which the man must stand who thinks that Mr. Bryan's belief in free silver is responsible for the sluggishness of the real estate market during the Cleveland administration, and who votes the Republican ticket because now one of his neighbors has bought some land in Kandiyohi county for $22.50 and sold it for $29.91 per acre!

The editor of "Nye Normanden" in Minneapolis has discovered a sure cure for insomnia and he recommends it to his fellow knights of the quill. The recipe is this: Place a lamp on a chair in front of the bed. The lamp should have a pale green shade with the word "Prosperity" in transparent letters on that side of the shade which is turned toward the patient. Then put on a pair of glasses like those used by Roosevelt, assume a comfortable position and take a Republican paper and start in to read the 5,000 words of McKinley's letter of acceptance to the Republican national committee. This is warranted to cure the most stubborn case of insomnia, unless the patient has an incurably bad conscience.

The friends of reform will rejoice to learn that Mr. L. C. Long of Magnolia, Minn., who two years ago was the candidate of the Middle-of-the-Road Populists for governor, has declared that he will this year actively support, with pen and voice, Bryan and Stevenson, and the state ticket headed by John Lind. Mr. Long will be a tower of strength throughout the state.

Mark Hanna has issued another note of warning to his party workers anent the danger of defeat by reason of overconfidence. He is afraid that the Democrats will carry New York, and he intimates that the Bryan campaign managers will not be above the awful perfidy of using a lot of money for the corruption of the voters. Mr. Hanna, poor man, believes only in carrying on a campaign of education, and it grieves him to think that the other side has the sinews of war and will use them, while he would not stoop to such political methods. When his friend Rathbone secured Hanna's election to the United States senate by buying the necessary votes, Hanna resented this corrupt use of money by getting Rathbone a fat job as superintendent of the postal service of Cuba and thus exiling him from his native country.

Word comes from Washington that the Republican plan of campaign has been changed. The first campaign book issued by the Republican congressional committee is being suppressed. It is difficult to get a copy for love or money. The trouble is that the book was discovered to be full of boomerangs. There is an entire chapter devoted to "Colonies and Colonization," and in its so-called "proof" of the assertion that government by force is a good thing for the people who are thus governed, it quotes the condition of the people in India. It says: "Probably the most striking example of the advantages accruing to the population from a government supplied by experienced people of other blood and climate is in the case of India."

Hanna has discovered that this sort of thing, together with the style of arguments employed by Roosevelt in his notorious St. Paul speech, will not do. So new tactics are to be followed from this time on. The campaign speakers, as far as possible, are to hide the fact that the party is at war with Lincoln and the Declaration of Independence, and are to talk about the full dinner pail and the threatening danger to the single gold standard.

The campaign must be costing Mark Hanna's committee a mint of money. Here is The Enterprise of Omaha out for McKinley and imperialism. The Enterprise is the official organ of the Grand Lodge of the Free Masons of Missouri and its jurisdiction. The organ and the lodge which it represents have been pledged to keep out of partisan politics; but by some means The Enterprise has been turned into a Republican organ of the rankest kind.

The stock argument of the Republicans is the prosperity of the country as shown by the enormous increase in the exports of the country as compared with the imports and the consequent "favorable balance of trade." The idea is that we become rich by sending wealth out of the country and getting nothing in return. If we had 1,000,000 instead of 65,000 soldiers in the Philippines our "favorable" balance would be still greater, as it would be necessary to send more of our products across the sea, and our people would have more work to do. When a farmer buys a gold brick for $5,000, he secures a "favorable balance of trade," for he must take $5,000 worth of products away from the farm and bring nothing back. This kind of prosperity is produced by Republican legislation.

The Reform state campaign may be said to be just opening. While, with the state campaign, the state proper is ready for general campaign meetings, etc., etc., several of the counties will not hold their conventions until quite late. The general campaign, however, will not wait for those, but, under the impetus of the magnificent state ticket, which all agree upon ours to be, the campaign will go forward with great energy.

All eyes will now turn to the coming of Mr. Bryan in the closing day of the month and the first of another month. The particulars will be known next week, but it is certain that he will make a wider circuit of the state than he has ever done before. He will probably go in at Crookston from North Dakota, across the state to Duluth, thence through the Sixth district to the Twin Cities, where grand double meetings will be held, reaching Stillwater, if possible. He will go from the Twin Cities in to the Second district at Mankato, and out through the First district, with a grand meeting for Southeastern Minnesota at Winona. He is to be at La Crosse on the evening of Oct. 2; at Fargo and Grand Forks, N. D., on Sept. 28, and in Minnesota between those dates. P. S.

Frank C. Pease, sent up from Renville county to await the action of the grand jury, broke jail at Redwood Falls by unlocking the cell door, lying in wait for the turnkey, locking him in and walking out to liberty, passing the sheriff's wife on the way.

Wholly Unexpected.

"Is the head of the family in?" asked the agent at the door.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Management Complimented.

The officers of the State Fair association were tired the last night when the last rocket of the evening's entertainment had been fired and the last employe had checked up with the treasurer, and they seemed rather glad that the whole thing was over. The receipts including railroad coupons, entry fees, stall rents and privileges, will aggregate $100,000. The expenses, which this year include a number of permanent improvements amount to only about $80,000.

Nearly every exhibitor has expressed pleasure with the manner in which the affairs of the association have been conducted this year, and E. W. Randall, the secretary, comes in for a good deal of commendation.

Late in the afternoon the officers and members of the American Hereford Breeders' association called on the secretary in his office and formally expressed to Mr. Randall their appreciation of the many favors they had received. The secretary does not take all the credit to himself, but says that a great deal is due to his subordinates. In particular he mentioned Sergeant Leonard, who had charge of the police station at the amphitheater. He has shown good management in handling the crowds and has exercised discretion at all times.

Rates Equalized.

The state board of equalization, which met in St. Paul, adopted rules governing the equalization of assessments of banks, From the sum of the capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits of the bank, there must be deducted the amount of the legal authorized investments and real estate, and 50 per cent of the remainder will be considered as the basis of assessment. The assessments that were not equal to those of last year were raised to their average. Carlton, Anoka, Freeborn, Jackson, Lincoln, Pipestone, Redwood, Rice, Aitkin, Swift, Wabasha and Wright counties lead, all stock that was only a year old raised 10 per cent in value; while Benson, Kenebec and Red Lake counties had such stock raised 15 per cent; Renville, 5 per cent; and Polk 20 per cent. A reduction of 10 per cent was made in Itasca, Morris and Wadena counties.

A basis of value for the equalization of the assessments on horses was then adopted as follows: One-year-olds, $9 to $11 each; 2-year-olds, $15 to $17; 3-year-olds, $25 to $35. One-year-old cattle, $7 each.

Clever Swindle.

Two banks at Bricelyn, a small town near Blue Earth City, were nearly swindled out of $5,000 on telegrams sent from St. Paul. The swindle was worked through telegrams purporting to be signed by G. H. Prince, cashier of the Merchants' National bank of St. Paul. The St. Paul bank was notified by wire from the Bricelyn banks, that the draft has been honored as directed by the telegram. The officials of the Merchants' bank sent a message stating that the draft was a forgery, as no telegram had been sent by them to Bricelyn. The money was drawn by a confederate at Bricelyn, but the telegram announcing that the drafts were no good, resulted in the money being returned. The details of how the return of the cash was secured are not known to banking officials in St. Paul.

Tried to Steal.

The other night some thief attempted to steal the 125-pound marble clock from the woman's reception-room at the West hotel in Minneapolis. This is the fourth time a futile attempt has been made to steal one of the clocks at the hotel. In the morning the clock was missing from its customary place and was found on the Fifth street side near the scales. The thieves had managed to get it that far and then evidently gave up the job, as the clock was too heavy.

News in Brief.

At Osakis an uncommon freak of nature is displayed in the vegetable kingdom. Apple trees that have borne and given up a good crop of apples some time ago are now in full bloom and lilac bushes are budding and blossoming.

The St. Paul health department is hot on the trail of butchers who sell bad meats. Commissioner Chage asked the board of aldermen to revoke the license of Peter Glombitza, charging him with that offense, and the commissioner's request was carried out.

The largest steamer on Lake Minnetonka, The Tonka burned together with the barge Me Too. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Little Eddie Zebley of Moorhead, aged four, was run over by a loaded ice wagon with fatal results.

The attendance of the Minneapolis schools is upwards of 31,000.

The flour mill belonging to A. D. Ellis, at Oronoco was struck by lightning.

Burglars broke into the general store of Posz & Co., at Utica, and carried off a lot of plunder.

Mrs. Fred Reins, wife of a farmer living two miles west of New Richland, while driving to town with milk for the creamery, lost control of the horses and was thrown from the wagon, sustaining injuries from which she died five hours afterward.

Reports from the apiarists of the state go to show that the supply of honey will be light this year, on account of the dry summer, the light clover crop and the small flow of sap in basswood trees.

Anton Anderson, while asleep walked out of a second story window of a hotel in Hastings falling 20 feet. He was badly shaken up but not seriously hurt.

Peter M. Kerst was appointed by Bank Examiner Pope to the position of assistant bank examiner, taking the place vacated by Captain Compton, recently appointed commandant at the Soldiers' Home.

Gebbard Otto was taken back to the state prison at Stillwater by State Agent F. A. Whiitler, having broken his parole by becoming intoxicated. He was sentenced in 1889 on the reformatory plan from Dakota County for the murder of Mathias Klein, the well known hotel keeper of the above named town, and paroled last January.

The state auditor received the August statement of the earnings of the state prison from Warden Reeve, showing receipts of $10,387,68. Of this amount, $5,102,63 is credited to the current expense fund, and $5,285 to the revolving fund.

SQUIRRELS AS PETS.

How to Buy and How to Give the Interesting Animals a Home That Is Not a Cage.

A more entertaining and interesting pet than a squirrel it would be hard to find, and a less troublesome and prettier pet in the animal kingdom there is not. Contrary to general opinion, the sqirrel is the least expensive of all pets. To a coarse-grained individual there may be pleasure in keeping a squirrel in one of those little prison cages where they are pestered with fleas, cannot breed, and generally end up by becoming paralyzed in their hind quarters; but not so with persons who are sensitive. Pleasure comes only to them through seeing their pets enjoy existence and not in the mere possession of them, says a writer in Forest and Stream.

That the large black, fox and silver gray squirrels can be kept around the house and grounds in much the same manner as a pigeon I have proved to my entire satisfaction. This can be managed in the following way: (1) Have your squirrels paired properly—male and female that are not related. To be sure of this, never rely upon a dealer's word, but buy one animal from one dealer and the other from another. This is most important, for animals will not breed that are out of the same nest, and are very likely to leave, hunting for a mate. (2) Procure a box, say about three cubic feet, place a smaller box inside of this, in which is some manila for bedding. Close the box up with boards, all but a small opening, in which you can just put your hand. (4) Place a very liberal supply of mixed nuts and sunflower seeds, but not roasted peanuts. Hoist the whole affair into some lofty tree or the corner of the barn. If the barn is of brick, then a wooden pole or two must lead to it. Secure firmly. (6) Place your squirrels and some water vessel in the opening and cover with inch-mesh wire netting. Water daily. (7) After a few days, say three or four, you can take off the netting and allow them out an hour or two before sundown. Sprinkle the ground immediately beneath the nest with nuts, and place the water in a position where cats cannot molest them. (8) From this time on never disturb the nest. Every time the squirrels are frightened they will run to their nest; let them be at peace there. Dogs are not cunnig enough to watch a squirrel, and the large varieties are not molested by cats. You will observe your pets will leave their box very cautiously at first, the tree will be thoroughly explored, and the least noise will send them rushing back to their retreat.

Squirrels mate in the fall of the year, when the hickory nut shells. They have their young in the early part of March. These are born naked and blind, and number from one to five, according to the amount of food on hand. Squirrels never hibernate in the true sense of the word, for they will come out on the coldest day in the year and eat some snow—in fact, they are out 365 days a year. Even the chipmunk and the flying squirrels will not hibernate as the ground hog does, but pop their little noses out for a breath of air and a bite of snow.

In buying squirrels always examine their teeth and see that they are not curved into tusks; also see that their coat is glossy, and be sure that they are not suffering from partial paralysis. A squirrel is one of the most active creatures in the world, and if it cannot run up and down a tree four times while a cat is going up once, then there is something wrong with its system. Extremely violent movements while in a cage are generally an indication of good health. To ship a squirrel a long distance successfully always place in with it the hardest nuts procurable for food, such as extra thick-shelled black walnuts or butter nuts, together with some moist food, such as artichokes. Provide straw and not hay to hide in, and line the inside of the box with one-inch mesh netting. If going a very long distance, such as to England, then place a water bottle in place of the artichokes, with a notice on the outside of the box: "Give us a drink."

North America is the home of the squirrel, although there is a single variety in Great Britain. The British representative is a common small animal, not nearly so interesting as our little red squirrel. It extends throughout Europe, and is the same variety that is found in such immense numbers in India. There is anotner variety in the vicinity of Lapland—quite a handsome animal with tufted ears and bushy tail. This animal is migratory, and in migrations will often cover an acre of water, swimming across small lakes and rivers in its efforts to get to a good nut-bearing district. As a fur-bearing animal there are few skins as handsome as that of the Russian squirrel. This fur is as beautiful as the ermine, and resembles it with the exception that it has a narrow strip of gray down the center of the back. I should think that with a little trouble, or rather pleasure, it could be bred pure white. As far as I know there are no varieties of squirrels in Africa or Australasia, or even in South America, and with the exception of the above varieties the rest are confined to North America.

Seals Do Much Damage.

Henry McCabe, of Bath, Me., who for the past 20 years has been one of the leading fishermen on the Kennebec river, says this year the season has been only fair. The spring fishing resulted in a catch of about 3,000 shad. Of sea shad, which commence to run in after June 1, he has caught the same number to date. He says that something has got to be done right away to keep the seals out of the Kennebec, as they are making sad havoc among all kinds of fish in the river The fishermen will try at the next session of the Maine legislature to have the bounty on seals increased. The bounty now is one dollar. Mr. McCabe says: "If it is raised to about three dollars men will make an effort to kill them. One night this week I saw several seals opposite this city, and in one haul I found several shad with their heads gone. The seals did it."—Boston Herald.

Depreciation of Money.

In 1873 a silver dollar was worth one dollar and six-tenths in gold. In 1878, eighty-nine cents; in 1883, eighty-five cents; in 1888, seventy-two cents; in 1893, sixty cents, and in 1896 forty-five cents. Money may depreciate, but there is one standard stomach remedy, which has not changed in half a century, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It always has been the one unsurpassed remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles.

Not a General's Egg.

The freshness of eggs is carefully graded in this country, but our distinctions are surpassed in delicacy by those formerly in vogue among the British residents in India.

A distinguished general once happened to stop in Calcutta. At breakfast the great man was served with boiled eggs. He took one, broke the shell, and dropped it with an air of disgust.

"Here!" he cried to his servant, "what do you mean by giving me a bad egg?"

The man hurried to his master, and examined the egg with the utmost seriousness.

"I entreat your forgiveness," said he; "but it's all a mistake. The stupid waiter has gone and brought you an aid de camp's egg by mistake."—Stray Stories.

SUFFERING AND RELIEF

Three Letters from Mrs. Johnson, Showing that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cures the Ills of Women

Wrote for Mrs. Pinkham's Advice November, 1897

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am a great sufferer, have much trouble through the lower part of my bowels, and I am writing to you for advice. Menses are irregular and scanty, am troubled with leucorrhœa, and I ache so through my back and down through my loins. I have spells of bloating very badly, sometimes will be very large and other times very much reduced."—MRS. CHAS. E. JOHNSON, Box 33, Rumford Center, Maine, Nov. 20, 1897.

Improvement Reported December, 1897

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to tell you that I am improving in health. I am ever so much better than when I wrote before. The trouble through the lower part of bowels is better and I am not bloated so badly. I was very much swollen through the abdomen before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I still have a feeling of fulness across my chest. I have used three bottles of it and am on the fourth."—MRS. CHAS. E. JOHNSON, Box 33, Rumford Center, Maine, Dec. 13, 1897.

Enjoying Good Health June, 1899

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Since a year ago I have been taking your medicine, and am now strong and enjoying good health. I have not been so well for three years, and feel very thankful to you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I would advise all who suffer with female troubles to try your medicine."—MRS. CHAS. E. JOHNSON, Box 33, Rumford Center, Maine, June 1, 1899.

Puffs under the eyes; red nose; pimple-blotched, greasy face don't mean hard drinking always as much as it shows that there is BILE IN THE BLOOD. It is true, drinking and over-eating overloads the stomach, but failure to assist nature in regularly disposing of the partially digested lumps of food that are dumped into the bowels and allowed to rot there, is what causes all he trouble. CASCARETS will help nature help you, and will keep the system from filling with poisons, will clean out the sores that tell of the system's rottenness. Bloated by bile the figure becomes unshapely, the breath foul, eyes and skin yellow; in fact the whole body kind of fills up with filth. Every time you neglect to help nature you lay the foundation for just such troubles. CASCARETS will carry the poisons out of the system and will regulate you naturally and easily and without gripe or pain. Start to-night—one tablet—keep it up for a week and help the liver clean up the bowels, and you will feel right, your blood will be rich, face look clean, eyes bright. Get a 10c box of CASCARETS, take as directed. If you are not cured or satisfied you get your money back. Bile bloat is quickly and permanently

DELANO, FRIDAY, Sept. 21, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—There seems to be an increase in the amount of wheat coming into town lately.

—About $30 were collected at Catholic services here last Sunday, for the Galveston sufferers.

—Dont forget the primaries to be held Monday evening. Be sure and be out and bring your friends.

—The M. E. sociable to be held in the Hall, Wednesday evening is their annual sixo'clock dinner and sale.

—The M E. church will hold a social in the Hall next Wed. evening.

—Owing to the non arrival of some machinery the Grand Laundry will not be opened before early next week.

—Democratic county convention is to be held Sept. 25th. Primary is to be held Sept. 24, at the City Hall from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. sharp. Be sure and attend.

—The Episcopals will hold a 5 o'clock tea with Mrs. E. Lanway, at her home, a week from next Wednesday evening, Oct. 3

—The hitching places along the west side of River street are in very poor condition. The horses have to stand in mud up to their fetlocks at most of the hitching posts.

—Earl Horsington is at work on his new home. He promises to build a nice house. Ferdinand Kelsey is building a new born close by. South Delano is beginning to grow —Primary election for the purpose of electing five delegates to the democratic convention at Buffalo, Sept. 25, will be held Sept. 24, at the City Hall, between the hours of 7 p. m. and 9 p. m.

—Farmers are very busy just now doing up their fall work, cutting hay and corn, husking, and plowing, etc. The wet weather has delayed, and is crowding the work onto them all at once.

—Back shed politics seem to be in vogue this week; lengthy conversations being held by wire pullers with men too busy to read newspapers. The result may become more patent to the public later on.

—Quite a few Delanoites went up to Howard Lake today to take in the county fair. There has not been a very large attendance from here this year on account of the wet and cold weather.

—Mrs. Tupper, former eighth grade teacher here, was greeted on her arrival at Bolton's Saturday evening by a large party of her former scholars and friends. The affair was a complete and very agreeable surprise to her. A very pleasant evening was spent by those in attendance, the party disbanding about 12 o'clock. Coffee and cake were served as refreshments.

--Next Sunday evening Rev. Doran will preach his last sermon of the year in the M. E. Church. As soon as the pastor can be relieved he proposes to go to Eden Valley where he will take a much needed rest. Both Mr. and Mrs. Doran are failing in health and think that a few months rest will benefit them. Rev. and Mrs. Doran have made a vast number of friends in Cokato who will greatly miss them --Cokato Enterprise.

—In the line of sports, base ball has given way to foot ball here now. Last week the boys got a new ball with a view to practicing up and playing a few games this fall with outside teams, but they were somewhat surprised when they got a challenge from Litchfield High School team for a game at Litchfield, Saturday, the 22nd. They accepted the challenge and have been practicing for the last few nights by electric lights. They will take the morning train Saturday for Litchfield.

—The recent rains have raised the river a little so that you can see water some places where the wild rice is thinnest. Surely the raging Crow is a tame affair, and if the weeds continue to thrive as they have for the past few years, will be beyond the help of even heavy rainstorms. Then where will our boasted fire protection be? When the connections between the river and well are opened up the water will be about as apt to flow out into the river as into the well.

—The gypsie camp that located on the river bank south of town for 4 or 5 days last week, broke up and left for new fields of operation Monday morning. We understand that a few of our citizens and people in the country around invested in the fortune telling business, and they now undoubtedly feel easy as to what the future holds in store for them, and may also feel relieved of their surplus wealth over and above what they could possibly get rid of. Humbuggery and fortune-telling are twin sisters and fortune-telling is a daughter of superstition. It beats all what a lot of sixteenth century superstition still exists in this enlightened age.

David Welch and daughter, Mrs. Munday, of West Unity, Ohio, visited his neices, Mesdames Chance and Mulford this week. All four of them went to Minneapolis this morning for a visit.

Maple Plain.

Had our first frost of the season last night, but no damage done except to a few of the political candidates. The primary election comes off in Hennepin county tomorrow. After that there will be a shrinkage in the number of candidates for office.

It is thought we will have some nice fall weather now.

Baker Bros. are now running their sorghum mill. They do first class work.

George Taylor's folks are having the mumps.

James Personett returned from Ind. last Saturday.

Henry Griffon and wife, of Buffalo, were calling on friends in our town today.

John Williams, one of the old pioneers of Minnesota, coming here in 1855, was burried at Lewis cemetery, Armstrong, last Sunday. Mr. Williams settled in the town of Independence in the summer of 1855, but at the time of his death was living with one of his daughters in the village of Rockford. He was 83 years old at time of his death, was a veteran of the Mexican war and a Free Mason. So one by one the old settlers are passing away. He leaves five children and many friends to mourn his loss.

BOERS APPEAL

The Hague Sept. 15.--The Boer delegates, Messrs. Fischer, Wolmarans and Wessels, have addressed an appeal to all nations for intervention in South Africa. After expressing the conviction that the annexation of the Transvaal was only proclaimed with the object of enabling Great Britain to prosecute the war in an inhumane manner, contrary to international law, and to mercilessly pursue as rebels exhausted combatants hitherto recognized as belligerents, the appellants declare that with God's help, this will never be attained.

They assert that the South African republics have shown themselves to be worthy of liberty and that they will continue to struggle to the last breath against Great Britain's attempt to annihilate their existence as free people. The appeal concludes as follows:

"In the name of justice and humanity we appeal to all peoples to come to our aid in this supreme moment and save our country. We commit ourselves to God, trusting that our prayers will be heard."

SHOOTS HIS COMRADES.

Washington, Sept. 16. The war department has received information from Gen. MacArthur of the tragic death in the Philippines of Capt. Chas. McQueston, of the Fourth regiment of United States infantry, the result of a wound by a private soldier. Gen. McArthur's dispatch is as follows:

"Manila, Adjutant General' Washington: Chas. MacQueston, captain, Fourth United States infantry, died yesterday, Mangonone, Bacoor, Cavite province, 8:30 evening, resulting from gunshot wound, caused by private soldier. Capt. MacQueston in a fit of temporary insanity attacked men of the company, shot one or more and was shot himself in self defence. Further particulars when received" —Duluth News Tribune.

County Cullings.

Republicans failed to honor the Southeastern part of the county with candidates. Delano had several prospective, but they centered on school superintendent and lost all.

For members of the legislature our voters want well known men; men known to be, and to have been, in harmony with the party principles, who endorse the Kansas City platform; men able to look after the best interests of the state and the people, and to help elect a good man to the U. S. Senate.

If the Democrats, next Tuesday at Buffalo place good men in every position; men acceptable to their own party, they stand a chance of winning some offices. But if they take up the defeated Republicans for the sake of breaking up the Republican party they will doubtless find as in the past it would have been better to have nominated men in accord with the party.

Democrats should nominate only first class men for county commissioners and see to getting them elected. Members for the 2nd and 4th hold over. They are both democrats. By putting up good men the democrats should succeed in electing at least one out of the three to be chosen. This would change the complexion of the board for once, and might prove a good innovation.

Some of the ring are scouring the country for a candidate for this and that office, to help to carry different parts of the county. Foreigners, gold bugs, societies, churches are being catered to If everybody gets pleased in some place he is apt to be very much displeased in others. The best plan is to put up well known candidates, men whose character needs no defending, and who are capable of filling the positions to which they aspire.

Joint Debate. Expansion.

The joint debate at Endeavor church on the subject "Resolved that the expansion policy of the administration should be upheld by the people", came off according to programme Monday evening. In the absence of Prof. Hawker who was to preside. Rev. J. W. Valentyne introduced P. J Marsh as president of the evening. America was sung and Cary Dickinson took the floor for the affirmative. He labored hard, but filled his twenty minutes, but evidently found it harder to produce reasons upholding the expansion policy than he had anticipated. Henry E. Crandall followed in a set speech roasting the administration roundly for going contrary to the Declaration of Independence, and violating its obligation to administer the affairs of the government according to the constitution. Especially was he severe on the levying of import and export duty on goods between Porto Rico and the rest of the country. Mr. Crandall took twenty minutes, the limited time for his speech.

Frank Peterson for fifteen minutes argued that this is a great country; that expansion had been the motto from the start and the country had grown great under that plan. The democrats had done the expanding, taking in most all the land that had been added to the colonial possessions. He thought best to keep on expanding. Mr. Peterson was a little easier on the floor than his predecessors, and made about as fair a showing for his side as was possible in the limited time. Dr. Catlin, for the negative, made the points that we are a patriotic people, that we love our free and peaceful land; we love our flag for what it represents, freedom, peace and happiness; we love it more over our school houses than over possessions across the waters which necessitate the sacrificing of our sons, brothers and fathers for years to come. We are a christian people and believe in the commandment, "thou shalt not kill"; believe in the golden rule "Do ye unto others as you would that others should do unto you". He thought the question was, is it our duty to forcibly hold the Philippines, and from constitutional or from christian standpoint thought it not our duty.

In a ten minutes speech Cary Dickinson closed the discussion. He warmed up to his job fairly well in closing.

After the discussion, ice cream, cake and coffee were served. A fair sized audience was present and everybody enjoyed the occasion. Rev. Valentyne suggested that an occasion of the kind about once a month would be a nice thing.

Republican County Convention.

The republicans held their convention for nominating county officers, Tuesday, at Buffalo.

Ed Farnham, of Delano, was chosen chairman.

Andrew Bertram, of Monticello, secretary.

Usual committees were appointed and an adjournment till 1:30 taken.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

H. C. Bull, of committee on credentials, reported. The report was adopted, seating the following delegates.

The committeeon resolutions, J. C. Tarbox, D. R. Thompson, and August Johnson, offered the following resolutions, which were adopted:

We the representatives of the Republican party of Wright County in convention assembled renew our allegiance to the principles of the republican party as enunciated in the platform adopted by the National Convention at Philadelphia

We rejoice with all our citizens irrespective of party that the beneficient effects of the present administration has resulted in increased wages for American labor and furnished employment for all. New industries have been established, while the increase of our exports over imports has raised us to the dignity of a creditor and not a debtor nation. we rejoice that this prosperity has been general and not sectional, and that the misguided followers of Bryanism have been permitted to share the same.

We cordially endorse the policy of the administration in its efforts to restore peace in the Philippines and point to the significant fact that the enemies of our country in the Philippines are befriended by the followers of Bryanism in America.

We commend the services of our able congressman, Hon. Page Morris and pledge our best efforts to secure his re-election. We cordially approve the services of our Junior Senator, Hon. Knute Nelson, whose sterling integrity and ability has made him a fitting colleague and co-worker of Senator Cushman K. Davis, one of the foremost statesmen of America. We earnestly urge that the legislative nominees of this convention, if elected give him their undivided support to secure his return to the United States Senate at the close of his present term.

Wright County Press Association.

At the republican county convention at Buffalo, Tuesday, Sept. 18, it was found that all the papers of the county were represented by their editors at the reporter's table as follows, C. J. Bucklev, C J. Carlson, T. J. Catlin, C. A. French, L W. Ham, A. W. Nary, M. P. Satterlee, H. S. Saylor, F. W. Schmidt. It was suggested that a county press association would be a good thing. One suggestion brought on another until a motion was made and carried that we now organize the Wright County Press Association. So while the business of the convention was going on and between the announcements of votes, the editors seated at the reporter's table proceeded to organize a temporary association by electing officers as follows:

President, Dr. T. J. Catlin, of Delano.

Secretary, M. P. Satterlee, of Annandale.

Treasurer, A. W. Nary, Maple Lake.

On motion of C. A. French a committee on permanent organization and to draft Constitution and Bye Laws to be presented to the next meeting was appointed by the president as follows: C. A. French, F. W. Schmidt, C. J. Carlson. Motion made and carried that we hold the next meeting the first Saturday in December, at noon, at the Park House, in Buffalo.

On motion, meeting adjourned.

The organization of the Wright County Press Association at Buffalo, last Tuesday, an account of which appears in another place, will doubtless tend to produce peace and harmony among the editors of the county, and possibly result in bettering the newspapers to ths advantage of the readers.

IN MEMORIAM

Dedicated to Joseph P. Murphy.

In the church yard side by side
Are many long low graves;
And some have stones set over them—
O'er some the green grass waves.

Full many a little Christie child,
Woman and man lies there;
And we pass by them every time
When we go in to prayer.

They cannot hear our footsteps come,
They do not see us pass;
They cannot feel the bright, warm sun
That shines upon the grass.

They do not hear the church's bell
When tolling o'er their head—
They cannot rise and pray with us—
For all of them are dead.

But we believe a day will come,
When all the dead will rise;
And they who sleep down in the grave
Will wake up in the skies.

For Christ, our Lord, was buried once
He died and rose again—
He conquered death, he left the grave
And so will Christian men

So when the friends we love the best
Lie in their church-yard bed,
We must not weep too bitterly,
Over the happy dead,

Because for our dear Saviotr's,
Our sins are all forgiv'n,
And christians only fall asleep
To wake again in heav'n

—Horace Greeley Perry,
Boise, Idaho,
—Dassel Anchor.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN gives out the word that one term of President of the United States is all he seeks. If some of our local politicians would announce that this is the last term they will seek it would aid Wright County Democracy very much.

Democratic Harmony.

The actions of the democratic convention appeared extremely harmonious. If there were any of the great chunks of harmony, like icebergs that cooled the temperature at the republican convention they were quietly kept in the rear. They did not crop out on the platform. On the whole, after considerable deliberation along some lines, the tibket is composed of good men.

Lame Argument.

The St. Peter Free Press winds up a lengthy editorial on "A new Feature of Expansion" in the following words:

"Perhaps it would have been better if that part of the Paris Treaty ceding the Philippines to the United States had been rejected, but the mistake has been made and with the consent and advice of Mr. Bryan and it is too late now to abandon the islands unconditionally unless we are willing to make ourselves ridiculous in the eyes of the whole world."

If then, we have made ourselves ridiculous in the eyes of every liberty loving individual in the world, we must persist in our ridiculousness, at all hazzards. On the same principle if the editor of the Free Press should find that his neighbor's horse had slipped his haulter and wondered off, and in the morning was found occupying a stall in the editors' barn the editor would not dare suggest the idea of returning him to his owner.

In another place in the article the editor argues that:

"It should not be a difficult matter to dispose of the features of imperialism and militarysm for every thinking man must admit that an army of 100,000 men in a country of eighty million people is an innocent affair and that it would be ridiculous to countenance even the thought of its ability to establish either against the will of the people."

And yet the Free Press thinks that 60,000, men, thousands of miles from home, many of them sick, and laboring against all kinds of odds, can subjugate 8,000,000, of Filipinos. The United States army has expanded until it is four times larger than it was when McKinley became President, at the same ratio how long would it take to have an army in porportion to 80,000,000 as is 60,000 to 8,000,000, which the editor thinks capable of establishing imperialism and militaryism against the will of the people in the Philippines?

Democratic County Ticket.

Auditor Catlin would sound well: and be an assurance to everybody that they would have prompt and corteous treatment in all affairs connected with that office.

Alva G. Catlin, the candidate, is a son of Dr. T. J. Catlin, one of the oldest Physicians in the county and for eleven years the Editor of the GAZETTE. Alva was born in Delano, attended public schools and helped in his father's printing office until about seventeen, when he spent a winter in the pineries, in Northern Wisconsin, in a logging camp. In the spring he volunteered to free the Cubans from Spanish rule, was a member of Co. B. 13 th Minn., Vols.; saw service in Manila; was in every battle his company had, but one skirmish, then was on guard. His letters from Manila were read over Wright county very widely. When 11 years old he published the Delano Democrat for quite awhile, before his father purchased the GAZETTE. Physically he is an athlete, fond of outdoor sports. He is well liked and would make an obliging official.

For Treasurer John Nygren, of Cokato is a Swede, has run the Farmer's Elevator, at that place successfully, and is said to be a strong candidate for that office.

For Sheriff John Nugent is well known to every voter probably in the county.

For Register of Deeds. Andrew Trogan, a young Scandinavian of Silver Creek was sought out by the office. He did not seek the office. He was nominated as a fine penmon and competent man.

For Judge of Probate, Attorney W. H. Cutting, formerly County Attorney is a strong candidate.

For County Attorney W. H. Spath, of Waverly, will make a strong fight.

For Clerk of Court, Albert Neuman, of Cokato, a recent graduate of the Gustavus Adolphus College, at St. Peter will be apt to win.

For Superintendent of Schools no stronger candidate could be found on either ticket. He is qualified with a first grade certificut and has had experiance as a teacher and principal and knows what our schools need. His name is A. P. Ritchie.

Surveyor, Jo T. Moland, of Silver Creek, has held the office before and is known over the county.

For Coroner, Dr. G. W. Dahlquist, promises not to sit on the republican corpse until he is sure it is dead.

For Court Commissioner, Pliny Putnam, of Buffalo, is a candidate. He is highly qualified and his father has held the office so long that Pliny is probably familiar with the duties.

County Commissioners from the 1st, 3rd, and 5th districts are P. B. O'Loughlin, Charles Bugbee and C. M. Carlson. They are well known in their districts and are strong candidates. The board is likely to be Democratic after January 1.

For members of the House of Representatives, H. K. Kelly, of Annandale who came so near election two years ago, and Peter G. Skold, a Scandinavian of Monticello are strong candidates.

This comes the nearest being a clean democratic ticket we have had for years, and if things move right several Democrats, possibly all, will be elected.

Schurz vs. Gage.

Schurz attacked lately the statement of the secretary of the treasury that Bryan, if elected could introduce bimetallism by paying goverment obligation bonds interest and salaries with silver; stating that, if this was possible the administration was to blame for it because it had and has the power to alter that.

Gage states that we have 220 millions in gold against 12 millions silver in the treasury and that our common running expenses are from 1½ millions to 1¾ millions daily. The main income of the treasury is furnished by the collectors of internal revenue and import duty not in silver, because nobody parts with his silver change to any amount as long as a silver dollar is worth a 100 cts considering this and the insignificant amount of silver in the treasury it is a riddle to me how Bryan could pay goverment obligations in silver. This calamity cry of Gage signfies the fear of the imperialistic office holders and that of their friends, the industrial trusts, that they might be driven from the overflowing evils by the establishment of a goverment for the people. Let us come to the point. Shall those government bonds that are bought with coin, which are coin bonds in principal and interests here paid or exchanged in gold or in coin, he allmeet our obligations in coin with out being financially distrtusted ane a goverment which melts the obligations prompt to the letter will not be mistrusted.

Gold, silver, genuine bimetal- will never brought any nation into financial embarassment. But many nations credit was ruined by extravagance and by squandering the earnings of the taxpayer in militaryenterprises which give no returns to the same. Such an enterprise is that of our present administration in the Philipines.

It cost the taxpayer till now more than 200 million dollars. Where are the returns? There is neither honor nor profit in it and we should not uphold this policy by McKinley's re-election.

The next favor to capalitists will be that all debts must be paid in gold. O. M.

HANDS UP!

"WHAT a pity Jack is not a hero!" sighed Mary, laying down a paper containing a list of the latest recipients of the V. C. "Dad is so awfully gone on soldiers just now."

She glanced toward a dainty writing table, where the photograph of a handsome curly-headed young barrister occupied a prominent place. Power was expressed in every one of those clear-cut features—the power to cleave a way through the world.

But Col. Warwick could think of nothing but soldiers, and his daughter, Mary, clandestinely carried on her love affairs, and concocted all sorts of impossible plans to transform her civilian lover into something like a man for the colonel. She even went to the length of inquiring at the war office if lawyers, as well as doctors and clergymen, were not attached to the headquarters staff of the army in South Africa, and, being disappointed in that, religiously set to work to inculcate some martial ardor in her lover by requesting him to take her to all the military functions in town. Yet the unconscious Jack would not be a hero.

"Why don't you help me, Beat?" she cried, plaintively appealing to her cousin, who, gracefully reclining on a velvet ottoman, was devouring the contents of the latest novel from Mudie's. "Your affair is all settled, and you've no troubles in the world. Do put that wretched book away and help me think of Jack!"

"Mary, you're a nuisance!" exclaimed the calm-minded young lady, shutting her book with a slam. "And so is Jack! Why don't you think of something else for a few days? If I worried half so much about Geoffrey, I should pine myself into a convalescent home!"

"Yes; but you don't have to. You're engaged; and, besides, your dad isn't mad on soldiers."

Miss Beatrice burst out laughing, and her charming cousin assumed a dignified pout. "My dear girl," she said, patronizingly, and ignoring the pout, "uncle's only a silly old man, and he doesn't mean one-half he says!"

Mary was about to espouse his cause, and even sacrifice her Jack in his defense, when her cousin stopped her.

"But as for being a hero, why, Jack can be that as well as anyone if he likes—and he shall be, for all your unworthiness."

"A hero! How, Beat—how?"

"Never mind. You say he's coming to stay over Sunday?"

"Yes. I worried dad into asking him, and he consented—just to keep me quiet."

Beatrice gave a sympathetic sigh.

"Well, then, next Saturday will put him to the test, and unless he proves himself a hero and a man under such desperate circumstances I shall be sadly disappointed. Now, stop worrying, and go and read the war news to uncle. He's dying for it, I know."

And before Mary had time to stop her and demand an explanation she had flown from the room.

Jack Winchfield put in an appearance on the following Saturday, and, with a little coaching from the two girls, made quite a good impression at dinner, when he discussed military tactics with keen interest, if not correctness.

At half past 11, after a game of billiards, and a one-sided argument on the subject of cavalry remounts, the two men retired, and an hour later the house was dark and silent.

"Mary, are you awake?"

"Rather!" came in a sleepy voice. "I thought you were never coming."

"Uncle's been reading and only turned his light out a few minutes ago, but he's snoring now."

The two girls shivered simultaneously, and in sympathy. Midnight enterprises are wont to try the strongest nerves. Mary turned on the gas

"Why, Beat," she exclaimed, "you look just like a man! Where did you get those old clothes? And, oh! your face is so dirty and smudgy!"

Beatrice laughed, in spite of her nerves.

"Shall I do?" she asked.

"Do? You're simply horrible!"

"Good-by, then. Listen for me coming back; and if you hear me running open the door and let me in."

In obedience to which command Mary, as soon as her cousin had left the room, locked the door, threw herself upon the bed and laughed and cried intermittently until she fell asleep from sheer exhaustion.

The amateur burglar gingerly picked her way downstairs, and silently turned the key of the library door. Feeling her way toward a comfortable couch, she threw herself upon it and waited, listening to the beating of her own heart and to the awful silence that pervaded the house. Imagination ran wild and played her awful pranks. Fearful animals crept stealthily through the gloom, and ominous noises came from every corner. A tap-tap from the direction of the window sounded most painfully realistic, and a low murmuring was like nothing more than the whisperings of hidden human beings.

Beatrice shook herself and remembered her errand. Partly to help her cousin and partly for her own amusement she had planned to masquerade as a burglar to arouse the unconscious Jack and to test his courage. In the light of day it was a splendid project, with countless opportunities for harmless fun. But here, in the dark and silent library, at one o'clock in the morning, it was cruelly unromantic.

Creak, creak! This time it was no fancy, for the library window was being forced open, and through the blinds came the occasional flash of a lantern. In a moment Beatrice was on the alert. Of a sudden it dawned upon her that instead of a timorous mock burglar the unfortunate Jack might have to deal with a gang of hardened criminals, and the probable result of such an encounter would so upset arrangements that Mary would in future thank her to leave her affairs alone. So the little joke had developed into a huge tragedy, and Jack must not be sacrificed. Even in the hour of danger she could not repress a smile as she thought how the papers would make such a sensation of the affair. No; Beatrice decued that it should not be. And so Jack slept on, unconscious of the opportunities for distinction that awaited him downstairs.

In the meantme, the enterprising young lady with the smudgy face and ragged clothes had seized an old dueling pistol and intrenched herself in the rear of the sofa, from which she could obtain an uninterrupted view of the proceedings within the room. There she propped herself up, with one arm extending over the back of the sofa, pointing an unloaded pistol in a menacing manner. And there she meant to fight and die, as she had heard her uncle tell of brave men in the trenches, for it was a desperate matter now, and it was scarcely realizable that such a terrible plight could ever have originated in a harmless little joke.

A man crept stealthily into the room through the half-open window and cast the light of his lantern in all directions. Then, upon a sign that all was right, another long-legged villain followed, and the two conferred in muffled tones. Then they carefully shut the window, closed the shutters, lit the gas and pounced upon the safe. That was Beat's opportunity.

"Hands up!"

If an electric wire had been connected with the automatic figures, and a button had been pressed, the upper limbs could not have responded more promptly than did the hands of those two desperate burglars. Seared and baffled as they were, they staggered round on their heels, to discover the source of that sudden command, and encountered the frowning muzzle of a pistol. It was enough. The younger man groaned and the older one said something beneath his breath.

Five minutes passed, and not a word was spoken. Two pairs of hands still moved aloft and two pairs of cowed eyes fearfully watched the muzzle of the pistol. But it never moved. The aim was deadly!

"'Urry up, guv'nor!" at last groaned the younger man. "Ring for the servants, or what yer like, only don't let us get cold in our armpits!"

In support of which the older man again swore, but the victorious one said nothing. Only the pistol continued to frown threateningly.

Two more minutes that seemed like hours to the captured men passed by, and the older burglar commenced to swear more loudly. The younger man also began to indignantly assert his rights to humane treatment, and matters were just becoming strained when the door opened, and a poker, followed by the white face of Jack Winchfield, appeared upon the scene.

It was the first time Jack had taken an active part in a burglary case, and he was considerably nonplussed to find two hard-featured villains straining their arms to the ceiling at sight of a common domestic poker. But he concluded it must be the usual thing among such gentry, and his face regained some of its color as he took the cord from his dressing-gown and requested one of the men to hold down his hands to be bound, which he did with a grateful glance. A curtain cord served for the other, and the two soon stood side by side, trussed like cockerels.

"Now, then, guv'nor, tell the bloke behind the sofy to shift that pistol. I don't like it!" exclaimed one.

"Pistol? What pistol?"

Jack looked round in the direction indicated, and staggered back as he encountered the frowning muzzle. The idea suddenly occurred to him that this was another burglar in hiding, and that he had been outflanked, as the colonel would probably have called it. But as he moved, the pistol held steadfastly in its place, and at last he maneuvered round and discovered a slight form, dressed in ragged men's clothes, and propped up with cushions and chairs.

"Now, young 'un, put up that gun. It's all over. Why, look here! Great Scott! It's Beatrice! And she's fainted!"

"Fainted?" echoed the two trussed men in chorus. "Fainted? Fainted? 'Ere, guv'nor, let us loose to kick ourselves, and we'll go quiet." * * *

"A smart capture, Jack, and a bold venture on your part," said the colonel. "You ought to have been a soldier, my boy. There's a career waiting for you in the army!"

"Yes," said Jack, "but—"

A vicious tug at his coat tail stopped him, and at that moment the colonel was called away.

"If you mention my disgraceful part in the affair," said Beat, "I'll expose your cowardice on the spot. Uncle would have a fit if he knew I had been masquerading in boy's clothes!"

"But what on earth were you doing with that pistol?"

"Oh, never mind. Perhaps I was rehearsing a play, and the burglars entered at an inconvenient time. The rest of the comedy went fairly well, though, only the poker was a little undignified. But the audience appear to be well satisfied, and the colonel in particular is delighted with the hero. Do your best for those poor villains when you defend them, for they did act their parts most beautifully! Now go to Mary. She's dying to scold you!"—Chicago Herald.

Parting of the Ways.

By reason of the Spanish-American war we have been confronted with a new phrase of national life and we now stand at the parting of the ways. We must decide as a nation whether we will adhere to the doctrine of the fathers and the policy which has made us great and strong; to the principles of the Declaration of Independence; of the Constitution which the patriots of the Revolution gave us—whether we will be true to ourselves, to self government freedom and liberty or whether we will make the mistake that the great majority of nations have made in the past—use our strength which we have achieved as a Republic to rob other people of their right of self government and join the mad march of the powers in the eagerness of conquest, in the lust for power, intent upon [illegible] strength and wealth [illegible] expense of every [illegible] fess of every [illegible] of every ideal we have [illegible].

In this decision rests our future as a people, for so sure as we determine upon the latter policy, though we may be victorious in the endeavor to enslave weaker people struggling for the liberty we now enjoy, our very success will sow the seeds of the dissolution of the Republic, the loss of our liberties, and the upbilding of empire.

Believing this, to my mind the present campaign is the most important in the memory of man; believing this, I have been forced to break the bonds that bound me to the Republican party and refuse service in this campaign, because above party loyalty there must be allegiance to my country. I believe the hour has come,

When no man should be for party,
But all stand for the state.—EX.

Dr. Habercom, who had charge of the German work for McKinley four years ago and who is now working for Bryan and Stevenson, says of the outlook, as judged from extensive correspondence with prominent German voters: "The Germans know all about imperialism. They know that imperialism can only be maintained by militarism and that militarysm means heavy taxation and inroads on the young and producing element of the population and most likely conscription. Following the European models compulsory service in the army or navy for all men might be demanded. The German voter is going to strangle the empire before it strangles him. I don't think the President's letter of acceptance did him any good. The most that can be said of it is that it is the strongest argument that can be put up in a weak cause."

Hon. Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, who was a leading democrat in the House for 26 years and in the Senate for six, indignantly denies the report that he had flopped to McKinley. In his own words: "There is not a word of truth in it. I am a rawhide democrat. I am not taking an active part in politics, but you can bet your life I will vote for Bryan and do all I can for him."

Ex-Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, who enjoys the reputation of a shrewd and conservative political manager, is in Washington. When asked his opinion of the situation he said: "The democrats are making steady gains. They are gaining strength everywhere in New York, in Ohio, in Indiana and [illegible] over the country. If the election occurred today the democratic vote would be larger than it would have been yesterday. This far, I think there has been no day when we were not stronger than the day before. Such a condition surely promises well for success."

Horses are said to be afflicted with hay fever the same as human beings. As hay fever is said to attack only beings of superior intelligence, this must be looked upon as a tribute to what is called horse sense.

Some insects, so Rev. Theodore Wood says in his recent book on the subject, have families of 40,000 children, for whom life is simply one long, unbroken dinner time. We are all regarded by a mosquito simply in the light of a full meal.

According to the Sioux Indian weather prophets it's going to be a hard winter. These predictions are based on the fact that the buffalo grass shows a heavy crop of seeds, which, the redskins declare, is a sure sign of a severe winter and deep snow.

Here is a chance for all who are superstitious to remark: "I told you so." The Bellevue hospital in New York city has a record book upon which is the following entry: "Unknown man, admitted August 13, taken to ward No. 13, died at 3:13 p. m. August 13."

It is a curious and interesting coincidence that while the old confederate cruiser Alabama was for a long time known as "No. 290," the new battleship Alabama was numbered "290" at the builder's yard before her name was decided upon, and without any thought of the original.

Hereafter railroad companies in engaging brakemen will doubtless look favorably on ex-acrobats from circuses. A St. Louis train hand saw there was to be a smash-up. He made a double somersault and landed on his feet without losing his hat; consequently there will be no damage suit.

In answer to a statement by an alleged scientist to the effect that the petroleum wells of the world will soon cease to flow, some knowing eastern traveler calls attention to the fact that in Zante, one of the Ionian isles, there is a petroleum spring which has been known for 3,000 years. The well is mentioned by Herodotus.

A Kansas City Chinaman paid $600 for a wife. Poor, benighted heathen! He does not realize how out-of-date it is to buy wives. If he had only made a study of advanced civilization exemplified by the swagger set in some cities he would have known that the modern method is for the girl to pay a million or so for a mighty poor article of a husband.

It has been shown by the census of Porto Rico that the whole number of males of voting age in the island is 201,071, of whom 120,295 are whites born in Porto Rico, 5,662 are whites born in Spain, 2,104 are whites born in other countries, and 73,010 are colored. Of the whites native in the island, 35,397, 29 per cent. of all; of the colored, 12,576, 17.2 per cent. of all, are literate.

The last Hawaii public school in which instruction was given in the native tongue has been closed, and English is now the official language throughout the islands. According to Prof. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology at Washington, the honey industry has shown marked development in recent years, and there are to-day more than 300,000 persons engaged in it, the value of the product being $20,000,000. There are 110 apiarian societies and 80 journals devoted to the industry. Much of the honey is exported, England being the chief purchaser.

Eight white men have been sentenced to imprisonment for life at Austin, Tex., for lynching James Humphries and two sons over a year ago. The Humphries were respectable white men and were lynched by their neighbors on the charge that they had stolen a hog from a farmer. It was not clearly established that the victims stole the hog, but even assuming that they did it was a ridiculous pretext for lynching, and the eight lynchers richly deserve their punishment. More of this sort of business and there will be less of lynching.

Col. Le Grande B. Cannon has arranged for the preservation of the grave of John Brown near North Elba, N. Y., it having been almost lost sight of. The grave is situated in the open field which John Brown cleared for the use of the negroes before he made his raid upon Harper's Ferry, and is close to the shingled cottage he built. Recently Col. Cannon sent a force of men with a landscape gardener to grade and terrace the plot of land, and he will build an iron fence 75 feet square around the grave. The inclosure will be known as John Brown park.

The gunboat Castine, which was ordered to Amoy, China, by the government, to protect American interests there, can sting like a hornet. She has six 6-inch and two 8-inch guns in her main battery, with a secondary battery of two 6-pounders and two 3-pounders. The Castine is a 1,177-ton vessel, 204 feet long, with a beam of 32 feet, has a protected deck, and can make 16 knots an hour. The boat carries a crew of 19 officers and 265 men, and is especially valuable for work in Chinese waters, and she draws but 12 feet of water, and can ascend the Chinese rivers.

CYCLONE CAUSES DEATH.

Terrific Windstorm Visits Morristown, Minn., and Eight Persons Are Killed.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 25.—The village of Morristown, 12 miles west of here, was visited by a cyclone shortly after five o'clock Monday afternoon. Besides destroying several buildings eight persons were killed. The storm came without warning from a southwesterly direction, passing over to the northeast. The length of its path in the village was less than a half mile, and owing to its peculiar action the distress and damage resulting were not as great as might have been. The storm made jumps of one block, but whenever it came down everything was crumbled by the power of the wind.

All the killed and injured in Morristown were in the saloon of Paul Gatzke, having hurriedly taken refuge there when the storm was seen on the outskirts of the village. There were 16 in the structure at the time the storm struck. The building was raised from its foundation and crushed like an eggshell. Before the building fell three men managed to escape, but the others are found in the lists of dead and injured.

The killed are: Jake Miller, Jake Weaver, Jr.; Frank Pitman, of Waterville; Otto Gatzke, John Rohrer, Jr.; Elmer Brooks, H. S. Wait, Frank Wilder. The injured are: Paul Gatzke, Porter White, Lewis Pitman, Jr.

This is the third disaster that has visited Morristown this year. In February the entire business district was destroyed by fire, and among the structures rebuilt was the saloon of Gatzke. The village was visited by another fire in May, which did a damage amounting to $10,000.

DEATH OF DE CAMPOS.

Spain's Famous Marshal Expires—He Was the Counselor of the Queen Regent.

Madrid, Sept. 24.—Senor Marshal Martinez Campos, who led the Spanish army in Cuba before the coming of Gen. Weyler, died Sunday morning at Zarauz, near San Sebastian. The death of Marshal Campos rids Prime Minister Silvela of a very probable successor, but the event is a serious loss for the monarchy and the present dynasty. The queen was accustomed to confer with Marshal Campos in all serious difficulties and always found him a stanch friend. He dies poor. His funeral will be made a state affair.

MARSHAL ARSENIO MARTINEZ DE CAMPOS.

FIERCE FOREST FIRE.

It Covers an Area of About 100 Square Miles in California—The Damage Is Enormous.

Santa Rosa, Cal., Sept. 25.—A forest and grass fire which has been burning in the vicinity of Occidental the past three days has assumed vast proportions. The fire has covered a space of about 100 square miles, and is estimated to have done over a quarter of a million dollars' damage. Only by hard work was the town of Occidental saved. The fire is now traveling south, aided by a strong north wind. The Northern Pacific railroad lost several miles of track in addition to two long trestles, one 219 feet, the other 300 feet in length. Three county bridges are in ruins, and about 18 farms have been swept clean of their buildings and crops. The towns of Freestone, Bodega and Sebastopol are in immediate danger. Nearly a thousand people are fighting the fire.

Grand Work of Nature Destroyed.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 24.—Word has just been received here that the Grand Portal at Pictured Rocks collapsed during a recent northeaster of great severity with a crash which was heard for miles around. The Grand Portal was the most remarkable natural wonder on the south shore of Lake Superior. Its height was 100 feet and its breadth 170 feet on the water line, while the cliff in which it was cut extended for 30 feet above the arch. The huge cave to which it gave entry has often received large excursion boats.

American Losses in Philippines.

Manila, Sept. 24.—The insurgent demonstrations last week prove to have been more extended than was at first reported. From Cagayan and Isabella provinces and the northwestern districts of Luzon come accounts of insurgent operations and American precautionary measures. The American casualties in killed, wounded or missing during the last ten days approach 100, including that at Siniloan, at the east end of Laguna de Bay, where the insurgents after the engagement delivered ten bodies of our dead.

Fatal Plunge of a Train.

San Francisco, Sept. 24.—A Santa Fe passenger engine crashed through a wharf at Point Richmond Sunday and sank in 50 feet of water, carrying with it Engineer Henry A. Allen, Telegrapher Mulcahey and Fireman Press S. Adams. The body of Adams is pinned beneath a hundred tons of steel at the bottom of the bay. The other two men were injured, but not fatally. The wharf which sank beneath the engine has been in place only a year.

Powers Declines.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 22.—Judge O. W. Powers (dem.), appointed United States senator by Acting Governor Nebeker in the absence from the state of Gov. Wells, issued a signed statement Friday declining the honor. He holds he is certain to be refused a seat, and can serve his party better by remaining on the electoral ticket.

MORE WARSHIPS FOR CHINA.

Washington Authorities Preparing for Trouble—Germany Urged to Abandon Her Demand.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Significant preparations for warlike events that are likely to occur in China were made by the navy department Saturday afternoon. Secretary Long issued an order directing the new battleship Kentucky, one of the greatest fighting machines afloat, the cruisers Albany and Wilmington and the gunboats Vicksburg, Dorotha and Annapolis to proceed to China to reenforce the American fleet already in Asiatic waters.

The fleet in Asiatic and Philippine waters now comprises 28 vessels. The first class battleship Oregon, the armored cruiser Brooklyn, the New Orleans, Monocacy, Montery, Nashville, Princeton, Don Juan de Austria and Iris are in Chinese waters, and the Newark, Monadnock, Yorktown, Marietta, Castine, Concord, Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon Helena, Glacier, Bennington, Petrel, Yosemite, Zafiro, Callao, Celtic, General Alava, Manila, Nanshan and Culgoa are at Manila or near by.

That President McKinley and his advisers discern a threatening war cloud in the Chinese sky is made apparent by the sending of large naval reenforcements to the admirals in command on the Asiatic station. They have been on the lookout for this since the beginning of the Chinese troubles. Now they appear to be certain that a world war is almost inevitable. The opposing and conflicting aims of the various powers, their mutual suspicion and dislike for each other and their determination to enforce measures of revenge or punishment upon which no two of them can agree are signs that lead the administration to look out for big events.

Taku, Sept. 20.—Four thousand Russian, 3,000 German and 1,000 French troops, with a detachment of Austrian marines began the attack upon the Peitang forts at daylight. The attack was answered briskly from the forts, the bombardment continuing until noon, but it was noticed that the forts did not reply after ten o'clock.

The allies sent forward at noon to discover the reason of the cessation of the firing from the forts and found them deserted, there being only four dead Chinamen within the walls. The allies were much chagrined, as they believed they had the place completely surrounded, making escape impossible; yet over 3,000 men got away in broad daylight. The Russian artillery fire had proved effective and the forts were badly damaged.

The British and Italian commanders had decided to join in the attack, but their troops had not arrived in time.

The entire line between Tientsin and Taku shows reenforcements were heading for the forts.

Three members of the allied forces were killed and 50 were wounded through the explosion of mines laid along their line of march.

London, Sept. 24.—It is rumored here that Prince Tuan has been appointed secretary to the Chinese emperor. This will place him in the position of inspecting all messages to and from the throne. His appointment is looked on as a direct slap at Germany, who demanded that the prince be severely punished for the Boxer uprising.

London, Sept. 25.—A semiofficial announcement has been issued in St. Petersburg that the European cabinets are engaged in an endeavor to induce Germany to abandon her demand for the surender of the instigators of the anti-foreign outrages as a preliminary to peace negotiations.

The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Chronicle asserts that Russia's reply to the German note is very friendly, but that, although it appears to consent to Germany's proposal, it practically disapproves by asking whether it would not be best to open peace negotiations first, and to make the punishment of the instigators of the outrages the first subject of discussion.

FOUR LIVES LOST.

Steamer and Barge Collide Near Port Huron, Mich.—The Latter Is Sunk.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 22.—The steel steamer Yuma at eight o'clock Friday night crashed into the barge John Martin, in tow of the steamer Maurice P. Grover, and the Martin sank in 30 seconds, carrying down three men and a woman. The collision ocurred in the rapids just below the Fontana wreck and the channel is completely blocked, stopping navigation.

The drowned: Capt. John Lawless, Lorain, O.; Mrs. Bacon, cook, of Cleveland, O.; William Ross, mate, Toledo, O.; sailor, name unknown.

Will Have No Ticket.

Boston, Sept. 22.—The national party, composed of men who feel that they cannot conveniently vote for either McKinley or Bryan, at a conference held at Young's hotel Friday afternoon abandoned the idea of keeping a presidential ticket in the field, and Mr. Archibald M. Howe, of this state, who was nominated for vice president in New York on the 5th inst., is expected to follow Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, the presidential nominee, in formally withdrawing his candidacy. This action is virtually made necessary by Senator Caffery's declination and the failure to find anyone willing to stand in his stead.

Two Drowned.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 24.—While a party of three consisting of John Czaplewski, and wife and brother, Michael, were out in a rowboat fishing Sunday afternoon, the backwash from a passing steamer caused one of the boat's occupants to lose his balance, capsizing it. John and Michael Czaplewski were drowned, but after a hard struggle Mrs. Czaplewski was saved by a party in a passing rowboat.

Aeronaut Killed.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 22.—Prof. L. J. Kahler, the young aeronaut who had been making daily ascensions at the street carnival in this city, was hurled from his balloon in the presence of 5,000 people Wednesday morning and dashed head first to the pavement below. Doctors examined the boy and discovered a crack in the head running from the right ear almost to the left. He died at nine p. m.

A SMART CAT.

Gets a Letter, and, Opening It, Proceeds to Literally Devour the Contents.

"I have a cat that can read," declared a lady. "At any rate she knows when a letter comes for her."

"A letter!" exclaimed her friend, in astonishment, relates the Buffalo Enquirer.

"Yes, a letter. If you don't believe it, I will prove it to you. Just wait a moment while I direct one."

She left the room and presently returned with a sealed envelope, addressed "Miss Pussy, No. — Blank street, City." The letter was duly posted.

The next morning the postman came and soon afterward the servant entered with a bundle of letters, among which was that for Miss Pussy. Placing them near her feline highness on the floor, Pussy's mistress said: "Now, Pussy, pick out your letter."

Surprising enough, Pussy at once showed an interest, and in a moment had pushed aside with her paws the envelope addressed to her.

"Wait a moment," said the mistress, "and she'll open it."

Scarcely had she said this when Miss Pussy tore open the envelope, and in a moment was literally devouring its contents—catnip!

FELT HIS SUPERIORITY.

Considered Himself Far Ahead of the Police in One Respect at Least.

"This man, your honor, was abusing every policeman he came across," testified an officer before Justice Martin in prosecuting a hungry-looking individual who had been taken into custody the previous evening. We tried to avoid placing him under arrest, but he continued his abuse until it could not be endured any longer."

"What was the worst thing he called you?" inquired the court.

"He said, your honor," was the officer's reply, "that he was so much superior to any officer he had ever seen that he would not notice them."

The justice looked at the hungry-appearing individual before him and asked if he had uttered this slander against the police officer, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"Yes, your honor," said the prisoner, "and I repeat it. I never knew a police officer that was not a scoundrel, and in this one respect I am superior to all of them. I can give them all cards and spades when it comes to separating an individual from his money."

The court inflicted a fine of one dollar and costs against the prisoner.

Post-Mortem.

Rubble tipped his chair back from the ticket-office stove in the station and read the express agent the following from the Arizona Arrow, to show what the new linotype machines are doing for western journalism, and to indicate in what manner the town-folk amuse themselves: "A rare treat—Woman's relief corpse celebrates. The woman's relief corpse gave a box-supper last night at the Methodist church south. An excellent programme was rendered by the ladies of the corpse and their children and a number of old soldiers. The first thing on the programme was a song, 'There's a Hot Time in the Old Town,' by a number of corpse ladies. Suppers were served in boxes which were auctioned. Col. Cane said he would take his on his trip to the Klondike to remind him of friends far away, and particularly of the woman's relief corpse. He made a resplendent address, with women as his text, and said it was a grand thing for this nation to have them to-day in the form of a relief corpse. He closed by saying that 'it takes the woman's relief corpse to make things go, and long may it live!' At the close of the entertainment the people departed to their several homes, wishing the corpse success in all its undertakings."—Judge.

What a Mogul Can Do.

That was a remarkable demonstration of what a Mogul can do, that occurred on the New York Central the other day, when engine No. 948, one of the new Moguls, hauled out train No. 11, the Southwestern Limited, made up of two mail cars, five passenger coaches and nine Wagner cars, sixteen cars in all. The total weight of the train was 1,832,000 pounds, or 916 tons, and the length of the train, including the engine, was 1,212 feet, or nearly a quarter of a mile. This engine made the running time of the train between New York and Albany, 143 miles, in three hours and fifteen minutes.

There is no railroad in the world which has a better roadbed, more skillful engineers, or better equipment, backed by loyal men always alert for the safety of their passengers, than the New York Central and Hudson River railroad. What road can match its corps of men, from President Callaway down the long line of employees, to the humble and faithful trackmen who watch their sections of rail through the long hours of the night and day, in order to safeguard the lives of the travelers on trains whirling by their humble shanties, many of which nestle closely to the rails under their guardianship.—Editorial from the Albany Times-Union.

To Be Concise

"Young man," said the editor to the budding journalist, who brought him a column story which could have been told better in ten lines, "when a man discovers his house is ablaze he doesn't go to the window and tell the passers-by that 'half an hour ago what threatened to be a terrible conflagration broke out in the upper story of the palatial mansion occupied by Mr. Jeremiah Dickens.' He simply rushes to the front, and shouts: 'Fire!' Be concise, young man."—St. Louis Republic.

PE RU NA

Many a woman, sick and weary of life, dragged down by weakening drains, painful irregularities, depression, and the hundred and one ailments which affect women only, has found in Pe-ru-na a bright star of hope, which has changed her misery to joy, her suffering to health.

No woman need suffer from the derangements peculiar to her sex, if she will give Pe-ru-na a fair trial.

The majority of weaknesses which make woman's life a burden, spring from a simple cause. The mucous membrane which lines the pelvic organs becomes weakened and inflamed owing to strain, cold, overwork, etc. This causes catarrhal congestion, inflammation, painful irregularities, depression of spirits, irritability, weakness and suffering. It shows in the haggard lines of the face, the dull eyes, the sallow complexion and angular form.

For the prompt cure of such ailments try Pe-ru-na. It drives away "the blues," clears the complexion, brightens the eyes, changes thinness to plumpness, and cures pains, aches and drains, because it immediately strikes at the root of such troubles and removes the cause.

W. J. BRYAN'S ANTI-TRUST SPEECH, DELIVERED AT ST. LOUIS, SEPTEMBER 15, 1900.

The lament of David over Absalom is one of the most pathetic passages of the Old Testament. The fact that the son was in rebellion against civil as well as parental authority did not shake the father's affection, and the anxious query, "Is the young man, Absalom, safe?" lingers in the memory of all who study the life of the great Hebrew King. And, yet, the interest which David felt in his son, Absalom, has its parallel in the more than 10,000,000 families which make up the American people.

No language can describe a mother's love, or overstate the abiding interest which the father feels in the welfare of his child. From the time when the mother's life hangs in the balance at the boy's birth until the death of the parents there is scarcely a waking hour when the son is not present in their thoughts and plans. It is to this parental devotion, so universally recognized, that I desire to appeal on this occasion.

Appeal to Parental Devotion.

I would call the attention of every father and mother to present political and industrial conditions. I would ask them to analyze these conditions, investigate their causes and their tendencies. I would press upon them this question: "Is the young man, Absalom, safe?" Are you satisfied with the possibilities and the probabilities which now open before your son?

Is he safe when foreign or domestic financiers are allowed to determine the monetary system under which he lives?

Is he safe when national banks control the volume of money with which he does business?

Is he safe when the bond holding class determines the size of the national debt upon which he must help to pay interest?

Is he safe when by means of taxes laid almost entirely upon consumption he is compelled to contribute according to his wants rather than according to his possessions?

Is he safe when corporate interests influence as they do today the selection of those who are to represent him in the Senate of the United States?

If he is a wage-earner, and you do not know how soon he may be, even if he is not now, is he safe when he is liable to be deprived of trial by jury, through the system known as government by injunction?

Is he safe, if a laboring man, when he is denied the protection of arbitration and compelled to submit to such hours and terms as a corporate employer may propose?

The Reign of Monopoly.

But, I desire to call special attention to the growth of the trusts, and to ask you whether your son is safe under the reign of private monopoly? If you cannot leave him a fortune, you can leave him something more valuable than money, viz: the freedom to employ his own brain and his own hands for the advancement of his own welfare. When there is industrial independence, each citizen is stimulated to earnest endeavor by the hope of being able to profit by his own genius, his own energy, his own industry and his own virtue. But when private monopoly reaches its full development each branch of industry will be controlled by one, or a few men, and the fruits of monopoly, like the divine right of rule, will be kept within the possession of a few from generation to generation, while the real producers of wealth will be condemned to perpetual clerkship or servitude. When private monopoly reaches its full development, your son will buy the finshed product at the price which monopoly fixes; he will sell raw material at the price which monopoly fixes; and, if he works for wages, he will work for such compensation and upon such conditions as monopoly may determine.

Charles R. Flint of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Co. in a speech delivered in Boston on the 25th of May, 1899, outlined the trust program with great frankness. In speaking of the advantages to be derived from the trust system he said:

Outline of Trust Program.

"Raw material bought in large quantities is secured at lower prices." When, for instance, one man buys all the wool, the price of wool will be lowered and all who produce wool will sell at the price fixed by the trust. A large proportion of our people are engaged in the production of various kinds of raw material, and they are thus placed at the mercy of the combinations.

The second advantage is that "those plants which are best equipped and most advantageously situated are run continuously and in preference to those less favored."

This means that factories can be closed in the smaller towns and business concentrated in the large centers. It means, also, that whenever there is a surplus on hand, part of the factories can be closed, and the burden of maintaining prices thrown upon the wage workers. There are already scattered throughout the land idle plants, which stand as silent monuments to the evils of the trust system.

The next advantage mentioned is that "In case of local strikes and fires, the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss."

This means that a monopoly can absolutely control its workingmen, for if a strike occurs in a factory in one state, the factory can be closed down indefinitely while the employes are starved into submission, and, as the trust can do the work in some other factory without serious loss, it is quite independent of the employes, and can absolutely prescribe the terms and conditions upon which they shall live. The more complete the monopoly the more opposed the managers will be to arbitration, because, in case of any contest between the trust and its employes, the trust will have every advantage and the employes will be perfectly powerless.

Another advantage cited by Mr. Flint is that "There is no multiplication of the means of distribution and a better force of salesmen will take the place of a large number."

Drummers Dispensed With.

This is an intimation that under the trust system the traveling salesman will not be needed. When every retail merchant must buy all goods of one class from a single company, the work can be done by samples, and no traveling men will be needed. There will be no competition between different factories because all are under one management. The first man to feel this will be the salesman, who will lose his occupation. The next man to feel it will be the hotel man, who will miss the trade of the traveling salesman. The railroad will lose the mileage paid by the traveling man; the liverymen will lose their best patrons, and the newspapers will lose the advertising, because it will not be necessary to advertise when there is no competition. All this might be tolerable if the saving thus made went to the consumer, but as a matter of fact it goes to the mononoply. My attention has been called to a prospectus issued by the International Steam Pump Company, organized March, 1899, under the laws of New Jersey, and capitalized at $27,500,000, of which nearly half is preferred stock, and the remainder common stock. I call attention to this prospectus, because it sets forth the plans of the trusts, and show who are to be the beneficiaries.

The International Steam Pump Company was organized for the purpose of manufacturing steam pumps, and according to the prospectus, "acquired control of the business of the following corporations, either through the conveyance of the title to the properties, and businesses of such companies, or by the ownership of not less than two-thirds of their stock, as may be found practicable." Then follow the names of five pump companies, accompanied by the statement that these companies are estimated to transact ninety per cent of the steam pump business of the United States, exclusive of high-duty engines. The majority of the companies also manufacture such engines.

Sample Case of Trusts.

One of the companies, taken into the combination had assets estimated at a little more than six million dollars; another company had assets estimated at a little more than three millions; the third company had assets estimated at a little more than one million. The fourth company had assets estimated at eight hundred thousand dollars, and the fifth company had assets estimated at seven hundred thousand dollars. The good will was not estimated in the above figures. The total assets, therefore, of the five companies, not including the good will, were less than twelve million dollars, and the prospectus states that the combined net profits of the five concerns for the year 1898, estimated on the business of ten months of the year, would amount to twelve hundred thousand dollars. Under the head of "Estimated additional earnings from consolidation" I find the following:

"Each of the five companies now maintains agencies in the principal cities of the United States. The Worthington and Blake companies have stores, and carry stock in London, Hamburg, Vienna, and other cities. Some of them have expensive salaried managers. All these agencies in this and other countries will be consolidated. The stores and agencies maintained in the cities of this country, and the forces of clerks, salesmen, etc., necessary to conduct them, will be united and decreased, involving an estimated saving of at least $500,000 a year. The expenses of each company for its draughting department, incident to the elaborate drawings, and specifications for estimating of work, will bring about a further reduction. The standardizing of the patterns for farm and domestic work, which is now under way in the Worthington factory, when applied to the entire business of the new company, will result in an estimated saving of at least $200,000 per year."

And then follows in black type this significant statement:

Advantages of Consolidation.

"A conservative estimate of the advantages derived from consolidation is believed to be $1,300,000 over the present earnings, which would make a total of future net earnings, with the estimated earnings based on ten months of the year's business of $2,500,000, of 6 per cent on the preferred stock, and over eleven per cent on the common stock of the new company."

It will thus be seen from the prospectus that the advantages secured by the cutting down of expenses, will double the income, and not a word is said about giving the advantages of this reduction to the consumer. The money taken from the traveling men, from the hotel keepers, from the railroads, from the liverymen, from the newspapers, and from others who suffer by the discharge of traveling salesmen, clerks, etc., will all be added to the profits of the monopoly. The stock was to be watered, and prices maintained to pay dividends upon fictitious capital.

To give a further guarantee that the monopoly, the prospectus says that the principal men connected with the various companies would become identified with the company and would contract not to engage in a like business for ten years. But what about the public? What guarantee has the public that this monopoly will not raise prices? Is it not human nature to make all the profit possible out of a monopoly? Is it not reasonable to expect that the monopoly, after eliminating the salesmen, and adding their salaries, and expenses to the profit account, will seek a further profit by raising prices, and lowering wages? Is it not reasonable also to expect that there will be deterioration in quality when the spur of competition no longer compels the manufacturer to furnish the best goods for the lowest possible price?

In a little book described as an "Investment Guide" and issued in 1900, by Henry Clews & Co., bankers, I find a list of large corporations, together with a brief description of the business done and advantages secured by consolidation. In some instances an estimate is given of the output of the company as compared with the total product in the United States. Let me call your attention to a few of the corporations organized since the last Presidential election:

Trusts Formed Under McKinley.

The American Agricultural Chemical Company incorporated under the laws of Connecticut, in May, 1899, has an authorized capital of $40,000,000, half common stock, and half preferred. It acquired tweny-two of the largest fertilizing concerns in the country.

The American Bicycle Company, incorporated in May, 1899, in New Jersey, with $20,000,000 of common stock and $10,000,000 preferred, consolidated forty-four of the largest bicycle concerns in the United States.

The American Hide and Leather Company, incorporated in New Jersey in May, 1899, with an authorized capital of $35,-000,000, half common stock and half preferred, controls about seveny-five per cent of the upper leather output of the country.

The American Linseed Oil Company, incorporated in New Jersey in December, 1898, with a capital stock of $33,500,000, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated eleven large linseed oil companies, and controls over eighty-five per cent of the linseed oil properties in the United States.

The American Steel Hoop Company, incorporated in New Jersey in April, 1899, consolidated nine large steel and iron companies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, capital stock $19,000,000 common, and $14,-000,000 preferred.

The American Ship Building Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with an authorized capital of $30,-000,000, half common stock, and half preferred, consolidated "all ship building, and kindred interests on the great lakes."

American Steel and Wire Company, incorporated in New Jersey in January, 1899, with $50,000,000, common stock, and $40,-000,000 preferred, controls about eighty per cent of the nail and wire product of the United States.

The American Thread Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1898, with a capital stock of $12,000,000, half common and half preferred, consolidated fourteen large thread companies in New York and New England.

American Tin Plate Company, incorporated in New Jersey in December, 1898, with $30,000,000 common stock, and $20,-000,000 preferred, consolidated about ninty-five per cent of the tin plate mills in the United States.

The American Window Glass Company, incorporated in Pennsylvania, September, 1899, with $13,000,000 common stock and $4,-000,000 preferred, consolidated window glass plants in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Indiana, controlling about eighty-five per cent of the output of the United States.

American Woolen Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with nearly $30,000,000 common stock and $20,-000,000 preferred, consolidated a number of mills in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and other places.

The American Writing Paper Company, incorporated in New Jersey June, 1899, with $25,000,000 capital, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated numerous mills, producing over seventy-six per cent of the output of the United States.

The Continental Tobacco Company, incorporated in New Jersey in November, 1898, with a capital of $100,000,000 half common stock and half preferred, "Acquired all the leading plug tobacco companies in the United States, and also purchased the plug tobacco business of the American Tobacco Company, in whose interest it was formed."

Giant Federal Steel Trusts.

The Federal Steel Company, incorporated in New Jersey in September, 1898, with an authorized capital of $200,000,000 capital, half common stock and half preferred, consolidated the Illinois Steel Company, the Minnesota Iron Company, the Duluth & Iron Range Ry., the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry., and several other companies. It owns five docks on the great lakes, and a majority of the steamers and barges used for transporting ores.

The International Paper Company, incorporated in January, 1898, (state not given) with an authorized capital of $20,-000,000 common and $25,000,000 preferred stock, consolidated twenty-five pulp and paper mills, manufacturing about eighty per cent newspaper.

Every newspaper has suffered from the paper trust, the magazine, for instance, published by the Locomotive Firemen's organization, and supported by a fixed appropriation, has been compelled to lessen its reading space because of the rise in the price of paper.

The National Biscuit Company, incorporated in New Jersey in February, 1898, with $30,000,000 common stock and $25,000,-000 preferred, consolidated the leading cracker companies, and controls in all one hundred and sixteen plants.

The National Salt Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with $7,000,000 of common stock authorized, and $5,000,000 preferred, produces about ninety-five per cent of the total output of the country.

The National Tube Company, incorporated in New Jersey, in June, 1899, has a capital stock of $30,000,000 half common and half preferred, and controls about ninety per cent of the output of the United States.

The Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company, incorporated in New Jersey in January, 1899, owns practically all the capital stock of the Mechanical Rubber Company, the Peerless Rubber Company and the India Rubber Company, as well as seventy-five per cent of the stock of Morgan & Wright. It also acquired the tire-making plants of the concern known as the American Bicycle Company, and the American Dunlop Tire Company. Authorized capital stock $50,000,000, half common and half preferred.

The Standard Rope & Twine Company, incorporated in New Jersey November 8, 1898, with a capital stock of $12,000,-000, consolidated twenty-two large cordage mills.

The Union Bag and Paper Company, incorporated in New Jersey in February, 1899, with $16,000,000 common stock and $11,000,000 preferred, consolidated various plants, doing ninety per cent of the paper bag business of the United States.

United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company, incorporated in New Jersey in March, 1899, with an authorized capital of $20,000,000, half common sock and half preferred, consolidated the principal cast iron pipe companies of the United States.

United States Envelope Company, incorporated in Maine in 1898, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000 and $4,000,000 preferred, consolidated ten companies, and controls ninety per cent of the output of commercial envelopes in the United States.

The book mentioned also gives statistics in regard to several trusts organized prior to 1898 among which are the American Cotton Oil Co., the American Sugar Refining Company, the American Tobacco Company, the Diamond Match Company, the National Lead Company, and the Standard Oil Company.

No Hope from Republicans.

During the present administration no honest effort has been made to protect the people from these monopolies. The Republican party controls the executive and the legislative departments of the federal government. It can enforce the laws which now exist; it can propose and enact new laws, but it does neither. No persons can watch the conduct of the Republican party and read the speeches of Republican leaders, and still believe the Republican party sincere in its declarations against the trusts.

The Republican platform on this question and the President's letter of acceptance, taken in connection with the party's record, prove conclusively that no relief can be hoped for from that party. Instead of pointing out the evils of trusts the Republican leaders spend their time in exulting over present conditions. The trust is a part of present conditions, and Mr. Flint, from which I have already quoted, declared that the formation of large corporations was one of the important features of what he described as the present business activity. If Republican leaders really regarded private monopoly as an evil; if they really intended to apply an effective remedy, tney would not hesitate to denounce trusts and suggest means for their extermination, but they express far more solicitude for the corporation than for the people at large. One is reminded of the picture which a mother once showed to her boy to impress upon his youthful mind the sufferings of the Christian Martyrs, who were being thrown into the arena and torn to pieces by the lions. The boy looked at the picture for a moment, and then his face brightened up as he thought he caught the idea. Pointing down into one point of the picture, he said, "Why, mamma, there is one poor little lion that isn't getting a bit." It is even so with the Republican leaders. Their sympathy goes out freely to any corporation, which in their opinion is not getting its share, but they are not moved by the hardships imposed by monopolies upon all who are outside of the charmed circle. Three sessions of Congress have convened and adjourned since the President's inauguration, and yet he has never recommended a specific measure looking toward the overthrow of monopolies.

Paper Money Trust.

At the opening of the last session of Congress the Republican leaders pressed through the House and Senate a bill creating a paper money trust and surrendered into the hands of the national banks complete control of the national currency. Just as Congress was closing a farcical and hypocritical attempt was made to deceive the public by the introduction of an anti-trust amendment, and an anti-trust bill. The amendment was not necessary and was intended to deprive the states of the power which they now possess, rather than to confer upon Congress new authority. This vicious amendment was defeated in the House by the Democrats. The Republican leaders then confessed the amendment unnecessary by introducing an anti-trust bill, which was supported by the Democrats, but which died in the Senate, just as it was expected to die. The Republican majority in the Senate referred the bill to the judiciary committee against the protests of the Democrats, who urged its immediate passage. The Republican party draws its contributions from the trusts during the campaign, and pays back its obligations by leaving the people at the mercy of the trusts between campaigns.

Let us note briefly the effect of the trusts upon various classes. Reference has already been made to the commercial traveler, the hotel keeper, the railroad, the liveryman and the newspaper.

The Effect of Trusts.

The lawyers are finding that with the growth of trusts the business is gravitating toward the offices of the big corporation attorneys, while less fortunate practitioners are becoming law clerks.

The actors suffer from the theatrical trust.

The small manufacturer is constantly menaced by the trusts.

He does not know at what moment some large corporation will attempt to monopolize the business in which he is engaged, and give him his choice between bankruptcy and particulation in an industrial conspiracy against the rest of the country. Many have been driven into the trust organization by the larger corporations engaged in the same business, or by trusts formed to control iron, steel, tin plate, or some other product used as a basis for further manufacture. In what business can your son safely invest a small amount of capital today? If he starts into any independent business he will find it difficult, if not impossible, to compete with a large organization if it attempts to undersell him in his territory, because it can sustain itself, by collecting high prices in other parts of the country. If he suppresses his moral objections and takes stock in a monopoly, he does not know how soon those in charge may attempt to "freeze out" the smaller stockholders.

The merchant is losing his independence. The trust fixes the terms upon which he shall sell, and often binds him by contract not to sell a competing article. When the monopoly is complete credit will be shortened, and the merchant will be compelled to bear all the risks of trade. When the trust raises prices, the merchant usually has to divide the advance with his customers, so far as stock on hand is concerned, but when the trust overstocks the market and then lets the price fall, the merchant must bear the loss on accumulated stock. When, for instance, the American Steel & Wire Company closed several of its factories a few months ago and threw some six thousand employes out of work, it dropped the price of nails and barbed wire in order to work off a surplus stock which had accumulated because the high prices had lessened the demand. Every merchant lost money on the nails and wire on hand.

There is already overproduction in many lines. The supply of common chairs is now considerably in excess of the demand, but lest the Republicans may try to explain this upon the theory that the people are too busy to sit down, I may add that there is also dullness in the shoe trade. The Iron Age in a recent issue pointed out that the production of iron was falling off, the decrease then amounting to more than 50,000 tons per month. Dun's report of July 21st stated that the woolen mills were running at less than half their capacity; and even recently the cotton manufacturers have been threatening to either reduce wages or shut down temporarily. According to Dun's report, the business failures have been greater during each month of 1900 than they were during the same months of last year, and this occurs in the midst of good crops, and when two wars are in progress.

Trusts and Arbitrary Fluctuations.

The contractor can figure with some accuracy so long as natural laws control, but he cannot protect himself against the arbitrary fluctuations, which are not only possible but probable when a monopoly controls the market.

The farmer is one of the most important factors in our national life. Some one has said to him, "The hand that guides the plowshare feeds the world." He is not a stockholder in any of the trusts, but he feels the extortion practiced by them all. I am not farming on a large scale, but the misleading reports which have been circulated concerning my oat crop justify me in making reference to my own experience. The New York Tribune recently printed a dispatch from Nebraska to the effect that I had just sold forty-eight hundred bushels of oats at 20 cents per bushel (supposed to be the yield of 120 acres), and that the amount received for the oats was more than double the price paid for the land. The Tribune article then proceeded to dilate upon the prosperity of the farmer, using my experience as an illustration, and asserted that the farmers of Nebraska were becoming so opulent that they were joining the Republican party. The facts are, first: That I had five acres of oats instead of one hundred and twenty acres; second, That the oats have not yet been threshed, so that the yield is not known; third, That oats are selling for less than 22 cents in Chicago, instead of 20 cents in Nebraska, and fourth, That the land upon which the oats were raised cost me over $100 an acre instead of $6. If, when threshed, my oats yield 40 bushels to the acre, and I sell them in Nebraska for 20 cents per bushel, the total income from the five acres will be $40, or less than eight per cent on the investment. After taking out the cost of plowing, sowing, harvesting and threshing, the net income from that five acre tract, will not exceed four per cent on the money invested. I do not mean to judge others by my own experience, but I mention the facts in this case to show how the Republican papers exaggerate the farmers' prosperity, and credit a Republican administration with good crops, making no allowance for the crop failures which occur from time to time.

Decline of Farm Products.

But while on the oat question let me call attention to the statistics given in the Investment guide already referred to. According to Henry Clews & Co., the average prices received by farmers for oats, during the seven years beginning with 1893, and ending with 1899, were as follows: 1893, 29.4; 1894, 32.4; 1895, 19.6; 1896, 18.7; 1897, 21.2; 1898, 25.5; 1899, 24.9. According to these figures oats averaged 25 cents a bushel during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration, and only 24 cents per bushel during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the present year is not yet complete, but oats are at the present time below the average.

According to the same authority the average prices received by the farmers for corn, were as follows: 1893, 36.5; 1894, 45.7; 1895, 26.4; 1896, 21.5; 1897, 26.3; 1898, 28.7; 1899, 30.3, making an average of about 30.5 during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration, and 28.1 during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the fourth year is not yet complete, but corn is at this time above the average.

Wheat, according to the same authority brought to the farmers the following prices: 1893, 53.8; 1894, 49.1; 1895, 50.9; 1896, 72.6; 1897, 80.8; 1898, 58.2; 1899, 58.4, showing a higher average during the last three years than during the four preceding—the fourth year is not complete, but wheat is now above the average.

According to the same authority cotton planters received the following prices: 1893, 6.09; 1894, 4.6; 1895, 7.59; 1896, 6.6.; 1897, 5.0; 1898, 4.75; 1899, 7.5, showing a higher average during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's administration than during the three years of Mr. McKinley's administration—the fourth year is not yet complete, but cotton is now above the average price.

Taking these four staples of agriculture it will be seen that three out of four have not on the average brought as much return to the farmer, under the present administration, as under the previous administration, and the fourth product, wheat, is more influenced than any other farm product by foreign conditions.

Advance in Merchandise.

When, however, the farmer attempts to use his income in the purchase of the necessaries of life he finds that the trusts have raised prices. He must pay more for lumber, nails, wire, harness, hardware, stoves and agricultural implements. More, also for oil, sugar, clothing, furniture, etc., and in addition to these drains upon his income he must meet an increase in federal taxation.

Let the parent calculate how long it will take a farmer to become independent under present conditions; let him contrast the lot of the farmer with the lot of the man who profits by governmental favoritism and grows rich by the exploitation of his countrymen through the instrumentality of monopoly, and then let him answer the question, "Is the young man, Absalom, safe? Has the farmer's son, or the farmer himself any reason for giving support to the Republican party?

Next to the farmer in point of numbers and importance come the wage-earners. What is the trust doing to increase the wages, shorten the hours, improve the condition, or protect the rights of the laboring man? Is his present prospect an inviting one? Is he receiving a fair share of the proceeds of his toil? And, if not, why not? Republicans assert that the working man has a "Full Dinner pail." I ask, in the first place, whether a full dinner pail is all that a laboring man needs? It is an insult to the wage-earner to say that his thoughts are entirely centered upon his physical wants. Republican speakers and editors assume that the laboring man is all stomach. They act upon the theory that he complains only when he is hungry, and is happy whenever his hunger is appeased.

The Full Dinner Pail.

If a full dinner pail were the only thing desired, and if every laboring man had plenty to eat, it would still be necessary for the Republican party to show some connection between Republican policies and the laboring man's food supply. If bountiful crops come to the farmer he does not thank a Republican administration. If a famine abroad raises the price of farm products here the farmer does not thank the Republican party for bringing the famine. If an unexpected and an unpromised increase in the gold supply gives any respite from financial stringency can the Republican party claim credit? The question is not whether the laboring man is able to exist under present conditions, but whether he is enjoying his share of the blessings of the country and of the protection of the government. Compare the laboring man with the trust magnate, and see which fares the best at the hands of the Republican party. Enquire also whether the laboring man's income has increased as rapidly as his living expenses.

But even if every laboring man was prosperous, and even if that prosperity could be traced to Republican legislation, still the laboring man is a citizen, and must look at political questions from the citizen's standpoint. He cannot afford to barter away future security; he cannot afford to sleep while his industrial independence is being destroyed. Neither can he be enticed into an imperialistic trap, no matter how well the trap may be bated with food.

During the last campaign laboring men were threatened with idleness by employers who desired to coerce them into the support of the Republican ticket. Many of them were told not to return to work unless the Republicans were successful at the polls. After the election some of these employers closed down their shops and others reduced wages. If advances have been made in any branch of industry since 1896 remember that some advance was necessary to compensate for the reductions which occurred after the last election.

Coercion in 1896.

A firm in the City of Washington announced shortly before the election in 1896 that it would not be able to continue in business if I was elected. It went into bankruptcy immediately after election notwithstanding the fact that its candidate was successful at the polls. There are indications that this attempt at intimidation may be resorted to again this fall. If a business man feels justified in holding out the prospect of his own bankruptcy in order to influence voters he cannot complain if his creditors take steps to collect their accounts before the election in order to avoid a possible loss.

The Chicago-Times Herald of September 8 contained a special dispatch from Indianapolis setting forth the complaint made by the anthracite coal miners. In the dispatch I read the following statement made by one of the miners: "It is merely a question whether the men would starve to death at work or starve in idleness." The dispatch also contains the following figures in regard to wages, said to have been furnished by a member of the national board of the United Mine Workers of America, viz: "Average daily wages received by miners, $1.35; average wage of day men at mines, 90 cents." And in the statement to the public giving his reasons for calling out the miners, President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers says: "The average wages of the anthracite miners for many years has been less than $250 annually." Let the parent calculate the annual income of a miner, and figure out, if he can, how the miner is going to keep himself, and support his family under present conditions; and then let the parent ask himself whether he is willing to have his son take his chances with the miners. Is it due to natural or to human laws that the producer of wealth fares so poorly, while the man at the head of a monopoly secures so much.

All Monopolies Are Bad.

Those who attempt to divide private monopolies into good monopolies and bad monopolies will never make any progress toward the overthrow of the trusts. There is no good monopoly in private hands; there never was, and never will be. With all the advancement in civilization man is still too selfish to be trusted with the absolute control with that which his fellows must have. The Republican party has no remedy for the trusts. Publicity is good, but publicity alone is not sufficient. The practices of the trusts must not only be made known, they must be prevented. The Democratic platform contains a demand for legislation which will place trust made articles on the free list. There is no doubt that such a law would protect the people from much of the extortion which is practiced under cover of high tariff laws. If a tariff duty excludes the foreign product, while domestic manufacturers combine to raise the price of home product, the American citizen may be plundered here, while the trust sells abroad in competition with the world. It may not be out of place to suggest that I introduced a bill eight years ago providing for this remedy, but we are not willing to stop at one remedy, we desire to apply every remedy within the power of the state and federal governments. Congressional action is not necessary to destroy a trust which confines its operations to a single city, or a single state. Such a trust can be exterminated by state legislation. It is within the power of the state to prescribe the conditions upon which corporations shall be organized, and these conditions should be such as to make a private monopoly place limitations upon outside corporations doing business within the state. This, however, is not sufficient. Congress must co-operate with the state in preventing the organization of any interstate monopoly. Without impairing the present authority of the state, Congress can provide that corporations organized in any state shall not do business outside of the state until certain necessary conditions are complied with. If the people of any state are willing to create and continue a monopoly, the people of other states need feel no concern, so long as the monopoly is confined to the state in which the corporation originates. But the moment a monopoly crosses the state line and invades other states, Congress has a right to, and must, interfere for the protection of the public at large. If a corporation organized in New Jersey, or any other state, were prohibited from engaging in inter-state commerce until it produced evidence to show that there was no water in its stock, and that it had not attempted, and was not attempting to monopolize any branch of industry, its power to do harm would at once be destroyed. An honest corporation engaged in legitimate business, ought to join in the enactment of laws, which will protect them and the public from the industrial highwaymen who commit larceny upon a grand scale. Those who desire the annihilation of the trusts are not hostile to property rights, but they protest against allowing the fictitious person, created by law and called a corporation, to trample upon the rights of the natural man of flesh and blood. If the man-made corporation supports the Republican party, we ought to be able to appeal for support to the God-made man.

As to Railroad Discriminations.

The railroads have by discriminations and rebates materially aided in building up monopolies. At one time the Standard Oil Company had a contract with a railroad whereby it not only enjoyed lower rates than its competitors, but received a part of the freight paid by its competitors. The inter-state commerce commission has repeatedly asked for legislation which would empower the commission to protect the public, but the Republican party has turned a deaf ear to these appeals.

It is generally assumed that the bankers will co-operate with the trusts in preventing remedial legislation, but the banker himself is apt to fall a victim of this policy of concentration. Some are already urging the establishment of branch banks, and when the branch bank is established it will be able to run all the other banks out of business. Even now the association of several great financial institutions in New York, under the influence of one group of financiers, is embarrassing other and smaller banks.

But why muultiply illustrations of the evil of monopoly? No matter how tempting the present advantage; no matter how alluring the immediate prospect every citizen will find it to his permanent advantage to aid in the overthrow of the monopolistic principle, and in the re-establishment of the industrial system upon a basis of justice. Give the boy a chance, and let success be the reward of merit.

The attempt of the Republican party to largely increase our military establishment suggests another inquiry: Is your son safe when new ideals are substituted for the ideals cherished during the past century, and when the doctrine of force is accepted as an American doctrine. Up to this time we have encouraged science and the arts; we have proclaimed the advantages of peace, and have preached the gospel of love. What will be the effect upon the character of future generations if we encourage the professional soldier at the expense of the civilian, and teach the creed that might can create right.

Dangers of Militarism.

Is your son safe when a large military establishment is being built up to protect syndicates organized to develop distant lands? When Mr. McKinley was inaugurated there were only 25,000 soldiers in the regular army. In December, 1898, the President recommended that the standing army be increased to 100,000 men. A Republican House of Representatives, prompt to do his bidding, passed a bill—and this was done after the treaty of peace was signed and before hostilities broke out in Manila. Why did we need such an army? Possibly the prospectus issued by the Philippine Lumber and Development Company will explain. The company has an office in the Merchants' Loan & Trust building, 135 Adams street, Chicago. The prospectus says, "Negotiations are pending for timber rights, and some valuable timber rights have already been secured, and negotiations for others are rapidly approaching completion. No other company can compete with this one in getting a first foothold in the islands, and for several years at least this company will be ahead of all competitors." It also quotes from an article in the American Lumberman in which appears the following: "Unlike most tropical countries the labor problem is easily solved by the Chinese labor, which is plentiful and fairly good." The capitalist may see an advantage in militarism and imperialism, but where is the laboring man's share? He will furnish sons for the army and will help to pay the expenses of war, but he has no part on the profits. As some one has expressed it his lot is to "Die for the dividends of Dives."

Is your son safe when the doctrine of equality before the law is repudiated, and when the arguments which have ever been used in support of kingcraft are called into justify taxation without representation, and government without the consent of the governed. Many have given their support to an imperialistic policy without fully realizing what imperialism means. Mr. Gompers, President of the Federation of Labor, in his report made to the organization last December, warns the laboring man to beware of the dangers of imperialism and says: "But beneath it all there is the purpose of those who have lost faith in the principles of our republic, those who have no confidence in, or reliance upon the honor, honesty and stability of our people and our form of government, and who aim to erect a throne of despotism upon the tomb of freedom, whose initiatory step is a large standing army, and who, with militarism rampant, hope to crush out the memory of, and the aspiration for, true liberty and freedom for all our people."

Appeal to Freemen.

Whether this nation shall be looked upon as a Lafayette, aiding others to obtain their freedom and enjoying their gratitude, or as a Lord-Clive, fastening a hateful sovereignty upon a weaker people and receiving hatred in return, is a question which you must help to decide. Let me borrow a story which has already been applied to the present situation. A man passed along a street of a great city, unmindful of the merchandise piled on either side; he sought out a bird store, and purchasing a number of birds opened their cages and allowed them to fly away. When asked why he thus wasted his money he replied: "I was once a captive myself, and it gives me joy to be the means of setting any captive free."

This nation has been a liberator. It first secured the freedom of its own people, and from that day on has furnished the example which has lead to the overthrow of monachical rule in many nations. Let it not falter now. It is probable that the $20,000,000 paid to Spain can be secured from the Filipinos, but even if it cannot, it is better to consider that sum as a contribution to be spread on the doctrine of self-government than to regard it as part payment upon the purchase price of people or their lands. Citizens, countrymen, you stand by the side of the cage; you cannot avoid responsibility; will you open the door or shut it?

WILLIAM J. BRYAN'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

Gentlemen:—In accepting the nomination tendered by you on behalf of the Democratic party, I beg to assure you of my appreciation of the great honor conferred upon me by the delegates in convention assembled, and by the voters who gave instruction to the delegates.

I am sensible of the responsibilities which rest upon the chief magistrate of so great a nation, and realize the far-reaching effect of the questions involved in the present contest.

In my letter of acceptance of 1896, I made the following pledge:

"So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the Constitution in the chief executive of the nation and with the enormous influence which he can yield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my countrymen. Human judgment is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and, in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of the office to advance any personal ambition, I hereby announce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election, in case this campaign results in my election."

Further reflection and observation constrain me to renew this pledge.

The platform adopted at Kansas City commands my cordial and unqualified approval. It courageously meets the issues now before the country, and states clearly and without ambiguity the party's position on every question considered. Adopted by a convention which assembled on the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, it breathes the spirit of candor, independence and patriotism which characterizes those who, at Philadelphia in 1776, promulgated the creed of the Republic.

Having in my notification speech, discussed somewhat at length the paramount issue, imperialism, and added some observations on militarism and the Boer war, it is sufficient at this time to review the remaining planks of the platform.

Trusts.

The platform very properly gives prominence to the trust question. The appalling growth of combinations in restraint of trade during the present administration, proves conclusively that the Republican party lacks either the desire or the ability to deal with the question effectively. If as may be fairly assumed from the speeches and conduct of the Republican leaders, that party does not intend to take the people's side against these organizations, then the weak and qualified condemnation of trusts to be found in the Republican platform is designed to distract attention while industrial despotism is completing its work. A private monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit, the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser, and must sell at the arbitrary price fixed; the laborer has but one employer, and is powerless to protest against injustice, either in wages or in conditions of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator, while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only excluded from the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done, or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welfare of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies; pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I heartily approve of this promise; if elected, it shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and spirit. I shall select an attorney-general who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws; I shall recommend such additional legislation as may be necessary to dissolve every private monopoly which does business outside of the state of its origin; and, if contrary to my belief and hope, a constitutional amendment is found to be necessary, I shall recommend such an amendment as will, without impairing any of the existing rights of the states, empower Congress to protect the people of all the states from injury at the hands of individuals or corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

The platform accurately describes the Dingley tariff law, when it condemns it as a "trust breeding measure, skillfully devised to give to the few favors which they do not deserve, and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear." Under its operation trusts can plunder the people of the United States, while they successfully compete in foreign markets with manufacturers of other countries. Even those who justify the general policy of protection will find it difficult to defend a tariff which enables a trust to exact an exorbitant toll from the citizen.

Corporations in Politics.

The Democratic party makes no war upon honestly acquired wealth; neither does it seek to embarrass corporations engaged in legitimate business, but it does protest against corporations entering politics, and attempting to assume control of the instrumentalities of government. A corporation is not organized for political purposes, and should be compelled to confine itself to the business described in its charter. Honest corporations, engaged in an honest business, will find it to their advantage to aid in the enactment of such legislation as will protect them from the undeserved odium which will be brought upon them by those corporations which enter the political arena.

Interstate Commerce.

The Republican party has persistently refused to comply with the urgent request of the Interstate Commerce commission, for such an enlargement of the scope of the interstate commerce law as will enable the commission to realize the hopes aroused by its creation. The Democratic party is pledged to legislation which will empower the commission to protect individuals and communities from discrimination, and the public at large from unjust and unfair transportation rates.

The Financial Plank.

The platform reiterates the demand contained in the Chicago platform for an American financial system made by the American people for themselves. The purpose of such a system is to restore and maintain a bimetallic level of prices, and in order that there may be no uncertainty as to the method of restoring bimetallism, the specific declaration in favor of free and unlimited coinage at the existing ratio of 16 to 1, independent of the action of other nations, is repeated. In 1896 the Republican party recognized the necessity for bimetallism by pledging the party to an earnest effort to secure an international agreement for the free coinage of silver, and the president, immediately after his inauguration, by authority of congress, appointed a commission composed of distinguished citizens to visit Europe and solicit foreign aid. Secretary Hay, in a letter written to Lord Aldenham in November, 1898, and afterwards published in England, declared that at that time the president and a majority of his cabinet still believed in the great desirability of an international agreement for the restoration of the double standard, but that it did not seem opportune to re-open the negotiations just then. The financial law enacted less than a year ago contains a concluding section declaring that the measure was not intended to stand in the way of the restoration of bimetallism, whenever it could be done by co-operation with other nations. The platform submitted to the last Republican convention with the indorsement of the administration again suggested the possibility of securing foreign aid in restoring silver.

Now the Republican party, for the first time, openly abandons its advocacy of the double standard, and indorses the monetary system which it has so often and so emphatically condemned. The Democratic party, on the contrary, remains the steadfast advocate of the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, and is not willing that other nations shall determine for us the time and manner of restoring silver to its ancient place as a standard money. The ratio of 16 to 1 is not only the ratio now existing between all the gold and silver dollars in circulation in this country, a ratio which even the Republican administration has not attempted to change, but it is the only ratio advocated by those who are seeking to re-open the mints. Whether the senate, now hostile to bimetallism, can be changed during this campaign or the campaign of 1902 can only be determined after the votes are counted, but neither the present nor the future political complexion of congress has prevented or should prevent an announcement of the party's position upon this subject in unequivocal terms.

The currency bill, which received the sanction of the Executive and the Republican members of the House and Senate, justifies the warning given by the Democratic party in 1896. It was then predicted that the Republican party would attempt to retire the greenbacks although the party and its leaders studiously concealed their intentions. That purpose is now plain and the people must choose between the retention of the greenbacks, issued and controlled in volume by the government, and a national bank note currency issued by banks and controlled in their own interests. If the national bank notes are to be secured by bonds, the currency system now supported by the Republican party involves a permanent and increasing debt, and, so long as this system stands, the financial classes will be tempted to throw their powerful influence upon the side of any measure which will contribute to the size and permanency of a national debt. It is hardly conceivable that the American people will deliberately turn from the debt-paying policy of the past, to the dangerous doctrine of perpetual bonds.

Election of Senators by the People.

The demand for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, appears for the first time in a Democratic National platform, but a resolution proposing such an amendment, has three times passed the House of Representatives, and that, too, practically without opposition. Whatever may have been the reasons which secured the adoption of the present plan, a century ago, new conditions have made it imperative that the people be permitted to speak directly in the selection of their representatives in the Senate. A Senator is no less the representative of the State because he receives his commission from the people themselves, rather than from the members of the State legislature. If a voter is competent to vote for a member of Congress, for State officers and for President, he is competent to choose his representative in the Senate. A system which makes the Senator responsible for his election to the people, as a whole, and amenable to them if he misrepresents them, must commend itself to those who have confidence in the intelligence, and patriotism of the masses.

Direct Legislation.

The platform indorses the principle of direct legislation. This is already applied to the more important questions in nation, state and city. It rests upon the sound theory that the people can be trusted, and that the more responsive the government is to the will of the people, the more free it will be from misuse and abuse.

Labor Question.

Several planks of the labor platform are devoted to questions in which the laboring classes have an immediate interest, but which more remotely effect our entire population. While what is generally known as government by injunction is at present directed chiefly against the employes of corporations, when there is a disagreement between them and their employer, it involves a principle which concerns every one. The purpose of the injunction in such cases is to substitute trial by judge for trial by jury, and is a covert blow at the jury system. The abolition of government by injunction is as necessary for the protection of the reputation of the court, as it is for the security of the citizen. Blackstone in defending trial by jury, says:

"The impartial administration of justice, which secures both our persons, and our properties is the great end of civil society, but if that be entrusted entirely to the magistracy, a select body of men, and those selected by the prince such as enjoy the highest offices of the state their decisions in spite of their natural integrity, will have frequently an involuntary bias toward those of their own rank, and dignity. It is not to be expected from human nature that the few should be always attentive to the interests and good of the many."

If the criminal laws are not sufficient for the protection of property, they can be made more severe, but a citizen charged with crime must have his case tried before a jury of his peers.

The Blacklist.

The blacklist as now employed in some places enables the employer to place the employe under practical duress, for the skilled laborer loses his independence when the employers can not only discharge him, but prevent his securing any similar employment. The blacklist enables employers to secure, by mutual agreement, that control over the wage earners which a private monopoly exercises without contract.

Arbitration.

The platform renews the demand for arbitration between corporations and their employes. No one who has observed the friction which arises between great corporations and their numerous employes can doubt the wisdom of establishing an impartial court for the just and equitable settlement of disputes. The demand for arbitration ought to be supported as heartily by the public, which suffers inconvenience because of strikes and lockouts, and by the employers themselves, as by the employes. The establishment of arbitration will insure friendly relations between labor and capital, and render obsolete the growing practice of calling in the army to settle labor troubles.

Department of Labor.

I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of the platform recommendation of the establishment of a department of labor, with a member of the cabinet at its head. When we remember how important a position the laborer fills in our economic, social and political fabric, it is hard to conceive of a valid objection being made to this recognition of his services. Agriculture is already represented in the president's official household; the army and navy have their representatives there; the state department, with its consular service, and the treasury department, with its close connection with fiscal affairs, keep the executive in touch with the business and commercial interests. A cabinet officer truly representative of the wage earning class would be of invaluable aid, not only to the toilers, but to the president.

Chinese Exclusion.

The Chinese exclusion act has proven an advantage to the country, and its continuance and strict enforcement, as well as its extension to other similar races, are imperatively necessary. The Asiatic is so essentially different from the American that he cannot be assimilated with our population, and is, therefore, not desirable as a permanent laborer, preserving his national identity, and maintaining a foreign scale of wages and living, must ever prove an injustice to American producers, as well as a perpetual source of irritation.

Pensions.

The party expresses its pride in the soldiers and sailors of all our wars, and declares its purpose to deal generously with them and their dependents. A liberal policy is natural and necessary in a government which depends upon a citizen soldiery, instead of a large standing army. Self-interest, as well as gratitude, compels the government to make bountiful provision for those who, in the hour of danger, and at great sacrifice of business, health and life, tender their services to their country.

The pension laws should be construed according to the generous spirit which prompted their passage. The platform very properly reiterates the position taken in 1896, that the fact of enlistment shall be deemed conclusive evidence that the soldier was sound when the government accepted him. A certificate given now to the health of a person 40 years ago, even if easily obtainable, should not have as much weight as the certificate of the medical officer who examined the volunteer with a view of ascertaining his fitness for army service.

Nicaragua.

The Democratic party is in favor of the immediate construction, ownership and control of the Nicaragua canal by the United States. The failure of the Republican party to make any progress in carrying out a pledge contained in its platform four years ago, together with the substitution in its latest platform of a plank favoring an isthmian canal for a specific declaration in favor of the Nicaraguan canal, would indicate that the Republican leaders either do not appreciate the importance of this great waterway to the maritime strength and commercial interests of the country, or that they give too much consideration to the interested opposition of transcontinental lines. The Hays-Pauncefote treaty, now before the senate, would, if ratified, greatly lessen the value of the canal, if it would not indeed convert it into a positive menace in time of war. The paramount interests of the United States in the western hemisphere, together with the obligations to defend the republics to the south of us, makes it necessary that our government shall be able to close the canal against any hostile power.

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma have long been ready to assume the responsibilities and enjoy the privileges of statehood, and it will be a pleasure, as well as a duty, to carry out the platform pledge concerning them.

Alaska and Porto Rico.

There will be a popular acquiescence in the demand for home rule, and a territorial form of government in Alaska and Porto Rico. Both are entitled to local self-government and representation in Congress.

Cuba.

The recognition contained in both the Democratic and Republican platforms of the right of the Cubans to independence, removes the general principle involved from the domain of partisan politics. It is proper, however, to consider whether the accomplishment of this purpose can be safely entrusted to the Republican party after it has yielded to the allurements of the Colonial idea, and abandoned its earlier faith in the natural and inalienable rights of man.

Reclamation of Arid Lands.

The time is ripe for a systematic and extended effort to reclaim the arid lands and fit them for actual settlers. The last agricultural report estimates that homes can thus be provided for many millions of people. The impounding and use of the waters which are wasted in the spring would people the western states with thrifty, intelligent, and industrious citizens, and these would furnish a valuable market for all the products of the factories. A small percentage of the money spent in a war of conquest would provide occupation and habitation for more people than would ever seek a residence in colonies within the tropics.

Foreign Alliances.

The reasons given by Washington, Jefferson, and the other statesmen of the early days in support of the doctrine that we should maintain friendly relations with all nations, but enter into entangling alliances with none, are even stronger to-day than they were a hundred years ago. Our commerce is rapidly increasing, and we are brought into constant communication with all parts of the world. Even if we desired to do so, we could not afford to alienate many nations by cultivating unnecessary intimacy with a few. Our strength and standing are such that it is less necessary than ever before to lean for aid upon the friendliness of a foreign power.

We cannot connect ourselves with European nations, and share in their jealousies and ambitions without losing the peculiar advantage, which our location, our character and our institutions give us in the world's affairs.

Monroe Doctrine.

The doctrine enunciated by Monroe, and approved by succeeding presidents, is essential to the welfare of the United States. The continents of North and South America are dedicated to the development of free government. One republic after another has been established, until to-day monarchial idea has barely a foothold in the new world.

While it is not the policy of this country to interfere where amicable relations exist between European countries and their dependencies in America, our people would look with disfavor upon any attempt on the part of European governments to maintain an unwilling or forcible sovereignty over the people living on this side of the Atlantic.

The position taken by the Republican leaders, and more recently set forth by the Republican candidate for the Presidency, viz: That we cannot protect a nation from outside interference without exercising sovereignty over its people, is an assault upon the Monroe doctrine, for while this argument is at this time directed against the proposition to give to the Filipinos both independence and protection, it is equally applicable to the Republics of Central and South America. If this government cannot lend its strength to another Republic without making subjects of its people, then we must either withdraw our protection from the Republics to the south of us or absorb them. Under the same plea, that the guardian nation must exert an authority equal to its responsibility, European nations have for centuries exploited their wards, and it is a significant fact that the Republican party should accept the European idea of a protectorate, at the same time that it adopts a European colonial policy. There is no excuse for this abandonment of the American idea. We have maintained the Monroe doctrine for three-quarters of a century. The expense to us has been practically nothing, but the protection has been beyond value to our sister Republics. If a Filipino Republic is erected upon the ruins of Spanish tyranny, its protection by us will be neither difficult nor expensive. No European nation would be willing for any other European nation to have the islands, neither would any European nation be willing to provoke a war with us in order to obtain possession of the islands. If we assert sovereignty over the Filipinos we will have to defend that sovereignty by force, and the Filipinos will be our enemies; if we protect them from outside interference, they will defend themselves and will be our friends. If they show as much determination in opposing the sovereignty of other nations as they have shown in opposing our sovereignty, they will not require much assistance from us.

Extravagance.

The Republican party, drawing as it does enormous campaign funds from those who enjoy special privileges at the hands of the government, is powerless to protect the tax payers from the attack of those who profit by large appropriations. A surplus in the treasury offers constant temptation to extravagance, and extravagance, in turn, compels a resort to new means of taxation, which, is being kept in the background until the campaign is over, is a fair illustration of the imposition which will be attempted when there is a considerable amount of money idle in the treasury. The rehabilitation of the merchant marine, laudable in itself, is made the pretext for expenditure of public money for the benefit of large ship owners, and in the interests of a transportation monopoly. The government being only the agent of the people, has no right to collect from the people taxes beyond the legitimate needs of a government honestly and effectively administered, and public servants should exercise the same degree of care in the use of the people's money that private individuals do in the use of their own money. With a restoration of a foreign policy consistent with American ideas there can be an immediate and large reduction in the burdens now borne by the people.

Income Tax.

By inadvertence the Income Tax plank agreed upon by the Resolutions committee, was omitted from the platform as read and adopted. The subject, however, is covered by the reaffirmation of the Chicago platform, and I take this occasion to reassert my belief in the principle which underlies the income tax. Congress should have authority to levy and collect an income tax whenever necessary, and an amendment to the federal constitution specifically conferring such authority ought to be supported by even those who may think the tax unnecessary at this time. In the hour of danger the government can draft the citizen; it ought to be able to draft the pocketbook as well. Unless money is more precious than blood, we cannot afford to give greater protection to the incomes of the rich than to the lives of the poor.

Imperialism.

The subjects, however, treated in this letter, important as each may seem in itself, do not press so imperatively for solution as the question which the platform declares to be the paramount issue in this campaign. Whether we shall adhere to, or abandon those ideas of government which have distinguished this nation from other nations and given to its history its peculiar charm and value, is a question the settlement of which cannot be delayed. No other question can approach it in importance; no other question demands such immediate consideration. It is easier to lose a reputation than to establish one, and this nation would find it a long and laborious task to regain its proud position among the nations, if, under the stress of temptation, it should repudiate the self-evident truths proclaimed by our heroic ancestors and sacredly treasured during a career unparalleled in the annals of time. When the doctrine that the people are the only source of power is made secure from further attack we can safely proceed to the settlement of the numerous questions which involve the domestic and economic welfare of our citizens.

Very truly yours,
W. J. BRYAN.

Letter to H. L. Pierce, April 6, 1859, —Irelan 16—263. All honor to Jefferson—to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast and capacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men and all times, and so to embalm it there that today, and in all coming days, it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers of reappearing tyranny and oppression.

(July 5, 1861, Annual Message—Raymond, p. 186.) This relaive matter of National power and state rights, as a principle, is no other than the principle of generality and locality. —

(March 4, 1861, First Inaugural—Raymond, p. 167.) I do not forget the position assumed by some, that constitutional questions are to be decided by the superior court. * * * At the same time the candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the government, upon vital questions affecting the whole people, is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the supreme court, the instant they are made in ordinary litigation, between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal.

BRYAN AND LIND

THE JOINT CAMPAIGN OPENING, NATIONAL AND STATE.

Mr. Bryan's Three Days in Minnesota. Governor Lind to Participate—Outline of the Programme That Will in One Grand Sweep Cover Every Congressional District in the State—The State Campaign Now Fully On—Roundup of Reform Press Notes and Comment For the Week, Etc., Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Sept. 24, 1900.

At this writing it is not possible to give the particulars of the coming of Mr. Bryan to this state, yet enough is known to make it certain that in the three days that he will be in the state he will cover more of its territory and see and speak to more of its people than he has ever been able to do before. A glance at the proposed route will show this. It will also reveal that in the grand sweep he will make, he will reach every congressional district in the state.

Coming in at Crookston on Saturday, Sept. 29th, he will cross the entire Seventh district and also the Sixth in going to Duluth, where he will spend the Sabbath, Sept. 30, in absolute rest. Monday morning, Oct. 1, he will pass southward through the rest of the Sixth district into the Fourth, via Stillwater, to St. Paul for the first of his Twin City double meetings. The Fifth district (Hennepin county) is of course covered by his Exposition meeting, Minneapolis, the same evening. Tuesday morning he will go through the Third district, to Mankato in the Second and pass out of the latter to and through the First at Winona.

That no possible circumstances could develop a grander sweep than the one our great leaders will make on this trip, in the outpouring of the people and enthusiasm, is certain. It is in response to a general demand that Governor Lind will participate in the trip. It will be one grand triumphal march from start to finish. Approximately 30 counties of the state will be touched in the Bryan and Lind itinerary, and half as many more lie close to the line of march; which is to say that the people of more than one-half of the total of 83 counties in the state will have an opportunity to see and hear these great leaders and defenders of the common people. Thousands and thousands will thus have an opportunity to greet Mr. Bryan who have not hitherto had that privilege, although he has several times been in the state.

While the Bryan coming will emphasize the national campaign opening, the general campaign is now well on in Minnesota. No anti-Republican campaign has ever even approached that which the Reform forces are putting up at the St. Paul headquarters. The alliance made on the state ticket, uniting all the Reform forces, is being carried out in the campaign management. The People's party state committee, Victor E. Lawson, chairman, is working in complete harmony with the Democratic committee. Both committees have distributed the bulk of their campaign literature and are arranging meetings.

We stop the press to state that according to the best information obtainable the Republican press bureau has passed an issue without uttering a single glaring falsehood or perjury on Governor Lind. Why this "rectitudinationings," as Dinkelspiel would say?

And speaking of the press bureau, the South Dakota G. O. P. bureau certainly got up some steam when handling Roosevelt. Still Senator Pettigrew writes it was mostly wind.

While Hanna is appealing for cash to re-elect him as national boss, his son is being sued for the support of his children by a divorced wife.

Under Governor Lind's appeal for aid for the Galveston sufferers, the Twin Cities will probably send $20,000. Minnesota's heart is always in the right place.

In a recent conversation, Architect Gilbert, who directs the construction of the new capitol, expressed the hope that he would see it completed in time for Governor Lind to occupy it before the close of his second term. The best capitol for the best governor is undoubtedly the way he looks at it.

Speaking of the new capitol, Architect Gilbert has plans for the improvement of the front grounds and approaches which, if carried out, will meet the criticism often expressed, that the grounds in front are too small or that the building should have been located further back.

While the Minnesota coal dealers are hoisting the price of coal, the Pennsylvania authorities are getting the troops ready to march on the striking miners. The coal baron pockets the big profits and smiles complacently.

The Doc Ames party in Minneapolis took the primary election cake. "Ames and reform" will be the G. O. P. warcry.

Speaking of Twin City politics, it is generally conceded that if the Minneapolis Republicans have out-Heroded Herod in Doc Ames' nomination, the St. Paul goppites "cut a dog in two" in the make up of their county ticket.

Speaking also of tickets and candidates, the Minneapolis Reform forces have certainly made up a splendid ticket. Mayor Gray's renomination is a well deserved compliment. That he will be overwhelmingly elected is regarded as morally certain. Another well earned recognition is the election of J. O. Davis of the public examiner's office, as candidate for comptroller.

The Philippine commission has sent in a lengthy report that bears all the earmarks of a Republican campaign document. It asserts that "Bryan's defeat will end the rebellion," that "all is pacified except a few, small, scattered robber bands," etc., all after the manner of the late General Otis, with whose style the American public has long ago acquired that familiarity which breeds contempt. And by the same cable comes the report of a pitched battle between American soldiers and a force of 1,000 well armed Filipinos, in which 40 American soldiers were killed or wounded. What's the matter with McKinley's censor?

Of all of England's troubles there is not one that hurts and worries her half as much as the present wonderful prosperity and commercial expansion of Germany. In the rapid progress of Germany and Russia England sees the handwriting on the wall that foretells her doom. Germany's prosperity has been mainly in evidence during the last four years. Why don't McKinley claim the credit for that, too?

No wonder Mark Hanna got worked up over Bryan's anti-trust speech. That speech hit Mark right where he lives and he simply couldn't help but squeal.

Isn't it amusing to see Republican editors, writing on trust-made and trust-priced paper, assert that there are no trusts?

A 10-year-old daughter of Coal Miner Tom McNeill of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company at Shamokin, Pa., said: "Yes, sir, I know father is going to win. Why? Well, because he must win; because we're so poor and they're trying to make us poorer, so's we shouldn't be able to live at all. We will win because we all know that God is good."

In logic Hanna is a daisy. In his trust speech at Chicago he asserted that there are no trusts, and in the same breath accused Senator Jones of being a member of the cotton bale trust.

While Bryan was discussing the colonial policy of the government some one asked him about North Carolina and the race question in that state. "I am glad you mentioned North Carolina," said Mr. Bryan. "Now I want you to read the Sulu treaty and having done that, I think you will blush until election day."

The attempt of the Republican party to make capital out of the North Carolina election law is a very thin game. That law applies to white and colored voters alike and is essentially the same as the one which the administration has itself introduced in Cuba.

"I would like Mr. Bryan or any other Democrat to tell me what a trust is. I believe there is not a trust in the United States. There is a national law and in every state there is a law against trusts. They cannot exist, and every law against trusts, national or state, has been the product of Republican lawmakers and the credit is due to the Republican party," said Mark Hanna in his speech at Chicago. Does Mark take the people of these United States to be idiots or gullible infants to treat them to such buncombe? If Mark really wants to know what a trust is, perhaps some of the half-starved, striking miners in Pennsylvania might tell him.

The following is an extract from a letter received at this office: "I saw P—— the other day. I was on the Great Northern train and he got on at Graceville, where he had just heard Teddy try to make a speech to those awful people at Graceville. I say try, for that is all that he did there, they actually gave him the laugh, and broke him up to such an extent that the speech was a dismal failure, a regular fiasco. I would like to hear him express himself in private about what he thought of Graceville."

If, as reported, Congressman Eddy (Rep.) pins his faith to the support of Canadian and English-born voters, he may get very much left. At least French-Canadians as a rule are not as much in love with their English masters and McKinley's toadying to British interests is far from meeting with the approval of French-Canadians in this country. In Minneapolis a French-American Democratic club has been organized with 150 members.

"Raw material, if bought in large quantities, is secured at lower cost," is one of the arguments urged in favor of trusts. The point is certainly a good one. When, for instance, one man buys all the wool, the price of wool will be lowered and all who produce wool will be forced to sell at the price fixed by the trust, and the same will be true of every other kind of raw material. As a large proportion of our people are engaged in producing raw material, they are naturally very much interested in trusts.

The following is an extract from a letter received by Secretary Canfield: "Roosevelt is doing a vast amount of good for the Democrats by his ranting in South and North Dakota. You remember what this rough rider said four years ago: 'Even if he (Bryan) is elected we may not turn the reins of government over to him.' Remember he was secretary of the navy. No anarchist ever spoke with more defiance to his country than that."

West Virginia is taking rank over New Jersey as the home of trusts. During August the record showed the organization of 16 companies in that state, with a combined capitalization of $47,900,000, against New Jersey's 13, with an aggregate capitalization of $23,000,000.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Fruit Market.

The two weeks which closed recently broke all previous records in the fruit business in Minneapolis. In this time 100 carloads of fruit were received, Oregon and Washington furnished sixty cars, and Michigan, Indiana and Illinois furnished the rest. The shipment from the coast exceed records for all previous periods of like length. During fair week thirty-three cars were received from that source. This is partly accounted for by the excellence of the fruit, it is being generally admitted that it is the best that has ever been received. Much of this fruit received has been sent to North and South Dakota.

The extent of the increase in the fruit trade of Minneapolis is indicated by the fact that during the two weeks more fruit has been received than during a whole season twelve year ago.

State Timber to be Sold.

Seventy-five millions of feet of standing pine, spruce, tamarack and cedar belonging to the state are to be sold to the highest bidder at the state capitol, Nov. 14. The greater portion stands on school lands, though a considerable amount is in insolated tracts.

The sales will include timber in St. Louis, Lake, Cass, Beltrami, Becker, Itasca, Crow, Wing, Aitkin and Hubbard counties, and, accepting the conservative estimates of values made by the state auditor, should bring between $200,000 and $250,000.

The timber cruisers in the employ of the state have been busy all summer in the northern tier of counties, making up a list of timber tracts owned by the state, with the appraised valuation of the growth upon them.

Large Pearls.

There is considerable excitement at Winona over a number of valuable pearls that have been found there lately.

Mr. T. J. McNamara recently found one which sold for $200, but the climax came, when Benjamin F. Dayton, while looking over a quantity of clams, discovered a large pearl of exceptional beauty and luster.

The gem is estimated by various authorities to be worth from $100 to $2,000. An offer of $500 has been refused by Mr. Dayton, he wishing to find exactly what the jewel is really worth.

The jewel is the largest that has been found in that part of the river.

Traffic Arrangements.

The northern Pacific and Soo roads have consummated a traffic alliance almost identical with that being perfected between the Northern Pacific and Milwaukee roads. In concerns business directed towards and through Duluth.

The agreement concerns freight business. The diverting points are Glenwood and Bald Eagle. At Glenwood eastbound business, destined for the head of the lakes, or farther east for that matter, by lake and rail, will be switched from the Soo line to the Northern Pacific and carried through, over the latter, to Duluth.

A Vicious Buck.

Alexander, the buck deer presented to the St. Paul park board by the Minneapolis board and placed in Como park, became violent the other day and before its keepers were aware had gored almost to death a beautiful doe and had killed an elk in the enclosure with him. Two keepers went after him with clubs, but it was not until one of the men hit him a rap upon the tip of his nose that he became docile. Since he has been locked up in an enclosure alone and it is probable that he will be killed. About a year ago he tried to kill his keeper.

Out of Debt.

One year ago eleven of the Methodist Episcopal churches of Minneapolis had total obligations amounting to $40,000, but at a meeting of the City Missions and Church Extention society, it was reported that this indebtedness had been paid, and that with the exception of $750 which the Fowler church still carries, all the churches begin the year without encumbrances.

News in Brief.

Mathias Karpen and John Breckner, aged 13 years, were taken to the state training school at Red Wing, being found guilty of larceny at Hastings.

The state historical society received a pastel portrait of General John B. Sanborn, a member of the society for forty-five years.

A program is now being arranged for a tripple convention of the Minnesota Horticultural society, State Bee Keepers' association and the State Forestry association, to be held in Minneapolis Dec. 4 to 7, inclusive.

Two Italian laborers employes in the gravel pit of the Great Western railway in the north part of Faribault, ate toadstools in mistake for mushrooms the other night. The prompt arrival of a physician saved their lives.

The Winona annual street fair came to a successful close after a rousing carnival in which thousands of people participated.

John J. Johnson, Lehieller, near Mankato, committed suicide by taking aconite. This was his second attempt at suicide.

Henry H. Kaufmann of Vermillion, living near Hampton Station committed suicide by hanging himself to a couple of timbers in the barn.

Thomas G. Eskridge, stenographer in the adjutant general's office at St. Paul, and Frank Foster, clerk for the medical director of the department, have ordered to prepare for transfer to Manilla.

Burglars entered the residence of J. E. Jones at Welcome and stole a gold watch valued at $65 and 40 cents in change. There is no clue.

While cutting corn with a corn harvester W. F. Teufel, a wealthy farmer near Ballaton, ran the bull wheel of his machine over his 4-year-old boy, who was sleeping in the field, injuring him so that he survived but a short time.

Additional rural free delivery service will be established on Oct. 1 at Amboy, Blue Earth county, one carrier, length of route 26 miles, population served 666; carrier, William Kienholtz.

The body of Albert Rudt, mendota, who disappeared in St. Paul a few days ago, was found in the river. It is believed the man was murdered.

Andrew Wiken, a liveryman of Eldred, shot Joseph Weigle, a thresher, the ball passing through Weigle's stomach, inflicting a wound that will probably prove fatal. Wiken was arrested. The trouble arose over a game of poker.

A STRIKE TRAGEDY.

Sheriff's Posse Fires Into a Crowd of Rioters and Two Persons Are Killed—Several Wounded.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—The tragedy that has been looked for since the coal workers' strike was inaugurated came suddenly and unexpectedly at Shenandoah Friday afternoon. A posse hurriedly gathered together by Sheriff Toole, of Schuylkill county, to meet an emergency, was forced to fire on a mob that was threatening workman on their way home under escort. A man and a little girl were instantly killed, and seven others fell more or less seriously wounded. Sheriff Toole lost no time in calling on the commander of the national guard of Pennsylvania to send troops to aid him in keeping the peace. After consultation the state authorities at Harrisburg decided at midnight to send troops to the turbulent region.

Elsewhere in the strike region everything is quiet, although preparations are making for an outbreak in the Hazelton district and armed sheriffs' deputies are much in evidence there.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 22.—Three regiments of infantry, a battery and a troop of cavalry were ordered out at midnight by Gov. Stone to assist Sheriff Toole in maintaining order in the Schuylkill mining region. This action was taken after a conference between the governor, Adjt. Gen. Stewart and Gen. Gobin on the urgent solicitation of the sheriff, borough council of Shenandoah and many prominent residents of that locality. Gen. Gobin has been placed in command of the provisional brigade.

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—Instead of the expected clash between the troops and striking miners in the Schuylkill region Monday a peaceful calm pervaded the region, and there was not the slightest disorder for the soldiers to be called upon to quell. In fact, in all the districts of the anthracite coal fields the day was extremely quiet, there being no demonstrations whatever on the part of the strikers.

The strike leaders claim many additions to their ranks, and President Mitchell himself estimates that the striking force was augmented Monday to the extent of 1,800 to 2,000. No overtures to end the struggle have been offered by either side. The strike leaders are occupying themselves in inducing mine workers to quit and the operators are endeavoring to mine all the coal they can with their reduced forces.

There is not the slightest change in the situation in regard to a settlement of the labor war. Neither side has approached the other, and there is nothing in view which would indicate that anything will soon be done in that direction. The United Mine Workers are still devoting most of their attention to getting out the men, while the operators are doing the best they can with their crippled forces.

HARD FIGHTING IN LUZON.

Dispatch from Gen. MacArthur Reports Renewal of Activity of the Filipinos.

Washington, Sept. 21.—A dispatch has been received from Gen. MacArthur which confirms the report cabled to the press from Manila regarding the activity of the insurgents. The blank spaces are words which could not be deciphered. The dispatch is as follows:

"Manila, Sept. 19.—Adjutant General, Washington: Considerable activity throughout Luzon. Fighting reported vicinity Carig and Estella, Isabella province. Insurgents estimated 500 probably much exaggerated, but sufficient force to make * * * in district heretofore quiet. In the Ilocan provinces Samuel B. M. Young (brigadier general) reports numerous small affairs and has called so emphatically for more force that Kingsbury's squadron Third cavalry and Borden's battalion Fifth infantry been sent him, other battalion Fifth same destination upon arrival. Country north Pasig including all of Bulacan very much disturbed and numerous contacts with small parties throughout that district, south of Pasig, including Tayabas province (Luzon), same conditions obtain. This activity has been anticipated and reported upon in letters August 25 * * * and cable August 31. September 16 David D. Mitchell (captain Fifteenth infantry), 90 men company L, Fifteenth infantry, from Siniloan, Laguna province, attacked insurgent Gen. Cailles who had 800 men in position at Mavitac, same province.

GALVESTON'S DEAD.

Latest Estimates of the Storm's Victims—The List Will Probably Not Exceed 5,000.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 25.—The Galveston News' list of dead from the storm of September 8 represents a total of 3,859 names. The indications are that not more than 4,000 people will be actually acounted for. The News has made a diligent effort to get as complete a list of the dead as far as possible. It is reasonable to assume that 800 or 1,000 people were lost whose names are not obtainable, which would make the total death list on Galveston island about 5,000. The News is of the opinion that the death list on the island is slightly below rather than above 5,000. This statement is made notwithstanding the fact that there are close observers at Galveston who are still estimating the death list on the island as high as 7,000.

Pressure for Currency.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The pressure for currency for moving the crops is beginning to be felt. The issues of gold certificates by the treasury at various points in the south and west, in exchange for deposits of gold in the New York subtreasury by banks on behalf of their country correspondents, are $1,000,000 more than at the same time last year. These exchanges have reached $4,945,000, of which all but $400,000 has been in September. New Orleans has taken $3,795,000 in the new gold certificates, St. Louis $750,000 and Chicago $400,000.

River Steamer Burned.

St. Louis, Sept. 22.—In the destruction at an early hour Friday of the steamer War Eagle, of the Eagle Packet company, and the steamer Carrier, operated by the Calhoun Packet company, at the foot of Locust street, one man was burned to death, another is missing and a third painfully injured and property valued at nearly $100,000 destroyed. The wharf-boats Eagle and Illinois were badly damaged and the cargo of the Carrier, consisting of wheat, apples and other produce, was totally burned.

HE EXPLAINED IT.

The Man Who Doesn't Know Anything About Golf Defines a Term of the Game.

"What do they mean by 'two up' in golf?" she asked as she put down the paper she had been reading, says the Chicago Times.

"Huh!" he exclaimed, in a startled way, for he knew about as much about golf as he did about throwing the boomerang. Still, no man is going to show his ignorance of sports to his wife.

"What do they mean by 'two up?'" she repeated.

"Two up," he returned. "Oh, yes, of course. Well, you've heard of 'topping' a ball, haven't you?"

"Certainly."

"Well, when you 'top' a ball, naturally it's up."

"I don't quite see—"

"Don't see!" he interrupted. "The top is always up, isn't it? You never saw the top at the bottom, did you?"

"No-o-o."

"Well, there you are. It's plain as day. When you 'top' a ball it's 'one up,' and when you 'top' two balls, it's 'two up.' Now, don't bother me any more."

"But what is 'topping' a ball?" she persisted.

"Good heavens! how ignorant you are!" he exclaimed. "Why, 'topping' a ball is knocking it so high that it never comes down. I should think the expression 'one up' would make that clear to you."

Two Canals Binding Atlantic.

It is asserted that the future will see two canals binding the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. The value of such connection cannot be too highly estimated. It will bring added prosperity to the nation, as surely as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters brings health to the dyspeptic. If you cannot get rid of your indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia or biliousness try the Bitters, and never accept anything in place of it if you wish to get well.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Sept. 28, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—This is No. 4, Vol. XIII.

—Read what Bryan has to say, in our supplement today.

—A very interesting letter from Farmer, is unavoidably crowded out this week.

—Frank Crowly who was sent to Fergus Falls sometime ago died Wednesday.

—The M. E. sociable held at the City Hall Wednesday evening was well attended and quite a success receipts were $22.75.

—Bartlett Bros, have a crew of millwrights at work this week putting machinery, in their new mill. They expect to have a first class mill when they get it done.

—William Hawker who has been sick since June was taken to Buffalo Tuesday, and found insane and sent to Fergus Falls Sheriff Nugent and Mrs. Hawker accompanied him

—Henry Truelson, the Democratic nominee for Congress from the Sixth District, is to speak in Delano. Fair Day, Saturday, Oct. 6. Give him a crowded house and hear his views on things political.

—Billings' restaurant on the corner of River street and R. R. Ave now has the finest display window in the village. Sidewalk has been replaced and travel that has so long been diverted from its course has again resumed its natural course.

—Grapes retailed at 12 cts per basket for awhile last Saturday. Two merchants got to running each other. The joke was that after one had closed out a large stock at 2 baskets for 25 cts the other put the price down to 12 cts per basket. The stock went and most everybody had grapes plenty for Sunday.

—The Democratic primary election was better attended than for a long while on Monday, 44 votes being cast, of which number H. E. Bock, and Charles Weise each received 44 votes; E. F. Zeibarth 43; John Stein 43; A. G. Catlin 31; M. A. O'Hair 13; C. L. Belt 1; John Brandser 1. The five receiving the highest number were declared duly elected.

—A white frost covered things in general, on Thursday morning. After we have sufficient cold to kill off vegetation we may look for a few weeks of fine Minnesota fall weather. It is not always safe, however, to put off the fall work in expectation of better days. Some times people have been disappointed in that way.

—No. 1. Vol. 1. of the Minneapolis Star was issued the 22 nd. It is the new Democratic daily. The agreement of the State Central Committee to get them 10,000 subscribers, on short notice for a paper. "unsight, unseen" as the boys would say, failed. So the daily is so far as we know, running on its own responsibility and the faith it has in democrats and their cause.

The primary for Franklin was larger than some on previous occasions 22 votes were cast. The delegateschosen were William Ziebarth, Joe Windok, F. F. Chancellor, John Turngren, Herman Otto, Joe Bauman, Geo. Kittock.

One of the events of the season was the marriage at Wayerly, of County Commissioner Flannigan's daugther. A large number of friends, many from abroad were in attendence. In the evening a grand time was had. Many of the candidatesa for office participatin Flannigan's hall.

The Democrats of Wright county nominated Tuesday, at Buffalo, what is generally conceded to be one of the strongest county tickets, ever nominated in this county.—Waverly Tribune

Wright county Democrats are out to win this time. Considerable new blood was infused into the last convention, and it is having a wonderfully invigorating effect towards rejuvinating the party of Jefferson and of Jackson.

A prominent German citizen of Delano stopped us on the street a few days ago and told us if we cared to we might publish that "I am a good Lincoln Republican; but in order to vote my principles this year I must vote against my party. I don't like to but I can't help it."

It requires a brave man to face an adverse majority of 1374 in a vote of 4536 But thats how the vote on Auditor stood two years ago. And that is the place the Democratic convention gave, unsought to Alva G. Catlin. He would like to make the majority a little smaller and will be highly grateful to the voters if they elect him by any old majority; even a baseball nine.

If you want a daily send a dollar to the Minneapolis Star. Minneapolis Minn. $100 for 1 year.

A few politicians are trying to be elected to office in Wright county without the Gazette. That is they have failed to subscribe. We dont know whose copy they read.

The 1st, 3d and 5th commissioner districts will have warm times over who shall be county commissioner. If one of them goes Democratic it gives control of the board to the Democrats.

We received last week No 47 of Vol v. The Star. printed at Waverly, by James McDonnel, age 13. The Star was not represented at the organization of the Wright County Editorial Association at Buffalo last week: but of course will be at the next December meeting.

County politics are buzzing in earnest. Republicans put up a ticket last week which was unsatisfactory to many of the prominent among them. The Democrats have, for once put up a democratic ticket, and are at lest in much better shape to make a good fight than they have been for years.

Our office is represented on the democratic county ticket; in fact leads the ticket. Nevertheless our views about life tenure of office are unchanged.

Star-News: Of course we all want Knute Nelson re-elected United States senator, but in order to secure that result, it is necessary to elect the republican legislative ticket. Vote for all republican candidates in whose honesty you have faith.

The Philippinos are putting up a vigorous campaign these days just as though they had not all been exterminated by Otis. For a war that has been over for three or four months, "it do hang on."—LeSueur Sentinel

William Lewis of Rockford, Wright county; reported to chief of police Doyle yesterday morning that he was swindled out of $200 by confidence men in Chicago and asks the police to help him recover his money. He explained that he had just return from a visit to Peru and when leaving that country he had secured a draft on a Chicago bank for $200. When in Chicago he was accosted by a very agreeable sort of a fellow, who, after showing him the sights of the city, borrowed $200 of him to "get his goods out of the warehouse."—Minneapolis Times.

John Daily the sheriff mominee is considered a much weaker candidate than Mr. Young would have been, and it is whispered that John Nugent now got the man he wanted for the Republican nomination.—Cokato Enterprise.

Broad Axe: It is fair to bear in mind that Ex-vice president Stevenson was one of the early advocates of the expansion of the currency by the free coinage of silver and that when Cleveland basely betrayed the democrats who had a second time honored him with their confidence, Mr. Stevenson was faithful to the traditions of his party and gave earnest and effective support to Mr. Bryan.

GOLD MINE CLOSES.

Victor, Col. Sept. 24.—As the result of an obnoxious order designed by the management to stop the alleged theft of valuable ore, Stratton's Independence gold mine has been closed down. The miners announce that they will not go back while the order remains in force and the superintendent says the order will not be revoked under any cicumstances.

Six other large companies have issued a similar order and signed an agreement with the Independence company to enforce it. The order provides that all workmen must change their clothes, both in going on and off shift, and pass naked before watchman from one dressing-room to another.

The supintendent of Stratton's Independence alleges the company has lost $5,000 to 15,000 per month through the peculations of workmen.

Democratic Convention.

On Tuesday, at Buffalo, Chairman Shannon called to order the largest democratic convention ever held in the county. After reading the call he asked for nominations for temporary chairman, C. M. King nominated W. S. Huntington, of Annandale, who was duly elected. H. Tanner nominated for secretary, C. M. King, of South Haven. He was elected.

Chairman Huntington made a short but appropriate address, thanking the convention for his election to the chair, and congratulating the delegates on the splendid representation here today. United democracy means victory. He predicted the election of the full ticket.

On motions the usual committees were appointed by the chair.

Committee on Credentials reported the following:

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sep. 21, 1900.

Mr. McKinley's fellow imperialist, the Emperor of Germany, not having a slumping political campaign on his hands, has notified his American imitator that he must fish, cut bait, or get out of the Chinese boat. Mr. McKinley found this notification in the shape of the demand of the German Emperor that the Chinese officials who instigated the attacks on foreigners shall be punished before Germany will participate in negotiations with China, when he paid Washington one of his peridiodical visits this week, and with it was a communication askidg in diplomatic language what he was going to do about it. There was a hurrying and scurrying, and with the assistance of some Assistant Secretaries and those members of the Cabinet who are not on the stump or taking things easy away from their offices a reply to Germany's communication was concooted and sent off. It was not made public, but there is little doubt that it was a plea for delay enough to carry the matter beyond the election. It is plain enough that Germany means to make war on China, and now that Count Waldersee, the German Commander-in chief is on the ground, the Kaiser wants to know whether Mr. McKinley is going to help him or not, and Mr. McKinley wants to find out whether he is going to be re-elected before giving a positive reply. If re elected, he may consider that an endorsement of imperalism and conclude to add a slice of China to his imperial domain.

Boss Hanna and his crowd, including Mr. McKinley, have lost no opportunity to humiliate Sanator Foraker for several years past, but this week Mr. McKinley sent for Senator Foraker and begged him to put his shoulder to the Mc Kinley wheel in Ohio. Nothin could tell the story of Mr. McKinley's fright in plainer terms.

Major Daniel O'Driscoll, who was previous to this administration an ardent republican, was one of the speakers at a meeting held under the auspices of the Central Bryan and Stevenson Club, this week. He said: "Before the republican party became the party of conquest and imperialism it stood for all that any patriotic American could wish for, but since it had at its head such men as President Mc Kinley and Senator Hanna not only are the old men turning away but they are followed by the young men. A party that will not keep promises is not a party to tie to. As a sample of these non kept promises we have but to piont to the natives of Porto Rico.

Do you wonder that those Porto Ricans sigh for the return of the Spanish rule? I dont."

Democrats around the Congressional Committee headquarters are delighted with that Chicago speech of Boss Hanna, in which he so far lost his head as to say "I believe that there is not a trust in the U. S." They believe that this assertion on the part of Hanna will be worth many thousands of votes to Bryan and Stevenson and the democratic candidates for Congress, because it is so manifestly false that it will disgust intelligent men who have heretofore voted the republican ticket.

To say that there isn't a trust in the U. S. when there isn't a family in the country which doesn't know and feel by the surest test, increase in its living expenses, of numerous trusts, is as ridiculous as to say that black is white.

The republican platform recognized the existence of trusts, as did the litters of acceptance of Mr. McKinley and Mr. Roosevelt, but Hanna says there are no trusts. After making such an assertion, Mr. Hanna cannot expect the people to believe anything he says about other issues of the campaign. If Hanna can only be kept taking in that, strain, the election of Bryan and Stevenson can be made unanimous. Mr. McKinley is being urged by many to try to muzzle Hanna.

Representative Fitzpatrick, of Ky. who was in Washington this week, said of the political conditions of his state: "This talk that the republicans are going to carry Kentucky for Mr. McKinley and the state ticket is amusing. Why, there never was a time when the democrats of Kentucky were in better fighting trim. We'll give Bryan a regular old-fashioned democratic majority, and we'll elect Beckham governor, too." Of the general outlook Mr. Fitzpatrick said: "Republicans admit to me in private conversation that Bryan is growing in strength every day. Very few republicans have I met who say that McKinley will carry Marvland or Delaware or West Virginia. Nearly all of the influential democrats and independents who supported McKinley in 1896 are for Bryan this year on the paramount issue of imperialism and militarism.

Just think of it; according to the present rates of expense for our army it will require $150,000,000 for its support for this fiscal year, and there is no reduction of the army in sight. If the policy of imperialism is to be continued, what will the army cost? As a conservative man, I give my opinion that Bryan will be elected by as a large majority as Cleveland received in 1892".

BUILDING.

We are building every day
In a good or evil way:
And the structure as it grows
Will our inmost self disclose.

Till in every arch and line
All our faults and failings shine;
It may grow a castle grand
Or a wreck upon the sand.

Do you ask what building this
That can show both pain and bliss?
That can be both dark and fair?
Lo! its name is Character!

Build it well! What e'er you do
Build it straight, and strong, and true!
Build it clean, and high, and broad!
Build it for the eyes of God!

AT Frankfort Ky. James B. Howard was convicted of shooting Senator Goebel, of that state, while his contest for the seat of Governor was going on. Howard is to be hung.

READ Bryan's speeches and judge from them as to the effect they are having on the people who hear them. Dont be misled by the adverse reports of opposition newspapers.

WHEN Hanna tells his hearers that he believes Bryan is an honest man but a demagogue. We conclude that either Hanna don't know English language or is considerable of a demagogue himself.

WEBSTER DAVIS who gave up a fat job under the administration because of the treatment of the Boers and the English-American alliance will speak in Minneapolis Friday, Oct. 12 in the evening. He will speak at St. Cloud in the afternoon of the same day. Hear him if possible.

FOUR years ago the republicans scared their voters into not voting for John Lind. Two years ago they tried it again. They said if John Lind was elected our state credit would be gone, no capitalist would loan money in Minnesota, and a whole lot of other things. The voters elected him. They have learned for themselves that the republicans did not know, or were misleading them,

REPUBLICANS are trying hard to make our German-American citizens believe there is nothing to be alarmed at in the general tendency of our present administration towards imperialism. Why, they say, that is only a "bugaboo". Our German-American citizens are too old to be caught that way. They know "Imperialism" from a "bugaboo" without the aid or assistance of any other nation. And they know now pretty well how they want to vote on the question,

THE cartoon business has been and is being woefully overdone. People with evil minds make pictures for money, that are unfit to be seen by anyone, much less to be taken into the family of women and children every day. Some of the puerest men and women of our country are, in cartoons, put in company with the degraded, are made to appear as if they were indulging in vices and crimes. Some of them even paint Uncle Sam, the representative of our nation as a tipsy old fellow with a cigar or pipe in his mouth. Maybe when one gets over the disgust, and thinks of it this is nearer, much nearer the representative American than we are willing after all to admit. Anyway cartoons have lost much of their former force.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has returned to his first love in politics. Though he says democrats are right on anti-imperialism, on Porto Rico and the Boer question, he can't go for a party that advocates the income tax. He fears the election of Mr. Bryan would, among the timid! cause a big panic. He don't want the Supreme Courts criticised. He thinks that the United States have no authority for buying for $20,000,000 the Philippines. But the dollar looks bigger than the man, quite evidently through his financial "specs" so he must cast in his lot for McKinley whom he respects but thinks that he has been overborn by party leaders. Rather a week conclusion for the iron king.

A FEW of our foreign born citizens who became citizens of this country under a Republican administration and have always voted the republican ticket, and now see the drift of affairs towards imperialism, and militaryism, just what they had hoped they had left behind when they came to America, find it hard to vote the Democratic ticket though they acknowledge it represents today their views. We have today a republic; we have a dearly bought privilege to cast a ballot equal to the ballot of any voter in the United States. It is our duty to cast that ballot; and cast it right. What assurance have we, if enough fail to embrace their opportunity to vote, that when another four years rolls round we will have a chance to vote, Let us preserve our Constitution our republic, Let us vote our convictions, and not be mislead into voting wrong or staying at home. We are patriotic citizens we have our country and its institutions, let us do our share to preserve them.

Bryan vs. Beveridge.

Our son John J. who is attending Medical lectures at the State University writes us a few words on politics as follows:

I was at the Exposition Building Monday night and heard two of the finest speeches I ever heard in my life, those of Lind and Bryan. They warmed it to the Republican party and administration on all sides and in the middle, with arguments that were clear and convincing, and showing that the democratic party has policies and plans for our good government at home and the honorable extriction from complications abroad, which are worthy of a great republic.

The crowd which came to the meeting was immense, every seat being taken and the isles crowded, and thousands stood outside until 9:00 waiting for Bryan to make his appearance. I was at the Beveridge meeting Friday night, and although they had a big parade with torch lights, and several bands, and marching clubs from Hutchinson, and a number from the cities, the crowd was not in compairson with the one that came to hear Bryan, although there was not a sign of a parade. Beveridge's speech was full of oratorical phrases and bombastics, while Lind's and Bryan's were filled with reason, logic and common sense combined with oratory and truthfulness.

Lind spoke before Bryan made his appearnance and was greated with frequent and loud applause. The light he put the Republican's dinner pail campaign argument in was very amusing. He likened the republican party trying to catch the laboring vote by shaking a dinner pail at them, to himself when a boy catching his horse on the farm, by shaking a tin pail with a handful of oats in the bottom. "The horse got a harness and a drag. The American people get a soldier on their back to support with their wife and children."

Bryan spoke of trusts, imperialism, and the Philippines. He said of the money question "You know where I stand on that point" I dont believe in discussing whether to paint the house white or yellow when it is on fire." Of the dinner pail argument he said "It is the hog that squeals when he is hungry and lays down to sleep when he is full, not the working man." He wanted every one to read King George III proclamation to to the American Colonists, and the American proclamation to the Filippinios and see where the difference was.

He also gave them rubs on "Loaning money abroad, prosperity, and the ice trust" and 50 per cent citizens of the U. S. in Porto Rico and the Philippines etc.

Of the New York ice trusts he "Every director is a republican Gov. of New York is a republican and the legislature is republican, and if the republicans are so anxious to get rid of it why don't the Gov. stay at home and tend to it instead of going out west making political speeches."

Fusion is only the united effort of a lot of men who want office and who will do almost anything to secure it. They have no principle and only exist as a party of antis.—Willmar Argus.

It looks to us as if the Argus had it wrong It would look more like to say Fusion: a uniting of all forces to get rid of a clique of office holders who are willing to promise anything and do many things they ought not to do, and who care nothing for principle save to continue themselves in power.

Cardinal Gibbons.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 2.—Cardinal Gibbons, it is said on good authority, is deeply interested in Democratic success and has declared his intention to vote for Bryan. The Cardinal did not vote at the last Presidential election. —World.

Gets Job as Well as Prize.

Samuel Haugdal, New Sweden, Minn has been appointed an inspector by the state dairy and food commission. He will have charge of dairy inpection. Mr. Haugdal was the Minnesota butter maker whose product won the prize at the Paris exposition. He learned his trade in the Werdatus creamary school in Norway.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Prosperity.

It is an old state that republican rule brings prosperity; there is some truth in this story. But it is unhealthy prosperity, because it is the prosperity of the few who get by the lawmaking of the republican party inordidate profits from the multitude. as soon as there is a tariff reduction in prospect on rates which stand now in many cases to 70 per cent on the goods, many factory owners, used to the inordinate profits secured by these rates, stop work, instead of being satisfied with a fair profit.

More than that, these high protective rates are the reasons for the establishment of the industrial trusts. These combines are formed that, for example 10 factory owners, the largest in one industry agree to put their factories, which are actually worth 2 million dollars, at a price of 4 millions on the market, that is they make 40,000 shares at $100 each bring these on change for speculators. the same as rail road shares, have of course their brokers, and bankers, who try to drive these shares above the par value. But the actual value of these shares is only 50 dollars or probably less and these watered shares can only pay as long as the high protective tariff rates stand. In consequence every share holder is personally interested to prolong the power of this president, make it if possible permanent. Every share holder of industrial paper is naturally an emperialist. But this magnificant swindle is not healthful prosperity. Lincoln said that the interests of the farmers as the most numerous class should be first considered against all others, our tariff rates are used by the arristocracy and the rulers in Europe to tax and prohibit our agricultural products and by this industrial war and the high tariff rates here the farmer got poorer every year.

Did the republican party in the last thirty years, in agreement with Lincoln's principles protect the farmers interests?

Then, with that indomitable energy for which the American farmer calls and which is the outcome of democratic principles exchanged his way of production. Unprotected, independent, he started the creamery business. Strictly on his own account he formed all over the land creamery associations, establishing a new industry so enormous and so independent that it beats anything in the industrial line. Could or would the farmers in any country of Europe under the rule of imperialism create anything like this, by their own energy? That proves that we must uphold our democratic instructions against imperialism into which the money power the shoddy aristrocracy of the U. S. will lead us. Did the republican party do anything to help you in this new industry? They did not and I am glad of it, because it proves what the American farmer can do independent of anybody. But ths republican party did see that this industry brought money into the farmers pockets, the question was how to get part of this money into the pockets of capitalism. There was nothing else to tax but lumber so they put a tax of $2 a thousand feet on it and this tax takes a good round sum from your pockets into their own.

Special Offer in Music for Readers of this Paper.

We are in receipt of a copy of E. T. Paull's latest and greatest march just from the press, entitled "Dawn of the Century March" The title page is a work of art, without doubt the handsomest ever seen on a piece of music, magnificently lithographed in five colors Mr. Paull is known all over the country by people who use music as being the author of the celebrated "Ben Hurr Chariot Race March," which is a universal favorite. Other famous marches composed by him are "Charge of the Light Brigade." "America Forever 'A Warmin' Up in Dixie" great characteristic piece, etc. This new march of Mr. Paull's "Dawn of the Century" is said by competent judges to be one of the best ever placed on the market. Mr. Paull is styled by the leading New York music journals "The New March King" Every piano and organ player should have a copy of this piece. It has six full pages of music. In consideration of our mentioning this new march in our news columns, the publishers agree to furnish any of our readers with a complete copy of the piece for 25c in postage stamps or silver, provided this notice and this paper is mentioned, otherwise the regular price 50c will be charged. Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,650 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the latter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

1898. Official Vote of Wright County. 1898.

A new sect in Nova Scotia drives wickedness from the soul by the laying on of hands. That's just the way our good old mothers used to do it.

A western dramatic company has made a striking change in their "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Where Eliza goes across the ice pursued by bloodhounds, the new version has her going acorss in an automobile, pursued by Boxers.

Phrenology and palmistry are out of date. Character, it is said, is now read by the lines in the soles of the feet. This seems to be getting down to the foundation of things. It will probably be found that the shoemaker is responsible for more bad character than has heretofore been supposed.

At a gathering of old folks in the town of Charlemont, Mass., the chairman called for all present over 70 years to rise, and 72 responded. He then asked all those who were over 80 to rise, and there were 12 who had passed the limit. A similar call for all over 90 brought four members of the gathering to their feet.

India was cursed with famine and drought and now they are threatened by floods. In our land of peace and plenty we ought to be the happiest people in the world. There are millions of people in India who would give ten years off their lives if they could sleep on a wisp of hay in your barn and eat the scraps from your table.

The coldest temperature experienced by Sir George Newnes' expedition to the south pole was 52 degrees below zero, and occurred in August. The party discovered near Robertson bay mountains exceeding 12,000 feet in height, and penetrated farther to the south (78 degrees 50 minutes) than any previous expedition.

A Swiss genius has invented a pith cloak weighing about one pound, which will hold up a fully equipped soldier on the surface of the water. Successful experiments were made recently on the lake of Zurich. The cloak is provided with water-proof pockets in which food and drink may be carried as well as blue lights in case the wearer is shipwrecked in the night.

People who are not only "12 miles from a lemon," but from every other household necessity, will be glad to know that excellent lamp wicks may be made out of men's soft felt hats, by cutting them into strips the width required, letting them soak for a couple of hours in vinegar and drying them. For the sake of peace in the family, as well as economy, the use of castaway hats and not those in use is suggested.

Insurance for bathers is the newest enterprise in the insurance line in England. Penny-in-the-slot machines will be erected in popular bathing places. Before you enter the water you drop in your copper and out pops a 24-hours' life insurance policy. Then, if you are carried down to Davy Jones' locker your widow or next of kin is entitled to $1,000 worth of compensation for the sudden taking off.

The Germans have set to work to develop their East African territory with their usual thoroughness. The measures which they have taken to counteract the effects of the climate are very elaborate and include substantial stone houses, hospitals, an ample medical staff, inspection of the meat sold, carefully sunk and covered wells, vaccination, examination of native houses in the towns, drainage and finally a careful study of the black water fever by Dr. Koch.

The large bronze clock used by Admiral Montejo in his cabin on the Reina Christina has come into the possession of Dr. G. W. Roberts, of Chattanooga, after a series of interesting adventures. After the battle of Manila bay the natives looted the ship, and among other things took the clock, giving it to Aguinaldo. The Filipino leader gave the clock to his mother, and when she was taken, in Cavite, she turned it over to Dr. Roberts, who is with the American army.

An Austrian inventor has patented a speaking clock which he claims will be of the greatest value to persons of forgetful and irregular habits. It consists of a clock-phonograph combination. In place of the usual striking attachment is a phonograph which can be set to speak a sentence at any time desired, thus becoming an unfailing reminder to its owner of the duties of each successive hour. There is no mechanical difficulty in the way of charging this moral timepiece with any number of daily exhortations.

Criminal statistics published in Germany show that the most marked increase in crime is in the agricultural provinces rather than the industrial centers. It is an exclusively agricultural province on the eastern frontier which is the most criminal. The statistics also show an increasing tendency to crime in the empire as a whole. Particularly noticeable is the fact that while crimes against property have diminished somewhat in the last 17 years, owing to the growing prosperity of the empire, crimes against the person have increased at a very rapid rate.

A WEEK'S HISTORY

The Important Happenings of a Week Briefly Told.

IN ALL PARTS OF THE UNION

All the Latest News of Interest from Washington, From the East, the West and the South.

THE LATEST FOREIGN DISPATCHES

FROM WASHINGTON.

Gen. Miles has been elected commander in chief of the Spanish war veterans.

The census statistics show that in 155 of the largest cities of the United States the increase in population during the last ten years has been 4,627,593.

In a letter to the army Gen. Miles urges soldiers to study principles of war, reverence the flag and cultivate patriotism.

Estimates show that the national census of 1900 will cost about $15,000,000.

THE EAST.

At New Haven, Conn., Yale opened its two hundredth college year.

September closes with a better outlook in the industrial world than was apparent a week or ten days ago.

Exchanges at the leading clearing houses in the United States during the week ended on the 28th aggregated $1,452,549,465, against $1,369,648,678 the previous week. The decrease compared with the corresponding week of 1899 was 21.2.

In the United States there were 204 business failures in the seven days ended on the 28th, against 211 the week previous and 137 the corresponding period of 1899.

It is said that efforts to settle the miners' strike are succeeding. It is believed that the men will begin to return to work soon, although a hitch may occur over the recognition of the union.

At all the mines in the coal regions an offer has been made eo give ten per cent. increase in wages and submit all other differences to arbitration. Striking miners are willing to accept the terms offered, but are unwilling to return to work until the union announces the agreement.

In the national league the percentages of the baseball clubs for the week ended on the 30th ult., were: Brooklyn, .598; Pittsburgh, .565; Philadelphia, .535; Boston, .504; Chicago, .466; St. Louis, .461; Cincinnati, .446; New York, .426.

Dr. Gilbert H. Gregory, aged 63, dropped dead in his pulpit in St. Stephen's Methodist church in New York.

WEST AND SOUTH.

The Ohio democrats have nominated John B. Peaslee for congress in the First district and Henry Keller in the Second.

The burial of Gen. John M. Palmer took place at Carlinville, Ill.

A letter has been issued by Adlai E. Stevenson accepting the populist nomination for vice president.

Census returns show that the population of Memphis, Tenn. (102,320), is doubled since 1890.

The work of clearing up the debris in Galveston, Tex., is proceeding, the only drawback being lack of laborers.

Chicago university has offered free tuition to ten Porto Rican boys.

Engineer Haman and Fireman Linden were killed and 24 loaded cars were burned in a freight train wreck at Durand, Mich.

The Wolf Bros.' bank at Centerville, Mich., was robbed by thieves of $10,000.

THEY LEAVE PEKING.

Russian Legation Moved from the Capital to Tientsin.

Bulk of Troops to Follow—Prince Tuan Degraded—Instructions Sent by State Department to Minister Conger.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The following dispatch, dated Peking, September 27, has been received from M. de Giers, Russian minister to China: "In accordance with orders from the highest quarters, I am leaving for Tientsin with the whole legation."

Peking, Sept. 25, via Taku, Sept. 28, via Shanghai, Oct. 1.—At the conference of generals to-day the Russian commander, Gen. Linovitch, announced the immediate withdrawal from Peking of the bulk of the Russian troops and the legation.

Americans Preparing to Leave.

Tientsin, Sept. 28, via Shanghai, Oct. 1.—Orders from Washington directing the withdrawal of the bulk of the American troops were received this afternoon and preparations to comply were begun immediately. Gen. Chaffee is here directing the movement.

It is understood that the plan contemplates leaving a regiment of infantry, a squadron of cavalry and a battery of artillery in Peking to protect American interests, and that the remainder of the troops will proceed to Manila. The news of the American withdrawal created a sensation among the representatives of the other powers here.

Orders Sent to Conger.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The instructions which have been sent to Minister Conger relative to the negotiations with the Chinese envoys are kept secret by the state department for reasons best known to President McKinley and Acting Secretary of State Hill. It is known, however, that they embrace five propositions, as follows:

1. That Prince Tuan be removed from office and some one acceptable to the powers be appointed in his place.

2. That Minister Conger represents the United States as plenipotentiary and has no connection whatever with mediation for China.

3. That any reasonable programme outlined by a majority of the powers, the stipulations to be less severe than those of Germany, may be accepted by Mr. Conger.

4. That in the event of a continued disagreement among the powers and China, Minister Conger is to proceed to negotiate with Earl Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching, solely with regard to American interests, and with a view to determining the attitude of the United States as to future action.

5. That Minister Conger is to plainly inform the representatives of the powers that the United States intends to guard Amoy and Niuchwang with a large naval force, solely in the interest of trade rights, and that, aside from the legation guard in Peking, no American troops will be permitted to remain in China.

Prince Tuan Degraded.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister, has received official confirmation of the issuance of an imperial decree degrading Prince Tuan, Kangi and other officials for their course in regard to the recent troubles in China. This information agrees with that contained in a dispatch received by the state department Monday from Consul McWade at Canton.

Not After Territory.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 2.—The Official Messenger declares the tenor of the government's official communications in regard to Russia's task in the far east clearly demonstrates "that the reports of the annexation of Manchuria are devoid of all foundation."

Mr. Bryan in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 2.—Mr. Bryan on Monday traversed what is known as the pine barrens of the scrub-oak portion of Minnesota, reaching the agricultural portions of the state north of this city during the afternoon. He made the first speech of the day at West Superior, Wis., beginning before eight o'clock in the morning. He immediately crossed the St. Louis river to Duluth, and, starting with an hour speech there, he made speeches at eight other places on the way, which, together with the speeches at Duluth and Superior and those made at night in this city, made an even dozen speeches for the day. Four of the speeches averaged an hour in duration and the remaining eight 15 minutes each, making about six hours of speechmaking all told for the day.

Was Playing Detective.

New York, Oct. 2.—John Syron, arrested on a technical charge of intoxication, the expectation being that he knew something about the death of Charles S. Peck, the real estate agent found dead on the sidewalk last week, was Monday discharged from custody. Syron told the police that he had been employed by a reporter working on the Rice case to "play detective."

Body Recovered at Last.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 29.—The body of Jane Corrigan, the last victim of the yacht Idler disaster, was recovered early Friday, being found on the beach a few miles east of the city. The yacht, which was owned by John and James Corrigan, the wealthy vessel owners, foundered on Lake Erie during a heavy squall July 7 last. Six lives were lost.

The Public Debt.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business September 29, 1900, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,106,156,671, which is a decrease for the month of $6,122,433. This decrease is accounted for by the increase in the cash on hand and the redemption of two per cent. bonds.

Galveston Relief Fund.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 2.—John Sealy, chairman of the finance committee, a subcommittee of the Galveston central relief committee, and custodian of the Galveston relief fund, makes a public statement in which he says that subscriptions from all sources turned over to him amount to $781,043.63.

Condemn Anti-Dowie Mobs.

Mansfield, O., Oct. 2.—The Mansfield Ministerial association, comprising pastors of various Protestant churches of the city, held a meeting at the home of Rev. L. G. Bateman, pastor of Christian church, and adopted resolutions condemning mobs against Dowieites, also all forms of lawlessness.

WANT UNION RECOGNIZED.

Strikers Hold Out Against Terms of Coal Operators—Demands of the Mine Workers.

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—The mine operators of the Wyoming, Lackawanna & Lehigh regions on Monday at a meeting at Wilkesbarre followed Sunday's action of the Reading company in offering an increase of ten per cent. in wages to the mine workers. They furthermore decided to reduce the charge for powder from $2.75 to $1.50 per keg. The latter price has prevailed at the Reading company's mines for a long time. The action of the Wilkesbarre meeting means an increase of ten per cent. to all mine workers except miners. The latter will earn an increase of about ten per cent. by reason of the reduced cost of powder. The meeting was attended by representatives of all the leading railroad companies which own mines in the regions named. Some of the independent operators oppose the proposed increase, unless the coal carrying companies reduce the tolls on their product to tidewater.

At United Mine Workers' headquarters this statement was given out:

"What we want is: 1. A better enforcement of existing mine laws.

"2. To obtain that which is fully our own, i. e., the value of labor actually performed and hitherto taken from us.

"3. To obtain the right to purchase our implements of labor at a fair market value and escape from the compulsory rule which forces us to pay the operators more than twice what the same materials can be purchased for at retail in the open market.

"4. To allow a readustment of the wage scale that will nearly conform to the normal conditions of the anthracite trade and establish as nearly as practicable a uniform price for each class of work in and around the mines."

The strikers say that until these concessions are granted and the union recognized they will not return to work.

Notices of the increase in pay were posted throughout the entire anthracite region; but the opinion is general that few if any of the strikers will return to work. The strikers say they have other grievances to be adjusted besides wages and powder charges, and they further say they want recognition of their union.

ROBERTS PROMOTED.

The Famous Warrior Has Been Appointed Commander in Chief of the British Army.

London, Oct. 1.—It is officially announced that Lord Roberts has been appointed commander in chief of the British army. Although the fact that the appointment had been made was already known, the formal announcement is hailed by the unionist party as a welcome pledge that army reorganization will be carried out in the most effective manner.

London, Oct. 1.—An interesting report comes from Komatipoort to the effect that Mr. Kruger, in a letter to his wife announcing that he is going on a six months' holiday, said, in substance, that after the capture of Machadodorp he knew the struggle was hopeless and counseled moderation, but that Mr. Steyn's "arbitrary behavior" overruled his counsels.

Lourenzo Marques, Oct. 2.—The Austrian steamer Stylia Lloyd has sailed from here, having on board 400 Transvaal refugees, part of them being Irish-Americans. All their expenses have been paid by the Transvaal government. Each man received 30 shillings ($7.50), and will be paid £8 10s. ($42.50) on landing at any port which may be elected by them.

SAMUEL F. CAREY DEAD.

Well-Known Ohio Politician, Once Greenback Candidate for the Vice Presidency, Passes Away.

Cincinnati, Oct. 1.—Samuel Fenton Carey died here Saturday night, aged 87 years. He graduated at Miami university in 1835 and was the last survivor of that class. He abandoned the law early to devote himself to lecturing on temperance. In 1867 the labor element elected him to congress over Richard Smith, of the Cincinnati Gazette, the republican nominee. He had been a delegate to the national convention that nominated Lincoln for the second term, but in congress acted independently and afterward became a democrat. He advocated greenback money and silver currency. He was nominated in 1876 for the vice presidency with Peter Cooper, the greenback candidate for president. In 1875 he ran for lieutenant governor with William Allen, democratic candidate for governor.

Pastor Dies In Pulpit.

New York, Oct. 1.—Rev. Dr. Gilbert H. Gregory passed away Sunday in the presence of his congregation at the morning service in St. Stephen's M. E. church, Marble Hill, at the upper end of Manhattan island. Physicians had urged Dr. Gregory to retire from active church work, as he had long been a sufferer from heart trouble. They told him that he might live for years if he would cease labor, but if he continued to work he was liable to be stricken at any moment. As late as Saturday Dr. Darlington, of King's Bridge, who was attending Dr. Gregory, warned him against preaching Sunday. The clergyman said to his physician: "I prefer to meet death in that way to retiring and shirking my duty in order to live longer."

Flotilla Sails.

New York, Oct. 2.—The flotilla of five United States revenue boats built at the Nixon shipyard in 120 days, according to contract, sailed Monday on the inside route to Cuba, Havana being the objective point. The flagship No. 7 is 70 feet long, while the other four are 60 feet in length. Each boat carries on her forward deck a rapid-fire gun. The boats will be used in patrolling the inlets and coast of Cuba in search of smugglers and revenue evaders.

Mrs. Leslie Resigns.

New York, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Frank Leslie officially announced Monday that she had resigned from the editorship and had severed her connection with the management of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. She also intimated that she had been forced out by trickery.

Post Office Robbed.

Bowling Green, Ky., Oct. 1.—The post office at this place was broken into and robbed Sunday morning of between $4,500 and $5,000 in money and stamps. The robbers are supposed to be experts who have been operating in this section for some time.

A SERIOUS REVERSE.

Detachment of American Troops Thought to Have Been Captured by Filipinos.

Washington, Sept. 29.—The war department has received the following cablegram from Gen. MacArthur:

"Manila, Sept. 28.—Adjutant General, Washington: September 11, Capt. Devereaux Shields, 51 men company F, Twenty-ninth regiment United States volunteer infantry, one hospital corps man, left Santa Cruz, Marinduque, by gunboat Villalobos for Torrijos, intending to return overland Santa Cruz. Have heard nothing since from Shields. Scarcely doubt entire party captured with many killed, wounded, Shields among latter. Information sent by letter from commanding officer at Boac, dated 20th, received September 24, consisted of rumors through natives. Yorktown and two gunboats, George S. Anderson (colonel, Thirty-eighth volunteer infantry), two companies Thirty-eighth volunteer infantry, sent Marinduque immediately. Anderson confirms first report as to capture, but unable September 27 to give details present whereabouts Shields and party, names killed and wounded. This information probably available soon. Anderson has orders commence operations immediately and move relentlessly until Shields and party rescued. All troops expected soon. Logan will be sent Marinduque if necessary clean up situation.

(Signed) "MACARTHUR."

The scene of this latest reverse is a small island lying due south of the southern coast of Luzon and about 300 miles from Manila. Marinduque is about 24 miles in diameter, and was garrisoned by two small detachments of United States troops. One of these was at Boag, on the west coast of the island, and the other was at Santa Cruz, the principal port, on the north side. Capt. Shields appears to have started from Santa Cruz on a gunboat for Torrijos, a small coast port, and it is inferred that the boat as well as the body of troops under the officer has been captured, for the dispatch makes no reference to her return.

A FATAL ROW.

Battle Between Union and Nonunion Men in Cleveland Results in Three Deaths.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 1.—City Detective William L. Foulks was shot and instantly killed Sunday night while trying to put a stop to a shooting affray between union and nonunion molders. A party of five or six nonunion men were set upon by some union men. The former began shooting. Detectives Foulks and Parker, who were near by, interfered. Foulks was shot through the heart, and when he fell the men dispersed. Henry Cronenberger and William Steffield were also shot, and both have since died. Charles Peck, a nonunion man, is under arrest, charged with the murder of Detective Foulks. Paul Irving, Thomas Jennings, Edgar McIntyre and Willis Webster, also nonunion men, were arrested on the charge of shooting with intent to kill.

WINS MANY PRIZES.

United States, Next to France, Secures the Greatest Number of Honors at Paris Exposition.

Paris, Sept. 28.—The jury of final appeal in the exposition awards has finished its work. The statement prepared for the United States commission shows that America received the highest number of awards of any nation save France, and that she also received more awards in each classification, except grand prizes, in which Germany secured a greater number. The figures, excepting for France, follow:

Grand prizes, United States, 215; Germany, 236; Russia, 209; Great Britain, 183.

Gold medals, United States, 547; Germany, 510; Russia, 346; Great Britain, 406.

Silver medals, United States, 593; Germany, 575; Russia, 411; Great Britain, 517.

Bronze medals, United States, 501; Germany, 321; Russia, 321; Great Britain, 410.

Honorable mention, United States, 348; Germany, 184; Russia, 206; Great Britain, 208.

The St. Louis Fair.

St. Louis, Oct. 2.—The fortieth annual St. Louis fair was inaugurated Monday with the largest opening day attendance in its history. Men accustomed to handling crowds and to judging them estimated that 125,000 people passed through the gates. This year the live stock exhibits are especially large and the cattle pens were the center of much interest Monday. George Vanderbilt has in competition a herd of 20 fine Jerseys from his Biltmore estate in North Carolina. Many Holsteins and shorthorns are also to be seen. The hog pens are well filled, sheep of all kinds are shown, and the poultry exhibition is the largest the fair has ever had.

Killed by Gasoline Explosion.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 29.—While engaged in cleaning a suit of clothes Friday a blaze generated by the brisk application of gasoline communicated to a tub of the liquid standing near by and caused an explosion and fire, resulting in the death of two persons and badly injuring two others. The dead are Mrs. Clara Irlbacher, aged 34 years, of 3700 Butler street, burned beyond recognition, died at St. Francis' hospital; Margaret Adler, resides at McKees Rocks, burned to a crisp, dead when found.

Roosevelt in Nebraska.

McCook, Neb., Oct. 2.—Gov. Roosevelt's first day in Nebraska is regarded as successful, though the morning started out wet and chilly, and the audiences as a necessity were small. Thirteen speeches were made during the day journey and at night, and as they advanced the sky cleared, and the meetings at the different places along the way showed a great deal of interest.

Accept a Reduction.

Bloomsburg, Pa., Oct. 2.—The 700 employes of the Reading Iron company of Danville decided to accept the 25 per cent. reduction in their wages which went into effect on September 16 and against which they struck. The men met Monday and after hearing the report of a committee which stated that other iron industries had made a similar cut agreed to resume work as soon as the plant can be placed in operation.

Cyclone in Iowa.

Clarinda, Ia., Sept. 28.—A cyclone nearly destroyed Sharps, a small town east of here, Tuesday night. The depot, two churches, railroad water tank, box cars, loaded corn cribs and half a dozen dwellings were all blown down. One man was hurt by a buggy overturning on him. The storm also struck Newmarket, a larger town, demolishing a few houses.

THE WONDERS OF THE EARTH DISCOVERED

A Traveler Through Many Lands Who Reached New York Some Years Ago Has Been Relating Experiences of Delightful Variety and Suggestiveness.

A man of splendid physique by grace of birth and early training. He comes of an Austrian family noted for the valor of its men and the dazzling attractiveness of its women. It is well known that the women of Austria retain their youth and elasticity up to an advanced old age. If nature favored nature with beauty of features and vigorous health, art is systematically applied to remove any physical defect. Instructions are handed down from certain families from generation to generation, and family recipes and AIDS to BEAUTY are jealously treasured, so that it is difficult to secure an accurate knowledge of their ingredients. MONEY CANNOT buy them, it would be refused with scorn. The fierce family pride of an Austrian noble will brook no trade affiliations. Of the WOMEN OF VIENNA it must be said that they claim the leading place in the world of fashion and beauty, but the mystery of their peculiar attractiveness need no longer remain a secret. Can the ever youthful freshness of the AUSTRIAN BEAUTY be due to art instead of nature? The most beautiful woman will cease to fascinate, if it is apparent that her beauty is the work of art. All women know that color is one of the first essentials of beauty. A face that is not tinted with rosy hue of health is no longer young. Rouge may mask the deficiency, but the efflorescence will add five or more years to the age of the women who resort to artificial coloring. There is today only one combination of preparations in America that possesses the marvelous virtue of bringing a perfectly NATURAL color to the cheeks, the peculiar qualities of which will in a certain degree duplicate the witchery of an AUSTRIAN BEAUTY'S complexion. These articles are prepared from a formulae which has been in the possession of an ancient Austrian family for generations. The difficulty of securing a formulae of this character has been briefly commented upon. However, in these days of modern luxury, of POLITICAL and social upheavels, of sudden accumulations and loss of wealth, there are many ups and downs even in noble AUSTRIAN FAMILIES, and necessity knows no law, not even that of pride. Fashion and social station make merciless demands upon its votaries. Thus the ruined scion of nobility, the hero of aristocratic race courses and exclusive clubs, the stately, well-groomed officer of the guards, finds himself confronted with the alternative of emigrating to America to begin life anew in obscurity, or of pocketing his pride with a goodly check in exchange for a coveted secret recipe. This is but one example of instability of fortune. To such a conjunction of circumstances did this "traveler of many lands" owe a sudden increase in wealth, and women of America will obtain the benefit to be derived by using this new discovery of the earth called preparations, and is now first introduced to a deserving public by the Ez-O-Nat Co., who are exclusive owners of the preparations. Orders will be received at the Northwestern branch office and parlor of the company, Suite 36 Lindley Bldg., Minneapolis, and positive guarantee is on each package. Money refunded if not satisfactory. The article is tastefully put up in ornamental jars and bottles, and is sold at the uniform price of

EZ-O-NAT

Ez-O-Nat Liquid Face Powder and Complexion Cream	50c
Ez-O-Nat Orange Flower Skin Food per jar	50c
Ez-O-Nat Skin and Complexion Soap per cake	25c

WANTED-OFFICIALS TO ENFORCE LAWS

ATT'Y-GEN. MONNETT (who fought the trusts in Ohio and was turned down by Hanna-McKinley bosses), Labor Day address, Sept. 3, 1900:

"Vote down every congressman, take away the seat of every judge, remove every governor, defeat every member of the legislature and send to oblivion every councilman who violates his oath of office and fails and neglects to enforce the existing laws. You have Laws enough now in the state and national statute books to electrocute every monopoly and destroy every trust."

The McKinley colonial policy of subjugation of the Philippines is in part responsible by paralyzing the production of Manilla fiber, and two New Jersey trusts organized and protected under the McKinley dynasty do the rest.

In Minnesota under Governor Lind's administration of the State Twine Plant, competition has in part broken down trust prices.

SHE WOULD GET THERE.

It Was None of the Ticket Seller's Business Where She Wanted to Go.

He was long, lean, lank and raw-boned, and he shambled up to the ticket window at the Union passenger station much after the fashion of a scared canine when he approaches his master to receive a well-earned thrashing. He got as far as the outside railing and stood there with a bashful blush gazing at the man behind the brass bars, says the St. Joseph News.

"Come in; come in; make yourself at home," was the encouraging welcome from within. He accepted the invitation and brought up against the marble ticket counter with more confidence in his face.

"Say, thar," he said, in a half whisper, "is this the place where you git tickets for the kyars?"

"Yes; where do you want to go? Hurry up; we're rushed."

"Well, sir," he replied, shifting a square inch of plug tobacco from one cheek to the other, "hev you all got enny long-distance tickets inter Kentucky?"

His case was equaled by that of the old lady with a sunbonnet, who said:

"I want a ticket to Platte county."

"What place in Platte county?" inquired the ticket man.

"No place in Platte county; I want to go to Platte county, and it's none o' your business where I'm going to visit. You sell me the ticket to Platte county, and I'll git there."

Exhibits at Paris.

There is a large exhibit from this country at the Paris exposition which will prove very interesting to all who may attend, but no more so than the news that the famous American remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will positively cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and nervousness. To all sufferers of the above complaints a trial is recommended, with the assurance that when honestly used a cure will be effected. It also tones up the entire system.

Antiquities of Baseball.

A north Missouri editor, who first studied baseball rules while a Sunday school boy, enters into the following antiquities of the national game: "The devil was the first coacher. Eve stole first. Adam stole second. When Isaac met Rebecca at the well she was walking with a pitcher. Sampson struck out a good many when he beat the Philistines. Moses made his first run when he slew the Egyptians. Cain made a base hit when he killed Abel. Abraham made a sacrifice. The prodigal son made a home run. David was a long-distance thrower and Moses shut out the Egyptians at the Red sea."—Chicago Chronicle.

BRYAN AND LIND

TOUR OF THE STATE BY THE TWO GREAT LEADERS OF THE PEOPLE.

Grand Outpouring of the People and Magnificent Display of Enthusiasm. Sweeps Over the Whole State Like an Irresistible, Overwhelming Tidal Wave. Unparalelled in the History of the State. Trade Balance Fallacy—Expansion vs. Imperialism — Roundup of Reform Press Notes and Comment for the Week, Etc., Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 1, 1900.

Bryan's tour of Minnesota has been one grand triumphal march. It far surpassed all precedent and even all expectations. Everywhere the people gathered in countless numbers and came from great distances to see and hear their great leaders, Bryan and Lind. It has been an outpouring of people such as Minnesota has never seen before. The enthusiasm displayed was overwhelming, irresistable. It swept over the country like a tidal wave and carried everything before it. Many a voter who was hesitating on the brink, plunged in and declared himself for Bryan and Lind with a will and a vim that guarantees an overwhelming victory in November.

Nor was the enthusiasm confined to any class or locality. Farmers with their wives and families drove across country dozens of miles to hear Bryan and Lind. In Duluth the laboring men were so anxious for an opportunity to hear Bryan, that they asked him to speak to them before they went to work in the morning, before 6 o'clock. The greatest demonstrations of all were the Twin City meetings. The surging masses of humanity that had gathered to greet their leaders, the magnificent display of enthusiasm, all this has no parallel in the history of the state, and augurs well for the future.

Bob Dunn's speech against the present state administration is about the weakest thing on record. Democrats have at least one advantage in the present campaign. They don't have to go back a generation or two to dig up ancient fossils in the boneyard of antiquity to throw at our opponents. We can find carloads of brickbats and cobblestones on the streets and highways just anywhere. The greatest part of the speech is devoted to a eulogy of Minnesota, its growth and prosperity. But Minnesota has not grown because of the Republican administrations, but rather in spite of it. The growth of Minnesota is not due to the Republican party but to the energy, intelligence and thrift of her citizens, her wonderful resources and natural advantages.

If the opposition can't find anything stronger against Governor Lind, they certainly won't cut much ice. They had better go out of the business. The whole affair looks like a confession of incompetence on the part of the opposition to make a case, more than anything else. A state with such resources and such energetic inhabitants as Minnesota has, could not be retarded even by administrations of driveling imbeciles or arrant knaves, and in this respect the Republican administrations have not all been nearly as bad as they might have been. A few of them even came up to a very fair standard of incuous mediocrity.

Down in the Minnesota River valley live three farmers, Jones, Brown and Smith. Each owns a nice farm of 160 acres. Jones had his farm mortgaged for $5,000 at 6 per cent. During the past year he sold and took to town farm products amounting to $1,000, i. e., his exports amounted to $1,000. Now, the first thing he did was to pay the interest on the mortgage amounting to $300. This left him $700 which he spent in clothing, furniture, farm implements, etc. His exports amounted to $1,000, his imports to $700, leaving a trade balance of $300 in his favor, according to McKinley's way of figuring.

Brown's farm was not mortgaged. He also exported $1,000 worth of farm produce, all of which he invested in clothing and other necessities of life, farm implements, etc. His imports and exports were equal.

Smith not only owned his farm, he had also lent out $5,000 to various people from which he realized the sum of $300 in interest. He also sold $1,000 worth of farm produce, all of which he invested in improvements, machinery, etc. His imports amounted to $1,300, his exports to $1,000, leaving a trade balance of $300 against him. His imports were $300 more than his exports.

According to McKinley's way of figuring, Jones was the most prosperous of these men, because his exports were $300 more than his imports, leaving a trade balance of $300 in his favor. To argue that we are prosperous because we export more than we import is a fallacy like the rest of McKinley's arguments. The simple fact is, that countless millions of foreign capital are invested in this country and the interest on these investments has to be paid for by products which we export and for which we consequently receive no returns.

The only other country which has a similar trade balance in her favor is poor, down-trodden, starving India, which is similarly obliged to pay interest on immense investments of British capital, while in the case of Great Britain, which has invested immense sums in foreign countries, the imports far exceed the exports in value.

What a tremendous waste of raw material at the university for our respected friend, Dr. W. W. Folwell, and General Solicitor M. D. Grover of the Great Northern railway, to be making addresses upon the subject of "Trusts," when our great and good political authority, Marcus Aurelius Hanna, declares that there are no such things as trusts!

The Chicago American has taken another poll to verify its former one which showed that Bryan was way ahead of McKinley in the "Windy City." According to the figures now proved up, Bryan will carry Cook county by 75,000, which would give him the state with a whoop.

Speaking of Authority Hanna, here comes Republican Governor Mount of Indiana calling Hanna down in the following fashion: "If Hanna made that statement (that there are no trusts) he either did not know what he was talking about or wanted to fool the people of the country. There ARE trusts in this country and they are fast grinding the life out of the American people and I hope the people will rise in their might and crush them."

A year ago, for the fall elections, the Republicans everywhere appealed to the country to stand by the administration in order to close the Philippine war. Now the same old claim is made that if the administration is sustained and McKinley re-elected the war will speedily close. How long is this old thing going on anyhow?

It is very, very sad that the University Bryan club refused to turn out for the Beveridge G. O. P. affair. The big change which has occurred among the University students since four years ago, is typical of the sentiment of the whole country.

In the latest of the Republican national press documents three savage sheets were devoted to showing the prosperity of the campaign as gauged by bank deposits, absolutely ignoring the fact that money piled up in banks is no evidence of prosperity. It is when money is out doing its work of stimulating business that the country prospers. The enormous accumulation of money in banks is one of the ills that the people have to complain of. It does nobody any good there, neither helping business that needs it, nor bringing returns to the people who own it.

Last week witnessed the birth of a new Democratic daily, the Minneapolis Star. In appearance it is a beauty. Attractive in looks, interesting in contents, it certainly has a bright future before it. It is Democratic from the word go, hits hard and draws blood every time. Here is to you.

"We will give you the flag but not the constitution," is what the Republican administration says to the Philippines. The flag is merely an emblem. It has been held in the hands of traitors like Burr, and martyrs like Lincoln. It has floated over the slaughter of striking miners in Montana, and over the heroic fields of '76. It is merely an emblem. In the hands of a patriot, it stands for all that is good and holy. In the hands of the carpet-bagger, the demagogue, the thief and the knave, it is a meaningless rag, or possibly even a cloak and pretext for his villany.

The Constitution is a guarantee of equal rights and privileges to all. It is the thing itself of which the flag is the emblem. Without the Constitution the flag is nothing. Wherever the Constitution is extended, it becomes at once the paramount influence in the life of all that live under it. It is the same to all men at all times everywhere. It is an incalculable power for the uplifting of men, for justice and liberty. It may be abused at times, but it carries within itself the power to remedy all such abuses.

But this is the thing which the administration will not extend to the Philippines. McKinley will not give them the Constitution, but he does offer to them an emblem which may stand for much or nothing, accordingly as it is in the hands of a patriot or of a knave.

Says Mac to the Philippines—"You see we can't let you have the Constitution, but we will bring the flag, which represents the Constitution and wave it over you, and in our hands, that will be just as good as the Constitution, for you know we are all patriots and you can surely take my word for it, for you know I am a good and holy man and I am actuated only by the deepest sense of duty and I go to church every Sunday and contribute liberally to the missionary fund, but if you won't take my word for it and refuse to submit, I shall come over there and shoot down every mother's son of you, and wade in gore up to my neck."

But the untutored Filipino thought he smelled a rat and would not submit, and Mac started in to carry out his threat, and the Filipino wouldn't stand and take it meekly, but tried to get in a lick edgewise occasionally, and so they are at it ever since and Justice sits on her eternal throne with blindfolded eyes and the man who calls the slaughter in the Philippines inhuman murder and criminal aggression, is denounced as a traitor by Republican demagogues and mountebanks.

The work of the state board of equalization was brought to a close last week. The work this board has accomplished, under the administration of John Lind, and under his personal direction shows more than anything else the purpose of Governor Lind to secure justice for all, and equal privileges for none; to make every one bear an equal share of the burdens of the government, and not let them rest only on those who are least able to bear them. A full report of the work accomplished in revising the tax assessments of the state will be published next week.

He Feared to Presume.

The American tourist is so firmly convinced that he is being cheated on all hands during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence.

"What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship.

"Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk.

"That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister; I'll give you five francs for it."

"Zen it would be I zat gave ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman, with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know mademoiselle!"—The King.

John and James and Thomas took Paper and Pencil and began figuring, but Alex took his Hat and started out. "Where are you going?" the other Three asked. "Do you not Intend figuring out the Problem?" MINNESOTA NEWS.

It is Finished.

A contract has been entered into between the Northern Pacific Railway company and the state of Minnesota through Gov. Lind, the attorney-general and the state board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, through which the transcontinental system, in consideration of the dismissal "without prejudice,, of the action brought by the state over its absorption of the St. Paul and Duluth railway, agrees to forever maintain that line in all respects as if it still remained a seperate entity.

The contract binds the Northern Pacific to keep the Duluth terminals as the northern end of the line for all time, and to maintain them with all facilities and conveniences, never in less excellent condition than at present.

Increase of Valuation.

An increase of one-third in the valuations of logs and lumber has been recommended by the logs and lumber committee of the state board of equalization. This will give Minneapolis an additional assessment of about $500,000 and Duluth about $175,000. The lumbermen of the city and the state are quite indignant over the raise. Those of Minneapolis point to the fact that the lumbermen pay one-sixth of the city's personal property tax as an evidence that the industry is not on equality with orders. A reduction should be made they claim, but the committee from the board of equalization which heard the complaints could not see the point.

Imports.

Minneapolis taken her full share of the products of the world. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, she took from foreign countries $699,343 worth of goods of all kinds. Far-off India contributed the largest share, sending to Minneapolis $269,052. Little Scotland came next with $121,152. England comes under the one thousand mark. Germany sent only $44,777 worth of goods to Minneapolis within the year, which is scarcely more than distant Japan sent—$40,383, chiefly in tea. Mexico brings up the tail end with only $5.

Large Receipts.

The secretary of state gives out his biennial report. It shows 746 new corporations admitted to the state during two years. The total amount of fees paid in on capitalization of corporations during 1899 was $63,630, and for 1900 $64,435, making a total of $128,065.

Other official fees received during the two years amounted to $3,317.50. there were 2.748 notaries' commissions issued. The report of the state printer shows the expenditures for 1899 to have been $55,065.55, and for 1900, $22,618.50.

Will Resume.

The Minneapolis iron and steel mills at Columbia Hights, which employ about 500 men, will resume operations in a very few days. The mills have been shut down for several week pending a settlement of labor differences involving wage schedules and for necessary repairs. The news that the mills are to be started up at once was hailed with intense satisfaction by the men when a telegram announcing the glad tidings was received by the local managers.

A New School.

It is possible that the University of Minnesota may establish a school of pedagogy. The report of the special committee appointed to consider the advisability of establishing such a school was made to the faculty. If the school is decided upon the faculty will be made up of the instructors in the departments of latin, philosophy history, political science, German and drawing.

Serious Accident.

A serious accident happened on the farm of the John Goth, two miles from Rogers. The engine belonging to a treshing outfit exploded. The engineer, John Corcoran, was hit by flying pieces of iron and burned some by escaping steam, but he will recover. Both ends of the boiler were blown out and pieces of iron weighing 20 pounds were thrown 17 rods from the exploded engine.

HE BASELY DECEIVED HER.

Let Her Think She Was Reforming Him, When He Had No Bad Habits to Break.

"So your engagement is broken?" said the girl in gray, according to Pearson's Weekly.

"Yes, it is," replied the girl in brown, frowning at the recollection.

"What was the matter?"

"He basely deceived me," answered the girl in brown. "You see, it was this way: I asked him one day to promise me that he never again would smoke cigarettes, and he promised. Then I asked him to refrain from the use of tobacco in any form, and he promised to do that. Later I told him I had a horror of anyone who touched liquor, and he agreed never to touch it. After that I suggested that I thought clubs had a bad influence on young men and I should expect him to give them up, and he said he would. I also took up the subject of gambling, and made him promise that he would stop playing cards and betting on the races."

"Well, you didn't demand a great deal of him, did you?" said the girl in gray. "I suppose he deceived you in the matter?"

"He did."

"Broke his promise, did he?"

"Oh, no! I could have forgiven that. But just when I was congratulating myself that I at least had reformed one young man I found that he didn't require any reforming. He wasn't addicted to a single one of the habits I made him promise to break. It was a terrible shock, and I broke the engagement at once. There was no longer anything in it to make it interesting."

Another De Luxe Edition of "A Message to Garcia."

The Passenger Department of the New York Central seems never to tire of sending out copies of "A Message to Garcia." The latest issue is the first five thousand of the third half-million edition, and is numbered consecutively from 1,000,000 to 1,004,999. It is beautifully printed on heavy plate paper, the illustrations being brought out in a manner equal, if not superior, to the best magazines. The pages have a red line around them, and the book is bound in a grey-blue cloth and heavy boards. It is intended for libraries, and was issued at the request of a large number of American libraries who wanted the "Message" in a permanent binding. This edition contains, in addition to Mr. Hubbard's admirable preachment, a short sketch, with a portrait, of Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew S. Rowan, the man who carried "A Message to Garcia;" a short sketch, with a portrait, of General Calixto Garcia, the man to whom the "Message" was carried, and a short sketch, with portrait, of Mr. Elbert Hubbard, the man who wrote "A Message to Garcia."

It also contains eight pages of extracts from the press, and comments from well-known educators, clergymen, professional men, and many large employers of men, on the "Message" itself; a sketch of the Cuban Educational Association, and a sketch on Harvard-Americanism and the Cuban teachers.

A limited number of copies of "A Message to Garcia" bound in cloth and boards may be obtained at 50 cents each. A copy of the edition with illuminated paper cover, fully illustrated, will be sent free, post paid, to any address in the world, on receipt of a postage stamp issued by any country on the globe, or it will be sent in packages of 100 each, on receipt of 50 cents for each 100 by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, Grand Central Station, New York.

His Specialty.

Railway Farm Lands for Sale.

In Northern Wisconsin the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway has for sale, at low rates and easy terms of payment, about 400,000 acres of choice farm lands. Early buyers will secure the advantage of locations on the many beautiful streams and lakes, which abound with fish and furnish a never ending and most excellent water supply, both for family use and for stock.

Land is generally well timbered, the soil fertile and easy of cultivation. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Superior, Ashland and numerous other thriving cities and towns on the line of the C. St. P. M. & O. Ry., and other railroads in the same territory, furnish good markets for farm produce. For further particulars address Geo. W. Bell, Land Commissioner, Hudson, Wis., or G. H. MacRae, A. G. P. A., St. Paul, Minn.

WOMAN'S KIDNEY TROUBLES

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing this Fatal Woman's Disease.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

The following letters will show how marvellously successful it is:

Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am failing very fast,—since January have lost thirty-five or forty pounds. I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired, and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes I am troubled with a white discharge, and I also have kidney and bladder trouble. . . I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you, and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. I did not enjoy life at all. Now, I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough for what you have done for me. You are surely a woman's friend. Thanking you a thousand times, I remain,

Ever yours
MISS EDNA FREDERICK,
Troy, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it enough. I had headaches, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, and kidney trouble. I also had a pain when standing or walking, and sometimes there seemed to be balls of fire in front of me, so that I could not see for about twenty minutes. Felt as tired in the morning when I got up as if I had had no sleep for two weeks. Had fainting spells, was down-hearted, and would cry."—MRS. BERTHA OFER, Second and Clayton Sts., Chester Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot find language to express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I had female trouble, also liver, stomach, kidney, and bladder trouble. . . . I tried several doctors, also quite a number of patent medicines, and had despaired of ever getting well. At last I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, thanks to your medicine, I am a well woman. I can not praise your medicine too highly for I know it will do all, and even more, than it is recommended to do I tell every suffering woman about your Vegetable Compound, and urge them to try it and see for themselves what it will do."—MRS. MARY A. HIPLE, No. Manchester, Ind.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Oct. 5, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Rev. Bryngleson, of Buffalo, will preach his last sermon here Sunday the 14th inst.

—Capt. Carver's sanhedrim now convenes in front of a bran, span new back ground.

—The foot Ball Benifit at the city hall last night was fairly well attended. Everybody had an elegant time.

--New and much needed repairs have been made on the crossing at the corner of R. R. Ave, and River Street.

—Be sure to hear our next Congressman, Henry Truelsen of Duluth, Saturday evening Oct. 6, in the city hall,

—A carload of brick form Wisconsin arrived this week and teams hauled them to the farm of Valentine Honzia where a nice brick residence is to be built.

—The subscribers to the Minneapolis Star whose money was forwarded to chairman Rosing have receiyed the money back, the paper was not started on time as expected. Since then other parties have purchased the outfit and the Star is now being issued.

—The Eagle strained things awfully yesterday when they tried to mislead and influence voters by saying "Rev. Savs didn't tell his congregation how to vote, but it is a well known fact that he is a staunch Republican" etc. etc. On reading the above Rev. Savs said: "It is the first time I ever was told that I was a Republican."

—The gunboat Villalobos on which our fellow townsman Otto Marr, has been for some time in September went to the Island of Marindugne, 300 miles south of Manila, with a detatchment of soldiers. It was reported that soldiers boat and all were captured. Later reports say the boat has returned to Cavite. So it is fair to presume Otto is all right.

—The Litchfield Indedendent gives an account of the loss of 15 out of 30 cattle by LaVoix, of Clarissa, by some strange disease. Well cattle in three hours die. He thought pioson must have been administer. State veterinarian Brimhall was called and says the disease is new in this state having been reported at three points It would be well to be on the lookout The disease is said to be infectious, and if one gets sick it should be taken from the herd, better the herd should be put in new quartes for awhile.

—The quartette of Delano hunters and prospectors have returned home. They did not find Andre, nor the farms they were hunting, and claim that they could have found more game within ten miles of Delano than all the trip afforded them. Their description of a boat ride on Lake of the Woods, Rainy River, etc, is wonderful. From accounts some of them were lighter complected and more prayerful than ever before or since. They thought the boat would sink, and so much water. All seem to think more of Delano than ever before.

—The many friends here of Mr. and Mrs, Frank B. Nichols and family now resident of Galveston, Texas will be pleased to learn that they came through the terrific strom and are safe and sound. Joseph Van Eman of Buffalo, father of Mrs. Nichols received a letter from Frank dated Sept. 21. and giving an account of the storm, and the miraculous escape of himself and family. His family had gone to their island home 12 miles away. When the water had risen his son Joseph went on horseback to their assistance and arrived in time to help them to safe places. Mr. N. himself remained in the city until after the storm, when he went with provisions to his family and found them safe.

This letter lifted a load of anxiety from the hearts of relatives and friends who are thankful that it is no worse.

—Mrs. John Stein, living South of Delano, would be glad to have some one bring back the Gypsies that came to her house a couple of weeks ago. She says they deceived her awfully, by offering to restore her husband, who lately was taken to Fergus Falls to the Insane Asylum, to her sound and well. That they told her that if she would loan several things, among them a new double shawl, a shirt, pair of her husbands' pants, a dress from each of the children, a feather bed, three quilts, a sack of wheat, sack of corn, part of a sack of flour, some bread, and finally $50 in money, they would have her husband home in a week. She must not tell anybody that she did this or it would not work and they couldn't get John home. She says she mortgaged her team for $50 and placed it in their hands they left. After a couple of days they returned and wanted more but on being refused they left and now she would like to find them. She says they begged and pleaded with her to let them use their influence to cure her husband, and she must not tell anyone and of course she kept still until they were gone. Such cases ought not to be allowed, but the trouble is to catch the guilty parties. The case is a sad one as there are several small children at home and they need their beds, clothing, money and other things. Mrs S. had a guardian appointed for herself last summer while John was away, but it seems at present she has none. The case should be looked after by the proper authorities.

—Mr. Boerner is having a new porch built to his residence on North second street.

—The Crow River is once more the "Raging crow" from heavy rain the river raised nearly four feet.

—Marshes are said to contain more water in thels vicinity than for 25 years. There has been considerable rain lately.

—Yesterday was old soldiers day for making out pension papers. Several justices and notaries were kept busy a good share of the day.

—G. W. Bolton raised some tall fodder corn. It was lucky it was tall as it was able to stand in shock while the waters rolled by Wednesday night.

—The hardest rain of the season came Wednesday night. Considerable dammage was done. Cellars filled with water. The foundation wall of the laundry washed in. Gutter proved too small to carry off surplus water. With the natural drainage of the village it is inexcusable to have lakes and ponds of water about the village.

—The Grand laundry has been meeting with considerable adversity in one way and another. But after several delays got things running, and were in hopes of getting their washing out this week when Wednesday night rain washed away a part of the foundation to the house. They expect to have things repaired again at once.

County Cullings.

I must say in my behalf and to the voters of Wright County: That I am not a University Graduate as the Waverly Tribune states. Never-theless I have been a soldier and know duty when I see it, and never did think it a righteous duty for us to suppress the Filipinos, and make them come under our flag, against their will, any more than it would have been right for the French to have forced us to come under their rule, and their flag, after the capture of Yorktown at the termination of the Revolutionary war.

ALVA G. CATLIN.

A harvest festival for the benefit of the band at St. Michaels was Saturday last. Hanover bend was present.

Thomas R. Kane, of St. Paul, will speak at Waverly, Saturday, Oct. 13. He is one of the best speakers in the state and a Democrat. Hear him.

Auditor Swanburg resigned and on Monday Aaron Reinmuth was appointed by the county commissioners to fill out the term. F. B. Lamson is deputy.

The Times says Monticello organized a Bryan, Lind and Truelsen club Saturday evening with 55 members. A good start. Things do begin to look good for the Democrats of Wright county.

There seems to be a feelling through out the county that the Democrats are more united than for years on a county ticket and have good men. Not so much good feeling seems to permeate the republicans this time. Consquently it will be strange if some of the democrats are not elected to fill couny offices.

WALL, LEBOR:—At the Catholic church in Delano, Wednesday, Oct, 3. Mr. Charles Wall and Miss Albina Lebor.

From Denver to the Garden of the Gods.

While the route from Denver to the Garden of the Gods is but a foretaste of the sublime that awaits the tourist in his westward journey, nevertheless the course is through a most picturesque valley. On the left are high rocky hills totally divested of verdure, and so acted upon by past forces as to resemble ancient castles whose day of usefulness is past and whose occupants have, long since sought less formidable habitations. On the right, tower the Rockies, whose apparent nearness is facilitated by the humidity of the atmosphere. Lying in parallel undulating ranges, crowned with green verdure to the summit the limit of vegetation not being distinguishable—they present an aweinspiring picture whose beauty is only enhanced by the overhanging clouds.

The entrances to canons and gorges offer tempting inducements to the curious, and impress the thoughtful with the wonderful forces in nature to produce such sublime effects.

Nestled among these mountains are many small towns containing red roofed picturesque cottages, and fine hotels where free from the turmoil of busy city life, the weary sojourner finds a soothing balm for all his mental and physical ills, in the invigorating air of this beautiful mountain reigon. Not the least of these towns is Palmer Lake. In addition to its being a town of rare beauty it is a natural curosity; situated on the sumit of the deyide, a transverse spur of the Rockies extending eastward into the great plains. from this summit the waters of the lake flow northward to the Platte, and southward to the Arkansas. The adjacent canons and glens afford material for sight seeing and pleasant memories, and Manitou, lying at the foot of Pikes Peak protected by encircling mountains, and cheered by the gushing waters of the fountain que Bouille, and the fame of its medical springs is the ideal summer resort. On the way to Manitou we linger at the Garden of the Gods. In this solitude nature has perpetrated many strange strange freaks of sculpture and of architecture. Inanimate forms of stone supply suggestions of life. Many of these quant forms reach the heigh three or four hundred feet. Two of the higher ones serve as portals to the entrance which sparkle and glisten in the sun light. The inaninate forms have received appropriate designations such as Statue of Liberty, Cathedral Spire, a dolphin, a bear, a seal, a lion, a griffin, etc. No words can describe the weird attractions of this wonderful garden which once seen, however, can never be forgotten. Minneapolis Star: There is a young boy incarcerated in Stillwater for the theft of a pocket book containing five dollars. He was sent up for six years, but a man who had access to the books of our county officials got away with six thousand dollars. He squared himself by deeding a farm in Wisconsin to the county commissioners.

Democratic Press Bulletin: What a tremendous waste of raw material at the university for our respected friend Dr W. W. Folwell, and General Solicitor M. D. Grover of the Great Northern railway, to be making addressess upon the subject of "Trusts," when our great and good political authority, Marcus Aurelius Hanna, declares that there are no such things as trusts!

Pioneer Press: We dont think much of Bryan as every one knows, but the sensational story which comes to us from Peoria that he was paid $150,000 by Colorado silver men to insist on the free silver plank in Kansas City platform is incredible. We should require better proof than the reported assertions of a woman whose identity is not revealed before believing the yarn. The responsible author of the story is a Mr Kugman, stated to be a wealthy manufacturer of Peoria, who got his information from the mysterious young lady. It is pretty safe to set it down as the product of a vivid imagination on the part of Mr. Kugman's informant.

Duluth Herald: Mr Bryan suggested to the people of Duluth should arrange for a joint debate between Senator Davis and Congressman Morris on the Porto Rican tariff bill. He evidently is not aware of Page Morris' deep seated prejudice against joint debates.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sep. 28, 1900.

Mr. McKinley's extraordinary and apparently unaccountable friendship for China, which has been so plainly shown from the beginning of the trouble down to his abandonment of the allies and the order for the sending of the American troops in China to the Philippines, has caused a lot of thinking. Attention has been called to the fact that the republican platform failed to say a word about the continued exclusion of Chinese laborers from the U. S., although it must 'avebeen well known to the makers of the platform that the present Chinese exclusion law will expire by limitation in 1902, and unless it is extended by Congress our ports will then be open to Chinese cooley laborers. It has been noted also that the Chinese Minister to the U. S. has done considerable talking of late about the probability of the increased friendship between his goverment and ours resulting in the removal of immigraton restrictions That large employers of unskilled labor in this country, not to mention the sugar planters trust of Hawaii, are anxious to see the restrictions on Chinese immigration removed is well known. By putting all these things togather Mr. McKinley is placed in a suspicious attitude towards American labor. Perhaps men tion of Chinese exclusion was purposely left out of the republican platform, in order to justify the republican Congress in not renewing that restriction, and the re election of Mr. McKinley may mean the flooding of this country with cheap Chinese labor. The existence of such an intention would be overlooked but that the dem. national platform contains this clause: "We favor the continuance and strict enfrocement of the Chinese exclusion law and its aplication to the same classes of all Asiatic races." It is not surprising thst those who are interested in the welfare of American labor are doing some deep thinking. It is time for them to think and to act.

Senator Morgan, in a speech before the Jackson Democratic Association devoted himself to the financial question, which he declared was the most interesting topic to him. He said: "The only way to settle the financial question is to pay the public debt, and it would be very easy todo so by paying some of the wild expenditures we are now making. In the course of a few years we could save over $100,000,000, and we should commence today in order to save the interest which the people are paying. The system created by the last Congress is designed to increase the national debt, and under that legislation the debt cannot and will not be paid, but will be increased from year to year. The payment of the debt would not underpin the national banks, but would force them to the old Jacksonian idea of a specie basis, and we would not be dependent for a circulating medium on government bonds. When that is done the financial question will be settled, and settled right.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston, of Md., made this reference to our trade with the Philippines, in a speech this week to the Bryan and Stevenson Club: "Our exports to the Philippines have been 85,000 men, at the cost of $120,000,000 Our imports from the Philippine Islands have been 25,000 maimed, diseased, and crippled American citizens."

Mrs. S. F. Norton, treasurer of the newly organized Women's Bryan Anti-Trust and Anti-War Club, made a ringing speech at the first meeting of the club, in which she said: "It behooves every man who is suffering from the results of combined capital to vote for the candidate who at least promises to destroy those conditions which oppress him. Every man who's living is earned by the sweat of his brow is today the slave of the money power. Vote for the man who believes trusts exist and promises to crush them, who pledges himself in no measured terms to the protection of your interests."

Ex-Senator Gorman, whose policial judgment is conceded to be as good as that of any man in the country, was in Washington this week, and said of the outlook: „There is a drift a very decided drift - in favor of the democrats which justifies the hope that Bryan will be elected. Political conditions seem much as they were in 1892. The men who are managing for the democrats in New York say that they are going to carry she state. They are sincerely confident' They believe they are going to succeed. The democratic managers generally feel confidence in the general situation and believe that Mr. Bryan is going to be elected. The drift is strongly in that direction.

The Spanish war veterans, at their annual encampment, held in Washington, this week, paid Gen. Nelson A. Miles the compliment of electing him commander in chief by a unanimous vote. Col. James H. Tillman, of S. C. was elected senior vice commander-in chief, over two other candidates. one of whom was Gen. Joe Wheeler.

T. J. CATLIN, Editor.
A. G. CATLIN, Publisher.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

SOME complaint is made that Bryan looses votes by speaking. He can afford to loose a few if it will keep Roosevelt and Hanna on the stump.

DEMOCRATS are to have two drawing cards tonight in Minneapolis, Bourke Cochran and Webster Davis hold forth at the Armory, The Exposition is rented to the republicans.

EDITOR DARE protests vigorously at the lack of individuality in the newspapers of to day. There political articles are made for them and they all read alike. Too true, Bro. DARE. Alas! too true.

REPUBLICAN papers are making quite a fuss about Bryan loosing votes every speech he makes. We are of the opinion that he does loose a few for the Republican ticket. But probably not many more than do Roosevelt and Hanna.

THOSE letters sent out by the other Hanna, not Marcus Aureleus, importuning voters to be sure to stand by the gold standard, and vote for Page Morris for Congressman, are suggestive of great fear on the part of the Republicans that Bryan and his followers will be more numerous on Nov. 6, than the tribe of Hanna.

THINGS are looking decidedly Democratic just now. They are daily becoming more so. Bryan is heard by the multitudes with respect and consideration, notwithstanding the efforts of some of his opponents to vilify and belittle him and his cause. The American people still believe in the Declaration of Independence the Constitution, the country, and the flag when it represents these.

A STORY has been started that the police Relief Association, of Duluth has decided to sue Henry Truelsen, for $750. Money borrowed while he was Mayor. Mr. Truelsen was at Delano when this story arrived and he informed us that he owed a part of a note, and that he didn't know it was a crime to be poor; he intends to pay his debts. He thinks his opponents hard up for campaign arguments when they drag this private matter into the campaign. It does look a little like it. Mayor Truelsen was counted out of office a short time ago, and there appears to be a disposition to even up accounts on the part of some politicians.

We Know How He Will Vote.

Morris is a loyal and steadfast advocate of sound money and we all know how he would vote on a free silver proposition. --The Star News.

We don't see how Mr. Dare can figure out in advance how Mr. Morris would vote. Except that he would vote as the President told him to vote. But the trouble with solving the silver question vote is that the President has been on both sides and all along the middle, and no body knows for sure just how he might ask a member of Congress elected "to hold up the Presidents hands," to "go to Congress a Republican and come home a Republican" to vote. The question then is unanswered and unanswerable.

THE new U. S. battleship Wisconsin has proven the fastest in the world. 18.54 knots.

Cowardly Endorsement.

"If any of these traveling men should vote for Bryan and I knew it I would discharge him immediately—not for being a democrat, but for being a damned fool. I would presume that any man who didn't have better sense than to vote for Bryan didn't have enough sense to represent our business."

The above is copied from a long article in the Pioneer Press which tries to make out that the speech was not applauded by those he represents, when made at a meeting of business men in St. Paul by Jesse A. Gregg a member of a firm claiming to hire twenty traveling men. The Pioneer Press wriggles awfully under the load; but don't deny that the speech was made.

Here is the excuse offered by the great St. Paul daily for one of the capital cities' business men. "And there was no more disgusted man than MR. Gregg himself when he saw in print the language attributed to him. He had not expected to make a speech—was called upon without previous notice, and having no experience as a speaker said on the spur of the moment the first thing that came into his head. The feeling was so strong upon him that a business man was a damned fool to vote for Bryan that he put this perfectly correct sentiment in a form which was repudiated by everybody present and by his own firm more emphatically than by anybody else."

"Perfectly correct sentiment" was it? Then why all this cowardly skulking around the bush?

No Trusts.

Mark Hanna, the general manager of the administration and of the so called republican party tells us: There are no trusts. This decides it for all those who follow the tracks of imperialism in republican disguise. Imperialism is, as Luther says that, if a government decrees that 2 and 2 is 5 you have to believe against your better knowledge. So far all imperialists, trusts do not exist, because Hanna says so.

Of couse for us who are in opposition trusts exist. Imperialism is the offspring of trusts and the high protective tariff is the place where both mother and child were raised. If Hanna does no t like the name industrial trusts let us change it to industrial sharks. That fits better, because they devour at first the small fry of their own kind to be able to swallow the rest. Is not Mr. Hanna one of them as one of the bosses of the iron line, and is not every article in that line from a nail to fence wire, from a horse shoe to any piece of machinery raised in price by the order of these industrial sharks to satisfy their hunger for extra profits? Though Hanna will get all the campaign funds he needs, from these industrial combines and their servants, he complains about apathy in the republican ranks. This apathy exists aud is natural. The list of those who were present at the fat frying entertainment of Hanna's, at Chicago proves it nearly all those merchant princes who got rich by their own capacity in honest competition were absent, because they do not want to be the future servants of these industrial combines.

A sign of the times,—Cleveland's former secretary Olney joines Bryan, stating that McKinley is a syndicated president, because his policy makes from the government an engine for the profit of particular classes.

Morton, another secretary leads an indignation meeting in Nebraska City against Bryan. He is manager of a starch factory there, which joined the great American starch trust.

We have two large industies in Minnesota. One independent, young and vigorous started soley by the energy of our farmers. That is the creamery industry. The other is an industry of long standing, capitalistic and in consequence protected by tariff duty against competition.

Let us compare these two industries, O. M.

Gazette 25c 3 mo.

TRUELSEN TALKS.

The Democratic Candidate for Congress Makes Friends.

On Saturday evening notwithstanding the rainy weather and bad roads, the Democratic candidate for Congress was on hand and prepared to do his duty. The crowd was slow coming together but finally a fairly filled hall was prepared to hear what the candidate had to say. Mr. Tuuelsen is not a flowery orator, but he goes straight to the point and uses convincing arguments.

The speaker advised the voters to study the two platforms for themselves. He was not afraid of the people voting wrong when they understood the situation: "the condition that confronts us."

He had no time for imperialism, militarism and trusts. Had left the old country to escape such things. But he was a firm believer in the Declaration of Independence; the Constitution of our country; and the war for humanity's sake. He believes that the constitution goes with our flag. That a standing army of 25,000 men is enough for this repulic. A large standing army is a menace to any free country. "We have escaped that of Europe will we build it up here, at the expense of lives?"

We have got an Emperor today as much as the czar of Russia, is an emperor. "I don't believe they will control trusts. The trusts control them. They deceived Porto Rico. The people there were promised what we have at home. They got something different.

They try to argue the questions not before the people. At Bemidji Page Morris was offered a chance to share the platform with me, "He refused."

They cry "full dinner pail" as if that was all that a man desires. Why, the slaves in the south had a "full dinner pail." Their masters seen to it—that they were well fed; but they were not satisfied.

They tell us times are always good under Republican rule; while under Democratic administrations we have panics.

In Duluth we know better. In 1873, not under Democratic rule we had an awful panic lasting till 1879,. We lost a big share of our population; things were panic stricken.

Secretary Foster had dies ready to print bonds. As soon as Cleveland came into office they had to be issued and he got credit for issuing them.

The war brought prosperity to some. To some it is different.

No trusts support Bryan; none support me. We will serve the common people.

For myself I favor municipal ownership of all public conveyances.

Broad Axe:—Everything goes as a republican campaign argument. Here we find the Detroit Free Press telling how the "illiterate savages of the Philippines are deriving aid and comfort from the careful perusal of democratic convention literature" That's like telling about a blind begger being horrified at the sight of a dead dog; or a man who has lost both arms in a railroad wreck pointing out with his finger the place where the wreck occurred. Some thing almost as ridiculous as this statment occurred at Elk River the other day at a republican meeting. One republican orator made a great talk, telling how Bryan had deserted silver and sold out to the gold bugs, and was followed by another spellbinder, at the same meeting, telling how Bryan would, if elected, nullify the gold standard law and ruin the country by putting it on the silver basis.

Miss Day Denies it.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Lulu D. Day of Jacksonville, Ill., has sent to Senator Jones, chairman of the democratic national committee, a sworn denial of the story alleging that she knew W. J. Bryan to have been paid $150,000 to cause a silver plank to be incorporated in the Kansas City platform.

Boomerang Argument.

Col. Bryan, as his title indicates, is a soldier; but it is suspected from his associations and the way he talks that he belongs to the lying, not the standing army.—Duluth News Tribune.

TUCKER AND ROSE

By Chas. E. Brimblecorn.

THE deputy assessor snapped the elastic band around his bulky book after duly setting forth therein the possessions of Tucker & Rose: "Real estate; s. e. ¼ section 15, township 8 south, range 3 west, etc.; 83 acres orchard, 12 acres pasture and hay land, 65 acres timber land."

"Well, you ain't a-goin' before dinner, so jest set right down here," said Ezra Tucker, genially, and the tired official did not hesitate to accept a seat on the cool veranda beside his host.

"You've lived here a long time," said the deputy.

"Twenty-seven years this spring," replied Tucker. "Made some little changes in that time, too. Mighty nigh this whole claim was thick woods when I fust seen it.

"'Twas a cur'ous thing, too. I'll tell you how 'twas. You see, I kinder got a notion that it would be a good idea to take up some gov'ment land, so I rode up here from Santa Cruz, 16 mile, over a pesky bad trail, and my friends, the Crawfords, over here on the San Lorenzo, they showed me this quarter-section.

"There was a little shack of a cabin on the place, built by Tom Tutor, a feller who used to hunt and trap for a livin', but he never pre-empted the land, and at that time he'd gone to Arizona. So I took up the ranch, without any idee of trouble, and then went back to Santa Cruz to git some things, 'cause 'cordin' to law you had to live on your claim six months before you could prove up.

"But the next time I come up, Malcolm Crawford he told me that he'd heard there was another feller prospectin' 'round my ranch. He'd been up there himself with his gun to inquire about it, but didn't see nobody; but he said I'd better git up there as quick as the Lord would let me and hold down the claim.

"I left my horse at Crawford's, 'cause there wa'n't much feed in the woods, and made up a pack of flour, bacon, coffee and sugar, and Malcolm lent me a shotgun that he said might come in handy. On the way up I fired both barrels of the gun at some quail, and then I found that I'd forgot to bring any ammunition.

"Everything was still as death, except the crickets chirpin' with a lonesome sound, and I put the things in the cabin. There was a little fireplace built of mud and sticks in one end, with a chimney of split boards, and I built a fire to git a bite of supper.

"As I was standin' in the doorway feelin' kinder doleful, I see a man with a pack on his back comin' up the trail. He was stout and his face was pretty red, and when he see me it got quite a bit redder. He come up puffin' and seemed put out 'bout something, and jest then it come into my head that mebbe he was the other feller.

"'What you doin' in that cabin?" he says, real cross.

"'My residence at present,' says I. 'Won't you come in?'

"'None o' your blarsted sarce wi' me,' he says. 'This 'ere is my claim, and I want you to git off it directly.'

"'You're laborin' under a slight mistake,' says I. 'This is my claim; but you needn't be in a hurry 'bout goin'. Stay till mornin', anyway. Darned if I ain't glad of company.'

"Well, we talked awhile, and he kep' gittin' madder and madder.

"'You've got the advantage of me now,' he roars out, 'but if it wa'n't for that bloody gun you've got so 'andy I'd put you out of my cabin quicker'n a wink.'

"'You needn't fret about the gun,' I says, (I'd left it outside leanin' against the cabin.) 'Why, I fired off both barrels at some quail down here, and I didn't bring a mite of ammunition with me.'

"'You carn't come it on me,' he says, kinder sneerin'. 'You'd like to hentice me to come on and then let me 'ave it, wouldn't you?'

"'Well, take the pesky gun and see for yourself,' I says, holdin' it out toward him.

"'No, you don't, old smoothy,' he says, turnin' away.

"'Come in and have a bite of supper, anyhow,' I says. 'The water's bilin' and I'll make some coffee in a jiffy.'

"He grumbled something and went off and camped under an oak tree a little ways off. That's the very tree down there by the barn.

"I'd done my best to be sociable, so I made my coffee and fried some bacon. Some way 'twas kinder pleasant to see the other feller's fire, but he looked mighty crusty and didn't have a word more to say.

"After supper I lit a piece of candle and read a newspaper that I'd brought from town, but I got sleepy pretty quick and spread my blankets in the bunk. I shut the door and put a prop agin it—not that I was afraid, but I jest happened to think that I didn't really know anything about the other feller.

"I was off to sleep in a minute, and the next thing I knew was seein' a big glare of light and feelin' things gettin' pesky hot. I jumped up, and, Lord! if the whole end of the cabin wa'n't in a blaze!

"'Gosh all hemlock!" I says. 'He's a bad man, and is tryin' to burn me up, sure as the devil's an Injun.'

"But just then I heard an awful hammerin' at the door and the other feller hollerin':

"'Git up, you blarsted fool! Do you want to be cooked alive? Turn out, and be darned to you.'

"Then I jedged that the fire had caught in the old dry chimney. I bounced up and grabbed the coffee pot and threw the grounds on the conflagration, but it didn't do a mite o' good, so I kicked away the prop and ran out, kinder singed. I picked up a long stick and began to knock off the boards that was afire, but the idiot that built the cabin had nailed 'em from the inside, and when I knocked 'em off they all tumbled inside, of course, and I had to run in and drag 'em out, and I burnt my hands pretty bad. The other feller had been standin' off, laughin' kinder sarcastic.

"'Much obleeged to you for wakin' me,' I says, as he started back to his camp.

"'Sich blamed carelessness I never see,' he growls. 'You've got to repair my cabin or pay for it.'

"I cut a few saplin's and set 'em up agin the open end of the cabin. It was moonlight and I could see pretty well. Then I crawled into the bunk again. I didn't prop the door this time, but I wished I had afterward. My hands hurt me so bad that I couldn't sleep and I turned and twisted for an hour.

"All at once I heard something. My blood all turned to ice and my hair bristled like a shoe brush. It was a soft but heavy tread and a loud, hoarse breathin' jest ouside the cabin close to my head. And then I smelt something like a pig-sty. I knew well enough what it was. There was only the thickness of a split clapboard between me and a big grizzly bear!

"I began to think like chain lightning. The shotgun—'twan't loaded, and if it had been charged to the muzzle 'twould only sting him and make him as mad as a hornet. I might climb upon the cross beams. Pshaw! They wa'n't seven feet from the ground and one scoop of his paw would bring me down like a ripe plum.

"Not thinkin' of anything sensible to do, I didn't do nothin', but kep' as still as I ever kep' in my life. I fairly shrunk up like a withered potato.

"The bear walked slowly around the cabin, breathin' as if he had the asthma. Pretty soon I saw him through the saplin's, and knew he could brush 'em away like smoke. He lifted up his big head and looked toward me, and I'll take my solemn oath that he was bigger than any bull that ever pawed the earth. He stuck out his nose and sniffed with a dreadful noise. I tried to think of the Lord's Prayer.

"But pretty soon he moved on and I heard him chompin' the bacon rinds outside. He walked around the cabin four times and every time he stopped and sniffed closer to the saplin's. 'Twas only the smell of the fire that kep' him from comin' in, that's sure. Then he moved off, for I didn't smell him any more.

"All of a sudden I made one jump to the door, cussin' myself for a darned coward. There I'd been thinkin' 'bout myself all the time when the other feller was sleepin' in the open, and the bear would be sure to visit him after finishin' with me! And he'd been kind enough to save me from burnin' up, too. I run out hollerin' to him:

"'Look out, pardner, there's a grizzly around!'

"'Tell me some news, will you?' came a grouty voice, out of the air, it seemed to me. I looked up and saw something dark up the oak tree, about as high as a man could well go.

"'You're roostin' high,' I says. 'Did he take after you?'

"'I seen 'im a-comin' and I didn't stop for lunch,' says he. 'Me blankets is ribbons, and he's eat everything but the ax and fryin' pan.'

"'Well, slide down and make a break for the cabin. He ain't in sight now.'

"'Thank ye, I'm comfortable,' says he.

"However, I talked him into comin' down, and he made a pretty run for the cabin. I couldn't have beat it myself, and I was pretty spry in those days We slipped in and propped the door, and he began to cuss a fool who would come away and forgit his ammunition.

"Daylight was an awful long time a-comin', but it showed up at last. We built a fire and made some coffee, but we didn't fry no bacon.

"The other feller seemed kinder blue I felt sorry for him, so I says:

"'My friend, you can have this ranch. I don't like to interfere with anybody's plans, and my business in town is pressin' anyway. You can have my blankets and what grub is left, and I'll bid you good-by.'

"'No, you don't,' he hollered, jumpin' up. 'This 'ere ranch is yourn. I was only jokin' last night. The climate 'ere don't agree wi' me. I must be off.'

"'I couldn't think of it,' says I. 'You can make a nice home out of it. Good luck to you.'

"'I means what I says,' he growls real huffy. 'This 'ere ranch is yourn, and don't try to insult me by insinivating that I'm tryin 'to git it away from you.'

"Well, the upshot of it was that we had a bigger quarrel than we had the night before."

Ezra Tucker laughed and slapped his knee.

"But how did it come out?" asked the deputy assessor.

"Oh, the other feller is Rose, my partner. We got over our scare and we both stayed. There's Rose comin' now, and I guess dinner's ready."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An Amiable Examiner.

Matthew Arnold's freedom from austerity when it came to the ordinary happenings of life has been the subject of many anecdotes. As a school examiner he was especially amiable, perhaps too much so. Once he had a class of girls to examine, and gave them all good marks. A fellow inspector noticed it, and objected that some of the girls must have been more clever than others. "Perhaps that is so," said Arnold, "but what could I do? You see, they are all such very nice girls!"—Golden Days.

Rockford.

The Republican campaign was opened here on Monday evening, Oct. 8., with a speech by Mr. E. E. Packard, an ex-Philippine soldier, at G. A. R. Hall. A fair audience attended. The young man gave his views of matters political, neerly all about the Philippines, in a quiet, unobtrusive way. The whole was a tame affair. Nothing new.

DIED: In this village, Oct. 5. Cora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ora D Cadwell, aged 9 months. The funerl was held on Saturday, the 6th. Rev, G. W. Wright, officiating.

DIED: In North Rockford, Oct. 5, Mr. Whipple F. Thompson, aged 85 years. He had resided in the town nearly forty years. The funeral services were held at the North Rockford M. E. church, on Saturday, the 6th, and were conducted by Rev. A. H. Abbott. A very large company of his neighbors and friends followed his remains to their final resting place in Elmwood cemetery, in the village.

DIED: Oct. 7. near the village, at her home on the Hanover road, Mrs. Henrietta, wife of Robert Klatte, aged 66 years. Funeral on Monday at the Luthern church in East Greenwood.

Candidates are quite numerous this week. The big man Dolly, who wants to be sheriff of Wright county, was on the platform au the republican meeting. Both candidates for County Treasurer are looking after the fences tightening the loose wires, and occasionally driving in a staple.

K. C. Bucklin has sold his shop on Main street next to the Post Office building to Dr. T. D. Murray. It will be fitted up immediatly for a drug-store and a doctor's office. Bucklin will work in Mrs. Hoppe's blacksmith shop, at the corner of Main and Bridge streets.

Our teachers and scholars or pupils are preparing to give an entertainment at G. A. R. Hall in the near future, for the benefit of the public, and also to raise funds to purchase an organ for the school and make needed additions to the school libary.

The entertainment will be first class and the objects are worthy ones. An organ is very necessary if much improvement is to be made by the singing pupils

Endless Chain of Prayer.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—"The endless chain of prayer," devised by the women who oppose the re-election of McKinley, has become the subject of an official document, which was today given to the public by the Republican national committee. It consists of interviews with the woman of Chicago, prominent for their connection with the religious and temperance work, who denounce the plan in harsh terms. Mrs. Augusta R. Fitzsimmons, vice president of the Young Woman's Christian association, says: "Such a plan, to my mind, is only ingenious in the fact that its authors have discovered a new form of blasphemy."—Minneapolis Star.

Railroading Patents.

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C., have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions. C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they insist that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the atter process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

Dispatches received in New York city announce that among the Catholic missionaries killed in China was Bishop Fantosalli, who was tortured to death in a most horrible manner. It is added that 45,000 native converts to the Catholic faith have been slaughtered in different parts of the empire. The news makes all Christendom shudder.

The census reveals the fact that the block in New York city bounded by Sixty-first and Sixty-Second streets and Tenth and Eleventh avenues is the most densely populated spot in the world. The enumerators counted 6,88S living in the great tenement houses covering that square. Even China cannot beat that record—but it is nothing to boast of.

The building of wooden ships began in Maine because suitable timber in abundance was close at hand. The local supply of material is practically extinct, but the industry still clings there. The yards at Bath turned out 46,693 tons of shipping last year. Included in this lot was a five-masted schooner whose frame was of Virginia oak, planking of Georgia pine and masts of Oregon pine.

Over the greater part of the New England coast the supply of clams has suddenly diminished to an extent which has become alarming. Extensive areas which four or five years ago produced great numbers of clams are now practically barren. The explanation is simply that the demand has increased at such a rate that too large a number of the natural "seed" clams have been removed and extinction suddenly follows.

The Pennsylvania railroad has begun a crusade against tramps, and it is announced that the company has employed hundreds of special police who will make the tramp nuisance their especial business. The road does not object so much to the tramps stealing a ride if they would not steal everything movable. The officials of the road say that the amount stolen each year by these wanderers of the rail amounts to thousands of dollars.

Barry, the most famous St. Bernard dog in all Switzerland, is to have a monument to his memory. Barry lived ten years with the monks, and in that time saved 40 lives. His most creditable achievement was when he found a child of ten years in the snow succumbing to the fatal slumber which precedes death. The dog first warmed the child with its breath and licked it until it awoke. Then, by lying on his side, the dog gave the child an obvious invitation to ride. The child mounted on his back and Barry carried it to the convent.

The New York commissioner of immigration in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30 last records the arrival at that port of 400,842 immigrants. He calls attention to the fact that there is a steadily increasing stream of immigration from southern Europe and oriental countries. Italy supplies the largest number, 99,019; the Poles numbered 36,835, the Irish 25,200, while Germany is fourth on the list with 23,382. There were 44,520 Hebrews, gathered from all the countries of Europe, who sought homes in the United States during the year.

The Rhode Island supreme court says that flowers form a necessary feature of a funeral. The case was an action brought by a florist against the administration of an estate of a deceased citizen who had refused to pay for flowers furnished. The court justified the expenditure, remarking that "the custom of having flowers at funerals is well-nigh universal in this country and that, when not abused by extravagance or unseemly ostentation, it is to be commended as giving appropriate expression to our feelings of respect and love for the departed."

Germany's Latest Propcsal Favored by United States.

Reply of State Department to the New Note—France Has a Plan—Chinese Fleet Said to Be in Danger.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Propositions of a far-reaching character concerning China are being presented in rapid succession to this government. The state department had no sooner disposed of one of these propositions Thursday by delivering a response to the German government than it was confronted by an even more important proposition submitted by the French government, and within half an hour formally seconded by the Russian government.

Germany's Note.

The new note from Germany, to which the United States has responder, is as follows:

"The emperor of China has addressed to the powers an edict dated September 25 in which he orders the punishment of a number of princes and dignitaries, mentioned by name, for having encouraged the Boxers. On the assumption that the edict is genuine, the German government, in furtherance of the procedure proposed in its circular note of September 17, has further proposed to the powers to come to an agreement to instruct their diplomatic representatives in China to examine and give their opinion on the following points:

"1. Whether the list contained in the edict of persons to be punished is sufficient and correct?

"2. Whether the punishments proposed meet the case?

"3. In what way the powers can control the carrying out of the penalties imposed?"

Text of the Reply.

Following is the reply of the United States government to the German note relative to the punishment of Chinese offenders:

"The secretary of state to the imperial German charge. Memorandum in response to the inquiries made of the secretary of state, October 2, 1900, by the imperial German charge d'affaires touching the Chinese imperial edict in regard to the punishment of Prince Tuan and other high Chinese officials:

"The Chinese minister communicated to the secretary of state, on the 2d inst. a telegram received by him from Director General Sheng, conveying the purport of an imperial edict, dated September 25, 1900, by which the degradation and punishment of Prince Tuan and other high Chinese officials is decreed.

"The government of the United States is disposed to regard this measure as a proof of the desire of the imperial Chinese government to satisfy the reasonable demands of the foreign powers for the injury and outrage which their legations and their nationals have suffered at the hands of evil disposed persons in China; although it has been thought well, in view of the vagueness of the edict in regard to the punishment which some of the inculpated persons are to receive to signify to the Chinese minister the president's view that it would be most regrettable if Prince Tuan, who appears from the concurring testimony of the legations in Peking, to have been one of the foremost in the proceedings complained of, should escape such full measure of exemplary punishment as the facts warrant, or if Kang-Yi and Chao-Shu-Chiao should receive other than their just deserts.

"With a view to forming a judgment on these points, the United States minister in Peking has been instructed to report whether the edict completely names the persons deserving chastisement; whether punishments proposed accord with the gravity of the crimes committed; and in what manner the United States and the other powers are to be assured that satisfactory punishment is inflicted.

"It is hoped that Mr. Conger's replies to these interrogatories will confirm the government of the United States in the opinion which it now shares with the imperial German government that the edict in question is an important initial step in the direction of peace and order in China.

"Department of State, Washington, Oct. 3, 1900."

France Has a Plan.

Paris, Oct. 6.—The following official note was issued Friday afternoon:

"The foreign minister has instructed the representatives of France to sound the powers whose troops are cooperating with ours in the extreme east regarding the adoption of a common programme for the negotiations with China. Our representatives acquitted themselves of this mission and left with the various foreign ministers a copy of the following note:

"'In sending their forces to China the powers proposed, first of all, to deliver their legations. Thanks to their union and the valor of their troops this aim has been attained. It is now a question of securing from the Chinese government, which has given Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang full powers to negotiate and treat in its name, suitable reparation for the past and serious guarantees for the future. Penetrated with the spirit which inspired the previous declarations of the different governments, the government of the republic believes it sums up their real sentiments in the following points, which it submits as a basis for negotiations to be entered upon immediately after the usual verification of the powers:

"'First, the punishment of the principal culprits who will be designated by the representatives of the powers at Peking.

"'Second, the maintenance of the prohibition of the import of arms.

"'Third, equitable indemnities to state, societies and individuals.

"'Fourth, the formation of a permanent guard for Peking legations.

"'Sixth, military occupation of two or three points on the road from Tientsin to Peking, which would thus be always open to the legations wishing to go to the sea or to forces proceeding to Peking from the sea.

"'Presented collectively by the representatives of the powers, supported by the presence of the international troops, it appears impossible to the government of the republic that these conditions, which are so legitimate, would not be accepted by the Chinese government at an early date.'"

Chinese Squadron in Danger.

London, Oct. 6.—It is reported in St. Petersburg, according to the correspondent of the Times at the Russian capital, that the Chinese fleet in Formosa strait attempted to engage the Russian armored cruiser Rurik, but the latter's speed frustrated the plan. The correspondent says it is probable that the allied squadrons will force the Chinese fleet to capitulate or will destroy it.

A Mother's Crime.

New York, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Lillian Smith, of Inwood, borough of Manhattan, while insane Friday, shot her two children, Ethel, aged 12 years, and Theodore, aged eight years, and then committed suicide by shooting herself. Another child lies in Fordham hospital at the point of death as the result of carbolic acid burns. Before shooting the children Mrs. Smith, with the cunning of a maniac, tried to force them to drink carbolic acid. Long brooding over the prospect of death is said to have been the cause of the woman's insanity. Mrs. Smith was the wife of Walter M. Smith, who has been connected with the grocery house of Austin & Co. for 21 years.

Appreciated His Act.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 8.—The Burlington railway sent to Express Messenger Charles E. Baxter, of Kansas City, a letter of commendation for his courageous act in frustrating a train robbery near Council Bluffs, Ia., by killing one of the robbers. The letter also contained a draft for $500 as further evidence of appreciation. The dead robber has been identified from a photograph as Albert M. Poone, of Topeka, Kan.

CONVENTION CALLED.

President Mitchell Issues Proclamation to the Mine Workers—May End the Strike.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 9.—President Mitchell at 10:05 a. m. issued a call for a convention of mine workers of the three districts comprising the anthracite field, to met in Scranton, Pa., on Friday next.

The text of the convention call is as follows:

"Temporary Headquarters United Mine Workers, Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 8.—To all miners and mine employes of the anthracite region:

"Brothers: In view of the fact that the mine operators have posted notices offering an advance in wages formerly paid and believing it to be our plain duty to consult your wishes as to our future action, we deem it advisable to ask you to select delegates to represent you in convention.

"You are therefore notified that a convention will be held at Scranton, Pa., beginning Friday, October 12, at ten a. m.

"The basis of representation will be one vote for each 100 persons on strike, or if desired one delegate may represent as many as 500 mine-workers, but no delegate will be allowed to cast more than five votes.

"Each delegate should have credentials signed by the chairman and secretary of the meeting at which he is elected; and whenever possible credentials should bear the seal of the local union.

(Signed)

"JOHN MITCHELL, President United Mine Workers of America.

"T. D. NICHOLLS, President District No. 1.

"THOMAS DUFFY, President District No. 7.

"JOHN FAHY, President District No. 9.

"N. B.—Delegates will be notified of the hall in which the convention will be held upon their arrival in Scranton."

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 5.—An uprising of striking miners in the Shamokin region seemed imminent for several hours late Thursday and there were forebodings of a serious clash between armed deputies and a large body of strikers. Prompt action of some of the cool-headed officials of the miners' organization finally succeeded in averting the threatened conflict. Some 3,000 excited strikers assembled at Mount Carmel, and headed by a band of music started to march to Treverton, 16 miles away, with the avowed purpose of forcing those at work at the North Franklin colliery to quit and join in the strike. This was the only mine in operation in the region, and the strikers had become angered at the refusal of the men there to stop work. The marchers were in an excited and wrathful frame of mind. When they had covered three miles of their march they were met by officials of their organization, who after much persuasion induced the men to abandon their proposed trip. The strikers then turned back, though many did so reluctantly. Later it was announced that the officials of the North Franklin to prevent trouble kould not operate the mine until the strike was settled.

With a cessation of operations at the North Franklin all of the Philadelphia & Reading company's 39 collieries will now have ceased work. The point of attack by the United Mine Workers' organizers now is the Panther Creek valley, in the lower Lehigh region, where the collieries of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company have been in practically full operation since the strike began in the other sections.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 5.—Not the slightest notice has been taken by the striking miners of the ten per cent. offered the employes by several of the larger coal companies. As far as is definitely known not one striking miner has accepted the advance, but on the other hand, more have quit their places, notably in the Schuylkill region, where three additional collieries of the Reading company were shut down.

FLOUR MILLS TO CLOSE.

Minneapolis Firms Will Shut Down for an Indefinite Period—Shortage in the Demand.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 8.—Nearly one-half of the flour mills operating in Minneapolis will close for an indefinite length of time. The Washburn-Crosby and the Pillsbury Milling companies report that 40 per cent. of their mills will close, and it is also reported that the Consolidated Milling company will discontinue operations, although it is not learned how many mills will be affected. The officials report the cause due exclusively to the marked shortage in demand for flour. The foreign trade, it is declared, is practically dead, while the present stock of the mills will be sufficient to supply the domestic trade for some time to come. It is contended generally that the coming election and political excitement have to some extent brought about the sudden decline in demand, and it is probable that none of the mills will resume operations until after it is over.

Ruin by a Tornado.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 8.—The tornado which raged in this vicinity Saturday evening was the most violent ever experienced hereabouts. The storm cut a pathway 150 feet in width through the northwestern corner of this town, completely wrecking the buildings struck. The shafthouses and buildings of three mines which stood in the path of the storm were reduced to kindling wood. The property loss is estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000 and the known fatalities number nine, with a score or more injured—some severely, others only slightly. The storm swept in a northwesterly direction after leaving here and struck a little Finnish settlement near Pike lake, where a number of buildings were wrecked, in one of which an entire family, consisting of a husband, wife and four children were instantly killed.

Schurz Resigns.

New York, Oct. 8.—Carl Schurz, who resigned his presidency of the National Civil Service Reform league, as well as of the Civil Service Reform association, explains his action in a letter to Secretary George McAneny. Mr. Schurz says he resigns rather than be criticised as carrying on a systematic course of antagonism to the administration, his opposition to it in regard to other policies having in the meantime become more conspicuous.

Post Office Statistics.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The balance sheet of the post office department just completed shows the following condition for the past year: Expenditures, $107,249,298; revenue, $102,354,579; excess of expenditures, $4,894,718. This is about $1,500,000 less than the deficit for the preceding fiscal year.

KNEW ALL ABOUT GENIUS.

A Poet's Wife Describes It and Shows She Is Thoroughly Posted.

"I have just finished a sonnet," said the poet, according to the Atlanta Constitution.

"Thank heaven!" exclaimed the wife, "that'll buy a beefsteak and a sack of flour!"

"And here is an ode for the state fair."

"How fortunate! Ham is 15 cents a pound, and we haven't had any in six weeks!"

"I have also written a love song which is as tender as an April rose."

"What a dear, sweet soul you are! I'm sure that's good for a can of lard and a gallon of molasses!"

"Woman!" said the poet, sternly, "do you know what genius is?"

"Yes," she said, thoughtfully. "Sometimes it's telling the butcher to call again, shutting the door on the baker, hidin' from the house rent man, and singing, when Sunday comes, 'I would not live always; I ask not to stay!'"

He Addressed the Jury.

A man who had never seen the inside of a courtroom until he was introduced as a witness in a case pending in one of the Scottish courts, on being sworn, took a position with his back to the jury and began telling his story to the judge. The judge, in a bland and courteous manner, said: "Address yourself to the jury, sir." The man made a short pause, but, notwithstanding what had been said to him, continued his narrative. The judge was then more explicit, and said to him: "Speak to the jury, sir; the men sitting behind you on the benches." The witness at once turned around, and, making an awkward bow, said with perfect gravity: "Good morning, gentlemen."—Buffalo Courier.

CALIFORNIA'S SPLENDID SHOWING AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

Following is an extract from a letter recently written by Mr. Wm. H. Mills, of California, while in Paris in charge of the Southern Pacific Company's exhibit at the Exposition. It is remarkable for two reasons, first, as evidence of the great interest which is everywhere manifested in that wonderful State; also for the valuable information it contains, and for which it is here reproduced:

Paris, July 19th, 1900.

The panorama picture of the Mariposa Grove is admitted by all, including photographers, to be the most wonderful photographic reproduction that has ever been made. Only yesterday a Committee representing the greatest Fruit-Growing Association of France, to the number of fifteen, visited the office. They were in charge of their President, who is the largest individual fruit grower in the Republic. They came here to get an illustration of the industrial and climatic conditions under which our fruit is grown. I explained to them fully the prolific character of our climate, and by pictures and illustrations showed them that we had a full crop every year; that our danger was from over-bearing; that in no instance had we missed two crops in succession from any cause. You will scarcely understand the intense interest of this interview until it is explained that this Fruit-Growing Association practices fruit culture in two ways, wall-culture and cultivating under glass (I forego French designations). The out-door cultivation of fruit in France is extra-hazardous and is fast being superseded by the artificial means of wall and glass.

The gentlemen who were here yesterday explained that the most profitable cultivation was that wherein all the factors of success were in the hands of the cultivator. I have used this argument many times for the promotion of the policy of irrigation. I have said that when the moisture can be controlled, both with reference to moisture and drainage, civilized culture will have been achieved; that at that point only it becomes an art; but where natural conditions are depended upon and are not under the control of man, the cultivation has not risen to the dignity of an art. Its main factors are at the hazard of chance.

When I explained, however, the conditions under which fruit was grown in California, it became apparent both to myself and my auditors, that the natural conditions in California are as nearly perfect for the production of fruit as it is possible to be, and that at all events there are economies with us which will give us the fruit markets of the world. You may accept this conclusion as demonstrated by our exhibit and observation here. California is hereafter to be the orchard of the world, for reasons which will be more easily made apparent in a personal interview.

The reason for the foregoing narration I will now present: We had exhausted the interest of the exhibit in showing the fruits, the pineapples, the dates, the prunes, the peaches, the pears, the apples, the vegetables in all their varieties, etc.

The day was extremely hot and the interview had become monotonous. I called the company into an attitude in which they could get a good view of the panorama of the great tree grove. I have never heard more genuine expressions of surprise and admiration. The President of the Association, a man of fine mentality and dignity of character, said, through the interpreter to me, that the picture was the most beautiful presentation of a forest he had ever seen and the forest was the most beautiful of any that had ever been shown abroad. The forest as expressed in that picture is infinitely superior to any forestry expression possible here. The largest pine tree I saw in Germany was less than twenty-four inches in diameter, and not to exceed seventy-five or eighty feet high. After what we had told them of the favoring conditions of climate and soil, we introduced them into the heart of one of our greatest forests by the best representation which can be placed upon paper. You can have no adequate conception of how it broadened and dignified and ennobled our State. We had shown them panorama pictures, pictures of prune orchards in bloom, pictures of orchards, one of which is a most marvelous presentation, the panorama itself being six feet by fourteen inches high, and representing five hundred acres of prune orchard. We had shown them twenty-one square miles in one panorama of a fruit orchard in Vaca Valley. We had shown them large fruits and large vegetables, and all these things had appealed to them as exceptional. The panorama of the great forests of California, including the greatest trees that grow in the State, conferred upon the entire exhibit probability and confirmation.

GOV. LIND DECLARES

UNDER NO CONDITION WILL HE BECOME A CANDIDATE FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

Would Consider It Political Dishonesty if He Were to Become a Candidate For the United States Senate in Case He Should Not Be Elected Governor—That Republican Spellbinder—Irreproachable Record of the Present Administration—Bureau Notes, Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 8, 1900.

Governor Lind has made a declaration and it is one that admits of no misunderstanding, misinterpreting or juggling. It is such a one as could not be expected otherwise from a man whose reputation for honesty and moral integrity is as irreproachable as that of Governor Lind.

It was at Benson, Minn., during one of the most successful meetings of the campaign. In introducing the governor, Chairman Julius Thorson referred to his record in very favorable terms and added the statement that his friends hoped to see him elevated to a seat in the upper house of congress. In reply to this allusion the governor made the following plain statement:

"I am not, never have been, nor do I expect to be a candidate for the United States senate. I am a candidate for governor, and if elected governor, will serve out my term. Any other course would be politically dishonest. While I appreciate the kind words of the chairman, I wish to make this statement as emphatic as possible, that there may be no misunderstanding."

A mere, common, self-seeking politician might have been tempted to shift and temporize and consider his own immediate interests, but for a man whose record has earned for him the title of "Honest John" no other course was possible or even to be thought of.

It is nice to be good at figures. A man who is good at figures can prove a thing and then turn around and prove the exact opposite with equal dispatch and felicity. An example to the point in question is the Republican spellbinder of whom the Republican press exultingly announces that he "fired a deadly volley" into the state administration. However, the funeral has not been announced yet, and gifts of flowers would be decidedly previous.

After a good deal of hard figuring, the gentleman makes it appear that the grain inspection under Mr. Reishus has cost $30,000 more last year than it did two years ago under Mr. Clausen. The only wonder is why he didn't go back a year or two further, or even five or ten years. If he had, he could have gotten a much better showing for his side than what he has now.

Why didn't he tell us that the cost of the department in 1900 was $45,000 greater than in '97, or $47,000 greater than in '96, or $74,000 greater than in '95. If he had only carried the iridescent logic of his reasoning out to the bitter end, he would have told us that in 1900 the department cost $221,000 more than it did the year before it was started, which in point of fact would have been indisputable, but as an argument it would have been an absurdity.

By a very simple process of subtraction, we find that the cost of the department in '96 was $27,000 greater than in the preceding year; for '97 the increase is $2,000; for '98 it is $15,000, and for '99, the last year of Clausen's regime, the cost of the department was $22,000 over the preceding year, so that the expense of the department in '99 were $66,000 more than in '95. Making an average increase of $16,500 a year. But our Republican spellbinder will not let us consider the last year of Clausen's regime, because he worked under a Democratic governor that year.

Now just why a Republican grain inspector should be obliged to spend more on his department under a Democratic governor than under a Republican governor, surpasses the understanding of an average citizen. A good, staunch Republican no doubt can easily see it, but a common, average citizen would be inclined to think that according to the laws of human nature, the Democratic governor would be inclined to keep a Republican grain inspector under him on as short an allowance as possible. But even if we throw out the year '99, we still find that in '98 the department cost $44,000 more than in '95, making an average increase of nearly $15,000 a year. And so if the gentleman tells us that during the past year the cost of the department was $30,000 more than it was two years ago, he merely tells us that the expenses have increased at an average of $15,000 a year, the the same rate of increase that had prevailed during the last five years of the Republican administration, an increase which is founded on the natural growth of the department.

Everybody knows that more elevators are built and more scales are put in every year, and state weighers and inspectors are required in each elevator; and consequently the expenses of the department have constantly increased. Moreover, the expenses do not depend merely on the size of the crop. As Mr. Clausen, Mr. Reishus' Republican predecessor, himself has said, it costs more to inspect a poor, unsatisfactory and uneven crop, like the one we had this year, than a big, fine crop.

But this is not all. The Republican spellbinder insists on adding the cost of the Board of Appeals, amounting to $14,000, to the expenses of the grain inspection department of the present year. But this Board of Appeals is a new institution, established by the law of '99, and being a new institution, it naturally requires an extra appropriation to support it.

In comparing the expenses of the department with former years, it is therefore no more than fair to leave out this extra item, and this will leave the expenses $2,000 less than in '99, and only $16,000 more than in '98. In other words, the increase of the expenses for two years under Governor Lind was only $16,000, while under the Republican administration the average increase in the expenses was $15,000 a year, or $30,000 for two years.

Before the joint legislative committee of the last legislature, Mr. Clausen and his subordinates themselves admitted that they had made the grading of wheat more severe early in the season, and had gradually made it more liberal as the season advanced; in other words, in the fall when the farmer sold, the standard of grading was high and the farmer received a low grade on his wheat and a correspondingly lower price; but later in the season when the wheat was sold out of the elevators and warehouses, the standard of grade was low and the wheat received a comparatively higher grade, and brought a comparatively higher price, the profits of which went into the pockets of the warehouse and elevator men. The gross injustice of such a practice is apparent to every one, and no farmer can view it with feelings other than those of bitterest resentment.

It was Governor Lind that put a stop to this flagrant abuse, and determined that the grades on wheat shall be maintained with the same integrity and fidelity at all times for the protection of seller and buyer alike; that the standard of grading shall not be high at one time and one place, and low at another time and another place; that there shall be no discrimination against the farmer, and in favor of the elevator and warehouse men.

And now comes a Republican spellbinder and calls upon the people of Minnesota to repudiate Governor Lind, and put in his place a man who showed his hostility to the interests of the farmer by dodging the vote on the bill which provided for the erection of grain elevators on the right of way of railroads, and the construction of side tracks to elevators near the right of way of railroads; measures which became law, without the captain's vote, and which have done more to keep the grain market out of the clutches of monopoly than any other laws on the statute books. These bills the captain did not want to vote for and he did not dare to vote against them, so he dodged. The captain will probably say that he forgot to vote, but the farmer will not forget.

In no department of the state has the excellent business judgment of Governor Lind been more apparent than in the management of the state twine plant. In spite of being obliged to buy at disadvantageous prices, in spite of the opposition of trusts, Governor Lind has succeeded in protecting the farmer against the greed of the trust and netting a fair profit of $13,000 besides. Put the state administration into the hands of the Republicans and the Twine Trust will have its own way and scuttle the state twine plant as they did in Kansas, and then where would the farmer be?

It was under the direction of Governor Lind that the railroad commissioners investigated the freight rates and regulated them and reduced them in some cases as much as 4½ cents per hundred, thereby saving for the farmers of the state more than $400,000 a year; more than it takes to run the county government of all the counties affected.

It was Governor Lind who worked to secure the passage of a bill to tax the business and capital of foreign corporations operating in this state, a bill that would have brought thousands upon thousands of dollars into the state treasury, and it was the Republican legislature that prevented the passage of the bill, and as a result, corporations like the Standard Oil Trust, doing a business of millions of dollars in this state, go practically untaxed.

It was Governor Lind who tried to secure the passage of a gross earnings tax bill whereby the railroads would have been taxed on their gross earnings as they are in other states. And it was a Republican legislature that opposed the bill and defeated it.

In other states the tax on gross earnings on railroads is as high as 5 per cent, and in Kansas it is even as high as 12 per cent. By the refusal of the Republican legislature to raise the tax on the gross earnings of railroads to 4 per cent, they have deprived the state of $2,000,000 of taxes, even if the next legislature should make the raise as soon as possible.

It was at the initiative of Governor Lind that the Somerville law was passed, and a license fee imposed on foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business in the state, which law has already brought upwards of $50,000 into the treasury.

It was under the direction of Governor Lind that the state board of equalization raised the assessment of the street railway company of the Twin Cities nearly $2,000,000, and raised the assessment of the mining companies in St. Louis county $1,600,000, and raised the assessment of the lumber syndicates and other tax dodging corporations so as to make them bear their just and proper share of the burden of taxation, and not let the bulk of it rest upon the shoulders of the people at large.

And now comes this Republican spellbinder and on the strength of a few trumped up charges and statements expressly manipulated to mislead the unwary he calls upon the people of Minnesota to repudiate Governor Lind and put in his place a man who is bound hand and foot to the interests of syndicates and corporations, who would not dare to say his soul was his own; whose record from start to finish proves him to be a man that ever stands wavering between interest and duty, and has always consistently turned and dodged every time it came to a pinch

NOTES FROM THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

"The Singer Manufacturing Company, of 149 Broadway, New York, show their usual American enterprise by having a very creditable exhibit, located in Group XIII, Class 79, at the Paris International Exposition, where they show to great advantage the celebrated Singer Sewing-Machine which is used in every country on the globe, both for family use and for manufacturing purposes. The writer was highly pleased with this display and observed with much satisfaction that it was favorably commented upon by visitors generally.

The Grand Prize was awarded by the International Jury to Singer Sewing-Machines for superior excellence in design, construction, efficiency and for remarkable development and adaption to every stitching process used in either the family or the factory.

Only One Grand Prize for sewing machines was awarded at Paris, and this distinction of absolutely superior merit confirms the previous action of the International Jury at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, where Singer machines received 54 distinct awards, being more than were received by all other kinds of sewing machines combined.

Should it be possible that any of our readers are unfamiliar with the celebrated Singer Machine, we would respectfully advise that they call at any of the Singer salesrooms which can be found in all cities and most towns in the United States."

The Capitol.

The board of state capitol commissioners discussed the closing up of the first contract made with the Butler-Ryan company for the construction of the walls and roof of the new state capitol. This contract should have been closed July 1, but the board extended it to allow the completion of certain changes.

Cass Gilbert, architect, informed the board that the contract had been completed with the smallest list of extras he had ever seen for so large a contract. The total list does not aggregate more than 2½ per cent of the whole contract, and this includes $11,000 for the changes.

The estimate allowed was for $28,535.75.

The board will direct that the steel flag staffs, three in number, and each forty-five feet in length, be placed in position now, in order to save expense. Each staff will have a lightning rod running down the center. The three staffs will cost about $800.

Iron Exploration.

This has been the banner year as far as exploration work is concerned, from 25 to 50 diamond and other drills have been operated on Mesaba & Vermillion range this summer, and a large amount of ore has been discovered on properties that have been explored before. It is said that the mining men have heretofore as a rule stopped drilling after they have gone a few feet in rock, but experiences have taught them that valuable ore deposits are sometimes found under 25 or 50 feet of rock. A valuable mine was recently discovered in that vicinity by going through 50 or 60 feet of rock—that had been explored a number of years ago without success.

Iron in the City.

Beneath the First National bank building, a six-story building at the most prominent business corner of Duluth, workmen engaged in making alterations located a body of iron ore that assays 65 per cent metallic iron, and experts say that it is as good as anything ever found in this state. As the city is 80 miles from the ore fields, and as the presence of iron ore there had never been suspected, there is much interest in the find, and exen if the value of the building prevents working the deposits others may be located near Duluth in locations hitherto unsuspected.

What Will Become of China?

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this ancient but unprogressive race. Many people in America are also going to pieces because of dyspepsia, constipation, blood, liver and stomach diseases. We are living too fast, but strength, vigor and good health can be retained if we keep off and cure the above diseases with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Railway Farm Lands for Sale.

In Northern Wisconsin the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway has for sale, at low rates and easy terms of payment, about 400,000 acres of choice farm lands. Early buyers will secure the advantage of locations on the many beautiful streams and lakes, which abound with fish and furnish a never ending and most excellent water supply, both for family use and for stock.

Land is generally well timbered, the soil fertile and easy of cultivation. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Superior, Ashland and numerous other thriving cities and towns on the line of the C. St. P. M. & O. Ry, and other railroads in the same territory, furnish good markets for farm produce. For further particulars address Geo. W. Bell, Land Commissioner, Hudson, Wis., or G. H. MacRae, A. G. P. "I could'nt Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhœa. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. "I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Oct. 12, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—The village council meets Monday evening next; the regular session.

—The Basket Ball team will give a social in the city hall, Friday, Oct. 12 Admission 10c.

—Candidates of both parties for county offices are making frequent visits to Delano now days.

—Potatoes are being dug and housed for winter. We understand the corp is not large, but of good quality.

—Rev. Halley, of Herman, who is visiting with Rev. Thompson will preach at the M. E. church tonight.

—Congressman Page Morris, of Duluth, will address the voters of Delano and vicinity on Wednesday evening Oct. 24.

—A new addition to the High School library of a number of good books is being enjoyed by lovers of good reading matter.

—Typhoid fever and Diphtheria are reported from Fair Haven, Annandale and Buffalo. It would be well for our citizens to be on the look out.

—The "ice trust" seems to worry the Eagle awfully. A couple of Democrats happened to get caught in bad company that time. Don't cher know?

—Rev. Yancy's bike balked yesterday right in front of Capt. Carver's Sanhedrin. But the wreck was righted to precipitately for a snap-shot even.

—The body of Henry Schultz who mysteriously disappeared on the eve of his intended marriage four weeks ago in Rockford town has been found in some brush near home. An inquest is being held.

—Figure out for yourselves what your crop will sell for and what you can buy with the proceeds. Don't depend on Truelsen, Morris nor the Eagle for it. You can beat them all at your own business Then compare notes.

—Thomas D. Schall, of the Minnesota University senior class, addressed an audience here Tuesday evening on imperialism and trusts from a Democratic standpoint. He is a good speaker, and held his audience for an hour in close attention.

—The M. E. Conference returned Rev. A. F. Thompson to Delano, Howard Lake, J. F. Pickard; Buffalo, F. W. Valentyne; Roekford, W. C. Hodgson; Annandale, A. L. Fisher; Monticello H. J. Van Fossen; Clear-Water, F. E. Fairbanks.

—F. H. McGhee, the noted colored attorney and orator of St. Paul will speak in Delano on Thursday Oct. 18. Those who have heard him say he is one of the best orators on the stump this year. He astonished some of those who listened to him at the Democratic codvention at Buffalo.

—The two livery men had a lively time Tuesday evening at the depot. Marshall Merriman was equal to the occasion and promptly participated in parting the belggerents. Prosperity surerly has come when men must fight for prefference in soliciting custom for the livery business with the present muddy roads.

—Quite a lively time with a foot ball was had on R R. Ave. the first dav of the week. A score or so of small boys got hold of the ball and kept it in the air most of the time. Occasionally it got among the spectators on the sidewalks. Tom Shaw got several fine kicks, and Sheriff Nugent assisted a little, and said he had not had so good a laugh for years.

—Village leveler Probst has been sighting arouud the pond near the corner of 4th St. and R. R. Ave. He has about concluded that it could be drained into the railroad ditch very easily. Something certainly ought to be done with it before all the neihbors get typhoid or some other pestilential disease from it. Owners of lots like those should drain them or sell them to some one that would.

—The Modern Brotherhood of America lodge that has had such hard sailing since its inception in Delano redeemed itself completly last night. They gave an entertainment pronounced the best of the season. A large crowd of invited guests, listened to an address by State Lecturer Mr. E. Wood, after which they enjoyed "red-hots" followed by amusements, of various kinds. Everybody enjoyed the occasion.

Alva G. Catlin, is doing what he can without much means, traveling on a wheel, afoot, or any way to get acquinted with the voters. He enlisted in the war for humanity; to help liberate the Cubans from Spanish tryanny, served with the 13th Minn. Vol, in the Philippines and came home with the regiment. He had smallpox when he arrived at home and spent five weeks in the pest house at Minneapolis.

What little money he had left soon went and he has been making little more than a living since. But he is making a campaign to reduce a big majority in Wright County and would be thankful for a majority, no matter how small is. He can "hike" as far in a day; or "figure" anything needed in the Auditors office at well as his opponent or his assistant. Give the boy a boost.

Candidate for County Attorney Spath and Editor Schmidt, of Waverly were in town Saturday evening.

Captain John Selbie, of Montrose, was a Delano visitor yesterday.

County Cullings.

Great stress is being laid on the argument that the Auditor's office is a very particular place, and that a new man would not be able to conduct the office if he was elected. The county pays for an assitant. While Lamson was in Swanburg was assistant; when Swanburg was elected Reinmuth became helper. Now Reimmuth has been appointed Lamson is assistant. It seems the assistant is usually the man that does the business. So it is highly necessary that the Auditor be qualified to select a good deputy. That he be a good boss. In this the Democrats have chosen wisely. When a small boy Alva Catlin was noticed by his father walking up and down the alley in front of a neighbor's barn whistleing, putting on considerable dignity. When asked weat are you doing? he promply answered. "Cleaning out Kerr's barn." Just then his younger brother and a neighbor's boy appeared in the barn door with forks full of manure. His father asked of Alva: How much are you getting for the job? The answer was prompt and very buisiness like. "Oscar and John get 8 cents a piece and I get 9" He had taken the job for 25 cents. His qualifications in this line are unsurpassed, even by Lamson himself.

The Democrats of Wright County have nominated W. H. Spath. of Waverly for County Attorney. Mr. Spath is well fitted for the position and stands a good show of election. He's a hard campaigner and his opponent will know that he is running. —Dassel Anchor.

Henry Truelsen is a German in Delano, a Sweed in Cokato, a Dane in Duluth and a Finlander in French Lake. Next November he will be a mackerel in Salt River.—Eagle.

Mr. Truelsen is much more likely to be elected as an American citizen to represent the 6th district of Minnesota in Congress, and such slurs as the above will do their share towards effecting this result.

The heavy political editorials appearing in the Eagle along about election time we used to attribute to "Billy" Culkin. He's not here just now, and this week's "roasts" on Hon. Henry Truelsen bear the distinctive earmarks of Page Morris' Post Master, unless we are mistaken. At any rate they are not calculated to win any of Mr. Truelsens' friends over to Page Morris.

Between coaxing the Sweeds, and scolding the Germans to keep them in line the Eagle is having a terrible time. Most as bad as when she scolded Page Morris for levying tarriff on Porto Rico goods, one week, and soon after deserting Senators Davis and Nelson and taking up with Page's ideas.

Detroit News: President McKinley said forcible annexation was not to be thought of, and now his supporters are saying that it isn't to be talked about either.—St. Cloud Times.

WELKER.—On Tuesday Oct. 9, to Mr. and Mrs. Daryl Welker twin girls. One died.

County Politics.

Symptoms are that the political pendulum is about to swing back to the democratic candidates benefit this election. It looks as if a great landslide of votes would go from republicanism, imperialism and Hannaism straight for the principles of Jefferson, Lincoln and other patriots who believe in freedom, and equal rights for all and special priveleges for none.

Well knowing that the German vote is about sure to go for Bryan as against militaryism and Imperialism the Wright County republicans seem to have made a desperate effort to stem the tide by nominating a large share of the ticket from among German speaking people, and sending them out in a gang to force matters as far as possible. Will it prove successful? Or will it not?

It is fairly good politics possibly for the Republican Auditor Swanberg to resign, and the Republican Commissioners to appoint Aaron Reinmuth to draw the salary, and for Post-Master Lamson to run the office and draw salary as deputy Auditor and Post Master of Buffalo at the same time. It gives Reinmuth an increased salary and a chance to electioneer. It furnishes considerable funds that can help out the ticket. Boss Lamson is in his glory now, and if Reinmuh, is elected will probably continue in his glory for awhile, at least until the new administration appoints a new Post-Master.

A. Newman, Democratic candidate for Clerk of Court was born in Stockholm. He worked his way in the world graduating at Gustavus Adolphus collage, St. Peter, one of the best schools in the state. He is now teaching in the Cokoto school. He will make an efficient clerk of Court and be prepared to issue marriage licences on short notice and in the highest style of art.

Don't wait for A. P. Richie to call on you for your vote. You all know him and that he is qualified and will make a good Superintendent of Schools. He is Principal at Cokato and can't get out electioneering much.

W. H. Spath has a good recommend in the Dassel Anchor, a Republican paper where he used to live. It says he will make a good County Attorney. He looks like it. Somebody called him a kid. He says he used to be very small once about 50 years ago.

W. H. Cutting has a good chance to be the next Judge of Probate from present indications.

Coroner will probably hail from Cokato after Jan. 1. Dr. G. W. Dalquist.

The Democratic Sheriff, everybody concedes will be elected. He always has.

Register of Deeds and Treasurer we have not yet met, but understand they are eminently fitted for the positions they have been nominated for.

Surveyor and Court Commissioner are good men for the places.

Legislators Kelly and Skold can be depended on to help Goy. Lind to get some good laws enacted, and some bad ones reconstructed.

For county commissioners P. B. O'Loughlin in the 1st: Charles Bugbee in the 3rd, and C. M. Carlson in the 5th district, are the regular nominees They will make a board able to look after the county finances and affairs.

The Republican candidate for Legislature, from Otsego Mr. Hewlett refuses to run.

Most of the Republican County Candidates already have told of the public tit in some way, giving them means to canvass the county and work for votes. Not so the democratic candidates they are at work for a living and obliged to get about as best they can.

The republican candidates quartette that swung around the county this week distributed cigars quite liberally. But people who do not smoke were left out of the deal. O. J. Stewart used to beat that when he was at the zenith of his glory by carrying his coat tail pockets full of apples for the non-smokers. O. J. had campaigning down as a fine art. It is getting about time that such campaigning was relegated to things of the past.

ONE fare rates are to be given voters in Washington, D C. who wish to come home to vote. It is announced that Census Director Merriam will see to it that all Minnesotans who desire to vote get a leave of absence. He has upwards of a thousand voters in his department.

REPUBLICANS are surely doubtful about Minnesota when the great Marcus Aurelius Hanna can find time, so near the end of this exceedingly warm campaign to spend a day in our state. He is booked for several speeches in the southern part of the state next Tuesday. Are chances really growing less Tawney?

The hottest campaign of all is hastening on. Subscribe for a Democratic newspaper, the Buffalo Gazette, $1.00 per year.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 5, 1900.

The boodle stage of the campaign has been reached, and the head has been knocked out of the republican barrel, Hanna's recent visit to the eastern headquarters of the big trusts filled the barrel to overflowing. In every doubtful state and Congressional district every vote that can be had for money is to be bought. These are not mere assertions. They are hard facts, of which the democrats have been warned by Chairman Richardson, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, and by Mr. Richard Croker of New York, both of whom know of the enormous amount of money secured by Hanna, and judge by the way he spent millions in 1896 how he intends to spend it. It is not easy to prevent some buying and selling of votes among those who are unprincipled enough to engage in such a traffic, but vigilance on the part of democrats may greatly lessen the number bought and sold, as every state provides a heavy penalty for the crime.

There was a noticeable change in the attitude of the republican managers just as soon as they got the tip that Hanna had all the money he wanted. Instead of talking doubtfully of the result of the elections, both Presidential and Congressional, they began to blow, making the most ridiculous claims as to the number of electoral votes that McKinley will get and the number of republican Congressmen that will be elected.

Representative Rhea, of Va., called at the Post Office Department this week and filed a vigorous complaint against the republican postmasters in his district, for failure to deliver important documents sent him from Washington. He also asked that an inspector be sent to investigate the complaint. He received the same old, stereotyped promise that the matter would be looked into, and judging from the result of similar promises made to the same sort of complaints by democrats, that will be the last of it, so far as the republican Post Office officials are concerned.

The republican managers are having trouble with Benjamin Harrison. They want him to take the stump, but Ben says he has a throat trouble and can't do it, although no one has heard that his throat trouble prevented him speaking in court for any client who is rich enough to pay his big fees. If he won't speak, they want him to write and sign a McKinley plea for publication, but he may discover that he has pen paralysis, or something else, that will prevent his writing, if they don't put up a big retainer for him. Ben doesn't like Mckinley or McKinleyism, and if he says anything for either it will be on the usual basis that lawyers briefs are written.

Judge George D Lacy, of South Dakota. who is in Washington looking after some business before the U. S. Supreme Court, thinks that his state is absolutely safe for Bryan and Stevenson, notwithstanding Boss Hanna's personal efforts to capture it, and thus states the reasons for his belief: "The voters in South Dakota are mostly farmers, and farmers, you know, generally look at public questions with a clearer vision than men who dwell in cities. They have time for reflection as they go about their work in the fields. They are not blinded by the glamor of close contact with wealth, nor are their sensibilities dulled by familiarty with the sufferings of their fellow men. The inhabitants of cities decide the questions upon the basis of expediency, while the farmer weighs them with a judicious mind and gets at the bottom of things. Therefor the farmer is most keenly alive to the danger that lurks in great combinations of wealth that make toward monopoly, and it is to the farming communities that Bryan must look for the votes nessary to his election"

Mr. McKinley did not come to Washington this time in a particular good humor, althouth he found the Chinese bussiness of which he has been afraid from the start, apparently coming his way to the extent of geting it into the hands of the diplomats, thus making sure that nothing can happen in connection therewith that will have any effect upon the election. He knows Ohio politics pretty well, and the campaign isn't progressing there in a maner that is satisfactory to him. He has learned what the democratic managers have known for some time – that the trust issue alone is making thousands of votes for Col. Bryan among men who have heretofore voted with the Republican party and he recognizes that the State is in danger. He has also had disquieting news from Indiana and Illinois, both of which seem in a fair way to go democratic if the present drift continues. A personal friend of Mr. McKinley says he is also much chagrined over his failure to stop Hanna's speech making, not only because the failure was humiliating, but because he realizes how much harm Hanna's speeches are doing him.

THE great coal miner's strike in Pennsylvania has ended in a victory for the men. The sliding scale is abolished, and an increase of ten per cent in wages is agreed to till April 1 1901 or after. This strike began Sept. 17, and has been going on for about a mouth.

MILITARISM is much better understood by people who have lived in lands where big armies were the rule; where young men were, unless rich enough to evade it, obliged to serve as soldiers. It is all very nice to say that we need never fear such a thing here. But when it comes to increasing the standing army as fast as it has been increased under the present administration how long will it be before it will be necessary to draft men to fill up the ranks? What does the United States need a standing army for? Is it to stand guard in foreign lands; or in our colonies? Or is it to be on hand to suppress and subjugate our citizens at home when they are oppressed beyond what their American spirits will stand?

REPUBLICAN speakers and papers appear to us to be a little unfair at least, in attributing the lack of prosperity in the prison twine business to Gov. Lind. The Gov. evidently sought to remedy the existing trouble, that of not having sufficent twine to supply farmers who wished twine. He laid in stock sufficient, and with an increased capacity for manufacturing, instead of 6,000,000 now 9,000,000 pounds, he was prepared to supply the demand. A dry spring came, grain was short and light. Farmers did not need half the twine of former years consequently some twine is on hand for next year. Is Governor Lind to blame? If he had failed to have stock enough to make all the twine the farmers wanted, and one of the orders had gone unfilled wouldn't these same politicians have howled even worse than now? Whose making all the fuss anyway is it farmers; or is it office seekers?

Seals Bryan's Fate.

Pioneer Press Special Cable Service.

STRASBURG, Oct. 16.—The papers of Alsace and Lorraine are busy commenting on the stand for McKinley taken by the New York Staats Zeitung. In an editorial article headed "The Germans for McKinley." the Strasburg Neuests Nachrichten says that the Germans in the United States do not feel safe in laving the highest power in the land in the hands of Mr. Bryan both on account of his silver craze and because he has never done anything to deserve their confidence. Therefore, although the Germans have no special predilection for Mr. McKinley, they will vote for him with few exceptions. Thus the fate of the Democratic candidate is sealed.

It seems strange that the Pioneer Press should receive special cablegrams from Strasburg, as to the politics of this country. Does the P. P. think the Germans of the United States incapable of making their own politics? Do not the Germans in this country, and in the Fatherland know that republican speakers and papers have been saying for four years nearly "Silver is dead."? Haven't they said it was buried beyond recognition? And now they are pretending to get news from across the ocean to the contrary.

BRYAN appears to be gaining right along. The republican big guns are traveling in pairs and threes and fours all over the country crying: "Save us just this time". Give us one more chance. They are ghtting most as badly freightened as they try to make out bryan is.

Wev'e Got Them on The Run.

The Republicans are now acting on the defensive all along the line, and a sorry job they are making of it all the way from the President down. McKinley is keeping awfully still on the plan presumably of "Keep still and they will think you know something." Roosevelt and his friends have labored hard to interpret some of his speeches and actions to aid his cause. Hanna is howling up and down throughout the land trying to line up the forces. Page Morris tries to make his constituents believe that Senators Davis and Nelson and the voters of the Sixth District don't know a thing about constitutional tariffs, or import and export duties on Porto Rico And no greater man than Jesse A. Gregg, a St. Paul business man takes up nearly a column editorials in the Pioneer Press trying to make the traveling men understand that the one essential qualifiication they must have to hold their job is not to be a "damned fool" and vote for Bryan, while they fool the voters into the understanding that he never meant it. They are hard pushed for arguments. They are on the run.

Voters Duty.

Voting is a privilege which a true American enjoyes. He thinks of what it cost our forefathers to hand down to us so great a boon; a privilege of casting a ballot equal to that of any other, for officers to administer our laws. He thinks, if foreign born, of the home left behind; of the alliance he foreswore to become a citizen of this, his adopted country. He thinks of this as a free land; a land where all men are equal. He appreciates this privilege. He studies our institutions, our men. He reads and posts himself in the ways of this country. He knows for himself what is best in his estimation, and he has as good a chance in the workshop or in the field to learn these things as has the politician, in the city. He is usually more firm in his convictions, more honest in his beliefs, and as he values his country and its institutions is he bound to exercise the privilege of voting, whenever occasion presents. He with the native born says:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who to himself hath not said:
This is my own, my native land."

He would be dead to his own, and to his country's best interests who did not vote. Especially when so much is pending as now. When the great question of the very life of the Republic itself is at stake. when trusts threaten to ruin our lesser business men; when soldiers are to be multiplied; when bonds upon bonds are to be issued upon which to found National banks when taxes must be increased, the poorer people standing the brunt of it all, while the millionaire escapes much, which if reconed by ability to meet he could contribute to the welif are of the general public.

No man who has self pride, or whose patriotism is noticeable would think of selling his vote for money, whiskey, cigars or favors of any kind. He would vote as best he could his principles; the principles of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. He would never lose a chance to vote, and vote right.

The Trusts Are Fighting Him. Will You Support Him?

One of the most stubborn and successful fights in Municipal history was won by the people of Duluth, led by Henry Truelsen and others, against the old Gas and Water Company of Duluth.

In 1894 this company offered the plant to the city tor $2,105,000. The council declared the proposition carried. Mr. Truelsen fought this decision and carried it to Supreme Court and won. The District Court again declared the proposition carried.

Mr. Truelsen again appealed to the higher courts and won.

Another proposition was made by the company to sell the water plant alone at $1.858,000. Mr. Truelsen stumped the the city in opposition to this outrageous price. The people voted with him and voted to build. Injunctions and law suits resulted. Finally after years of struggling. Mr. Truelsen with the loyal help of others, secured the plant for the city for about one million dollars less than the original proposition.

After this great fight was won, he locked horns with the Telephone Co., who were charging the citizens $50 per year. With the assistance of the public and Council, he succeeded in getting for the people of this city splendid service for $30 per year.

The Electric Light Co had been charging the city $120 per light per year. Mr. Truelsen was largiely instrumental in reducing this charge to $85. He never forgot the interests of the city for one day. While other men might have found a way to enrich themselves, he retired from office a poor man and in debt. No fair minded man in Duluth questions his honesty or ability. His debts are now being pushed against him in the midst of his canvass. The people understand why this is being done. Don't you think he is worthy of your support?

DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

LeSuer Sentinel: Report has it that M. Doran, formerly of this county, has finally come out for McKinley, Van Sant and the whole republican machine. It was claimed for Doran for years, that he was in league as often with republican as with his own party and that many of his biggest political moves, were made in harmony with republicans. If now the genial Michael has gone over to the enemy to stay, it will be a good thing for the democracy of Minnesota. Full confidence is necessary in a political, as well as a military leader, and Doran has forfeited the confidence of the democrats of Minnesota before his latest apostacy.

THE Bore war seems to be taking a new start.

THAT war that has been "over" ever so long in the Philippines is still going on.

IF John Lind is to be turned down because one of his game wardens got too much to drink and shot a man, how about McKinley whose appointees are shooting hundreds of people at their homes in the Pnilippines? And how about his appointees in Cuba robbing the people? And how about the Porto Rico tariff bill which he sanctions? Guess the Governor is very innocent compared to the President by this rule.

Rathbone, Neeley & Co.

Months ago, almost long enough to be forgoten, a national cry of indignation arose. Immense postal robberies and defalcations were unearthed in the Cudan postoffice department, executed by the Post director Rathbone and the Postmaster Neeley in Havana. Oh, the penitentiary was toogood for them. They had to be shot, hanged because they disgraced the national honor. It was a blot on the administration This robbery was not found out by the controling officer Assistant Postmaster Heathe in Washington but was reported by a simple postal clerk in Havana. They stole the snug sum of $15,000,000 and some people said for the control of Mr. Heathe they might have stolen half a million. -Consquently Mr. Heathe felt that his health was impaired. He took his departure and our President wrote him a very nice letter of condolence. A man may be very indulgent officer with his friends but can be a verygood campaign worker. Mr. Heathe stepped from his service in Washington into that of Mr. Hanna and is Hanna's right hand for re election of McKinley If you think that Rathbone and Neelay are in prison or in penitentiary you are mistaken One walks the streets of Havana and the other those of New York They were too adroit campaign workers to be treated as common thieves. The jail is only for people who steal a small amount of money and are caught, of course the administration sent Bristow to Cuba to investigate very throughly, that the national wrath might cool down, now comes the climax of the farce. Rathbone states that Bristow must be prosecuted for the same crime for which he stands accused. Besides he publishes the letter of Mr Heathe on which he appointed Neeley. And that letter is writen in such glowing terms of recommendation that Rathbone appointed Neeley. It is a ludicrous letter for being written by an Assistant Post master general.

Bryan does not stand only as a man; able and willing to destory the trusts robberies, and establish a government for the people and by the people again, but he has the barkbone too to clear out this evil of rotteness which is a national disgrace and therefore he must be our next President. O. M.

Duluth Herlad:—Mr. Bryan's use of Biblical quotations and illustrations is very much like Lincoln's—always pat and effective. Refering to the dinner pail argument at Peoria, he said: "The Bible tells that there was a man named Esau who sold his birth right for a full dinner pail, and has been held in derision ever since.

Railroading Patents

A single firm of Patent Lawyers, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C. have in the last year procured 1,630 patents for their clients, many of them for rejected inventions C. A. Snow & Co. have been accused of railroading patents through the Patent Office, but they must that this locomotion is better than ox carting them for by the after process the inventor often dies before he gets his patent. 16.

Naturalization of Foreigners to Be More Impressive.

Pioneer Press Special Service.

CINCINNATI, Oct 19.—Judge Ferris said to day as he converted a number of foreigns into citizens by naturalization:

"I am going to make this ceremony more impressive. The mere act of swearing in these people makes no impression on them. I shall procure an American flag, and every male candidate for citizenship will have to kneel and kiss its folds I want to make it one of the most complete acts of their lives. I want them to tingle down to their toes when they see our national airs."

"LIKE AS A FATHER."

My little son
Sits with his gaudy playthings on the floor,
And laughs and coos with infantile delight,
As one by one,
And o'er and o'er,
He tosses them to left and right,
His fair golden hair in the winter sun,
'Tis all so sweet and beautiful a sight,
I watch him through the slightly open door,
Idle, my work but just begun.

An hour ago,
When last he saw me as I left him there,
His little heart seemed broken with a woe
Beyond all hope of healing and repair;
But now he does not seem to care
That I am gone. He does not even know.
In swift despair
My jealous heart cries: "Can it be
He loves his silly playthings more than me?"

But presently he hears my voice,
Yet sees me not,
No more, no more
His trifling treasures are his choice,
But, with insistent clamor, o'er and o'er
He calls for me, and I rejoice
That I was wrong in thinking he forgot.

And is it not like this, O Father mine,
O Heavenly Father, whom I truly love,
That sometimes dazzled by earth's playthings for awhile,
That so beguile,
I seem to forget Thee for a time?
And yet, when most absorbed and most beguiled,
With old delight I hear above
Life's wildest tumult, still and small,
The voice I love the best of all,
As with unsatiable desire Divine
I leave my baubels for Thy heart of love.

The Greater Magic

MLLE. DORAMINTE DE BRUNETIE, the reins of her palfrey in her left hand, knelt on the greensward for a moment to admire an overturned beetle of the most gorgeous mail, which she had almost crushed in riding. The sun glints, that made of the beetle a glitter of crimson and blue, and of her hair, as she stooped down, a brown and gold wonder, struck down through a roof of rustling leaves. For all around the beech woods stretched, quiet and magical.

"But if the charming Doraminte should discover—"

She started up at hearing herself so suddenly discussed. The voice she recognized as that of a certain M. Martin—one of the many men supposed to be languishing for her sake—a fool, nevertheless, and detestable. She judged from the sound that he must be hidden by a triple row of beeches. It was an impertinence to use her fore name—even with the epithet. If she should discover—what? Mlle. de Brunetie had no wish to listen, but she stooped again to admire the beetle.

"She will not discover—"

Worse and worse. This was another reputed suitor speaking, de Beauflet by name, whom she misliked for a knave.

"I FEAR THAT, BY AN ACCIDENT, I INTRUDE."

He had an oily tongue, and drawled. It was to be kept a secret, then?

"But if we are compelled to shoot him?" questioned Martin.

"Why," drawled de Beauflet, "the woods hold many things."

"You mean?" said the other.

"I mean that if he is shot, he will have shot himself. Why should he not? He moons about with a gun—unloaded—it is true—as I have taken care to ascertain; he thinks of her fascinating eyes, of her figure that entrances him. Very well—he comes to a bramble, still imagining—his foot catches—he stumbles—pouf; his gun goes off—he is shot. It will be very sad—"

De Beauflet ended with a jeering laugh.

"But then ours are pistols," objected the other.

"A gun may be discharged into a dead man," said De Beauflet, brutally. "And in any event there is no need to shoot him. Two pistols at a man's head—hein, my friend—he may be excused if, under the circumstances, he gives a solemn promise to look no more upon the adorable Doraminte."

"Suppose he broke the promise?" suggested Martin.

"He is a man of honor," said De Beauflet.

Perhaps it said more for the individual man than for the majority of her acquaintances, but Mlle. de Brunetie, hearing this tribute, was so convinced of who was meant that she hardly heeded De Beauflet's concluding words: "A pig he may be; a mule he is, full of airs and madness after this tropical existence that he has tried, but once he has given a promise, De Vallon will keep it."

De Vallon? It seemed to her most true that Comte de Vallon was above all things a man of honor. Perhaps she did not quite like the strange power of his eyes, and it might be that he was brusque, though she remembered also how at a ball—only a few days since—when others, with the flattery that was in vogue, had been comparing her hair to sun-rays and her eyes to the stars, he also had burst into a most sudden compliment that sent the blush to her cheeks by reason of its vehement sincerity. He had forgotten—he said, looking into her eyes—that the stars were ever bright. And how—

Martin was questioning again uneasily—

"When De Vallon has left the country for—"

"Who is to possess the charming Doraminte?"

"That," said De Beauflet, reassuringly, "we have agreed to decide between ourselves."

"Well, I am with you against De Vallon."

"Come, then—he will be somewhat at the end of this glade."

The two conspirators moved away down the beechen avenue.

Now many things may be fair in love, but for two rivals to agree together to disconcert a third by violent threats, if not by actual murder, seemed to Mlle. de Brunetie in some way removed from equity. That they should dare, moreover, to establish themselves arbiters of her fate was intolerable.

A strife of voices broke the silence of the woods. It was clear that they had already rencountered, and yet there was no pistol shot. Supposing the man of honor had already given his word? Her heart beat rapidly at the thought, and, without waiting, she mounted the palfrey and rode over the intervening space till only a thin line of bushes separated her from the three.

Truly, the woods were magical. She had expected to find De Vallon at least unarmed and a prisoner. Instead, as she looked through, she saw facing each other De Beauflet and Martin, vacancy in their faces, and pistols aimed directly at one another, while Comte de Vallon stood at one side. Just for a moment she fancied that she must have dreamed the whole conspiracy, for De Vallon was manifestly at his ease.

"You perceive, M. de Beauflet," he was saying, composedly, "that the pistol of M. Martin is directed at you?"

"Certainly," said De Beauflet, like one in a dream.

"And you, m'sieur," said the comte, turning his eyes on the other, "doubtless you observe that M. de Beauflet threatens you with his pistol?"

"I observe," said M. Martin, sleepily.

"Then, gentlemen"—the comte's words flowed on in even monotony—"since you are agreed that the affair which you came out to settle must be carried to the end, and are good enough to treat me as your mutual second—which is the case, is it not?"

They both wagged their heads foolishly, without ceasing their stony glare. They might have been statues, but that they held pistols. De Vallon went on:

"I shall count one—two—three—and at the word three—not before—you will fire!"

Again they wagged their heads. But De Vallon did not count. On the contrry, while Mlle de Brunetie was turning her palfrey's head, determined at last that there was no need of her presence, he having cast a long, stern look at each of the combatants in turn, which had, as it seemed, the effect of making them more rigid than before, stepped aside into the trees casually, and almost stumbled upon her. His face lit with surprise and pleasure, and he doffed to her with all the grace in the world.

"You, mademoiselle!" he said, simply, as if no more could be desired. She was vexed with herself at being discovered, and sat her palfrey with a charming haughtiness.

"I fear that, by an accident, I intrude," she said, coldly.

"Not in the least," he replied.

"But these gentlemen," she said, waving her hand in their direction—"I fear I interrupt them."

His eyes followed her hand, and, seeing the two standing there like storks, began to laugh.

"They do not appear to be interrupted," he said, suavely.

"But," she said, curiously, "you were about to give the word to fire?"

"Pardon me," he said, "no—"

"Then," she said, impatiently, "why this mummery? What is the meaning of it? I—I wish to know."

It was his turn to feel confused.

"Mademoiselle," he began, apologetically, "it is difficult to explain. These gentlemen came into the woods to shoot."

"Shoot—whom?"

"One whom they did the honor to suspect for a rival in the eyes of—the loveliest lady in the world."

"The rival?" she said.

"He has not the presumption to hope to be a rival."

"It is curious," she said, laughing constrainedly. "They come out to murder—this rival. I find them about to shoot each other. How is that explained?"

"It is because of a science," he said, "of controlling men's minds for a space, that I learned abroad."

"Black magic, rather," she said, sarcastically. "You have but to lift your eyes. No doubt it explains why these gentlemen deemed you a rival. You have but to lift your eyes—to this—very lovely lady—"

"To that lady," he said, "I dare not lift my eyes."

"In that case," she said, mischievously, "you are not likely to succeed in your wooing."

"I fear the awakening of these two most ferocious gentlemen," she said. "And I must return. Perhaps, m'sieur, you will escort me and protect me?"

He went to her side, drawn by the greater magic.—Chicago Herald.

Lilacs Not Poplar.

"She who wears the lilac will never wear the wedding ring," runs the old English proverb, and although the scent of the flower is sweet and its tints are fresh and universally becoming, it is contraband among the village maidens of England.—Albany Argus.

The latest word to be coined is "bounder." According to the best authority a "bounder" is one who not only dresses in bad taste, but is careless about the feelings of others. Why not call him a cad?

A witty and cynical Frenchman advertises as follows in a Parisian paper: "A young man of agreeable presence and desirous of getting married would like to make the acquaintance of an aged and experienced gentleman who could dissuade him from taking the fatal step."

A man who had been deaf and dumb for 50 years from an attack of smallpox fell off a roof and recovered both hearing and speech. It might be inconvenient to introduce this method of treatment at the state deaf and dumb asylum, but the latest developments of medical science should not be overlooked.

The medical journals say that inoculation for typhoid fever is proving a great success, and it is cited that during the Anglo-Boer war the patients inoculated suffered a disease of a milder type, while the death rate among those who had been inoculated was 23 per cent. less than among those who had not been so treated.

On the run from Seattle to San Francisco recently the new battleship Wisconsin made the 896 miles in 59 hours and broke all existing records. Heretofore the best record made between the two ports was by the steamer Queen in 65 hours. The Wisconsin was nursed in the cradle that held the Oregon and is starting out to become equally famous.

When Scott spoke of woman as "uncertain, coy and hard to please," he must have looked into the future and noted the case of the New York woman who threatened to get a divorce from her husband because he does not provide more rain for the farm on which they live. Still, it may be said in her defense that it is a mighty mean man who will hold back the rain.

Mrs. Nancy Jones, of Jonesboro, Tenn., celebrated her one hundred and fifth birthday a few days ago. She still enjoys her pipe, manages her farm and draws a pension as a revolutionary widow. The secret of the number of the Joneses is now explained. They have had vigorous ancestors, and if all of them live to the age of the Jonesboro Jones they will have to annex additional territory or build a new Jonestown.

The machine invented by a Chicago woman to measure the emotions certainly ought to fill a long-felt want, but it will have to be strongly built. When it comes to measuring some feminine emotions on some occasions it will have to do mighty quick work and measure a good many conflicting emotions at practically the same moment. However, it ought to be a good thing for lovers. Heretofore there has been little reliable evidence as to the exact amount of love that one person feels for another.

Europe has recorded a most unusual race. It was nothing more nor less than a balloon race from Paris to Berlin won by Comte De Las Vauix, who made the trip in 21 hours. The fastest express train between the two cities requires 24 hours for the journey. One object was to land as near as possible to the points fixed in advance. Comte De Las Vallette won that prize, he landing within 2,624 feet of the appointed place. It is plain that navigation of the air is not so far off as to be hopeless.

A frugal Kansas woman wanted a companion, and advertised as follows in her local paper: "A lady in delicate health wishes to meet with a useful companion. She must be domesticated, musical, an early riser, amiable, of good appearance, and have some experience in nursing. Total abstainer preferred. Comfortable home. No salary." The day after the advertisement appeared in print she received by express a meek-looking cat of the female sex. No other applicant for the place has as yet presented herself.

Letters from two subscribers were received by a Kansas editor on the same day—one asking for advice in the matter of raising twins and the other asking how he should rid his orchard of grasshoppers. The editor forwarded the answers by mail, but mixed the envelopes. As a result the proud father of twins received this answer: "Cover them carefully with straw and set fire to it, and the little pests, after jumping in the flames a few minutes, will be speedily settled." The other: "Give them castor oil and rub their gums with a bone."

Examiners in the patent office were inclined to poke fun at a contrivance designed to frighten wolves on western prairies, but it has come into considerable use in the sheep-growing districts of that part of the country. The device is an automatic gun, which goes off at regular intervals, scaring the wolves away from the flocks. It consists of a sort of box, containing a clock-work arrangement, with a small steel barrel projecting from one end. Wolves do not attack sheep in the daytime, and the gun needs to be in operation only at night.

LIST IS TOO SMALL.

Germany Thinks China Has Not Named All the Guilty.

Full Text of Uncle Sam's Reply to French Note—March on Pao-Ting-Fu Begun — Tuan Not Degraded.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The German foreign office is not satisfied with the list of culpables supplied by the Chinese government. "The list is notoriously incomplete," said an influential official, "as it omits at least a score of prominent persons who were active leaders in the massacres of foreigners. This is borne out by all the legations and by the consular reports from China."

Reply to French Note.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The reply of the state department to the French note relative to the basis of Chinese negotiations was made public late Thursday. It reads as follows:

"The Secretary of State to the French Charge D'Affaires (Sent to Mr. Thiebaut, Oct. 10, 1900).—Memorandum: The government of the United States agrees with that of France in recognizing as the object to be obtained from the government of China appropriate reparation for the past and substantial guarantees for the future.

"The president is glad to perceive in the basis of negotiation put forward in the memorandum of October 4 the spirit that has animated the declarations heretofore made by all the powers interested, and would be pleased to see the negotiations begun immediately upon the usual verification of credentials. It may be convenient to enumerate the classes of the memorandum and to add some observations dictated by the attitude of the United States in the present circumstances.

"1. The punishment of the guilty parties who may be designated by the representatives of the powers at Peking.

"The Chinese government has already indicated its intention to punish a number of those responsible for the recent disorders. The representatives of the powers at Peking may suggest additions to that list when negotiations are entered upon.

"2. The continuance of the interdiction against the importation of arms.

"It is not understood that this interdiction is to be permanent, and the duration of it and the details of its regulation seem a proper subject of discussion by the negotiators.

"3. Equitable indemnities for the governments, corporations and private individuals.

"This is an object desired by all the powers. The Russian government has suggested that in case of protracted divergence of views, this matter might be commended to the consideration of the international court of arbitration of The Hague. The president thinks this suggestion worthy of attention by the powers.

"4. The organization in Peking of a permanent guard for the legations.

"The government of the United States is unable to make any permanent engagement of this nature without the authorization of the legislative branch, but in the present emergency we have stationed in Peking an adequate legation guard.

"5. The dismantling of the forts at Taku.

"The president reserves the expression of his opinion as to this measure pending the receipt of further information in regard to the situation in China.

"6. The military occupation of two or three points on the road from Tientsin to Peking.

"The same observation which has been made in reference to No. 4 applies also to this proposition. The president is unable to commit the United States to a permanent participation in such occupation, but he thinks it desirable that the powers shall obtain from the Chinese government the assurance of their right to guard their legations in Peking and to have the means of unrestricted access to them whenever required.

"The president believes that the governments of France and the other powers will see in the reserves we have here made no obstacle to the initiation of negotiations on the lines suggested, and he hopes it will be found practicable to begin such negotiations at an early day."

March on Pao-Ting-Fu Begun.

Tientsin, Oct. 12, via Taku, Oct. 12, and Shanghai, Oct. 15.—The expedition against Pao-Ting-Fu departed in the morning in two columns. The German, French and Italian troops who are to take part, under command of Gen. Bailloud, head of the French military forces in China, will follow the direct route to Pao-Ting-Fu, while 2,000 British soldiers under Lord Campbell will make a detour to the south of the Pao-Ting river, through a number of large villages supposed to be Boxer communities. Both columns will keep in touch with the boat and train which accompanied them. A junk, armed with a naval 12-pounder and two Maxims, is with the Peking column. The expedition will make a demonstration through a wide territory not heretofore covered by the allies. While no opposition is expected at Pao-Ting-Fu, the commanders believe that hostilities are possible in the intervening country.

Rebels Defeat Imperial Troops.

London, Oct. 15.—A special dispatch from Tientsin, under date of October 12, announces the arrival at Peking of Li Hung Chang. According to a special dispatch from Hong-Kong the rebels have again defeated the army of Admiral Ho who was pursuing them in a northeasterly direction from San Chun, killing 40 and capturing many of the imperial troops. The dispatch adds that the condition of Canton is shaky, as the troops there have been greatly depleted.

Tuan Still in Power.

London, Oct. 16.—"Since the Chinese court arrived at the new capital, Sian Fu," says a special dispatch from Shanghai, dated Monday, "reactionary edicts removing the moderates from high offices have been issued, showing that Prince Tuan holds the imperial seal."

Must Dispose of Islands.

Copenhagen, Oct. 13.—Replying to a question in the folkething Friday, relative to the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States, the premier, H. E. Hoerring, said all agreed that some changes must be effected with respect to the islands, and he hoped to soon furnish the necessary explanations and give his views on the subject.

Prisoners Rescued.

Manila, Oct. 15.—Capt. Devereux Shields, who, with 51 men of company F, Twenty-ninth regiment, United States volunteer infantry, was captured by the insurgents last month in the island of Marinduque, was rescued Sunday by the American rescue force with all the members of his party.

Record Broken.

New York, Oct. 16.—All outdoor long-distance cycle marks have been eclipsed by a little Bavarian milliner of this city, Marguerite Gast. Miss Gast's time for 2,000 miles is 222 hours 5½ minutes. Will Brown's record for the same distance is 225 hours 6½ minutes.

MINERS MAKE REPLY.

In Convention at Scranton They Decide to Accept Operators' Offer —Other Demands Made.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 15.—Prospects for a settlement of the anthracite coal miners' strike are apparently as far off as ever. This in spite of the fact that the miners' convention on Saturday, after two days of deliberation, decided to accept the advance of ten per cent. offered by the operators. Coupled with this acceptance, however, were certain counter propositions which it is almost certain the operators will refuse to accept and which render nugatory all the efforts so far made toward an agreement. The proposition of the miners is that they will accept the increase in wages provided the operators will agree to continue the payment of the advance until next April and will abolish the sliding scale. If the operators consider the proposition unacceptable the miners are willing to arbitrate the questions at issue. They also decided to continue the strike until the operators agree to the convention's proposition. The result is as follows:

"We, your committee, further respectfully submit the following preamble and resolutions for your consideration:

"Whereas, The anthracite coal operators have posted notices offering an advance of ten per cent. over wages formerly paid and have signified their willingness to adjust our grievances with their employes.

"Whereas, They have failed to specify the length of time this advance would remain in force, and have also failed to abolish the sliding scale method of determining wages, we would recommend:

"That this convention accept an advance of ten per cent., providing the operators will continue its payment until April 1, 1901, and will abolish the sliding scale in the Lehigh and Schuylkill regions, the scale of wages in the last two named districts to remain stationary at ten per cent. above the present basis price, and that the companies will agree to adjust other grievances complained of with committees of their own employes.

"Should this proposition be unacceptable to the operators, we recommend that the convention propose that all questions at issue be submitted to a fair and impartial board of arbitration.

"We further recommend that under no circumstances whatever should there be a resumption of work at any of the collieries until the operators signify their acceptance of this proposition and you are notified officially that the strike is ended and all return to work in a body on the same day."

Judging by the unanimity of the miners in accepting the above resolution and by the determined stand taken by the operators it is believed that a long contest between the strikers and the mine owners is not unlikely. There was great enthusiasm in the convention when the counter proposition to the operators was carried and three cheers were given for President Mitchell. The resolutions were drafted by a committee of 13, appointed at the morning session, of which the national president was chairman.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 16.—The striking miners of the Wyoming valley are anxiously waiting to hear what answer the operators will make to the demands of the Scranton convention. There is a hopeful feeling among the men that the concessions asked for will be granted, but nobody feels sure of an early settlement, and there will be no relief from the present anxiety until some definite information is received from the coal magnates in New York.

WILL TRY ARBITRATION.

Powers Will Submit Conflicting Points in Chinese Settlement to International Court.

Washington, Oct. 15.—The Russian suggestion that the international court of arbitration of The Hague be given jurisdiction over divergencies of views arising on the question of Chinese indemnities was submitted to Secretary Hay by M. de Wollant, the Russian charge d'affaires in Washington, in a note on October 3. It has received the adherence of the American, the French and the Russian governments, thus giving the suggestion the approval of three of the foremost powers, and strong assurance of its general adoption.

The movement promises to give the first practical realization to the czar's movement in bringing about the international congress of The Hague. The court of arbitration has received the approval of the various governments represented at The Hague, and its formal organization is in progress. The importance the United States attaches to it is indicated by the choice of ex-President Harrison and ex-Senator George Gray, of Delaware, as the American members of the tribunal.

BATS LAID ASIDE.

Season of the National Baseball League Closes with Brooklyn as Champion.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The playing of the National Baseball league closed Sunday with the game at St. Louis. Brooklyn wins the championship with a total of 82 games won and 54 lost. The following table shows the number of games won and lost and the percentage of the clubs:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Per ct.
Brooklyn	82	54	.603
Pittsburgh	79	60	.568
Philadelphia	75	63	.543
Boston	66	72	.478
Chicago	65	75	.464
St. Louis	65	75	.454
Cincinnati	62	76	.450
New York	60	78	.435

Brooklyn and Pittsburgh will now play a post series of games for the world's championship and a $500 trophy.

The Mother of Lincoln.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 16.—Gov. Mount has received a deed to the 16 acres of land in Spencer county surrounding the grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, the mother of Abraham Lincoln. The deed conveys the land from the county commissioners of Spencer county to the Nancy Hanks Lincoln Memorial association, of which the governor is president. The work on the monument has begun, and will, it is believed, be completed this fall, when dedicatory services will be held.

Indicted.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 13.—Capt. Charles Holmes, who was in charge of the yacht Iuler, which foundered off this port July 7, has been indicted for manslaughter by the federal grand jury. Holmes is charged with criminal carelessness in handling the yacht.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Full List of the Famous Americans Given a Place on Its Tablets.

New York, Oct. 13.—The election in the Hall of Fame contest was concluded Friday, when the senate of the New York university assembled and passed upon the list of eligibles submitted to that body by the committee, which for the last three days has been counting the votes. The total number of names submitted to the 100 judges was 252. Though the standard of eligibility had been placed as low as 51 votes, only 15 of the nominees had reached that standard. It was the names of such nominees that were submitted to the senate and that body, in which is vested the power of absolute and peremptory veto, on this occasion, confined itself to simple confirmation of the committee's findings. According to this decision the following famous men were accorded a place on the tablets of the Hall of Fame:

George Washington, 97 (the full vote); Abraham Lincoln, 96; Daniel Webster, 96; Benjamin Franklin, 94; U. S. Grant, 92; John Marshall, 91; Thomas Jefferson, 90; Ralph Waldo Emerson, 86; Henry W. Longfellow, 94; Washington Irving, 82; Jonathan Edwards, 82; David G. Farragut, 79; Samuel F. B. Morse, 79; Henry Clay, 74; George Peabody, 72; Nathaniel Hawthorne, 72; Robert E. Lee, 68; Peter Cooper, 68; Horace Mann, 67; Henry Ward Beecher, 66; Eli Whitney, 66; James Kent, 65; Joseph Storey, 64; John Adams, 61; William Ellery Channing, 58; James Audubon, 57; Elias Howe, 53; William Morris Hunt, 52; Gilbert Stuart, 52; Asa Gray, 51.

AMBUSHED BY BOERS.

Party of Engineers Attacked and Capt. Stewart Killed and Others Wounded and Captured.

London, Oct. 12.—The following dispatch has been received from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, Wednesday, Oct. 10.—An engine with a truck conveying a party of engineers belonging to Paget's rifl. brigade, while proceeding, yesterday, to Kaapmuiden, was ambushed by Boers. Capt. Stewart, with 40 men of the rifle brigade, went to their support. The casualties, unfortunately, were heavy. Stewart and one private were killed, Capt. Paget, Lieut. Stuebbs and five engineers were wounded and Lieut. Sewell and ten of the rifle brigade were made prisoners. De Lisle's mounted men and colonials, after three days' fighting, have driven De Wet north of the Vaal, near Venterskroon. De Wet has been assuring the burghers that Europe would stop the war October 10. The Boers were thus buoyed with the hope that something would intervene to end the war in their favor. I trust they now realize now futile were their expectations."

Cape Town, Oct. 15.—The Boers are very active in the Kroonstad district. Gen. De Wet has proclaimed that burghers who refuse to fight will be made prisoners of war. Boer commandos continually harassed the British column while marching from Lindley to Kroonstad.

FATAL RAILWAY WRECKS.

Three Men Killed and Five Injured in Disasters on Sunday Near Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—In two railroad wrecks three men were killed and five persons injured in the vicinity of Chicago Sunday. The most serious accident of the two was the ditching of the New York and Boston express on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad in South Chicago. It was caused by an open switch. W. H. Jerough, fireman, of Elkhart, Ind., and George Douglas, a tramp, of Cleveland, O., were killed. Three men were injured. At Edgemoor, Ind., the rails spread beneath a heavy Baltimore & Ohio freight train, demolishing two engines and wrecking the front portion of the train. A brakeman was killed and two others injured.

Engine Blows Up.

St. Louis, Oct. 13.—A special from Mexico, Mo., to the Post Dispatch says: Engine No. 769, which was hauling the east-bound passenger train on the Chicago & Alton railroad, at the usual speed, exploded near Curryville, about 30 miles east of this city, early Friday, and was blown almost to atoms. John Mason, colored porter of Roodhouse, Ill., had his head cut off. Engineer Patrick Markey and Fireman Crawford Wheeler, both of Slater, Mo., were badly burned about the head and legs, and Mrs. William Glasscock, of Hannibal, Mo.; W. E. Eckler, of Kansas City.; Dr. J. J. Kincaid, of Bowling Green Mo., and a colored porter named Lindsley were more or less hurt. Fifty yards of track was torn up and trains delayed for several hours. It is not known what caused the explosion.

Killed at a Crossing.

Newcastle, Pa., Oct. 15.—A terrible grade crossing accident in which three persons were instantly killed and one probably fatally injured occurred Saturday night at Robinson's Crossing, about five miles west of this place. Four people occupied a double seated rig which was struck by passenger train No. 16, the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie east-bound flyer. The team escaped, but the buggy was demolished and three of the occupants literally ground to pieces.

Steel Mills Close.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Two thousand five hundred employes of the Illinois Steel company are out of employment owing to the closing down of two departments at the South Chicago works Saturday. High officials of the company conflict in assigning reasons for the shutdown. President E. J. Buffington attributes it to lack of business, while his general superintendent, Charles H. McCullough, stated that the shutdown was due to need of repairs

Port Simon, Colombia, Burned.

Panama, Colombia, Oct. 16. — Dispatches from Costa Rica tell of the almost total destruction by fire of Port Limon, the principal port of the republic. The business section of the city was entirely wiped out. The fire started Saturday night and very soon got beyond control. Building after building and block after block were swept by the flames and in a short time more than $2,000,000 worth of property was burned up.

Many Towns Destroyed.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 15.—A special dispatch to the Times from Tacoma, Wash., says: A typhoon caused great damage last month on the coasts of Formosa and southern China. Numerous towns were destroyed. Nineteen hundred houses were washed away or inundated at Taipeh, Formosa, and many lives lost.

HELP FOR WOMEN

WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by

MRS. ELLA RICE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. If you are sick, write and get her advice; her address is Lynn, Mass.

VOTE FOR THESE

Issues Involved in Minnesota Demand Support For the Reform Ticket.

Continuation of Gov. Lind's Administration a Benefit to All Citizens.

Brief Biographical Sketch of Each Candidate of the Allied Parties.

There are issues involved in this campaign peculiar to the people of Minnesota that demand earnest consideration. Taxation, care of public lands, administration of grain service and regulation of railroad rates are all questions demanding that careful administration which the past two years have demonstrated they will receive at the hands of John Lind, to whose able efforts should be added those of every nominee on the ticket of the allied parties. Voters of Minnesota secure this by voting for every man on the ticket whose biography is given briefly herewith.

JOHN LIND.

To be elected governor of the state of Minnesota at any time is not a small honor; to be the first man elected to the place in opposition to the Republican party organization is even a more signal victory; to be chosen above and beyond partisan lines by the discriminating judgment of his fellow citizens, at a time when all the other nominees of the opposing party, save the gubernatorial, were elected by more or less handsome majorities, is a distinction such as has been accorded to few men in any state. It was under such circumstances that John Lind was inaugurated governor of Minnesota in January, 1899.

Governor Lind was born at Kanna, province of Smaland, Sweden, March 25, 1854. The family emigrated to America in 1867 when John was 13 years of age, and settled in Goodhue county, Minn. Here young John, laboring to assist in the support of the family, lost his left hand by an accident which, perhaps, turned the current of his career, as now, ill-fitted to compete with his fellows in the material world, he was urged to more assiduity in the pursuit of his studies. He spent as much of his time at school as possible and at 16 he was granted a certificate entitling him to teach in the public schools. He taught one year in Sibley county, but not being satisfied with the compensation in a new country at that time, he, in 1873, took up his residence in New Ulm, where he has since resided, respected and honored among men. By the dint of hard study, industry and strict economy, he was able to attend the State university in 1875 and 1876, having in mind then the practice of law. Utilizing all his opportunities for private study and privileged as he was to work in the office of a New Ulm practitioner, he was admitted to the bar immediately upon leaving the university at the age of 21. In 1877 he began the practice of law and, taking an active interest in public life, was chosen superintendent of schools of Brown county. This position he held for two years, declining a renomination in order that he might devote himself entirely to the profession upon the adoption of which he had now fully determined, namely, the law. In 1881, under the administration of Garfield and Arthur, he was made receiver of the land office at Tracy, Lyon county, which position he held until the election of Grover Cleveland, still being able, however, to care for his private practice at New Ulm. Mr. Lind's natural talent and diligence made him a name more than local, and his prosecution of several suits, notably those against railroad companies, won him not a little renown. He was active in the councils of the Republican party, and in 1886 he was nominated to represent the Second district in congress. The Second district then comprised 20 counties—practically all of Southwestern Minnesota. That was a hard fought campaign, but Mr. Lind was elected by a splendid plurality. Two years later he was renominated and again elected, his adversary this time being Colonel Morton S. Wilkinson, a veteran leader, who had been one of Minnesota's three representatives in the house from 1869 to 1871, and United States senator during the war. He took an active interest in the affairs of the Indians and secured the passage of a bill establishing seven Indian schools in various parts of the country, one of them being located at Pipestone, in this state. Another sphere of work of local importance was the pushing of some old claims for the depredations of the Indians during the outbreak of 1862. He secured the payment of many of these for the people of the Second district who had suffered during that uprising. One of the greatest economies which he secured to the people of the state, however, was the passage of the bill for the reorganization of the federal courts of the district of Minnesota. Previous to its passage all sessions of the United States courts in this state had been held at St. Paul, entailing long sittings, delays in trials and long journeys, increasing the cost to litigants living remote from the capital. Mr. Lind's bill provided for terms as now held at Minneapolis, Mankato, Winona and Fergus Falls, as well as in St. Paul. Mr. Lind was a strenuous fighter for the integrity and enforcement of the interstate commerce act in its efforts to prevent discriminations in favor of persons or places. He had added to it amendments which made it possible for the commission to procure evidence more efficiently, and also made several battles in the courts to secure for the millers in the smaller centers of the state, rates more fair when compared with the millers of Minneapolis, who had been granted certain special privileges. Mr. Lind was instrumental in securing a great reform in railroad management and equipment, which is saving human life and limb hourly. That is, the automatic coupler and power-brake bill, so called, which was passed, and directed all railroads to provide their cars with automatic couplers of uniform type, and to have at least a certain number of cars of each train equipped with air or other power brakes, so as to obviate the use of hand brakes, which are very dangerous in icy or sleety weather. This bill was opposed by a strong and insistent lobby, led by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, but after a hard contest the lobby was beaten and Mr. Lind's bill became a law. Another bill of commercial value to the Northwest made Minneapolis a port of entry. Mr. Lind was a conceded authority in the house on the subjects concerned with the public lands, of so much importance to the West. In the contest over the tariff Mr. Lind was a hard fighter, and showed his independence by declining to be bound by the declarations of the Republican caucus. He fought the tariff on lumber because, as he said, it committed the nation to the idiocy of destroying its own forests rather than those of other people. He fought for free sugar, for free materials for making binding twine and for free twine. In 1890 Mr. Lind was elected a third time, defeating General James H. Baker of Garden City. In 1892 he declined to become a candidate again, for personal reasons, and the present congressman, James T. McCleary, was elected to succeed Mr. Lind. The platform adopted at Mankato accorded the retiring congressman this compliment:

"We recognize in Hon. John Lind, our present member of congress, an able and efficient representative, and trust that his voluntary retirement from the field of active legislative duty will be only temporary."

In 1893 Governor Nelson appointed Mr. Lind, who had returned to the practice of law at New Ulm, a regent of the University of Minnesota. Mr. Lind was an early recruit to the financial policy espoused by Senator Teller and other Silver Republicans. In 1896 the Democratic and Peoples party nominated him for governor and he made a splendid run, David M. Clough defeating him by only a small majority of about 3,000 votes. In the spring of 1899, when President McKinley called for volunteers to defend the national honor and avenge the destruction of the Maine, John Lind, at the sacrifice of his law practice, tendered his services to Governor Clough in any capacity in which he might be available. Governor Clough, at the request of Colonel Bobleter, in command of the Twelfth Minnesota, made Mr. Lind regimental quartermaster, with the rank of first lieutenant. His record as quartermaster was attested by his popularity with the regiment, which had a chance at Chattanooga to compare with other standards the efficiency of Mr. Lind's arduous labors in keeping the men well equipped and provisioned. It was while the Twelfth regiment was encamped at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga National park, that the Democratic, Peoples and Silver Republican parties, in state convention, unanimously nominated Mr. Lind for governor. It was his desire, after the defeat of 1896, not to again enter the field of politics, but so unanimous was the call, and so insistent were the friends who had supported him so warmly in previous campaigns, that Mr. Lind at last put aside his desire for political retirement and consented to make the race, subject to the necessary limitations of his military service. With the surrender of Santiago and the subsequent return of the Minnesota troops from the South, Mr. Lind was enabled to make two short series of speeches in a few of the cities and towns of the state. There has rarely been such a series of popular demonstrations of personal admiration and sympathy. These tours, brief as they were, were splendid auguries of the magnificent vote which the men of Minnesota gave him on election day.

This is the public and political career, epitomized, of the man who has fought his way, despite rebuffs and temporary reverses, to attain success at last and a full realization of the fact that "he cannot appreciate victory who has not suffered defeat." Governor Lind's energies have not been spent alone in politics and public affairs. He has had a lucrative practice at the bar and had not sacrificed it in the public service. New Ulm is the center of a thriving farming community, prettily situated in the picturesque valley of the Minnesota, and is such a town as might well be selected for the home of a man of Governor Lind's character—earnest, faithful and unaffected. Governor Lind has been identified with some of the best institutions of New Ulm. He has served as director in the Brown County bank, and was one of the committee of five New Ulm men who had charge of the construction of the Minneapolis, New Ulm and Southwestern railroad and other enterprises that have materially benefitted his home town.

THOMAS J. MEIGHEN.

Thomas J. Meighen, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for lieutenant governor, was born in Fillmore county, Minn., 45 years ago, his parents coming from Pennsylvania. Mr. Meighen's business has been largely farming and mercantile.

Mr. Meighen has been active in the work of the Farmers' Alliance of this state since its inception and was vice president of the State Farmers' Alliance for several years.

While Mr. Meighen's antecedents were Republican, he has been connected with the Peoples party since its organization and was a delegate to the national convention at Cincinnati which gave birth to the Peoples party in 1891.

Mr. Meighen was chairman of the Peoples party state committee when the party was first organized in this state in 1891, which position he held for three years. He was a member of the national committee in 1896 and is now the head of the Peoples party national committee of this state, having been selected for that position at the national convention at Sioux Falls last May.

Although an active worker in all reform movements Mr. Meighen has uniformly declined to be a candidate for office, his candidacy for lieutenant governor being his second departure from that rule, he having been a candidate for congress for the First congressional district of this state in 1894.

He was appointed as a member of the state board of equalization by Governor Lind, and his record on that board is a matter of public knowledge.

Mr. Meighen says: "In my advocacy of the principles of the Peoples party I do not claim to be wholly unselfish. I have made a close study of political economy and am forced to the conclusion that my interests, as one largely engaged in farming, will be best subserved if the principles advocated by the Peoples party are adopted."

M. E. NEARY.

M. E. Neary, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for secretary of state, was born in Oshkosh, Wis., in 1869. He received a common school education, and later on engaged in the gas business which he studied extensively and thoroughly. Being possessed of a boundless energy he also had the happy faculty of making a host of friends that saw in him one of those rare minds that seem almost to create themselves and are bound to work their irresistible way through all obstacles and disadvantages.

In 1887 he removed to Minneapolis, where he continued to work in the gas business, and soon formed an ever widening circle of loyal and enthusiastic friends. In 1895 he was appointed first assistant gas inspector in the Minneapolis city gas department, a position which he still holds. He was the first president of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Council, and at present he is serving his fourth term as president of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor.

He has always had a reputation for being conservative in dealing with the labor question, while the confidence which the laboring men have in him is best indicated by the positions of trust and honor to which he has been elected in their organizations. To his many friends all over the state his name stands for honesty and integrity, for calm level headed judgment and undaunted energy.

HENRY C. KOERNER.

Mr. Henry C. Koerner, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for the office of state treasurer, was born in Shakopee, Minn., Dec. 10, 1857. He is well qualified for this office, having received a good common school and college education, and being a thorough bookkeeper and an expert accountant.

In 1874 Mr. Koerner engaged in general merchandise business in his native city. In 1880 he removed to the village of Jordan, where he continued in the general merchandise business. While at Jordan he served three years as a member of the village council. The popularity he attained at this time is attested by the fact that in 1886 he was elected without opposition as auditor of Scott county, which position he held continuously for a period of 12 years. He also served as alderman of the city of Shakopee for eight years, and was president of the city council for four years. He also served as clerk of the school board for a term of years.

In January, 1899, he was appointed by General E. M. Pope deputy public examiner of Minnesota, which position he is holding at the present time.

Mr. Koerner is married, and at present is residing with his family in the Second ward in the city of St. Paul. Mr. Koerner has a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the state, and can point to personal friends in every county in Minnesota, and be assured that they will stand by him and work for his election, and the election of those on the state ticket with him. He is a thoroughly popular man, a man of the people whom everybody is glad to meet, with whom everybody is glad to do business, who has made hosts of friends wherever he has been; but he is best liked where he is best known, in in his home at Jordan, Minn.

ROBERT C. SAUNDERS.

Robert C. Saunders, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for attorney general, was born in Campbell county, Va., Dec. 24, 1864. He studied law at the University of Virginia, that great institution of learning founded by Thomas Jefferson. In 1889 he was graduated from that university with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. In the spring of 1890 he came to St. Paul and took a position with the West Publishing company as law editor, which he held until March, 1891, when he resigned and removed to Hinckley, Pine county, Minn., and commenced the active practice of law. At the election of 1892 he was elected county attorney of Pine county. In 1887 the state legislature had passed a law (Laws 1887, Ch. 128) providing for the taxation of any interest in exempt railway land grants alienated by the railway companies. The St. Paul and Duluth Railroad company had sold the pine timber on its land grants to various lumber companies and persons, reserving the land. The timber, though sold, had never been taxed, while standing on the exempt lands, and it was for the purpose of reaching this standing timber that the 1887 law was enacted. However, the state and county officials had never even attempted to enforce the provisions of the act. In Pine county the taxes had been duly levied by the proper officials, the various companies interested had filed answers, and there the whole proceeding had stopped and lain dead for four years when Mr. Saunders assumed office. He immediately brought the cases to trial, prevailed in the district court and also in the supreme court to which the cases were appealed. The result was the collection of about $12,000 of back taxes from the lumber companies and the enforcement of taxes against standing pine on exempt land grants ever since. After the decision of the supreme court the officials in the other counties in the northern part of the state took the matter up and enforced the collection of the taxes in their several counties. The net result was the collection of thousands of dollars of taxes from standing pine on exempt railway lands under an act of the legislature which no one but Mr. Saunders attempted to enforce, and which had been ignored and neglected by all of the county attorneys in the counties interested, and by two attorneys general until he went into office.

In 1894 Mr. Saunders lost everything he had in the great Hinckley fire of Sept. 1 of that year and had to start life again. Undiscouraged he reopened his law office at Hinckley in January, 1895, and practiced there till 1899, when, having been again elected county attorney at the 1898 election, he removed with his family to Pine City, the county seat, where he now resides.

In 1886 the town of Hinckley bonded itself for $12,000 in aid of the Kettle River railroad, a short line of five miles from the Duluth road to Sandstone. The road was built but soon abandoned by the company, and was finally absorbed by the Eastern railway of Minnesota, which tore up the track and utterly dismantled the road. The town employed Mr. Saunders to obtain redress and in 1894 he instituted litigation which finally resulted in 1900 in the recovery of about $30,000 damages from the Eastern Railway company and the stockholders of the Kettle River Railroad company for the abandonment of a railroad which had been aided by township bonds.

In 1897 Mr. Saunders was employed as special counsel by the board of county commissioners of Pine county to enforce the collection of taxes on logs cut in Pine county and succeeded.

In addition to the cases mentioned, Mr. Saunders has been counsel in a number of cases of importance, involving matters of taxation and other matters of public concern, and has been highly successful.

He has made the corporations operating in his part of the state respect him as a lawyer and fear him as an advocate of the people's rights.

P. M. RINGDAL.

P. M. Ringdal, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner with four years term of office, was born in Goodhue county, Minn., in 1861. He attended the public schools of his native county, and St. Olaf's academy at Northfield, Minn. In 1880 he entered the railroad service as telegraph operator, continued in the service in various capacities until 1890, when he engaged in the manufacture and sale of marble and granite at Crookston, Minn., in which business he is still engaged at the present time.

In politics Mr. Ringdal was an independent up to 1890, when he joined the Alliance movement, and has been active in the work of the Peoples Party ever since it organized. The strength of his party in his part of the state is due in a large measure to his energetic and efficient work.

In 1894 Mr. Ringdal was elected to the state senate. In 1898 he was the candidate of the Peoples and Democratic parties for congress from the Seventh district, but was defeated. In January, 1899, he was appointed member of the railroad and warehouse commission for a three years' term of office. The commission having been made elective by the last legislature, his term was incidentally reduced to two years, in order to make possible the election of the whole commission, two members for four years, and one member for two years. In recognition of his effective work in behalf of the people of the state while serving on the railroad commission, Mr. Ringdal was nominated by the Democratic and Peoples parties for one of the four-year terms to succeed himself. Mr. Ringdal is at the present time chairman of the railroad and warehouse commission, and it is largely due to his energy and efficiency that the commission has been able to accomplish such excellent results in the interests of the people of Minnesota.

S. M. OWEN.

S. M. Owen, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner for two years, is so well known to the people of Minnesota that an extended notice of his life, his sentiments, his sympathies and his work is not necessary here. Two campaigns as candidate for governor of the state, and one for congress in his district, all of which were close and exciting, failed to reveal anything in his life, his record or his character that in the remotest degree reflected upon him unfavorably, or evidenced his unfitness in any respect for the high positions for which he stood. His life has been devoted to an impartial study of economic and sociological subjects, and that study has specially qualified him for the important office for which he is now a candidate.

While his sympathies are with the mass of the people, he never desired to see them benefitted at the cost of injustice to any class of citizens nor to any interest. He believes that the whole people can be benefitted by a change in existing systems, and by a fearless and faithful execution of laws, without being unjust to the beneficiaries of the wrongs that he would like to to see modified if they cannot be destroyed. All readers of his journal, Farm, Stock and Home, and they are found in every neighborhood in the state, know how intensely interested Mr. Owen is in the development of agricultural interests, and they know that he believes and teaches that farmers ought to be talked to of things other than plowing and sowing, reaping and mowing, and that transportation, markets, cost of supplies, systems of government, taxation, etc., have quite as much to do with farm prosperity as systems of cultivation or good crops.

T. J. KNOX.

T. J. Knox, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner, was born at Covington, in the state of Pennsylvania. His parents removed to the state (then territory) of Minnesota when he was a small boy and settled on a farm in the county of Fillmore, where he grew to manhood. Later he studied law at Rochester, Minn., first in the office of C. T. Benedict, Esq., and later in the office of Stearns & Start, and was admitted to the bar at that city in October, 1871.

In 1872 Mr. Knox removed to and began the practice of law at Jackson, Minn., where he has ever since resided, attending closely to the work of his profession. While he has held a number of county offices, he has never taken an active part in politics and has never been an applicant for office.

At the expiration of the term of Judge Mills in January last as railroad and warehouse commissioner Mr. Knox was appointed by Governor Lind as his successor, which office he has since held.

PLEDGED TO REFORM

VOTERS SHOULD SUPPORT ALLIED NOMINEES FOR CONGRESS.

Record of the Republican Party on the Trust Question Proof That No Relief Can Be Hoped For Unless a Change Is Made in the National House of Representatives — Minnesota Candidates of the Allied Parties.

The Kansas City convention pledged the Democratic party to an increasing warfare in nation, state and city against private monopoly in every form. With control over interstate commerce and with the power of national taxation, congress is vested with full power to throttle trusts. The Republican national and state platforms are proof that trusts are the product of Republican policies. Relief can only be secured through a congress opposed to Republicanism, to secure which all Democratic and Peoples Party voters in Minnesota should work so that this great commonwealth will send a solid delegation to the next house pledged to reform.

L. L. BROWN.

L. L. Brown, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress in the First district, was born on a farm in Winona county, Minn., 40 years ago. He lived on a farm and attended public school until he was about 16 years of age, when he entered Galesville college, Wisconsin, where he prepared for the university. He entered the University of Wisconsin at the age of 20 and graduated with the class of '84, taking the degree of B. A.

After graduating, Mr. Brown taught school for one year in Winona county, and afterwards studied law in the office of Hon. T. Simpson in Winona. In 1887 he was admitted to the bar, and afterwards formed a partnership with the Hon. John A. Keyes, now of Duluth. This partnership continued until Mr. Keyes left Winona, and after that Mr. Brown practiced law alone until 1893, when he formed a partnership with W. D. Abbott, which still continues under the name of Brown & Abbott.

His first political work was at the University of Madison, when he stumped the county in the interest of his party before he was 21 years of age. He is a popular and influential man, and his nomination is regarded by those who know him as a very wise one.

MARVIN E. MATTHEWS.

Marvin E. Matthews of Marshall, Lyon county, the Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress in the Second Minnesota district, was born near Jamestown, N. Y., Sept. 25, 1849, and removed with his parents to this state in the spring of 1855 and settled on a farm near Rochester.

After leaving the country school he continued his studies in the high school of Rochester. From 17 years of age he worked as a farm hand by the month, chopped wood in the forest through the coldest winter weather, later taught school, and thus made his way in the world unaided.

He studied law in the office of Hon. R. A. Jones at Rochester, and in 1872 he went to New Ulm, Minn., where he accepted the position of teacher in the high school. While thus engaged he also studied law in the office of George W. Kuhlman until the fall of 1873, at which time he opened a law office and practiced his profession at that place until 1876, when he went to Marshall, where he has continued the practice of law ever since. He graduated in the law department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1881, and has since been one of the foremost practitioners of the state.

Mr. Matthews is a life-long Democrat, is a recognized leader in political circles and is now prominently connected with the several Democratic organizations of the state. He has served as county attorney and is receiver of public moneys at the United States land office at Marshall, Minn.

ALBERT SCHALLER.

Albert Schaller, the Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for congress from the Third district, was born in Chicago, Ills., May 20, 1856. When but 6 weeks old he was brought by his parents to Hastings, where they took up their abode, and have since resided continuously. He was educated in the public schools of Hastings. Having completed his common branches his parents sent Albert abroad, where he was tutored by able professors in Germany and France.

Returning to his native land the young man was sent to the St. Louis school of law, from which he graduated with honors. He came directly to Hastings and there hung out his shingle and began the practice of his profession.

His first office holding was in 1879, when he was elected to the office of county attorney, which position he held with honor for 11 consecutive years. The next office which Mr. Schaller was elected to was that of state senator from the Thirtieth district, in 1894.

Senator Schaller's successful fight on the state insane asylum during the last term is common history and needs to be only mentioned as a testimony of his record as a conscientious, able and tireless representative of the people.

DR. A. J. STONE.

Dr. Alexander Johnston Stone, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for representative in congress from the Fourth congressional district of Minnesota, was born in Maine in 1845. His distinctive life profession has been that of a physician and surgeon. He studied the science of medicine at the Berkshire (Mass.) Medical, Bowdoin and Harvard colleges in this country, and in some of the most renowned universities of Europe. Graduating with the degree of M. D. in 1867, he was for a year or more thereafter associated in practice with Professor H. R. Storer of Boston, but in January, 1869, he came to Minnesota and located at Stillwater. In the fall of 1870, he removed to St. Paul, where he has since resided.

DR. A. J. STONE.

Upon coming to St. Paul in 1870, Dr. Stone began the publication of The Northwestern Medical and Surgical Journal. In time this journal became The Northwestern Lancet, which is still published with Dr. Stone as editor. In 1871 he organized the St. Paul Preparatory School of Medicine, which later became the St. Paul Medical College. He is a member of the faculty of this department, as professor of the diseases of women.

Dr. Stone will make an ideal representative in congress from the St. Paul district. No other man better understands the needs and interests of the district, and no other man can take better care of them.

S. A. STOCKWELL.

Mr. S. A. Stockwell, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress in the Fifth district, was born in Anoka, Minn., in 1857. He attended the public schools of his native town. After graduation he taught school for a number of years. Leaving the profession of teaching, he entered the employ of the American Express company, and served them faithfully for 10 years. He is at present general agent for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia. He has been a resident and tax payer in the Fifth district for 20 years. Mr. Stockwell was elected to the state house of representatives in 1890 and again in 1896. In the session of 1891 he introduced and secured the passage of the Anti-Pinkerton law, and a bill for an appropriation of $5,000, which made possible the creation of the summer school, which is so much prized by teachers.

He was elected to the state senate in 1898 and took a very active part in all legislation for the good of the people and was a strong supporter of the increase in the gross earnings tax on railroads.

HENRY TRUELSON.

Henry Truelson, Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress from the Sixth district, emigrated to the United States from the northwestern part of Germany in 1866 and located in the upper peninsula of Michigan. In 1869 he came to Duluth, where he served as alderman for a term of eight years. In 1881 he was elected sheriff of St. Louis county for a two years' term. Later on he was appointed as a member of the board of public works and served as its president for a term of three years. In 1896 he was elected mayor of the city of Duluth, was re-elected in '98, and served until March, 1900.

As a public officer Mr. Truelson's best efforts have always been in behalf of the people at large, to protect them against special privileges and corporate power, and to secure justice for all. This is especially exemplified by his fight against the gas and water companies, whereby he saved the people of Duluth upwards of a million dollars. His fight against the encroachments of the Long Distance Telephone company is another instance, as likewise the reduction of the cost of electric lights from $120 to $85 a piece, which reduction was secured through the efforts of Mr. Truelson, while he was mayor of Duluth.

In fact on every question that arose during his two terms as mayor, Henry Truelson was a power of strength on the side of good government, as honest, economical and just in public office as in private life, and always and everywhere, the fighting friend of the people.

M. J. DALY.

M. J. Daly, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for congress in the Seventh district, was born in St. Paul on March 31, 1861. In 1866 the family moved to Carver county. With one or two winters of study away from home, young Daly remained on the farm until he was 21 years of age. He went to school winters and during the summers took his full share of the farm work. It was during this formative period of his life that he imbibed those feelings of respect for the farmer's calling and of sympathy for the hard conditions which surround him and that desire to do all in his power to relieve those conditions, which have ever since been such a marked characteristic of Mr. Daly's career.

When he was 15 years old he went to Minneapolis to school, attending the

M. J. DALY.

Minneapolis high school and the well known Marvin academy.

He entered the law department of the state university of Iowa, at Iowa City, worked hard and graduated the following year. He was admitted to the bar in 1886 with high honors. Immediately afterwards he opened an office at Perham, Otter Tail county, and has lived there ever since.

In 1898 he was nominated by the reform forces for state senator, in the senatorial district of Otter Tail county, and elected in spite of a coalition against him, led by ex-Congressman H. E. Boen, who induced an independent candidate to run in the hope of defeating him. His record in the state senate was a good one. He took high rank from the outset, and was on the side of the people against corporations and rottenness from start to finish.

THE BRYAN ELECTORS

MEN TO BE SUPPORTED BY THE MINNESOTA VOTERS.

Questions Before the American People This Year of the Greatest Importance. Right of Self-Government Endangered by the Success of the Republican National Ticket as Evidenced by Our Record in the Philippines.

One great question now before the American people in this campaign is the question of right of self-government. President McKinley and his supporters seek to set aside the doctrine of self-government and to establish in its stead the ancient heresy of the right of government by brute force. No other interpretation of our attitude toward the Filipinos is possible.

In this perilous hour who shall answer? On whose hands the blood of the century? Voters of Minnesota answer at the polls by voting for Bryan and Stevenson electors.

DR. RUDOLPH SCHIFFMAN.

Dr. Rudolph Schiffman, one of the Democratic-Peoples Party candidates for elector-at-large, was born in St. Louis 55 years ago. He was taking a medical course at the St. Louis Medical college when the war broke out. Located as he was in one of the storm centers of the conflict, he promptly responded to the call for Union troops, enlisting as a private in Company D, Eighth Missouri cavalry.

After the war was over he resumed

DR. RUDOLPH SCHIFFMAN.

his medical studies and graduated from the St. Louis Medical college in 1867. Shortly after he was appointed assistant surgeon in the United States army and assigned to General Hancock's expedition against the Western tribe of Indians. This position he resigned after a year's service and removed to St. Paul, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine, and where he has ever since resided.

MICHAEL R. PRENDERGAST.

Michael R. Prendergast, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector-at-large, was born in County Cork, Ireland. His parents, with a large family, settled in Connecticut in 1848. In 1855 the family removed to St. Paul. Michael was apprenticed to the printing trade in the office of the St. Paul Daily Times. In 1862 he enlisted in what afterwards became Company H, Tenth Minnesota Volunteers.

In the fall of 1873 Mr. Prendergast located in St. Paul and for nearly twenty years was associated with his brother in the business firm of Prendergast Bros. In 1891 the St. Paul stove works was established, largely by the efforts of Mr. Prendergast, who was the first vice president and manager of that great enterprise. Republican "prosperity" and trusts were largely the cause of its subseqent failure.

O. W. ANDERSON.

Dr. O. W. Anderson, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the First congressional district, was born in Lyster, Norway, and came to America in 1850, settling in Dane county, Wis.

In 1852 he moved with his father to Vernon county, Wis., and remained there until 1855 when he removed to Chicago where he studied medicine and pharmacy.

In the summer of 1861 he went to La Crosse, Wis., where he was employed as a pharmacist until the fall of 1863, when he settled in Rochester, Minn., where he has been engaged in the practice of pharmacy and medicine ever since, together with the establishment and manufacture of a line of medicines and pharmaceuticals that have become favorably known all over the Northwest, and are today staple household articles among the Scandinavians, making Dr. Anderson's name popular and well known among his countrymen throughout the Northwest.

GEORGE LESTER.

Mr. George Lester, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for presidential elector from the Second district, was born in Necedah, Wis., in 1857, received a good common school education and then attended the Spencerian college at Milwaukee, Wis. Afterwards he entered the employ of

GEORGE LESTER.

Bradford & Son of Necedah, Wis., (lumbermen) as bookkeeper.

His high character, energy and personal integrity won for him countless friends, and as a result he was elected register of deeds of Juneau county, Wis., on the Democratic ticket, although the county is strongly Republican.

He then went into the real estate business in lands in San Louis Park, Colo., with offices at Chicago and Denver. After this he entered the employ of C. L. Coleman, lumberman, at La Crosse, Wis., as traveling agent, and took charge of his business at Fairmont, Minn., in 1887, and has managed the same ever since.

way in 1853 and came to the United States in 1871, engaging in farming, lumbering and other business at various points in Wisconsin and Minnesota for a number of years.

In 1880 he located at Sacred Heart and engaged in general merchandise business, where he has since resided. He has served with ability in several local offices.

Mr. Ramsland is a believer in America and American institutions to the fullest extent and advocates "equal privileges to all and special privileges to none."

DANIEL ABERLE.

Daniel Aberle, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the Fourth congressional district, was born in the city of Mannheim, Germany, in 1848, and graduated from the high school of that city in 1867. He emigrated to the United States and located in Chicago, Ills., where he entered upon a commercial life which he has continued to the present time. In 1880 he located in St. Paul, and has ever since been actively and energetically connected with its business, social and political life and growth. Having joined the Democratic party early in life, he has been honored by the national organization by being appointed to its state central committee for five different terms, acting one term as treasurer. He was sent as a delegate to two national Democratic conventions, and has also been treasurer of the Democratic state organization during its existence.

FRED D. NOERENBERG.

Fred D. Noerenberg, the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector for the Fifth congressional district, resides at Markville, in the western portion of Hennepin county, though doing business at Minneapolis. He was born in 1845 in the northern part of Prussia, and came to this country in 1860, locating at St. Paul. He removed to Minneapolis in 1875, and engaged in the brewing business in which he has since continued. For several years he has been at the head of the Minneapolis Brewing Company, one of the largest industries of its kind in the Northwest.

FRED D. NOERENBERG.

He has always been a Democrat in politics but never been a candidate for office with the exception of having been on the legislative ticket at one time, and in 1898 he was a candidate for treasurer of Hennepin county.

JOHN JENSWOLD, JR.

John Jenswold, Jr., the Democratic-Peoples Party candidate for elector from the Sixth congressional district, is a practicing attorney at Duluth where since in 1888 he has had an extensive and constantly growing practice.

He is of Norwegian parentage, his parents coming to Greene county, Wis., when mere children. Here also John was born, but soon after removed to Zumbrota, Minn., where he lived until 1869. His parents then settled on an Iowa farm, where he grew up to manhood, receiving his education in the public institutions of that state. He studied law at the state university of Iowa, and soon after his graduation commenced the practice of his profession at Emmettsburg, Ia., being associated with Hon. T. W. Harrison and the partnership, so formed, continued until his removal to Duluth.

THOMAS C. HODGSON.

Thomas C. Hodgson, Democratic-Peoples Party nominee for elector from the Seventh congressional district, was born on the Isle of Man, Jan. 1, 1843. In 1884 he moved with his parents to the lead mining region in Northern Illinois, from which they removed to Dakota county, Minn., in 1854, and settled in what is now the town of Greenvale, near Northfield.

In 1862 Mr. Hodgson enlisted in Company F, Eighth regiment volunteers, under Captain Leonard Aldrich, and served with the regiment in almost all of its raids against the Indians in the Northwest and in the bloody battles of the South until he was mustered out, July 11, 1865.

In 1876 Mr. Hodgson removed to Herman. He was appointed chief deputy inspector of grain for St. Paul under Governor McGill in 1887, and held this position until he resigned in 1890, and is at present living at Elbow Lake.

COERCION!

SENSATIONAL CAMPAIGN OF COERCION AND INTIMIDATION.

Will Discharge Employes for Voting for Bryan—See That They Cannot Win by Fair Means, So They Determine to Win by Foul—Sensational Proceedings of Sound Money League—A New Burchard—Yellow Bow Stands for Coercion—Bureau Notes, Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 15, 1900.

The sensation of the week has been the meeting of the Sound Money League in Raudenbusch hall in this city and the campaign of coercion and intimidation which was there inaugurated.

The call for this meeting had been signed by a number of business men, mainly members of large wholesale houses, combines and syndicates, with hardly a sprinkling of middle class business men among them.

This call came from the class most directly concerned with the trusts and money powers that have determined to secure the election of McKinley, by fair means or foul.

When Bryan made his triumphal tour of the state and called forth such an overwhelming and irresistable display of enthusiasm that swept over the country like a tidal wave and carried everything before it, the Republican leaders realized that their cause was hopeless, and seeing that they could not win by fair means, they determined to fight by foul, and this meeting was one of the results.

The sentiments of the resolutions adopted at this meeting were extreme; but the speakers were positively rabid. The chief speaker of the evening was Mr. Grover, who was certainly plain spoken enough and left no ground for misunderstanding as to the purpose of the meeting. Among other things he defended government by injunction, such as was employed on the striking miners in Idaho. But it was Mr. Jesse Gregg of the firm of Nicholls & Dean that expressed it in all its brutal bluntness. Said Mr. Gregg:

"I was in New York last week, and passing down the street I was surprised to observe a large banner floating from a business house upon which was the inscription: 'Bryan's Traveling Men's Club.' In our firm we have 20 traveling men at work, and I do not know how but one of them is going to vote this fall, but I want to say to you gentlemen that if any one of these traveling men should vote for Bryan, and I knew it, I would discharge him immediately. Don't understand me to say that I would discharge him for being a Democrat, I would discharge him for being a damned fool. I would presume that any man who didn't have better sense than to vote for Bryan, didn't have sense enough to represent our business."

The audience received this speech with ringing applause, and thus approved the sentiments expressed and subscribed to them as their own.

The morning papers brought an account of the meeting and the speeches, and soon it became the all absorbing topic of the streets. Everywhere on the street corners groups of men were excitedly discussing it, and when the papers reached the outlying towns and country districts, telegrams and letters of inquiry began to pour in at the Democratic headquarters from all sides and very soon it became evident that in the excitement and interest aroused all over the state and adjoining states, this incident would surpass in sensational interest even the celebrated Burchard episode which defeated Blaine in '84.

Coming in the wake of Roosevelt's rabid speech here in the Auditorium, in which he put Democrats on a level with horsethieves, and made that famous assertion:

"They stand for lawlessness and disorder, for dishonor and dishonesty, for license and disaster at home, and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad," it has made St. Paul the storm center of the Burchardism of the present campaign, and shows more plainly than anything else to what desperate straits the Republican party of Minnesota feels itself reduced.

This speech of Gregg's harmonizes well with Roosevelt's famous or rather infamous speech here in the Auditorium, and the passage in Roosevelt's book, "Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail," (Century Co. 1899) in which he accuses the cowboys of drunkenness and rioting, yet declares that they are much better fellows and pleasanter companions than farmers and farm hands, and tells the world that the mechanics and laboring men of a great city are so far beneath those same cowboys whom he charges with drunkenness and rioting, that they are not even to be mentioned in the same breath. The passage reads literally as follows:

"WHEN DRUNK ON THE VILLAINOUS WHISKY OF THE FRONTIER TOWNS THEY CUT MADANTICS, RIDING THEIR HORSES INTO THE SALOONS, FIRING THEIR PISTOLS RIGHT AND LEFT, from boisterous light heartedness rather than from any viciousness and indulging too often in deadly shooting affrays brought on either by the accidental contact of the moment or on account of some long standing grudge, or perhaps because of bad blood between two ranches or localities; but except while on these sprees they are quiet, rather self-contained men, perfectly frank and simple, and on their own ground treat a stranger with the most whole souled hospitality, doing all in their power for him, and scorning to take any reward in return. Although prompt to resent an injury, they are not at all apt to be rude to outsiders, treating them with what can almost be called a grave courtesy. THEY ARE MUCH BETTER FELLOWS AND PLEASANTER COMPANIONS THAN SMALL FARMERS OR AGRICULTURAL LABORERS; NOR ARE THE MECHANICS AND WORKMEN OF A GREAT CITY TO BE MENTIONED IN THE SAME BREATH."

Yet this same Roosevelt, after offering such a gratuitous insult to the laboring man and farmer, poses as their special friend and would-be idol. To the same category belong Beveridge's fulminations telling the people that we are making a great mistake in setting Cuba free, as well as Mark Hanna's bumptious assertion, "There are no trusts."

These utterances furnish a glaring commentary on the character of their leaders, the futility of their logic, the utter hopelessness of their cause in a fair and open campaign. They can not win out on fair means, so they take to foul, and right here they show the worst kind of judgment in making their selections, and the mistakes they have made in this respect will prove their ruin.

Of those who had signed the call for this meeting, some of the most prominent were interviewed by a representative of the Press Bureau, and while they disclaimed any responsibility for the speeches made there, they endorsed the call and the resolutions adopted. However, when any society allows such utterances to be made and to pass without rebuke or protest, the public can not do otherwise than to see in such utterances an expression of the sentiments of that society and to hold the society and its individual members responsible for them.

The insolent arrogance of such a course can not be but condemned in the strongest and most emphatic terms. Is it any wonder that the blood of liberty loving American citizens should boil with indignation at such brutal methods of coercion and intimidation! If the money powers dare to come out with such shameless, barefaced brutality, to force men to vote against their convictions, it certainly forbodes ill for the laboring man and the middle classes, and everyone realizes that if such an affront can be offered and pass unheeded, our boasted American liberty will soon be a thing of the past and will be swallowed up by the money power in a rule so rapacious in its greed, so absolute in its disregard of human rights, that the rule of the Russian czar will seem a paternal blessing in comparison.

The Republicans at this meeting decided to wear as their emblem a yellow bow. This is the national color of Spain and China, and therefore awakens memories of rapacious greed, cruel injustice, bigotry and oppression.

The Democrats have chosen for their emblem a minature United States flag. The yellow bow fittingly stands for dictation, coercion and intimidation. The flag stands for the sentiment, "A free man and a free vote." Let us all wear and display the badge of freedom.

As a sample of the work done in the Democratic campaign, and the enthusiasm aroused, we give the following extract from a letter received at the Democratic headquarters from St. Cloud:

"Beginning Monday, we put up the greatest campaign that the Democratic party has ever had in this county. Truelson and Calhoun will speak all week, making three or four speeches a day. All the candidates on our county ticket will accompany the speakers.

"We have organized clubs in all the towns, and the meetings have been advertised thoroughly for the past two weeks. This is on old line Democratic county, and the fact that there is more interest here than ever before, argues well for the Democratic cause in general."

The Republicans of St. Paul decided to hold a grand mass meeting for the benefit of the German voters, and so they imported a speaker by the name of Donald from Iowa, who was to address them in German and do the Democrats up brown. And lo and behold! After all the blowing of horns and beating of drums, there were of all the 60,000 Germans in St. Paul just 197 that felt enough interest in a German Republican mass meeting, to take the trouble to be present.

It is a great thing to talk with sanctimonious unction about the Filipino and tell of all the blessings we are going to bestow upon him, but just put yourself in his place and consider how you would like it to have the constitution with its guarantee of rights and privileges withdrawn from the state of Minnesota, and the government of the state put into the hands of a military governor sent out here from Washington who would be responsible to no one but the president and have such laws proclaimed as the military governor with a big army at his back might see fit and have them carried out by force of arms.

With all the confidence in the government at Washington, and with all due respect for McKinley, there is yet not a single Democrat or Populist in the state of Minnesota that would submit to such a proposition, but would fight to the last ditch and to the last kopje, and there are mighty few Republicans in the state that wouldn't do the same.

Will the Republican papers kindly explain why the Republican legislature prevented the passage of the bill to raise the gross earnings tax of the railroads from 3 per cent to 4 per cent. Governor Lind and the Fusion members of the legislature did their utmost to secure the passage of this bill, but the Republicans, being in the majority, opposed and defeated it, and by taking such a stand they deprived the state of upwards of $2,000,000, even if a new legislature can be elected to act on this measure as soon as possible.

If the railroads had been obliged to pay in these $2,000,000, the people of the state would have had so much less to pay. Now if the Republicans are really such great friends of the people, why did they vote against this measure?

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Rate of Taxation.

The rate of taxation for the state revenue purposes has been fixed at 1.3 mills, which is a decrease of 1-10 of a mill from that of last year. The revenue rate has not been so low for a long time. In 1884 it was 1.3, and in 1881 it fell to 1.1, which was the lowest figure. There were then few state institutions and it is now contended that the rate this year is the lowest comparatively in the history of the state.

Last year the total assessed valuation of state property, real and personal, was $585,000,000. The rate for revenue purposes was 1.4 mills, which applied produced a revenue of $819,000.

This year's total assessed valuation will be about $600,000,000, which with the rate of 1.3 mills will produce a revenue of $780,000. Auditor Dunn thinks this amount sufficient, but the legislature will have to husband its appropriations.

A Large Conveyance.

A deed was filled with the secretary of state by the St. Paul & Duluth railway, conveying to the Northwestern Improvement company, a New Jersey corporation, of which C. S. Mellen, St. Paul, president of the Northern Pacific railway, is president, all the remaining portions of the land grants to aid its construction made by the state and by the federal government through acts of congress in 1864-65-66.

The consideration named in the deed is $3,300,000. The instrument, though only filed recently, bears date of May 1 and was executed in New York. Revenue stamps in the amount of $3,300 are affixed to the instrument.

The conveyance of the entire land grant of the St. Paul & Duluth is made subject to a claim of title to about 95,000 acres, including valuable terminal property at the head of the lakes, by the Northern Pacific railroad.

Boats Will Run.

It is expected that boats will be able to pass through the locks of the government dam that is being constructed at Meeker island, next summer. The east side of the dam is rapidly nearing completion, and the lower and upper locks will be put in place before cold weather interferes.

Preliminary work has been commenced on a second coffer dam, which is about 100 yards from the west shore, and next season this will be the principal scene of activity. From the outer wall of the lock there will be built a dam, which will have an apron, over which the water will run. This dam will be 190 feet wide, made of criss-cross sections, into which loose rocks will be placed. Over this will be the apron. It is estimated that a foot of water will be kept running over this continually.

Indicted.

The Ramsey county grand jury has voted a true bill against E. P. Corbett, charging murder in the first degree.

Corbett is the deputy game warden who shot and killed Joseph Mrozinski Sept. 20.

The scene of the tragedy was the Mississippi river, opposite the North Star brewery.

Corbett alleges that the shooting was done in self-defense and he was vindicated by the verdict of the coroner's jury. The county attorney declined to accept that view of the matter and took the case before the grand jury, which voted a true bill.

Will Sell Land.

The Secretary of the Interior has decided to dispose of at public sale the ceded lands of the Chippewa Indians, adjoining the White Earth and Red Lake reservation in Minnesota. These lands comprise 33,316 acres of agricultural land near the White Rock reservation and 39,922 acres of pine land, containing 76,384,000 feet of pine. The value of the pine land is $231,489.

The Red Lake land is 887 acres of pine, containing 488,000 feet, valued at $1,485. The aggregate arena of land to be disposed of is 74,125 acres.

Valuable Pearl.

C. Henderson of Winona has found a peculiar double pearl. It has the appearance of two attached by a slender shaft, much like a dumb-bell. One is rather oblong in shape, while the other is nearly round. On one there is the image of a man on the other the image of a woman. The images are only visible through a microscope. The pearl is valued very highly.

News in Brief.

Alfred Johnson made application to the city clerk of Duluth for a wolf bounty, the first application of the kind ever made in that city. He killed a large wolf within the city limits, while it was trotting stealthily along under cover of the fog which hung thickly over the surrounding country. He received his bounty.

Rosenbaum Brothers & Co., Chicago, are putting in cattle with farmers all over Faribault county to fatten. They are bought in the Dakotas and shipped into this rich and productive county, where corn and feed is plentiful and cheap. The idea is to bring the cheap cattle and cheap feed in contact with each other, and produce good, dear cattle.

Another of those horrible mill accidents is reported, at Cloquet, where a lad named Edward Fontain got too near a revolving shaft and his clothing caught. When the machinery stopped the boy was a lifeless, mangled corpse.

While on her way to church service in Minneapolis Mrs. Emily Cross was stricken with apoplexy. She died almost instantly.

The total loss from fires in Minneapolis during September was about $10,000. The smallest in the history of the city.

The college of agriculture at the university has broken all records in attendance this year, having registered up to date 275 students, which exceeds by 100 the attendance of any year heretofore.

Postoffice has been established at Clint, Pine county, with E. J. Haglof as postmaster.

Fredrick Stern, a farmer, about six miles south of Albany, was caught by the eastbound Great Northern flyer at the east crossing. The back part of his wagon was demolished, and Mr. Stern suffered minor bruises and excorations by being thrown from his seat upon the ground.

Bread Inspector McCall swooped down on the baker shop of John Ferman, in Minneapolis, and seized 108 loaves of light weight bread. It was turned over to the city hospital.

Special postal service has been discontinued at Jeffers, Cottonwood county.

CONNOISSEUR IN SEEDS.

He Planted Some Bulbs That Turned Out to Be Bearing Balls for a Bicycle.

"I have a good joke on myself," said the business man whose hobby is agriculture, says the Detroit Free Press. "My mind has always had a particular preference for seeds and roots, and I never miss an opportunity to indulge this fancy. Some time ago, in looking through an old tool box, I came across several peculiar looking seeds that at once aroused my interest. They were a little different from anything that I had discovered during my floricultural and agricultural experience, and I decided to plant them and see what the product would be. Well, I did so, and for weeks I waited to see the strange fruit, flower or vegetable plant make an appearance, carefully nurturing the soil, and giving my pet bulbs the closest attention.

"Discouraged at length at their failure to part the soil and spring into life, I dug them up, and what do you suppose was the discovery that I made? Why, that my interesting and peculiar bulbs were nothing more nor less than those little bicycle balls that are an important part of the steel steed's mechanism. They had been laid away in the toolbox, and their size and rusted appearance made them resemble seeds. My wife and some of my intimate friends seem to think there is no excuse for such a ludicrous thing to happen to a man that has made a study of plants and bulbs, and they are never done chaffing me and asking me when I expect to gather my crop of bicycles."

FISHED FOR A COMPLIMENT.

And the Pretty Young Girl Caught Something That Gave Her a Pain.

I overheard a bit of conversation on a Chevy Chase car the other evening that put me in a good humor for all the rest of the week, says a writer in the Washington Post. She was a pretty girl and she belonged to the number of those pretty girls who are forever longing to be told of their beauty. She was with a blue-eyed young man who looked as if he had seen 25 summers and a great many other things more educational. She was talking of a girl called Maud.

"Don't you think Maud is awfully pretty?" she asked.

"She's a peach," answered the young man.

The girl dangled a bait more obvious.

"I'd be perfectly happy," she said, "if I were as pretty as she is."

Bad fishing weather. The young man merely settled his tie a trifle.

"Oh, well," he remarked, "there's no use being unhappy about things that can't be helped."

The Baby Was Healthy.

Two Irishmen who had not seen each other for a long time met at a fair. They had a lot of things to tell each other. "Shure, it's married I am," said O'Brien. "You don't tell me so!" said Blake. "Faith, yes," said O'Brien, "an' I've got a fine, healthy bhoy which the neighbors say is the very picter of me." Blake looked for a moment at O'Brien, who was not, to say the least, remarkable for his good looks, and then said: "Och, well, what's the harrum so long as the child's healthy?" — Chicago Chronicle.

Mike Found It Bad Walking.

In the course of the terrible march of the Irish fusileers from Dundee to Ladysmith the men were much fatigued owing to the rough journey. One man in particular stumbled along as if walking in his sleep. An officer passed. "Sir," said Michael, "what country is this we're marching over?" "The Natal tableland, my man," was the reply. "Bedad, sir," said Michael, "I think the table's turned upside down and we're walking over the legs of it."—London Tit-Bits.

Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho

Abound in rich agricultural lands, suitable for diversified farming and fruit raising, without irrigation. Cheap grazing lands can be secured, and the largest body of white pine in the United States is located in Northern Idaho. In Eastern Washington are found the famous wheat fields of the Palouse and Big Bend countries. The mining camps of the Coeur d'Alene and Bitter Root mountains, as well as the Rossland and Republic districts, furnish profitable markets for all the farmer or fruit grower can raise. For maps and particulars, write to C. W. Mott, Gen. Emigration Agent, Northern Pacific Ry, St. Paul, Minn.
